Whereas by the regulations made under "The Places of Public Entertainment Act, 1913," it is provided that the Minister may issue a license for a person to operate a cinematograph machine or similar apparatus in a place of public entertainment, and whereas of has applied to me to grant to him a license to operate a cinematograph machine or similar apparatus: Now therefore, I, Chief Secretary, being the Minister of the Crown to whom the administration of the said Act is for the time being committed by the Governor, do hereby grant unto the said a license to operate a cinematograph machine or similar apparatus of the character below indicated for a period expiring on the 31st day of December, subject to the said Act and to the regulations made thereunder.

Apparatus which the licensee is competent to operate:—

(1) Electric light (direct current);
(2) " " (alternating current);
(3) " " (motors and generators);
(4) " " (portable plants);
(5) Limelight (tanks);
(6) " (cylinders);
(7) Motor driven projectors.

Given under my hand, at the Chief Secretary's Office, at Adelaide, this day of 19 .

Chief Secretary.

And the Honorable the Chief Secretary is to give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

C. Sec., 1303/1914.

They take up considerable space in the department, but I believe are of sufficient interest to justify it. I shall be very glad to hear from you again, Brother Fleming, or from other Australian operators. It is of more than ordinary interest for us over here to know what you are doing away over on the opposite side of the world, for that is almost exactly where you are, the point opposite New York City being a spot in the ocean some little distance off the southwest coast of Australia, if I remember rightly. Since this is written another letter has been received from a New South Wales operator. It will be published in due time.

Learns Many Things.

L. E. B., Minnesota, writes:

I am rather interested in knowing exactly what Mr. J. W. Creamer, Chillicothe, Mo., means in his letter, page 836, February 10th issue, when he says: "I have incandescents in my lamphouse." What is the idea? There are a great many things to be learned by reading the department, although a great many operators do not read it. Projection through Southern Minnesota is good, though I do not set myself up as a judge. Nevertheless an operator ought to be able to tell good screen results from poor, therefore I venture that assertion. Kindly answer my question under L. E. B.

Why so bashful, old man? The Good Book says: "Hide not thy light under a bushel, but let it shine forth that all may see," or words to that effect. What Friend Creamer meant was that he has an arrangement such as is illustrated in Figure 127, page 302, of the Handbood, so that when he opens the door of the lamphouse to trim the carbons, a small incandescent light inside the lamphouse is automatically lighted, thus enabling him to see what he is doing; as soon as the lamphouse door is closed the light is automatically extinguished. It is a very convenient arrangement, and one which I would recommend that you install.

It Works.

L. B. Fulmer, Conneaut, Ohio, says:

I tried the combination you recommend for 5¾ inch lens, working at 4 inch back focus, aperture 16 inches from the center of bi-convex to get a 1½ inch spot. The center of crater is 3 1/16 inches from rear face of the meniscus. It gives me the best light I have ever had. In fact, all the formulas of yours I have ever used have been as you said they would be. I will be glad to make any further experiments you may suggest.

That is what gets the goat of the disappearing contingent who still maintain that "Richardson don't know anything." Strange and wonderful as it to them seems, my recommendations usually deliver the goods, even as they did in this case, and that, of course, sends the Angora of the Doubting Thomases flying off to the tall timber. Many thanks for your report, Brother Fulmer.

Fire Prevention in Motion Picture Studios.

(Condensed from a bulletin written for the Eastman Kodak Company By J. F. Ancona, Mem. Am. Soc. M. E.)

The annual fire loss in the United States is nearly $250,000,000 per year. The enormous waste and destruction, together with the loss of 2,000 lives per year in fires, has forced the development of preventive measures. Fire prevention considers: first, the elimination of all means by which fire can start; second, construction and arrangement to prevent the spread of fire, and third, the provision of means of extinguishing fire that may occur.

More than one-half the fires start from carelessness or bad housekeeping conditions, such as rubbish piles, litter and dirt.

The easiest, the most important and effective, and yet most neglected means of reducing fires is the exercise of good housekeeping. The art of good housekeeping consists principally of two things: order and cleanliness. Goods carelessly stacked upon shelves, unswept floors, litter in corners and under counters, or lack of proper arrangement, all constitute bad housekeeping and invite the start and encourage the spread of fire. The adage: "A place for everything and everything in its place," sums up good housekeeping, particularly for the photographic industry, as dirt has no place in a photographic establishment. Furthermore, an orderly, clean establishment invites the confidence and satisfaction of its customers and promotes the efficiency and care of its employes; thus having a distinct business value.

The various rules and practices used to attain the results are simple, commonsense measures that are readily understood by anyone who will consider them.

A producer who carelessly scatters properties over his scenes will not last long. If the same care taken in staging a picture were spent upon good housekeeping, there would be little or no chance for fires. Stage your business as carefully as you stage your picture.

Film is combustible, and when fairly burning is difficult to control; the heat created will cause a rapid spread of fire through other combustible material. The first step in "Order" is to separate the use and storage of film from other parts of the business.

Film should be stored in containers on metal racks in rooms or vaults properly constructed and isolated from other parts of the building. The Eastman Kodak Company has made a thorough study of the storage of films and of vault design, and is at present conducting experiments on storage vaults equipped with sprinkler systems and constructed in such a manner that the fire hazard will be reduced to a minimum. As soon as these experiments are completed, the results will be published.

Rooms in which perforating, printing, drying, assembling and inspecting is done should be separated from other parts of the building and from one another by means of fireproof partitions. Rooms in which film is handled should not be used for storage or handling of other combustible materials.

All rooms and storages in which film is handled or worked should be equipped as far as possible with incombustible fittings. Experience shows that all studios and storages for costumes, scenery and properties are dangerous, owing to the great quantity of flimsy combustible materials contained therein. Studios and property storages should be separated from the film rooms and from one another by fireproof partitions or walls. Care should be taken to have all studios and storages arranged and conducted in an orderly manner.

Appliances should be provided to hold or put out without delay, any fire. The best and most reliable equipment is the automatic sprinkler system. In addition to the sprinkler system there should be provided auxiliaries, such as fire pails, pails of sand, standard 2½-gal. extinguishers, or best of all, the 1½-inch hand hose. Every room should be provided with one or more of the above-mentioned appliances. If sprinkler protection is not available, the fire pails, extinguishers, etc., should be supplied in larger numbers.

In addition to providing a sufficient number of fire-fighting appliances, employees should be trained as to the location and use of apparatus. Many establishments having standard 2½-gallon extinguishers have employes who do not know how to use them. In case of a fire their first duty is a hasty search to locate the apparatus. Then several seconds are wasted in reading the label and wondering how the apparatus works.

In cities where a public fire department is available, reliable employes should be instructed as to the exact location of the nearest public fire alarm box and the correct way of turning in an alarm. The fire department telephone number should be permanently displayed in a convenient position near the telephone. If the establishment is equipped with a private fire alarm system, the employes should be instructed as to the location and manipulation of fire alarm boxes.

Film should always be kept in approved containers except when being actually handled or inspected. Film should be brought to tables at which work is being done in containers, and put back into such containers as soon as the work has been done. The stocking of naked film in various parts of the establishment is one of the most dangerous practices in the industry and should be forbidden. Naked film affords a fine opportunity for fire to spread, whereas containers retard the spread of the fire.

All operations, handling and storing must be planned and arranged so that the material is not subjected to a direct flame, a spark, friction or heat. Film fires must start from one of these causes; therefore the most strenuous efforts are made to avoid them. It is evident that the containers are beneficial in this way. This point of keeping film in containers at all times just as far as possible, should be scrupulously borne in mind by managers of exchanges.

Infrequent removal and improper storage of film cuttings or scraps, and dirty floors with scraps or lengths of film lying around are conditions that may lead to the start of a fire or that promote the spread of a fire once started. Film scraps should immediately be placed in self-closing metal cans and should be removed from the building at frequent intervals to a safe location. The ordinary waste basket should never be used for film waste.

Rubbish, scraps of paper under tables, back of radiators, shelving, desks and other fixtures or accumulations of old records and books improperly stored afford a fine starting place for a fire. There should be appropriate places for filing records and papers, and proper waste paper baskets, so that the untidy and disorderly conditions of this sort cannot exist. Junk and odds and ends should not be allowed to accumulate. It is better to burn all rubbish outside than to have it burn inside.

Infrequent cleaning and careless cleaning are two of the most universal violations of good housekeeping. There is a tendency to slight corners, shelves and other places where unsightly accumulations of dirt and rubbish are most likely to occur. This should not be permitted. If cleaning is properly performed, and if discarded or unused material is not allowed to accumulate, there is not much chance for spontaneous combustion.

Lockers should be provided for employes' clothing so that it will not be hung on walls or left lying around. The lockers should be kept clean, and not allowed to become storage places for a conglomeration of trash and rubbish, as is so often the case.

To insure safety, care should be taken to have electrical work installed by competent electricians. When the wiring is once installed it should not be "monkeyed with" by "handy" men around the establishment. A competent electrician should be called upon to do the work. Defective wiring, light globes, motors, switches or other defective electrical appliances are most frequent causes of film fires. A disastrous fire in New York City was caused by a spark from a broken incandescent light, and another bad fire was caused by film being ignited by the flash of a rewinding motor.

These dangerous conditions have been actually observed by the writer in motion picture establishment: changes in wiring made improperly, extension cords or drops hung on or wrapped around steam or sprinkler pipes or other fixtures, or over nails; unprotected electric bulbs hung over film in positions so that mechanical breakage is almost invited; insufficient use of marine or vapor proof globes; location of small motors or fans where direct current armature sparks are dangerous; paper wrapped around bulbs, film or film scrap allowed to almost touch hot bulbs; knife switches in dangerous locations; temporary wiring, etc. Gas lights, kerosene lamps, candles or any other open flame lighting should never be used in the motion picture business. All electric lights should be protected from breakage.

Many fires have their origin with the heating system because combustible materials such as wood, paper, and film if left in contact with hot pipes or surfaces for a sufficient length of time, may ignite. Steam pipes are especially dangerous.

The writer has observed an almost universal neglect to properly guard radiators and steam pipes, thus allowing wood, paper, film or film clippings to collect under or back of radiators; clippings or film to lie near steam pipes near the floor; tables or benches so close to the wall as to allow ends of film to dangle near unguarded radiators.

The heating system for a motion picture exchange, studio or laboratory should consist only of low pressure steam or hot water.

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN and NORMAN STUCKEY.

ANY questions concerning music for the film, suitable instrumentation for motion picture theaters, questions relating to the pipe organ; in fact, any questions, criticisms or suggestions dealing with musical interpretation for moving pictures will be answered by Mr. Stuckey through this department. Inquiries should be addressed to Musical Editor, Moving Picture World, 17 Madison avenue, New York City.

Memorizing Music.

In the art of music, the subject of memory is of vital importance. Whether as a mere accomplishment, or for professional purposes, the study of music is facilitated in the acquisition of material and in performance, by a good memory.

The command of a large repertoire gained at the least possible expense of time is a matter of no small amount. The demands on modern virtuosoship are not greater than those on the memory. To hold one's own with others a strong memory is at present imperative.

The musician, whether pianist, organist or orchestra conductor, can hope to do little towards the successful rendition of film accompaniment unless he has a good memory and is continually developing the memorizing of music suitable for film interpretation. True, a card system or a catalog is of inestimable value, but to a great extent, the successful theater musician must depend largely upon his memory.

Starting with the proposition that memory, like other faculties, is not a fixed quantity, it seeks to develop its practically limitless capacity by natural means which embody the general law of growth. This system shows that small tasks regularly applied strengthen the faculty or function and prepare it for progressively larger ones.

No student of music would dream of mastering a difficult composition by commencing with it as his first lesson, even were he sustained by the honest intention of wrestling with its difficulties as long as he would have done had he begun at the usual preliminary stage and worked his way up to it in the accredited way of graded lessons.

But this is, in reality, what is commonly done in memorizing music; and because the average memory fails in the tasks assigned it, it is blamed. A poor memory—but what remedy is suggested to improve it? The mastery of a long composition, which, even when it is committed to memory by the severest struggles, is forgotten again almost as soon as learned.

A wholly different discipline is necessary to accomplish the end in view. It is, broadly speaking, the memorizing of short tasks, and, when possible, pleasant ones, and constantly systematically reviewing them from memory. This, however, must not be carried to extremes, as strength is only gained by a series of efforts, each one a little greater than the preceding. The demands of perfect reviewing will fairly test the desirable length and difficulty of the tasks.

In nearly every piece of music, passages can be found that are practically complete in themselves, similar to quotations that are singled out from the works of the great authors.

These often contain the gist of long parts and whole movements. The "themes" of variations form excellent material, as also the variations themselves, if otherwise suitable, as they offer sufficient diversity and yet have organic likeness. Little preludes and transcriptions of beautiful songs can be used to advantage. Tables of modulations are exceedingly interesting and valuable in many ways. The importance of being perfectly familiar with the various forms of musical composition makes it advisable to select passages from each, as representative of their individual characteristics. The gavotte and minuet differ as widely as a waltz and polka. Their distinctive features could be driven into the mind most effectually by the continual repetition of their salient passages.

Some musical experiments will disclose similar facts. The simplest melody will require more time to memorize when performed on an instrument with which the musician is familiar only to a slight extent.

A passage similarly attempted in an unusual key will also consume comparatively more time. The same piece played on an instrument which offers no special technical difficulty, is committed to memory with the least labor.

The visualizing process is important and musicians in whom this visualizing power is strong can utilize it greatly. Even if the faculty be not sufficiently developed to retain a whole composition, yet it may be made very serviceable in localizing certain critical passages, and those which would suggest long parts between them. Often a given motive will at different places be slightly modified or lead to a different development. These passages thus localized will greatly aid in mastering their context. Indeed the pictorial appearance of musical notation, whatever be its other glaring defects, lends itself happily to the exercise of the visualizing faculty. Clear paper, good type, tasteful arrangement, all impress the eye and mind pleasantly. Accent marks, rallentandos, diminuendos, ties, staccato points, etc., can well be visualized, and help also in locating many passages which would be likely to elude the efforts of memory.

Productive or Non-Productive?

By Caroline I. Hibbard.

The various factors which constitute any business organization come under one or the other of two general classifications: Productive and Non-Productive (or Overhead Expense).

In the motion picture business there is a factor, which, contrary to custom, is not predestined in its classification. It is entirely up to the exhibitor whether this part of his organization belongs in the first or second mentioned class.

This factor is music. Every exhibitor in the country knows that music is an indispensable part of motion picture entertainment, whether in a magnificent "Strand" or humble 400 or 500 seating capacity house; but this little discussion is not specifically concerned with either of these extremes; it deals more particularly with the problem of the vast number of exhibitors operating 10 to 25 cent admission houses.

A large proportion of those exhibitors give multiple reel or feature film performances. It is safe to say that all of them have music and a majority maintain an orchestra. An orchestra, however small, runs into money—money for the musicians, and money for the music. And the actual cost of the music is no small item—on an average $25 or $30 worth is required to accompany a five reel performance—and this does not include comedies or weeklies.

Here some exhibitor says: "But I don't buy the music—my leader provides that." Yes, Mr. Exhibitor; your leader very likely does provide the music; all the same you pay for it in the end because the leader who owns a comprehensive library commands a greater salary than the leader who is not so equipped.

So in any event, the exhibitor pays not only for musicians, but for the music itself. Now then, how can this apparently non-productive factor be converted into a productive element?

This is where the exhibitor must think the matter over from the inside out. Nearly every other phase of the motion picture proposition has been studied with microscopic care, but as a rule the music question has been disposed of with the conclusion that it is a customary part of the program which the exhibitor must reckon on the same as he does rent and other unavoidable expense.

It is safe to say that the average exhibitor, progressive in other directions, does not realize that "playing" pictures is not only a new art, but a very peculiar one. It bears no relation to concert playing because the music must always be subservient—yet its importance is significant. A successful exhibitor—like a successful manager—must be a "crowd psychologist." He must sense immediately whether the emotions registered on the screen evoke kindred emotions or sympathetic appreciation on the part of the audience. He is frequently at a loss to understand why some certain feature film is not equally successful at different theaters. In one house the audience is spellbound, following the action through the quickly changing scenes with eager interest and undivided attention, while in another theater, where the same film is being shown, there is an apathetic atmosphere. The picture itself is the same, and motion picture audiences are of so democratic a compound that what pleases one (in the first class houses here considered) logically may be expected to please another. What, then, is the subtle something which differentiates the performances?

The answer is "Music." In the first instance, the music serves as an interpreter of emotion and mood; the substitute for the well-chosen word or phrase that illuminates literature. It helps the audience to think with the picture—to follow not only a succession of interesting actions, but to sense the underlying motives and mental processes. The audience thus gets all there is in the picture. That same audience will go other evenings to that same theater—one person recommends that particular theater to a friend—and so the circle of its popularity and prosperity widens. Every factor that contributes to the box office in this manner belongs to the productive class.

In the second instance, under analysis the music is found to be meaningless. This does not imply that it necessarily is poor music or poorly rendered music. Simply, it bears no relation to the scenes thrown on the screen. The impressions received through the eye and ear do not coincide. The audience does not warm up to the picture because the music does not fully "get across."

Music which does not fit the picture comes under the non-productive ban. The motion picture exhibitor cannot eliminate music from his program; but if he has no reason to think that it helps swell his box-office receipts, he naturally jots the cost down as so much overhead exepnse.

The wise business man strives to turn every expenditure into a paying investment. Is your music, Mr. Exhibitor, in the Productive or Non-Productive Class?

COMPILED BY THE STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT

EARLE, Josephine. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y. American parentage. Is five feet seven and one-half inches tall and weighs 139 pounds. Auburn hair and blue eyes. Miss Earle began her stage career in 1912 and for three years she played with the Henry W. Savage attractions in vaudeville. In 1915 she decided that there was a wider field in pictures and she made her debut on the screen in The Return of Maurice Donelley. She has been connected with the Vitagraph, World and Series Film Co. and has played a wide range of vampire parts and can wreck a home to the reel with ease and skill born of long screen practice. Some of her more notable parts have been in The Two Edged Sword, The Shop Girl, The Writing on the Wall, Hesper, Indiscretion and The More Excellent Way. She is fond of dancing, but likes better a good car, a smooth road and no speed policeman in sight to spoil things. She scorns a chauffeur or mechanic.

Josephine Earle

MAYO Melvin. Born in Silver City, Nev. American Parentage. Is five feet, eight and one-half inches tall and weighs 165 pounds. Light brown hair and light blue eyes. Mr. Mayo made his stage debut in 1894 and for eighteen years he remained on the dramatic stage, playing, and later acting as stage director. About four years ago, in October, 1913, he turned his attention to the possibilities of the motion picture and made his debut in The Obstinate Sheriff, a western Lubin production. He remained with the Melville section of the Lubin company until its dissolution and for a year or more of that time he was director as well as leading player in numerous stories. The part he liked best was the title role in Jim West, Gambler, but apart from that he has no choice. Since the Lubin company closed he has been with the Pollard company and is now with the Balboa forces at Long Beach, Calif.

Melvin Mayo

WEST, William B. (Billy). Born in Kussia. Jewish parentage. Is five feet, five inches tall and weighs 135 pounds. Dark complexion, brown eyes and black hair. Mr. West made his stage debut in 1909, playing in vaudeville, but it was not until he turned to pictures in 1916 that he attracted much attention. His first picture was His Married Life, released in June of last year. His specialty is an uncanny reproduction of the methods of Charles Chaplin, and it is as an impersonator of that comedian that he has made his mark in pictures. He was first released through the Unicorn, but on the closing of that company he was taken under the management of Louis Burnstein in King Bee comedies, working under an old Chaplin director who originated many of the gags of that comedian. Like Caruso, he finds diversion in cartoon drawing and is also fond of music, autoing and driving.

Billy West.

BURTON, Ethel Marie. Born in New York City. American parentage. Just five and a half feet tall and weighs 118 pounds. Fair complexion, blond hair and blue eyes. Miss Burton has had no stage experience, but has played in pictures since 1915, her debut being in Two for a Quarter. Has played with Vitagraph, World, and Vim and now is ingenue lead for King Bee. Some of the parts she likes have been Ambitious Ethel, He Winked and Won, Fat and Fickle and Strangled Harmony. Miss Burton is an all-round athlete and is fond of swimming, riding, diving and driving. She keeps in fine physical trim and no daredevil ever gets a job substituting for her in risky parts. If they ask her to fall off the deck of a steamer she takes a long breath and falls, and rolling out of an auto or getting off a street car backward pleases her.

Ethel Burton.

WHITE, Leo. Born in Manchester, England. English parentage. Is five feet, five inches in height and weighs 130 pounds. Dark complexion, brown hair and blue eyes. Mr. White has had ten years' experience on the speaking stage, having made his debut in 1902. He started work on his first picture July 2, 1912, at the Essanay studio; a comedy called Three of a Kind. He was a fixture with Essanay for three and a half years and for two years played with Charles Chaplin. If his real face is not familiar to you imagine a little T of hair around his mouth and you'll recognize him as the French Count of so many Chaplin pictures, for it was he who originated this character in the Chaplin comedies, and it is as "The Count" that he is best known to fans. Is now with the King Bee comedies, having just joined that company. Fond of fencing, swimming and horseback riding.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

WHAT a stirring picture "A Message to Garcia" is, and what a tribute to the late Elbert Hubbard (a victim of Germany's warfare)! He wrote this story-sermon without realizing the stirring message it would carry to thousands via the screen. Robert Conness does the soldier stunt well and one little bit aroused applause—rightly, when he received his orders to take the message, gave the salute and immediately proceeded to duty without one single question of his superior. That got the house all right. With Cuba our ally and with the memory of the Maine disaster not too remote, this picture of Edison ought to be a good seller right now.

"The Prison Without Walls" adapted by Beulah Marie Dix, of Boston, was splendidly acted by Myrtle Stedman and Wallace Reid and had a story well worth while, illustrating prison reform vs. prison graft. There were some scenes not up to the standard and was rather melodramatic for a Lasky. Reid is very popular here and aided in its success.

Hats off to the Japanese Sessue Hayakawa for his good work in "The Bottle Imp," ranking close to "The Cheat" in its detail. I was surprised to note that it was directed by young Marshall Neilan, whose work as a screen player is duplicated here in another line. What impressed us all was the capital make-up of James Neil in the first reel as Robert Louis Stevenson, author of the book. Then, too, we had a new face in the Hawaiian heroine, Lehue Waipahu, who made a capital opposite and was "to the manner born." I wonder how they managed to make that bottle move about in such an uncanny manner. Anyhow it is a most satisfactory picture, weird, true, yet has atmosphere to burn. The children like this, too, as it is a sort of Aladdin's lamp story. It ought to go strong all along the line.

Near the Hub we are to have a real "Filmland City," located in Medford, a thriving town of wideawake people. A fine organization had been perfected called the Society Players Film Corporation, with a veteran at its head—F. Eugene Farnsworth, who has been connected with the industry since its inception. I called yesterday at the offices down town and met one of the Sherburne brothers, who are identified with him in this business venture. Ground is broken and ere long we will have a big studio and many other buildings and a company of picked players, as Mr. Farnsworth already has interviewed many who are qualified to face the camera. Society amateurs and people generally are interested in the success of so commendable an undertaking. They will have thirty acres in a splendid location as to scenery, and the board of management are all high grade business men with large interests. Then, too, the Atlas Film Corporation is fairly well under way with a studio in Newton. The president, Leon J. Dadmun, is not only a photographer and director, but gets into the pictures.

"Mothers of France" is one great thriller and an inspiration for the most jaded. The Park is running it to capacity business. "In Darkest Russia" is another picture to call forth applause at this house and Alice Brady seems to have broadened in her work. While I do not care much for Russian intrigue—Siberia stuff—somehow this picture is a bit more timely now that the great revolt has at last taken place. I look for a picture with present conditions over there shown up inspiringly. Kate Lester was some hater and it was delicious to see the tables turned so neatly at the end.

"As Men Love" was liked immensely here, and it marked the return in Pallais pictures of "Jack" Johnston, who we have not seen for some time. I felt like giving him a hand, also House Peters, it being his first picture for us since he left the World Film. Myrtle Stedman and capable Helen Jerome Eddy made up a quartet worth while. Here we have something different in the working out of a problem of the triangular sort. There are strong situations and what a dear little kid—to say nothing of the cat.

The Metros gave us two fairly good picitures recently, "Hidden Children" and "Her Waiting Soul." The first one, with Lockwood and Allison, a not easily understood Indian play, needing many titles to make it clear to the ordinary fan not familiar with the Robert W. Chambers book. There were some good battle scenes with real Indians, and I have rarely seen Lester Cuneo so cleverly made up or playing so good a part. "Her Waiting Soul," seen at the Park theater with Petrova, was up to the mark and had a new twist in preachment stunts well done by the star and Wilfred Shields, who gave advice without cant.

"Forget-me Not," for Kitty Gordon, was a splendid offering of the Brady-made brand, but Kitty was a bad lot, though good to look at. Montagu Love doubled well and the picture had some extra good settings, thanks to Director Chautard.

"Joan the Woman" is still drawing large houses at one of our best theaters and making many converts to the photoplay. During the intermission, there is a plea for enlistment made by one of the First Corps of Cadets and they have a place in the lobby to pursue their patriotic efforts.

One of the sweetest plays seen in months is "Told at Twilight," featuring Marie Osborne and Henry King; and I cannot picture her playing without his directorship and presence. We are to see later, for she has transferred her affection—that is, her promoters have. The play has a dandy lesson on sunshine versus grouch, and by the way what a good piece of work Daniel Gilfether does all through. Then, too, the coon whom Mary chums with was some boy and had the house. There were quite a number of elderly persons present that afternoon and how they did laugh! Who can forget their kid pranks with the blind beggar sign and the roosters—good clean entertainment. That day, too, I saw General Charles H. Taylor, proprietor of the Boston Globe, who gets into the Exeter near his home and there forgets business cares for the nonce. Former Governor David I. Walsh, honorary member of the Exhibitors' League here, is a frequent visitor of this theater, and is a friend of the industry.

How's this for title errors: They "bated" the turkeys instead of "baited," "near everyone" instead of "nearly." The picture? A Paramount (Bray cartoon series). One rarely sees an error in its titles so the censor must have had a day off.

Well, we had a good laugh over Fatty Arbuckle's "The Butcher Boy" and his antics along broad farce lines. There is a difference between that and slapstick with its accompanying vulgar touches such as nose thumbing and worse. "For a funny man, he is the soberest I ever saw," said a man to his friend, and true enough, for he rarely smiles and is never camera conscious. Some of the little tricks are mighty clever. I'd place the dog as the chief attraction next to Fatty, his owner in real life, for he is so well trained. A lover of dogs near me said, "I bet that dog had a tenderloin after rehearsal," referring to the treadmill stunt.

"The Power of Decision" went well, though the end was obvious from the start. John Davidson was capital as the persistent villain, and we were rather sorry that it was not he who got the bullet sent by Hubby and that he go off scot free. Frances Nelson was dainty and takes a close-up well. It is a pretty good problem play and so well photographed. Richard Tucker always makes good; so does Sally Crute, she of the vampire cut. John Noble gives delight in the directorship.

Last night I went to the Fenway to see "Passion," not wanting to miss one "sin." Lo, the picture had been taken off the program after one showing and "Pots and Pans Peggy" substituted. It must have been pretty "deadly." Think I'll watch for it elsewhere.

MAXINE ELLIOTT TO RETURN TO ENGLAND.

Goldwyn's great stars possess a high degree of war-time courage, which atrocities on the high seas have not succeeded in diminishing. Maxine Elliott, the celebrated beauty who has just finished two productions for Goldwyn, is about to set sail for England, where she will spend a part of the summer before resuming her war relief work.

During her stay in the States, Miss Elliott has acted in a noted play by Roi Cooper Megrue and in a second play by Robert H. McLaughlin, the Cleveland dramatist, who won financial rewards two seasons ago in New York with his first big play, "The Eternal Magdalene." Mr. McLaughlin has written several scenarios for Goldwyn and one of these affords Miss Elliott a splendid opportunity to reveal unsuspected powers as an emotional actress.

Grinding the Crank

TO CREATE a little excitement we will be glad to receive suggestions for cartoons concerning "inside stuff" of the moving picture studio, office or theater It should be of a general nature. Specific plays must not be mentioned. Everyone connected with the industry has laughed at some incident in the business. Let's have it. The only reward will be that of having contributed something to lighten a moment of our colleagues and for any suggestions used the author will receive credit in the cartoon.

Let 'em come!

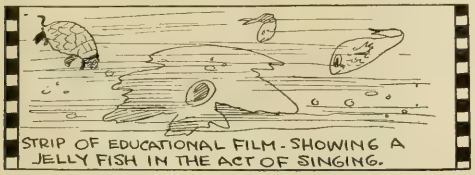
Two ladies sat behind us at a trade showing of a five-reeler the other day. When the picture ended one of the females said "Ain't this weather the dickens on corns?"



It's foolish, we know, but we've often wondered what would happen if some one buried a horseshoe in one of the lemon pies used in comedy pictures.

"The Land of the Rising Sun"

Delightful Series of Pictures Exhibited at Aeolian Hall by Japan Society.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

IT WAS an appreciative and well-groomed audience that assembled in Aeolian Hall on Friday evening, May 4th, to view a series of moving pictures of Japan entitled "The Land of the Rising Sun." The pictures were exhibited in honor of the Japanese Ambassador, Aimaro Sato, consisted of studies of the life of the Japanese people and were made with the hope that they would illustrate the ideals which have won for Japan her position in the family of nations.

The program was divided into two parts, each consisting of four groups of scenes. The first group, "Impressions of Japan," presents various interesting and beautiful scenes in and about Yokohama, Tokyo, Kamata, Ikaio and other parts of Japan. The second, "Child Life," is a revelation of the happiness existent among Japanese children. The third, "Industries," dealt principally with the rice and tea industry. The fourth, "A Wedding Ceremony," revealed things in connection with this subject not commonly known. The fifth, "Urashima, the Fisher Boy," is a pleasing Japanese fairy tale, well told. The sixth, "Temples, Religious Processions, etc.," is what the name implies. The seventh, "Artificial Pearl Culture," covers the inserting of "nacre," the gritty substance which is the nucleus of the pearl, into the oyster, and the diving of the Japanese women for oysters that have after four years developed small pearls. The eighth, "An Englishman's First Night in a Japanese Inn," is a pleasing bit of comedy illustrating the customs followed still after many generations in the hotels of Japan, and finishes a delightful program.

These pictures were produced by the New England Motion Picture Company, Inc., of Boston, Mass., are to be distributed by the America-Japan Pictures Company, New York, and were presented by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company under the auspices of the Japan Society.

Following the exhibition of the pictures a reception was given to the Ambassador. The reception committee consisted of Union N. Bethell, Henry Clews, Robert DeForest, William North Duane, Elbert H. Gary, Gilbert H. Grosvenor, I. Hamoka, A. Barton Hepburn, Herbert H. Houston, Darwin P. Kingsley, Dwight Macdonald, J. B. Millet, Jacob H. Schiff, Willard Straight, Jokichi Takamine, Frank A. Vanderlip and Consul General Yada.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of May 6 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"The Primrose Ring" at the Strand.

MAE MURRAY was the star at the Strand the week of May 6 in "The Primrose Ring," adapted from Ruth Sawyer's clever story by Marian Fairfax. She portrayed the role of a nurse in a children's hospital, who, having herself been a crippled child, takes a great interest in her young patients and amuses them with thrilling fairy stories, contrary to the rules of the hospital. There is a charming romantic love story in which Miss Murray and Tom Moore are the principals. Winter Hall and Little Billy Jacobs are also prominent in the cast. The fourth of the famous O. Henry stories to be seen on the screen was "The Green Door," the tale of the adventurous Rudolph, who receives the mysterious card which leads him to the door behind which he finds love and happiness. Alice Howell, the funniest girl on the screen, in a comedy, "Her New Role," was also on the program. The soloists were Walter Vaughn, George Halperin, Rose Lind, Arthur Depew and Ralph H. Brigham.

"The Sixteenth Wife" at the Rialto.

"The Sixteenth Wife," an adventurous comedy featuring Peggy Hyland and Marc MacDermott, was the principal dramatic offering at The Rialto. The picture is a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, the action taking place in Russian, Constantinople and Bohemian New York. Miss Hyland plays a French dancer in the Russian Ballet. Mr. MacDermott is seen as a noble Turk who becomes infatuated with the dancer and tries to add her to the collection of fifteen wives already in his harem. The escapes to New York, with the Turkish gentleman in hot pursuit, and a New York newspaper man rescues her from her predicament.

The first installment of "The Sailors of France," an inspiring series of pictures taken under the direction of the Cinematographic Division of the French Army and Navy, heads the special features.

Mr. Lamont and Sascha Fidelman were the soloists.

"Within the Law" at the Broadway.

The Vitagraph screen production of "Within the Law" at the Broadway is attracting large audiences.

Bill at the Eighty-first Street Theater.

At the Eighty-first Street theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Robt Harron was seen in "An Old Fashioned Young Man." Jack Dillon, in a Triangle comedy, "A Dishonest Burglar," was also on the bill.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Bessie Love, in "Cheerful Givers" and "Teddy at the Throttle," a Keystone comedy, were the features.

A Frame-Up

On Ben H. Grimm.

The accompanying illustration is a frame-up—a frame-up in more ways than one: First, it is a framed-up photograph. I have not been informed whether the photographer made a double-exposure so as to get the frame framed or whether a set was framed-up on the stage of the Yorke-Metro studios so as to make it appear that the frame would look as if the frame were appearing on the screen well-framed by the projection machine operator. However, it does, only more so.

Second, the picture was framed-up with the sole idea of grabbing a little space from some poor unsuspecting youth. Inasmuch as the photograph was sent to us, we guess we're the goat.

Anyhow, the picture was taken on the event of Bennie Zeidman's visit to the Yorke-Metro studios, in Hollywood, where, before he became Douglas Fairbanks' smile-satellite, he used to accept salary for permitting Fred J. Balshofer to call him (Bennie) the publicity director for Harold Lockwood. Harold Lockwood is seen on the extreme left. Next in line is that notorious person George Dubois Proctor. In juxtaposition to the said Mr. Proctor is Thomas J. Gehraty, Hound of Herald Square and environs. Then we gaze upon the manly form of Lester Cuneo, lovable villain. The next one in line has already had his name mentioned enough. We can't see Paul H. Dowling, the present press agent at Yorke-Metro very well because he is masked by the strong right arm of general manager Fred J. Balshofer.

"REEL CLUB" BALL ON MAY 12.

Many prominent film stars have signified their intention of being present at the first ball of the "Reel Club," an organization composed of the employees of various film companies, to be held in Palm Garden, New York, on Saturday, May 12. The "Reel Club" has been organized but a short time, and will use the proceeds of the affair in building up the organization.

The grand march will be led by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Other stars who will be present, according to the arrangement committee, are Leah Baird, Alice Brady, Roscoe Arbuckle, Violet Mersereau, Florence LaBadie and Flora Finch and many others.

William B. Hart is chairman of the arrangement committee.

Subtitles de Luxe

By Tom Bret

Expertly Written and Artistically Illustrated, the Title Adds Greatly to the Success of the Picture

A RECENT report from London to the effect that "Intolerance" to the English mind is magnificent but "bewildering," brings us face to face with the proposition of clearness in motion pictures. Subtitles constitute an average of about two-fifths of the footage of motion pictures as they are made today, and carry, largely, the thread of the photo-play around which is woven all the beauty and charm of its fabric. Writing subtitles, therefore, should be considered one of the finest arts in the making of masterful photo-dramas.

Tom Bret.

There was a time, when the motion picture industry was in its infancy, that producers would not allow the actors to sit down or stand still, because of the belief that motion pictures should essentially show "motion." "Action!" was the whole cry of the director, and even now those of the earlier days cling somewhat to this idea in the making of pictures, seeking to "get over" the story of the play by pantomime almost exclusively. These men are behind the times, for there is scarcely any greater charm in the conveyance of thought than by means of splendid literature. The educated mind and the uneducated mind alike may revel in its delights when it is realized that the most attractive eloquence consists of beautiful thoughts simply and gracefully told.

In Metro plays this idea is carried out to a nicety, and their popularity the world over is proof of the fact that good subtitles are growing more and more important every day in the making of superior photo-plays.

Specimen Title.

Subtitles, like pantomime, can be made "bewildering" by their magnificence, and so lose their usefulness as a source of entertainment. This seems to be the most threatening evil of the present day clamor for extraordinary subtitles.

The makers of motion picture productions should consider that the eye and the brain are the only organs exercised by the movisor, or the person who sees motion pictures. The objective, therefore, is to entertain the intellect as well as the vision, and to do this in logical sequence, yet with as much variety as is necessary to make the picture on the screen restful as well as interesting. Any subtitle, therefore, which compels the mind to struggle unnecessarily to get the meaning is just as offensive to the onlooker as a scene out of focus. Where scene and spoken word are blended harmoniously regardless of footage but with due regard to photographic and literary excellence, then the picture becomes a masterpiece.

One of the points to be attained in keeping the public attracted by a motion picture is to bring the production to such a finesse that the characters in the play seem to be actually living out their parts upon the screen. Keeping the spectator within the illusion of motography, therefore, suggests the advantages of pictorial titles. The old idea that a decorative subtitle detracts from the essence of the title is about as fallacious as the old idea that a motion picure actor should not sit down. Keen observers today know that well done, beautiful art titles contribute quite as much to the subtitles as does the power of repose and expression in the performance of the principals. Art titles badly done, however, are sometimes so grotesque that they turn comedy into tragedy and tragedy into a joke. To meet the popular desire for art titles a few producers have engaged inferior workmen whose output has become the laughing stock of the trade. A poorly done art title is just as useless as a trite, prosaic, uninteresting construction in the text. In other words, a motion picture is entitled to the same polish, the same finish, the same glitter and attractiveness as a piece of cutlery, a beautiful piece of jewelry or any other article offered for sale—and the one that looks the best gets the money. In this connection it is safe to say that the men who write subtitles, and the men who make illustrations for subtitles, should be carefully selected and that no price is too high to pay to a man or woman who can deliver the goods in this respect.

The fact that the writer was given the first curtain call on Broadway of any motion picture author came about largely from the character of the subtitles in the spectacular war pictures "The Battles of a Nation." This was a strong incentive for the special study of subtitles and emphasized strongly their importance. That time spent on subtitles is well invested was demonstrated shortly after the success of "The Battles of a Nation" when another picture, upon which the writer was employed, entitled "The Warring Millions," attracted immense crowds and turned hundreds away at its premiere showing in the Olympic Theater in Chicago. After handling over three hundred motion picture subjects the writer is firmly convinced that the producer who makes the best motion pictures of the future will be the man, who with all things else equal, has the best staff of title writers and title artists in the world.

Comedy titles of the best class are used in the Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew comedies, released on the Metro program. The writer has been in collaboration with Mr. and Mrs. Drew in the writing of these subtitles for some time, and cannot let this occasion pass without paying a high tribute to Mrs. Drew for the standard of their excellence. The fact that Drew comedies are universally regarded as the cleanest, the "classiest," and the funniest in the field is proof of the fact that comedies depend largely upon subtitles of the better kind, quite as much as they do upon the elimination of vulgarity and obscenity.

Summing up the whole proposition, subtitles are mighty factors. They can make or break comedy or drama—they can make or break a motion picture concern.

Cut—bow and exit.

NEW STUDIO MANAGER FOR YORKE-METRO.

Wiley J. Gibson has been appointed studio manager at the Yorke-Metro studios in Hollywood, following the resignation of N. W. Aronson, who has gone to New York. Gibson's first connection with the motion picture business was with the Universal company several years ago. Later he joined the forces of Thomas Dixon, engaged in putting on "The Fall of a Nation." He came with Fred J. Balshofer's producing company in June, 1916.

Ratification Meeting at St. Louis

Exhibitors' League of That City Receive National Charter from President Ochs and Celebrates the Event.

THE St. Louis Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association became a member of the National League on April 26. Joseph Mogler, president of the association, says it was not the intention of the St. Louis exhibitors to merge with the National body until a few weeks ago, and that very recent developments decided them that their interests could be best served by such an affiliation.

The St. Louis Exhibitors' Association, while very healthy now, has had an uphill struggle and a very slow growth. Little interest was shown when the association was organized three years ago. The first meetings were held in a little room in the Benoist Building, where a faithful little band of pioneers—often no stronger in number than a corporal's guard—met once a week. The membership suffered several rises and several slumps, and never got to respectable proportions until last September.

Since that time there has been a steady growth, until today the roster shows seventy active members, composed of leading exhibitors, and thirty associate members made up of exchange managers and others interested in the industry, among whom are a number of newspaper men.

The association has made its best strides since Joseph Mogler was elected president. At that time, about seven months ago, the association had only fourteen members.

Mr. Mogler was one of the first showmen to exhibit pictures in St. Louis. He is a man of wide acquaintance and a very pleasant personality, is an indefatigable worker and a thorough believer in organization.

The association now occupies new assembly rooms in the Beers Hotel Building at Grand avenue and Olive street, where meetings are held every Friday. The rooms are well furnished and fitted up, and compare with any other club rooms of a like character in the country. The meetings are well attended and much work of a constructive nature has been done.

During the last session of the State Legislature, when a number of drastic censorship bills and tax measures were pending, the association made a determined and well organized fight, and won over heavy opposition.

The event of the local exhibitors' affiliation with the National League was celebrated by a big banquet at the Planters Hotel on April 26. The feast was spread at 12 o'clock, and the better part of the afternoon was spent by the exhibitors, their wives and sweethearts, and the many visitors, in speechmaking and a general all-around get-together meeting.

National President Ochs was present and delivered the charter to Local President Mogler. Mr. Ochs made a lengthy address dealing with the film industry and the relations of the exhibitor and the producer and exchange managers. He said that the industry was burdened by an extravagant manner of distribution, and predicted that the future would see fewer exchanges.

President Mogler made a short address, and State Senator Frank B. Warner, who proved himself a friend of the exhibitor during the censorship fight, also made a speech.

Charles F. Hatfield, general manager of the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, was present, and launched the idea of securing the Exhibitors' Convention for St. Louis in 1918.

Work will begin on this plan at once, and there is no doubt but that St. Louis stands a good show of getting the convention.

The St. Louis Coliseum, which is one of the largest convention halls in the country and is practically new and more modern than the Chicago Coliseum, would be an ideal place for the gathering and exhibits, and as St. Louis is very centrally located it is really the logical place to hold the convention.

A number of out-of-town visitors were present at the meeting, and everyone went away with the memory of a good time and an impression of the good work being done for exhibitors and the industry in general by the vigorous organization.

Close-Ups of the Banquet.

A. E. Morelock had to leave before it was over.

It was very touching to see Frank Root, "Doc" Demko and Christ Zotos, whose shows are almost jam up against one another on South Broadway, fraternizing together. Competition makes friends in St. Louis.

T. A. Rigler, of Hannibal, Mo., says he came down to the Big Town just to "take in the doin's."

M. D. Crandall, who makes it his business to look after "Idle Wives" (some job!), was there.

Louis Hehl, of the Cinderella, came near telling how old he is when he showed that poker chip found in the ruins of the Southern Hotel fire in 1877.

Edward Pohlman and his wife said they both thought the chicken was fine.

J. Erwin Dodson, of the Standard Film Corp., and Mrs. D. were busy getting acquainted with other film folk.

John Karzin, the oldest exhibitor in town—no, we don't mean that, John is not so old; he is only one of the real early exhibitors—was there shaking hands with his many friends.

Here are the fellows who brought their wives: Oscar Damon, Frank Root, John Gentner, Joseph Mogler, Senator Warner, Jack Burhorn, Harry Miller, D. T. Williams, W. O. Reeves, Charles Goetz, Floyd Lewis, L. E. Tally, S. J. Baker, J. Erwin Dodson, Edward Pohlman, H. H. Barnard, Mr. Graham and Mr. Kohlhauff. We were unable to get a complete list of the sweethearts, so we will not mention the few we did get.

Harry Miller, of the Idle Hour, of Festus, Mo., and Mrs. Miller were meeting old friends among the exhibitors and making new ones.

Fred Wehrenberg let loose a lot of applause when one of the speakers said, "I'm a Republican."

Jamison, of Pathe, was seen carrying around a big artificial rooster in his arms.

C. S. Edwards, who leaves Pathe on the 1st of May to be head of the new Bible Film Company, was saying "Hello" and "Good-bye" all at the same time.

"Doc" Demko, of the Shenandoah, on South Broadway, hinted that he is thinking of building a new house this summer.

Sidney J. Baker and Mrs. Baker regretted very much that, owing to a previous engagement, their daughter, Miss Berenice, could not attend the banquet.

Bob Taylor, of the Universal, was looking around for a moving van at the close of the festivities to transport the big floral butterfly to the exchange. "It's too nice to leave here for the waiters," said Bob.

St. Louis Exhibitors' Association Banquet, Planters Hotel, A pril 26, 1917.

Al King took enough time off from his ledger at the Universal to fill up on chicken.

Fred Corbett, of the Grand, in Moberly, Mo., said, "Talk about censorship, you movie people don't know what a fight is till you get in the bill-posting business."

Fred Keller and his bunch were all at one table, and for once seemed to have no thought of the wings of time.

Gus Froebel and the three Werners, Sam, Charles and Abe, made a splendid looking quartet.

When it was proposed to drink the health of the President of the United States, the deep bass voice of T. P. Goll could be heard saying: "Isn't there anything stronger than ice water?"

Al Wittman was busy, as usual.

Nathan Steinberg missed the other banquet at the Mercantile Club, but he got right up in front in this one—observe him in the picture.

The tall, slender, distinguished and scholarly looking person wearing glasses and an air of wisdom, seated between two posts and opposite Joe Pastlenick, of the Post Dispatch, who did not turn his head, is the World correspondent.

Iowa Convention Planned

President Ochs Meets Exhibitors at Preliminary Meeting in Des Moines and Starts Movement.

LEE A. OCHS, National President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, addressed some twenty-five of Iowa Exhibitors, and about one-half of the local Exchange Managers and their salesmen, at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, Des Moines, April 27. Although Mr. Ochs had sent a personal invitation to every exhibitor in the State, the exchange managers and other trade people in Des Moines knew nothing of any convention at any time, except through indefinite announcements in some of the trade journals.

Mr. Ochs arrived in the city early Friday morning and made a call or so at the exchanges. Some twenty-five exhibitors came to the city in response to his invitation and assembled at the Savery at various times in the morning, but nothing definite of any convention could be learned. Finally the exchange men who knew of his arrival spread the news to their visiting exhibitors that Mr. Ochs would address them at the Chamber of Commerce at three o'clock.

The national president explained to the small audience that the object of his visit was to organize a strong exhibitors' association in Iowa, in which state there had never been any successful organization. To insure the organization of the State's exhibitors, Mr. Ochs and the assembled trade men elected or rather appointed H. J. Lego, of the Majestic Theater in Fort Dodge, as temporary secretary, to be assisted in his duties by N. C. Rice, of the Call Opera House in Algona. W. D. Ingledue, of the Strand Theater in Marshalltown, was appointed temporary chairman. These three gentlemen were urged to work together for a really beneficial organization, whereby the exhibitors of Iowa might work together and in uniformity for the betterment of their business.

The exchange managers who were present expressed their hearty approval of the State Exhibitors' League, and promised to do all in their power to add members and further the formation. They promised to urge their salesmen and employees to talk to all exhibitors and to carry with them membership application blanks, showing the exhibitors the hundred and one advantages that they can each derive from the union. The state will be divided into zones and probably a leader will be appointed for each zone.

The appointed officers will hold their temporary positions until the larger convention is called the 12th and 13th of June, when it is confidently expected that all the exhibitors of the state will be present, their interest aroused by the energetic efforts of the few who attended this meeting.

The convention in June will be held in Des Moines, and in addition to the election of officers and the formation of a real organization, delegates will be elected to represent Iowa at the national convention in Chicago in July. Incidentally these delegates will vote for the national president.

At this convention it is planned that there will be a motion picture ball with many stars in attendance, Mr. Ochs using his influence in bringing the brightest stars in the motion picture firmament. At this convention, too, a substantial sum will be awarded to the individual who will have secured the most members for the State League.

In addition to his remarks on the formation of the State League, Mr. Ochs discussed the good and bad points in the film industry, expressing the opinion that the main cause of the present condition lay in the cost of distribution. Mr. Ochs gave a plan whereby this state might be improved to a great extent that centered around the idea that all brands of film could be distributed from one main office instead of through six or seven different exchanges in each city.

He also had a wild plan for the purchasing of the production direct from the producer, the National Exhibitors' League doing the purchasing, then the prints of the production to be released through the National League's own channels. This plan did not seem to impress the assembled men, and no wonder, since in its entirety it would only tear down what it has taken years to build up, although every one admits there are faults with what has been "built up." After various other opinions and remarks, the meeting was adjourned.

Every picture man in Iowa knows that an organization of the exhibitors is the only means whereby the film business can be conducted in a paying, well-oiled manner and if Mr. Ochs has aroused enthusiasm in the awakening of the sleepy Iowa exhibitors his visit has done good even if the man and his methods are open to criticism. It is to be hoped that the exhibitors will all respond to the urging of the film representatives who approach them on the subject, for an organization will surely not injure them and it will undoubtedly work them great good. And if, personally, the exhibitor does not favor the man who has aroused this interest. he surely will overlook that fact in the noting of the benefit the State organization can do him.

The report of almost every exhibitor that attended the meeting was poor business, no money, too high rental, etc. Surely each one of them will boost for an organization that in all probability will aid this condition's betterment.

Among the exhibitors present were: W. D. Ingledue, Strand Theater, Marshalltown; C. L. Allen, Pella; W. S. Porter, Eldora; M. Linn, Unique Theater, Glidden; A. V. Lippert, Plaza Theater, Dyersville; H. J. Lego, Majestic Theater, Fort Dodge; F. L. McCray, Lyric Theater, Oskaloosa; A. J. Eide, Lyric Theater, Roland; Powd McLuen, McLuen Theater, Guthrie Center; Brown & Anderson, Princess Theater, Boone; N. C. Rice, Call Opera House, Algona; P. F. Nugent, Princess Theater, Fort Dodge; L. M. Lane, Orpheum, Centerville; J. Abernathy, Panora; W. A. Treloar, Ogden; Tom Arthur, Cecil Theater, Mason City; Thomas Brown, Strand, Iowa City; Mr. Lane, of Lane & Ritter, Orpheum, Centerville; V. Lander, Simplex Theater, Stratford; Bowton Amusement Co., Opera House, Bowton; A. V. Lauver, Star Theater, Gowrie; Andrew Maland, Lyceum Hall, Slater; Mr. Perry, Star Theater, Colo.; A. H. Blank, Garden Theater, Des Moines; Abe Frankle, Casino-Majestic Theaters, Des Moines; J. W. Wagner, Unique Theater, Des Moines; Albert Schragg, Ideal Theater, Des Moines; B. J. Van Dyke, Royal Theater, Des Moines.

Exchange and other film men present were: R. C. Cropper, president of Standard Film Co.; L. A. Sheridan, Pathe manager; M. E. Williams, Standard manager; A. H. Blank, Selznick Enterprises; R. C. Li Beau, Des Moines Film and Supply; N. C. Rice, Triangle Film; Jos. M. Fieldman, Art Drama representative; G. A. Alt, Pathe roadman; H. G. Billings, Pathe salesman; F. H. Zolin, Favorite Features, Minneapolis.

Newark Exhibitors Get Together

Hold Beefsteak Dinner and Discuss Trade Conditions—Dr. Hespe Reports on Legislative Work.

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors of Essex County held a "Get-together" beefsteak dinner April 25 in Iffland's Garret, Market street near Broad. The object of the gathering was to discuss plans for bettering present conditions as they affect local exhibitors. Dr. H. Charles Hespe, although in a rather poor physical condition, and contrary to the advice of his physician, was a guest at the affair, deeming it his duty to be wherever the state president can be of any assistance. Dr. Hespe told of the important legislative work that has been accomplished and what must be done in the future. He said the fight against adverse legislation must go on, and that it was only through organized effort that the industry could attain its proper place in the estimation of the people.

The question of having a common carrier for transporting film from New York to Newark and return was introduced by Manager Reinlieb, of the local Pathe Exchange. Mr. Reinlieb stated that he represented the Film Club of New York, and acting upon their suggestion, he had brought the matter before the exhibitors. It seemed from the discussion that there was a unanimity of opinion in regard to having but one common carrier, but the point of debate was who should it be? No action was taken at the meeting, as the affair was purely social in its nature and the business will be brought up at a regular meeting of the organization. The attendance was not as good as it might have been. Several exchange managers were present and voiced their opinions regarding the common carrier idea and other problems that today confront the exhibitor and exchange man.

OREGON EXHIBITORS' CLUB ROOMS.

The club rooms of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oregon in the Majestic Theater building, Portland, are now being kept open regularly for the convenience of members. The rooms are in charge of Abraham Nelson, business manager of the League, who reports that there popularity is growing daily.

John A. Jennings, owner of the Sunset theater and chairman of the membership committee,, cooperating with Mr. Nelson, has launched a membership campaign that promises to be a winner. In fact all the big towns in the state are represented on the League's roll of membership.

A regular meeting was held April 25, at which several out-of-town members were present, including A. H. McDonald, Rex theater, Eugene. Oregon, and Claude Smith, Smith's theater, Gresham, Oregon. The League will be two months' old May 22, and has already accomplished much to be proud of.

Big Meeting at Minneapolis

Northwest Exhibitors' Corporation Holds Successful Convention and Elects New Board of Directors and Officers.

By John L. Johnston.

MUCH in contrast to the usual form of getting down to business the second day of a convention instead of the first, the seventh annual convention of Northwest exhibitors opened at Minneapolis, Tuesday morning, May 1, at 10:30 o'clock. Following an address of welcome by Mayor Thomas Van Lear and short addresses by President James G. Gilosky, National President Ochs, National Secretary William J. Sweeney, National Organizer Fred J. Herrington, President Joseph Hopp, of the Chicago branch of the National League; President H. L. Hartman, North Dakota Exhibitors' League, in the short session in the morning, the afternoon was given over to a discussion of various grievances of out of town exhibitors and other business of importance.

The reports of the various officers were read and adopted, with a few minor corrections, and the convention resolutions committee, with the assistance of Messrs. Herrington and Ochs, was vested with authority to draft a resolution to be sent to both houses of Congress as regards proposed war taxation of theaters. Two resolutions were originally adopted, but after discussion the meat of one was embodied in the other, which is as follows:

To the Sub-Committee of the House Ways and Means Committee:

Gentlemen: We, the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corp. of the Northwest, comprising the States of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, Wisconsin, Iowa and Northern Michigan, members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, having as its members representation in every State in the Union, in convention assembled, hereby go on record as utterly opposed to the special war tax of ten (10) per cent. on gross receipts.

There are in the neighborhood of fifteen thousand (15,000) motion picture theaters in the United States. If you pass this tax you will drive seventy-five (75) per cent. of them out of business. We are willing to do our share and ask your committee not to impose any heavier tax upon our industry than mercantile business.

Therefore, we recommend the income tax for owners of motion picture theaters, asking only the same exemptions that would be accorded to others. We are willing to co-operate and offer to appear before you with proper data substantiating our claim.

The registration of exhibitors at the offices of Secretary Clyde Hitchcock up to five o'clock Tuesday afternoon, May 1, follows:

R. C. Gibbs, Strand, Huron, S. D.; Tom Foster, Star Stanley, Wis.; L. A. Haglund, Lyric, Swea City, Iowa; J. G. Haglund, Swea City, Iowa; D. G. Rodgers, Nicollet, Minneapolis; Archie Miller, Devil's Lake, N. D.; F. J. McWilliams, La Crosse, Wis.; C. E. Van Duzee, Minneapolis; C. H. Hitchcock, Princess, Minneapolis; M. A. Lee, Oak Park, Minneapolis; George Carisch, Third Ward, Minneapolis; Albert Hill, Grandview, Minneapolis; James A. Keough, Strand, Minneapolis; N. C. Jensen, Opera House, Mora, Minn.; Otto Stelzner, Star, Minneapolis; Juy Dawson, Oak, Minneapolis; Charles W. Campbell, Blue Mouse, St. Paul, Minn.; H. L. Hartman, Palace, Mandan, N. D.

At the afternoon session of May 1, W. A. Steffes, David G. Rodgers, Minneapolis; Ernest Secor, Forest theater, Forest City, Iowa; Olive Waley, Elko theater, Bemidji, Minn.; H. C. Zander, Majestic theater, Rhinelander, Wis; and Tom Foster, Star theater Stanley, Wis., were prominent in the discussion. Mr. Rodgers moved that final word regarding the exhibitors' stand against advance deposits and return expressage be held over until Thursday morning, May 3, when the exchangemen will appear before the meeting and present their side of the case. Several grievances brought before the meeting by exhibitors were ordered turned over to the grievance committee by President Gilosky, and Chairman Billy B. Watson, of the committee, assured the immediate action on all cases brought before his body during the convention.

On Thursday, May 3, the convention elected the following board of directors: D. G. Rodgers, James G. Gilosky, M. A. Hoppenrath, Henry P. Greene, W. A. Steffes, Charles W. Campbell, C. H. Hitchcock, William H. Deeth and Charles W. Gates. At the directors' meeting these officers were elected: President, James H. Gilosky, of St. Paul; vice-president, Charles W. Gates, of Aberdeen; secretary, Clyde H. Hitchcock, of Minneapolis; treasurer, W. H. Deeth, of Minneapolis.

These delegates were elected to attend the Chicago convention: M. A. Hoppenrath, Ed. Hinz, C. H. Hitchcock, J. G. Gilosky, J. Friedman, Thomas Furniss, T. Foster, D. G. Rodgers, H. P. Greene, W. H. Deeth, C. E. VanDusee, E. D. W. Chamberlain, C. W. Campbell, G. W. Gates.

Panorams of the Convention.

By Sam Spedon.

AFTER the president, James Gilosky, had called the convention to order Dave Rodgers, of Minneapolis, in a big bassoon voice, sounded the keynotes of the session: organization and co-operation. Judging from the number of exhibitors present, about 75, there is no discord in the exhibitors' organization of the Northwest.

The national organizer, Fred Herrington, started the oratory and pyrotechnics the first day with a resolution on the Federal war tax of 10 per cent. on the gross receipts of all amusements. I. H. Rubens, of St. Paul and Minneapolis, was emphatically impressive in urging all the members of the league to send personal telegrams to their local representatives in Congress and the Senate, in addition to a combination telegram from the organization signed by all its members collectively. The consensus of choice expressed by the convention was to double the present national tax in lieu of the 10 per cent. tax.

Tom Furniss, of Duluth, Minn., and Dan Chamberlain, of Minneapolis, were of the opinion that the same method employed by Canada and European allied nations, in passing it on the patrons of the theatres was the only possible solution of the war tax.

National President Ochs volunteered to make a Paul Revere dash to Washington immediately after the close of the convention, Thursday, to carry personal letters of protest from all the organization members, present them to the National League's representative there and, if necessary, interview every Senator and Congressman at the Capital on the ten per cent. tax. Mr. Ochs claims that it would drive 75 per cent. of the exhibitors in the United States out of business. Tom Foster, of Stanley, Wis., was of the opinion that Ochs was going to Washington on a fool's errand; he believes the tax is inevitable.

Ochs still maintained it was worth while making a plea for at Washington and by making a clear and truthful statement of conditions they might get an equitable adjustment. He cited as proof of this opinion his testimony to the Wheeler Committee, the only exhibitor who testified before that body in New York. He said it was his truthful statement of facts and conditions that saved the exhibitors from taxation in the Wheeler bill and it was only through misstatements of the producers to that committee that they are going to be taxed.

The cabaret entertainment at the Hotel West, Tuesday night, had much of the old time pep and zest, with Universal popguns and balloons bursting in mid-air. Those who went home before the close missed an act in one scene that was not on the program. We are sorry we didn't see it.

The banquet on Wednesday night was well arranged and served. The food was good, the company delightful, and the eloquent and patriotic address of Rev. G. L. Morrill was a treat. "Nuff sed." Your representative is more thoroughly convinced than ever that the most enjoyable banquet is the one given by a deaf mute society. It was the first exhibitors' banquet we have ever attended which was opened with a blessing. It didn't depress anyone and it didn't suppress the oratory.

The chairman of the convention announced at the close that the secretary of the organization would be pleased to take subscriptions for Mr. Ochs' paper, in acknowledgement of his attendance at the convention at his own expense. And then added, also for the World and the News.

Thursday, May 3, the last day of the convention, was given over to a hearing of the exchange and newspapermen; we will touch upon these matters in a special article next week. National Director Tom Furniss, National Organizer Fred Herrington and Joe Hopp, president of the Chicago league, spoke, and in conclusion Lee Ochs was again heard from. The election of officers of the Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest brought its convention to a close with the slogan "On to Chicago in July."

Campaign On in Kansas

President Glamann Makes Strong Appeal to Exhibitors to Get in Line With the League—Meeting in June.

PRESIDENT C. E. Glamann, of the Kansas League, is making a strenuous effort to increase the membership of the Kansas organization. Just now he is circularizing the trade in his state on the benefits of the organization of which he is president, pointing out the benefits of concerted action as shown by the work the Kansas League is doing. Attention is also called to the next convention of the Kansas League, which is scheduled to be held at Wichita on Monday and Tuesday, June 4 and 5. Further publicity is given to President Glamann's letter here:

Wellington, Kansas, April 28, 1917.

Brother Exhibitor:

I am inclosing you a copy of a letter which has been sent to every exchange in Kansas City, which is self-explanatory.

Do you realize what this means to the exhibitors of Kansas?

Here are just a few things the Exhibitors' League of Kansas has done for you: Had the censoring of the pictures moved from Topeka to Kansas City; had the censorship fee of 10c per reel removed by the exchanges of Kansas City, which means a saving of about 50c per day for the exhibitors of this State; had Festus Foster removed from the Censor Board—he was considered one of the most narrow-minded men in the whole State, and was the direct cause of so many pictures being rejected in this State; helped A. A. Jack of Herrington, Kansas, to place himself in a position to make money, where before he had been losing it, because, as a single exhibitor, he could not have done what the League did for him, but with the help of the League it was an easy matter; now the League is going to have the "deposit system" abolished for you. It would be impossible for you to do this alone, but the League can do it for you.

Are you a member of this League? Did you attend the convention at Hutchinson, which was held for your especial benefit, April 23-24?

In order to reap the benefits of what the League is doing in this State, you must become a member of this League, and do it at once, and remember the dues must be paid up before you are considered a member in good standing; if you do not intend to keep your dues paid up and attend the conventions regularly, we do not want you. Slackers and exhibitors who believe in reaping the benefit of the other fellows' work are not wanted, and the exchanges will undoubtedly make this class put up a deposit, because if he is not fair with his brother exhibitors he surely will not be fair with the exchanges.

If you are not a member at the present time, send me $6.00 immediately, which will pay your initiation fee of $5, and your dues to June 1.

Our next meeting will be held in Wichita, Monday and Tuesday, June 4-5, 1917, and we want you to be there; we need you and you need us.

If you have any grievances of any kind, please send them to me, and I will gladly take them up with the Grievance Committee, who will give them their immediate attention.

In closing I wish to say, the exhibitor who does not join hands with an organization such as the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kansas, had better get out of the business, because he is not only hurting himself, but everyone else who is connected with him in the business.

It is my earnest desire to see every exhibitor in this State in this League in the very near future. Join today.

LETTER TO EXCHANGES.

To All Exchanges, Kansas City, Mo.

Gentlemen: At a meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kansas, held at Hutchinson, April 23-24, a motion was made and carried to abolish the deposit system now in vogue by some of the exchanges. After May 15, no exhibitor belonging to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kansas will put up any deposit on any pictures he will show thereafter, and all contracts then in force where deposits are required will be canceled.

We know that all the exhibitors who belong to this League are responsible business men and will live up to their contracts.

The League is anxious to co-operate with the exchanges, and any time, under the new system, any member fails to live up to his contract, it shall be the duty of the officers of the League to reject him, and to notify the exchanges, so they may protect themselves in the future.

The members of this League feel it is a reflection upon their business integrity to ask them to put up this deposit, and their future dealings with you will show their justification in taking this action.

We will be glad to furnish you a list of the exhibitors of this League for your reference.

Yours truly,
C. E. GLAMANN,
President M. P. E. L. of K.

That Idea and Suggestion Contest

Great Interest Taken in Mr. Schindler's Plan by Exhibitors Throughout the Country.

THE press agent of the National Exposition, to be held in July, states that a surprising amount of interest is being shown by exhibitors throughout the United States in the contest suggested by Ludwig Schindler, Exposition manager, for the best ideas or suggestions to make the Seventh Annual Exposition and Convention of the M. P. E. L. of America more attractive to the industry and the public.

Mr. Rubens, a well known exhibitor in Joliet, suggests a rifle range from one end of the Coliseum to the other, with some of Uncle Sam's boys to show the public how to shoot. Mr. Rubens used to be a gunner on the battleship Texas, and he has guaranteed to show all the big producers how to make a hit every shot.

"Good for you, 'Rube,'" replied the press agent, "but you must guess again if you want that $50."

Proprietor Ryan of the Garfield theater, Chicago, offers the sugestion that Illinois exhibitors use an attractive catch-line on their programs, such, for example, as: "See your favorite star in person at the Coliseum, July 14 to 22."

Exhibitor Kahn from South Chicago believes it would be a good novelty to have one of the prominent stars milking a cow.

For Mr. Kahn's information the press agent states that he has the consent of the cow; but, so far, he has failed to find the star who is willing to take a chance.

North Carolina Convention

Exhibitors Plan a Three Day Meeting and Trade Show at Wilmington in June.

THE annual convention of the North Carolina Exhibitors' League will be held at Wrightsville Beach, Wilmington, North Carolina, June 14, 15 and 16, convention headquarters to be established at the Oceanic Hotel. President Percy W. Wells, of Wilmington, and Secretary H. B. Varner, of Lexington, have not yet announced the completed program for the session, but it will undoubtedly be fraught with significant importance both to the industry of the State of North Carolina and of the Nation, since the Tar Heel exhibitors have shown a disposition in the past to wade right out into deep water, and have succeeded in rescuing the industry from many evils in the four years of its existence as an organized league.

Elaborate displays by manufacturers of films and accessories will be a feature of the convention, and applications or reservations of space are coming in to President Wells weekly. Efforts will be made to have several stars, and some speakers of national importance in the industry, and all of the big trade papers will be represented. As Wrightsville Beach season will be in full blast at that time, an opportunity will be afforded to visitors of combining business with pleasure and have a seashore outing while attending the convention.

MICHIGAN CONVENTION JUNE 12 AND 13.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Michigan Exhibitors' League, held at Saginaw, Mich., May 4, it was decided to hold the annual convention at Grand Rapids on June 12 and 13. A. J. Moeller, secretary, reports that all officers were present at the Saginaw meeting, and that indications point to the beginning of a real organization.

HERRINGTON'S TRIP DISCONTINUED.

It has been reported from Minneapolis, Minn., that President Ochs has ordered National Organizer Herrington to abandon his trip to the coast and to work in Wisconsin and near by states. All dates previously announced concerning Mr. Herrington's movements are therefore canceled.

KENTUCKY CONVENTION CALLED.

President L. J. Dittmar, of the Kentucky Branch No. 7, M. P. E. League of America, has called a meeting of the association, through Secretary Fred Dolle, to be held in Louisville on May 11, the day before the Kentucky Derby. Mr. Dittmar stated that there was not much of anything to come up at the meeting other than general shop talk concerning conditions. Due to the fact that the meeting will be held the day prior to the great Kentucky classic, it is expected that a goodly number of cameramen will make arrangements to cut in on the Derby, securing pictures for the various news weeklies.

More Stars for Mutual

Juliette Day and Julia Sanderson Become Mutual Stars—New Contract With Mary Miles Minter.

FURTHERING its policy of "Big Stars Only," the Mutual Film Corporation has signed contracts with two stage stars and has also contracted for another two-year term for the services of Mary Miles Minter. The two stars are Juliette Day, a "legitimate" star of rising fame, and Julia Sanderson, who has been starred in a long line of stage successes.

These announcements were made by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, and Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, Inc., on their arrival in Chicago from New York several days ago.

"This is simply further evidence of our strict adherence to the policy of 'big stars only' for the Mutual's pictures," said President Freuler. "We shall have important announcements concerning the vehicles in which these stars are to appear. We are giving particular attention to the matter of diversity of dramatic matter and clearly established lines of production for each year.

"In acquiring Miss Sanderson for the Empire we are adding importantly to the start with Ann Murdock, who is now at work on the first series of the Charles Frohman successes at the Empire Studios on Long Island. Other additions to the staff of the Empire are to be announced shortly.

"Miss Sanderson, it will be recalled, has a particularly fortunate and successful stage history. She started out with the Forepaugh Stock Company. She made a hit as Mrs. Pineapple in 'A Chinese Honeymoon,' and in 'Wang' with DeWolf Hopper. Since then her record has been unbroken success. She has played to big houses for a number of years, both in America and abroad, with particular success in London."

Mr. Hutchinson discussed some of the plans of the American Film Company in connection with the addition of a new company for Juliette Day. Miss Day will be directed by Rollin S. Sturgeon, former Vitagraph director, who has been engaged in the making of Gail Kane's first pictures for the American. Miss Kane's future pictures will be directed by Henry King, the director just now known for his successes in the making of the "Little Mary Sunshine" pictures.

"The line-up at the American Studios is a decidedly satisfactory one now," observed Mr. Hutchinson, "covering, as it does, four complete lines of well-defined dramatic products —William Russell, whom I consider a leader among the male stars of the day; Mary Miles Minter, just put under a new and high-priced contract, who has her own special field in the motion picture world; Miss Gail Kane, admittedly one of the greatest of the young actresses in America, and, latest, Miss Juliette Day, from whom we may expect a new and valued dramatic product.

"Miss Day, in the opinion of the critics, 'does not look a day over 15,' although she is considerably older than that and is a finished and accomplished actress. She has appeared in a line of interesting successes indicative of what may be expected of her in the pictures, including 'Blue Bird,' 'Everywoman,' 'Yellow Jacket,' 'Chin Chin,' 'Marrying Money' and 'Twin Beds,' every one well known and satisfactory to the public which spends its money for amusement.

"With four big companies at work the Santa Barbara studios will be just comfortably busy, with ample facilities for all that the pictures require and a big, strong technical staff, which means so much in the finsh and quality of the delivered picture."

LINDER ILL, STOPS WORK.

Owing to the illness of Max Linder, the announcement is made by George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, that further releases of the famous European comedian's pictures have been indefinitely postponed. Complications have arisen from a wound suffered by Mr. Linder in the war and the foremost physicians of the Pacific Coast have ordered him to abandon for the time the rigorous program to which he subjected himself in the filming of his comedies.

The first three pictures made by Mr. Linder in America—"Max Comes Across," "Max Wants a Divorce" and "Max in a Taxi"—have enjoyed wide popularity, and no doubt his temporary retirement from the screen will be deplored by picture patrons.

The first two pictures were made in Chicago during the worst weather of the winter. The third was filmed in Los Angeles under excellent conditions. The transition from the battlefields of France to Chicago, then to California, is blamed by physicians for the complications in Mr. Linder's wound.

Raymond D. West, Dean of Ince Directors

One of the Younger Generation of Picture Producers Who Has Made a Place for Himself.

AS THOMAS H. INCE'S chief assistant in the direction of "Civilization," Raymond B. West won a secure niche for himself some time ago in the hall of motion picture fame. He has lately added considerably to his prestige by his remarkable direction of two of the Bessie Barriscale Triangle features scheduled for early release, "The Snarl" and "Miladi of Tags and Tatters."

In "The Snarl" West has registered a triumph of double exposure in the characterization of the twin sisters. The critics have declared the handling of the various scenes in which the girls come into contact to be as near perfection as the human eye could desire. The story is a vivid piece of modern drama, and in most respects the direct antithesis of "Miladi of Tags and Tatters," which takes place in the rollicking days of John Paul Jones. Yet West is equally successful in creating the atmosphere of the eighteenth century, when wigs and jack-boots and Gainsborough hats were in daily use. Those who have followed West's career from the beginning, however, are not in the least surprised by this display of versatility.

Raymond B. West.

Mr. West was born in the city of Chicago about thirty years ago, and was educated at De La Salle College. His parents intended him to shine as a corporate lawyer, specializing on stocks and bonds. So after graduating from college, he packed up and moved to Los Angeles, expecting to make his fortune in a year or two. But before the young man could convince others of his legal and business genius he found himself without visible means of support with a three weeks' board bill to engage his attention. By good fortune he learned of an opening in the property department of the Bison Studios and canvassed Balshofer so earnestly for the job that the latter had to hire him to get rid of him.

That was the turning point in West's career. From property custodian he very shortly blossomed forth into a camera man, then was promoted to the position of assistant director, and finally became a full-fledged director when Thomas H. Ince took charge as executive of Kay Bee productions. At the present time West is the dean of the Ince directing forces, although he is far from being the oldest director connected with the big Triangle plant.

Chicago News Letter

By JAS. S. McQUADE

The Mothers of Illinois Their Own Censors.

THE following interesting article by Kitty Kelly recently appeared in the Chicago Examiner, and it shows what Chicago mothers and the Illinois Congress of Mothers are doing to secure the right kind of pictures for their children:

Now that women have begun putting their shoulders to the film wheel, pushing it toward the "better" side of the road, some new ruts may be grooved.

There have been various uplift movements for filmland, in various places, arriving at various results, but here in Chicago women have taken it up as a phase of their enlarged housekeeping. It is affecting their children, and, presto, it must be looked into and dusted out for their welfare.

This is being done under the auspices of the Illinois Congress of Mothers and the parent-teachers' associations through a better films committee in the hands of Mrs. Frederick Michael. She has had about fifteen women working with her for the last twelve weeks, and they have seen enough films to enable them to get out a list of over 200 approved pictures, ranging through comedy, drama, historical and educational subjects.

This list is sent out through the State, reaching 445 mothers' organizations, representing from 25 to 450 members, totaling altogether about 10,000 women. This is the present state of their campaign, and represents hard and conscientious work of the women and cordial cooperation of the film exchange men.

In all, the committee has been laboring for two years. It got out a shorter list, dated in December, 1916, and it sent out two form letters enlisting the mothers through the State to co-operate with exhibitors in getting them to provide suitable motion picture matinees for young folks.

The last letter marked something of a milestone in their labors, for they had done a lot of groundbreaking before that. It read, in part:

"The clubwomen can agitate the question of better films for children, the exhibitors can do their part by running special performances for children on Saturdays or Friday evenings, but the mothers—the ones who should work for this movement with all their might—too often will not do their part. In fact, it is appalling to find that while parents are guiding their children in the choice of companions and the books that they read, they are absolutely indifferent to the effect the vicious moving picture has upon the minds of their children. They would not willingly allow their fourteen-year-old child to read Shaw, Zola, Ibsen, Hardy, Meredith, etc., yet that same child is witnessing almost every unconventionality known to society through the medium of the average moving picture."

Two thousand requests came in on that single letter, and they keep coming from, not only Illinois, but sister states, and from Boston, New York, London. The uniqueness of the movement here has reached afar and enlisted interest almost universally.

Mrs. Fred Michael, of 5325 Indiana avenue, is the dominating spirit. Her committee works under her direction, and she has final say on decisions. She is ready at all times to furnish information and to help with bringing good pictures into communities. She herself has engineered model picture afternoon entertainments, so she knows her subject.

This better films work is absolutely altruistic; tainted lucre isn't mixed in at all. The committee gives its services, pays most of its expenses; the Illinois Congress of Mothers stands behind ready to meet financial needs, but doesn't desire any more than are necessary, and so far the calls on it have been very slight.

The aim isn't to be prudish or priggish in judging; it is to put fine and sweet and true things before young people, rather than foolish, weak and vicious.

These good ladies do not demand that all pictures shall be censored by a censor board, so that their children can be permitted to see them. They recognize that that would be unfair to the producer, and to theatergoers who have reached the age of discretion. They have selected the pictures themselves and have thus become censors for their children.

It is greatly to be hoped that mothers everywhere may follow the practice adopted by the mothers of Illinois.

Moving Picture Music That Pleases.

"H. J. S.," another picture theatergoer who has had his enjoyment marred by poor musical accompaniment for the pictures, recently wrote the following letter to the Chicago News, where it appeared:

"An organ is a beautiful instrument when used by an artist, but it is entirely out of place in a picture house, unless used sparingly—when the picture calls for it.

"My family and a number of friends pass up several large houses and walk about twelve blocks to spend a delightful evening at a small theater where there is splendid violin and piano music that harmonizes with the pictures and never becomes tiresome. We never begrudge the long walk."

The writer of this letter shows inferentially that a fair moving picture program with pleasing musical accompaniment is preferable to one much superior when it is accompanied by poor music. A walk of twelve blocks, in addition, is a strong indictment against the organ music in certain pictures in Chicago.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Orchestra Hall will open its summer season Monday evening, May 7, with the presentation of "The Spirit of '76." Robert Goldstein, the author and director of this pictured story of revolutionary days, will be present, and he believes that the picture will create a great wave of patriotic emotion in the minds of all who see it. Mr. Goldstein announces that he has staged his picture with massive and beautiful sets, and that he has given it an all-star cast, with hundreds of extras which include many full-blooded Indians. A special musical score has been written for the photoplay, which will be played at Orchestra Hall by a symphony orchestra of fifty musicians.

Julius Bernheim, who has been employed by Carl Laemmle for the past eight years, was recently appointed manager of the Laemmle exchange in Minneapolis, and also manager of the Bluebird exchange in that city. Mr. Bernheim is only 21 years of age, and received his initiation in the business at the old Laemmle film office in Chicago when he was 13 years old. He worked in Chicago for two years, when he was transferred to New York, and there he worked in every department of the Imp plant, from perforating to cameraman. When only 17 years old Mr. Bernheim was appointed superintendent of the Imp plant and had a large force of employees under him.

J. E. Willis, president and general manager of the American Bioscope Co., states that copy for the opening issues of the Screenews Magazine, the company's new one-reel release, is rolling in from camera reporters all over the country, and that everything is practically ready to go to the new Bell & Howell printing "press" for the first number.

The first issue will have seven sections—"Scientific Screenews," by Roy Carni; "Diamond Dickey Dreamer," a cartoon by Colby; "Rambling Through the Rockies," by Eddy Eckels; "Fads and Fancies Enhancing Milady's Makeup," by Peggy Hoyt; "Filming a Film," by J. E. Willis; "How Everett True Broke Into the Movies," by A. Condo, and "Your Flag and Mine." The last named subject is an adaptation of the company's special patriotic trailer, which Mr. Willis declares has won great popularity amosg exhibitors throughout the country.

A private presentation of "The Lad and the Lion" was given in the Selig private projection room, Tuesday, May 1. The story is by Edgar Rice Burroughs, author of "Tarzan of the Apes," and other well known stories. Vivian Reed is the star and Al Green directed the production. Cy DeVry, superintendent of the Lincoln Park Zoo, Chicago, was present and announced the production the most natural and exciting wild animal drama he had ever seen.

William N. Selig announces the release through K-E-S-E, Inc., in the near future, of a series of farce comedies, each of two-reel length. The first will be "A Hole in the Ground," released May 21. This will be followed by "A Rag Baby," "A Brass Monkey," etc. These comedies, while founded on the Charles Hoyt plays, are strictly up to date, many additional situations having been added to each. I have seen parts of some of them and have no hesitation in proclaiming them a series of big, laughing hits. Miss Amy L. Denis, a new Selig comedy star, appears in these comedies, and is certain to win popularity. Others in the company are William Fables and James Harris. Joseph Richman is director.

Otis B. Thayer is now directing at Selig's Chicago studios "The Mystery of No. 47," a comedy drama that will be released through K-E-S-E early in June. Ralph Herz, the well known actor who recently arrived in the city, is playing the leading role. He is supported by a strong cast.

William N. Selig has now taken up the production of educational films in a way that promises to bring great satisfaction to lovers of moving pictures of this type. The E. & R. Jungle Film studio in Los Angeles has been leased, and under the direction of C. E. Edwards the series will be filmed. Mr. Edwards has made a life study of wild animals and birds in their native haunts, and in these pictures he will employ all his knowledge. His studies will be revealed in pictures in a way that will interest and hold every spectator, from the oldest down to the smallest child. The great Selig Zoo, with its fine collection of wild animals and birds, will be used by Mr. Edwards as an aid in the production of these interesting educational films.

Herman Abramovitz, who for convenience in his legal undertakings sometimes used the alias Herman Abrams, was found guilty in the Criminal Court, this city, Wednesday, May 2, on the charge of receiving and selling three Charlie Chaplin comedies that were stolen from the vaults of the Mutual Film Corporation, this city, some time last December. These films were sold by Abramovitz to a dealer in Omaha, who, in turn, sold them to McLean & Walters, owners of the Lyric Theater, Sioux City, Ia. Judge Robert E. Crowe presided.

Aaron J. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, has been appointed representative in Illinois and Indiana for the Goldwyn productions. F. M. Brockell, associate managing director of the Central Film Co., will be manager of the Chicago branch for the Goldwyn pictures. The office will be opened June 15 on the third floor of the Orpheum theater building, and the first six releases will be shown to exhibitors about July 1. Mr. Jones also announces that he has secured all the productions of Ralph and John Ince for Illinois and Indiana, and that they will be released through the Central Film Co.

"The Barrier," Rex Beach's great production, will be released through the Central Film Co. for the states of Illinois and Indiana, the rights to this territory having been purchased by Mr. Jones for the Jones, Linick & Schaefer Co.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer has purchased the state rights of "The Crisis" for Illinois from Sherman-Elliott, Inc. "The Crisis" will succeed "Joan the Woman" at the Colonial, Sunday, May 6. For the first time in the handling of a great feature, Aaron J. Jones has decided to give continuous presentations of "The Crisis," the first presentation to begin at 11 o'clock a. m., and the last at 9 o'clock p. m. As each presentation will take two hours, this will give six in all, daily. The admissions for every presentation will be 25 and 50 cents.

For many weeks past moving picture theatergoers of the city have been looking forward eagerly for the first presentation of the Selig super-photoplay; Winston Churchill's great story of Civil War times in pictures will be especially timely, now that the nation is preparing for the greatest war in its history. There is little doubt that the presentations will raise a great wave of patriotism throughout the city; and the fact that the Jones, Linick Schaefer Company has reduced the admissions to 25 and 50 cents, will bring the big feature within the reach of all.

William N. Selig was the chief actor in an interesting ceremony that took place in the Lincoln Park Zoo, one day last week. He presented his old friend Herman Schuettler, Chief of Police of Chicago, with a cub lion, which he had had sent for the occasion all the way from the Selig Zoo in Los Angeles. "Chief" is the name bestowed on the cub by his new master.

Pictures Interest Soldiers

French Fighters Forget the Discomforts and the Horrors of War in Picture Shows.

IN his talk before the newspaper men at the National Press Club at Washington, Major Clay, of the British Army, who is in Washington as a member of the British Mission which is conferring with Government officers on matters pertaining to the entrance of the United States into the war, told them that the value of moving pictures in connection with keeping up the morale of the army should not be overlooked.

He was telling of the hardships of the men in the trenches in France, where he had been serving prior to be recalled to London to join the party coming to Washington, when he digressed long enough to show that proper amusement for the troops undergoing shell fire was on a par as to value with proper food.

"Charley Chaplin helps the British Army more than I can describe," he declared. "Whenever they hear these films are coming they hang about the barns and places where we have our cinema shows and they soon forget their discomforts. They think of the visits to the cinema shows back home with their wives or sweethearts before the war called them to the colors, and of the days when they can return to their home and take up their visits to the real shows in the cities and towns. All of these things help and make for greater efficiency, and I think if America sends an expedition abroad it should not overlook the value of amusement for the troops who must undergo deprivations incident to trench life and modern warfare."

Major Clay told briefly of these shows being held in huts and stables, many of which are erected through the Y. M. C. A., or the Church Army, as this service is known in England, just behind the lines, and the reserves, the men who are relieved from active trench duty and those who may be undergoing training are cheered up through the medium of motion pictures.

It is to be remembered that our own army recently purchased something like sixty-six motion picture projection machines, screens and other equipment, which were sent out to the different army posts in the United States and our Island possessions. Reports from the army chaplains and others having charge of the amusement features at the posts show that this move on the part of the Government has done much to add to the contentment of the men, and in keeping them from less desirable amusements in the cities and towns near the posts have increased the efficiency of the army. It is possible that should any troops leave the United States for service in France a motion picture projection machine will be looked upon as one of the necessary parts of equipment, and will be included, if not with the first contingent, at least at a later date.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION TO AID GOVERNMENT.

The producers' committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry held a meeting on the afternoon of Friday, May 4, to discuss how best the organization could co-operate with the Government in formulating an equitable war tax on the film industry. There was manifested no disposition to do anything other than to aid the Government, it being conceded that the industry as a factor in the amusement field should bear its proper share of the war burden.

The producers' committee suggested that the whole question be referred to the executive committee, and the latter body held a meeting on the following morning. At the Saturday session it was decided that in the event of the report of the Ways and Means Committee being filed on Monday, May 7, as was then expected, the whole committee should go to Washington and tender to the Ways and Means Committee whatever aid may lay in its power.

Word came to the association that the Wheeler bill would be reported out of committee to the Assembly for action on the evening of Monday, May 7.

M. H. Hoffman to Distribute Bernstein Films

Deal Recently Closed in Los Angeles Between Former Bluebird Manager and Isadore Bernstein.

M. H. HOFFMAN has joined forces with Isidore Bernstein and will aid the latter in his fight for clean pictures for the clean-minded.

Mr. Hoffman is one of the men responsible for the success of the Bluebird films and recently resigned his position of Exchange Manager of the Universal Film Company. He was in personal charge of all the Universal exchanges and is one of the big sales-managers in the country. Some years ago he was a business colleague of Isadore Bernstein, who was at that time in charge of the producing end of the Universal. The combination of the two men proved to be ideal and ever since they have hoped to be able to work together again. The amalgamation of their interests is now effected and Mr. Hoffman's slogan for "four square pictures" for the exhibitors is now a part of Bernstein "Clean Picures for the Clean Minded Millions," the battle cry with which he is planning to fight the producer of white slave films. There is hardly an exhibitor in the country who does not know the man who helped to put over the Bluebird films. They will welcome the news that he is now on tour opening exchanges throughout the United States where Bernstein films may be obtained.

The opening of these exchanges will involve, it is said, an expenditure close to a million dollars and the probabilities are that the distributing companies will release their products to the exhibitors September 1st or thereabouts.

Films from other producers up to Mr. Hoffman's standard of "Four Square Pictures for the Clean-Minded Millions" will be included in this distribution.

"The Seven Cardinal Virtues" produced by Jack Pratt, Mr. Bernstein's director general, will be the first entry of the Hoffman Distribution Co. into the market.

Due to the fact of the larger scope of his activities opened by the consummation of this deal, Mr. Bernstein has let contracts for the doubling of the stage at his studio.

"The Eyes of the World" Breaks Utah and Nevada Records.

J. L. Adams, general manager of the Deseret Film Company, of Salt Lake City, was in Los Angeles this week completing for a company allied with the Deseret concern the purchase of the rights of exhibition in the States of Oregon and Washington of W. H. Clune's feature production, "The Eyes of the World."

The Deseret Film Company one month ago purchased similar rights for the intermountain States of Utah, Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. Mr. Adams brought to the Clune offices a report concerning this filmed reproduction of Harold Bell Wright's story to the effect that "The Eyes of the World" has proved a sensational success and has smashed all records in Utah and Nevada.

The feature opened in Utah at the Strand Theater, Salt Lake, on April 1. In the succeeding two weeks it played to more than 20,000 paid admissions (all free list suspended) at a top price of $1, the same scale as was in operation in Los Angeles. The capacity of the Strand is 1,014, so that the picture played virtually to capacity during the entire engagement. During the first week hundreds of persons were turned away at every performance.

Mr. Adams says that this smashes not only every previous motion picture record in Utah, but also every theater record in Utah for paid admissions.

The best previous record for an opening was that of $3,200; "The Eyes of the World" opened to $4,039 and turned as many people away as entered the theater.

Simultaneously the Deseret Company opened in Nevada and registered a success as remarkable in its way as the one in Utah. Mr. Adams reports that the attraction played ten towns, all one-night stands, to a gross business of $3,327. The Deseret Company's share of this was $2,428, of which about $2,000 was net profit. The same prices were secured as in the big cities (25c. to $1) and in every case but one all previous theater records were put in the shade.

Mr. Adams cited the case of the town of Yarrington, where, at the Opera House, with a capacity of 213, no less than 207 were $1 seats. The six other seats were sold to Indians for two-bits apiece. The theater statement for this occasion, Mr. Adams says, is now framed in his office.

It was due to the remarkable showing of "The Eyes of the World" in these two states that Mr. Adams came to Los Angeles to purchase the rights for the northwestern states. He cited another fact in connection with the Clune film, namely, that "The Eyes of the World" was booked by his company in Ogden, Logan, Provo, Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello and Idaho Falls without showing the film to exhibitors in those towns and solely on the strength of the reports from Salt Lake.

Signal Activities.

With film boxes chock full of exposed negative, the Signal company this week returned from a week's stay in San Francisco, where they went to make a number of exterior scenes in the production of the tenth episode of their serial, "The Railroad Raiders." Much of the work was done at Sausalito and at San Rafael, to which points the company traveled daily.

Through the courtesy of the officials of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad, Director J. P. McGowan secured the privilege of using that company's trains for picture purposes and also to use as a "prop" the Lagunitas, which is a train ferry.

Helen Holmes and two extra men while swimming in the channel of the San Francisco Bay nearly lost their lives, in the filming of one of the scenes.

While in San Francisco Helen Holmes made two appearances before the audiences of the St. Francis Theater, which is running "The Railroad Raiders." She made a brief speech of thanks for the warm reception accorded her and the others of the company.

The episode for which the trip was made will be finished at the studio and released under the chapter title of "A Watery Grave."

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

H. O. Davis, vice-president of Universal Film Mfg. Company, and general manager of Universal City, left Los Angeles on Saturday, April 28, for a flying trip to New York.

We are advised that Theda Bara will actually arrive in Los Angeles during the week of May 15. The popular star has been reported in town half a dozen times during the last six months, but every time failed to materialize.

Her director, J. Gordon Edwards, will also come west. Mr. Edwards has made every Bara picture for the last year and has been associated with the Fox film corporation since its beginning. This will be Miss Bara's first visit to the coast.

Sam Rork, the personal representative for Mack Sennett and publicity director of the Keystone studios, returned to the city on Wednesday, this week, from a two months' sojourn in New York.

James Keane, lately with Thomas H. Ince and who produced "Money" for World Film Corporation and other large feature productions for other film companies, called at the World office this week. Mr. Keane stated that he will shortly start production on a large feature from a story by Queux Bellamy pertaining to an important question of the present day. Mr. Keane will produce the picture in co-operation with his brother, E. A. Keane, who conducted the negotiations in purchasing the scenario. The picture will be produced in and around Los Angeles and offered for sale on the State's right plan, announcements of which will be made later in the advertising columns of the Moving Picture World.

V. R. Day, special representative for George K. Spoor and manager of the Los Angeles studios of the Essanay Company, paid us a visit this week. Mr. Day stated that the doctors entertained good hopes for Max Lindner's recovery, but that the Essanay star must have absolute rest and medical attention for several months. The company is now producing a Western picture under direction of W. S. Van Dyke, who arrived here last week from the Chicago studios. Martha Erlich, leading woman for Max Linder, returns to Chicago on Sunday, next week, where she will work at the Essanay studios. Mr. Day and his company will probably remain in Los Angeles about two months and then go to Niles, California, where Essanay has opened up its old studios.

Captain Robert W. Melville, Western manager for the Lubin Company for several years, and director-general for their studios in Los Angeles and San Diego, has now started a film company of his own under the name of Robert Melville Features. Captain Melville has acquired a studio site in Hollywood and has already started production on a picture. The features will be released on the state's right plan. The Robert Melville Feature Co. has an office in the Story Building.

The entire Selig Zoo was turned over to the school children of Los Angeles and vicinity for one whole day last week, when they were admitted into the grounds free of charge. The day was the culmination of the plan for the celebration of Kindness to Animals Week, and thousands of children visited the Zoo.

W. H. Clune, the local theater magnate and president of the Clune Film Producing Company, will soon enter the "legitimate" play-producing field. Mr. Clune will stage at his large Auditorium Theater Bronson Howard's war drama "Shenandoah," and if the production proves popular it will possibly be followed with similar presentations of big plays.

Mr. Clune has secured no less a celebrity than Tyrone Power as leading man for the production, and a cast of 100 will support the well known star. David M. Hartford, former stage director for Oliver Morosco and director of photoplays for Ince and Essanay, will act as stage director. The play will have its premier in May and rehearsals have already been started.

Henry King, who directed Little Mary Sunshine for Balboa, is now directing Gail Kane at the American studios in Santa Barbara. Her first picture is called "The Woman in Black" from a story by Julius Firtman. Rollin S. Sturgeon, who has been directing Miss Kane, will be given a new star, recently signed up in New York, but whose name is not as yet announced.

An initial showing of "The Argonauts of California" was given by Edward L. Grafton, president of the Grafton Publishing Film Co. at the Mission Play House in San Gabriel on Tuesday evening this week. Invitations were sent broadcast to exhibitors, civic bodies and representatives of public institutions, the press and many notables of the city, including the mayor. A large and appreciative audience had gathered to see this large and magnificent picture-play of early California, a comprehensive review of which was given in the Moving Picture World several months ago.

The Burbank Theater, which has been closed for two weeks after a brief but exciting career as a burlesque house, will open again next week as vaudeville and picture theater under management of S. Morton Cohn, president and manager of a large chain of ten cent theaters operating from coast to coast.

"Baby" Virginia Corbin, the charming little four-year-old film actress, who has been starred by the Franklin Brothers in a Fox feature, "Babes in the Woods," soon to be released, and a spectacle entitled "A Modern Jack in the Beanstalk," to be released in June, has made such a hit with her work, which has been so far "by the picture," that William Fox has now signed up the "little star" for a year's contract at a good sized salary. Baby Corbin is now at work on a new version of "Treasure Island," which has been rewritten especially to make it a vehicle in which she could be starred.

Louis F. Gottschalk, well known composer, was engaged by the Corona Cinema Company, last week, to create the musical arrangement for "The Curse of Eve," a morality drama starring Enid Markey, which shortly will be presented to New York City for the indorsement of the State Rights buyers. Mr. Gottschalk went immediately to work on the composition which will form the musical accompaniment for the multiple-reeler, and already he has provided his staff of copyists with more than a dozen numbers.

Gottschalk is the composer of many concert songs, among which are included "A Little Dutch Garden," "Heart's Chosen Hours," "A Jolly Old Monk,' and the volume known as "Cameo of Songs." His principal contribution to the field of photoplay musical arrangements was his score for "War's Women," in which, by a strange coincidence, Miss Markey appeared.

Simultaneously with the announcement of Gottschalk's engagement came word from the Corona people this week that "The Curse of Eve" will be ready for its New York trade showing before the end of May. Under the supervision of President F. E. Keeler, Director Frank Beal and the author, Wycliffe A. Hill, the big film is now rapidly being reduced to footage which, it is believed, will total about eight reels. Immediately upon its completion it will be taken to the metropolis by Keeler and Beal and there presented for its maiden inspection.

The new glass-inclosed stage, recently completed, at the Ince-Triangle studios received its christening, this week, when Charles Ray and a company of three hundred and fifty players, under the direction of Victor Schertzinger, appeared in evening dress on a "set" that covered every foot of floor space. This "setting" is a reproduction of one of New York's famous roof gardens.

Harold Lockwood's supporting cast for "The Haunted Pajamas," now being filmed at the Yorke-Metro studios, was completed this week by the engagement of Betty Ware to play the role of Elizabeth Billings.

The people now engaged in the production of the picture are Harold Lockwood, Carmel Myers, Lester Cuneo, Ed Sedgwick, Paul Willis, Betty Ware, Harry de Roy and Wm. DeVaull.

Wiley J. Gibson has been appointed studio manager at the Yorke-Metro, following the resignation of N. W. Aronson, who has gone to New York. Gibson's first connection with the motion picture business was with the Universal company several years ago. Later he joined the forces of Thomas Dixon, engaged in putting on "The Fall of a Nation." He came with Fred J. Balshofer's producing company in June, 1916.

A team of malamutes have been received, this week, at the Ince-Triangle studios for use in the forthcoming Dorothy Dalton play. There are eight of these dogs and they will play an important part in this Alaskan story. A close-up of the shaggy-haired animals, howling at the moon, will prove an interesting "animal feature" in this picture. Their owner, E. J. Knowles, better known as "Mush" Knowles, accompanied the team from the North country and insists that the scenes in which they appear be filmed within two weeks, as he will not keep the dogs in the warm Southern California climate longer than a fortnight.

Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who has been visiting the Lasky studio, will soon go east for a brief business trip and then return to California to spend the summer. The head of the Lasky company announced that he is greatly pleased with the change in the plant and during his visit in the east will make arrangements for several of the stars in the eastern studio to come west.

With Myrtle Gonzalez in the featured role, Director Lynn F. Reynolds is filming a five-reel photoplay entitled "Back to the Primitive." In the supporting cast are George Hernandez and Jean Hersholt. Many of the scenes of this production were filmed at Santa Cruz Island off the coast of Southern California.

George Beban, the Morosco star, and his company, have gone into Pine Crest to film some snow scenes and will remain in that locality for several days. One of the hottest days in Los Angeles the Beban company was enjoying a blizzard in the mountains.

Eileen Sedgwick and several other members of Director Henry McRae's Universal Company were injured in a runaway in Griffith Park, near Los Angeles, one day this week. Director McRae was engaged at the time in making a number of country scenes for his current production, "Demster's Return," and an old stage-coach which was used in these scenes was being driven along the road when one of the horses tripped and fell. The other three horses became frightened and started to run away.

Miss Sedgwick, the leading woman of the company, was on the box with the driver, who told her to jump as they neared a waiting automobile and she landed on her side in the road. Just at that moment the horses crashed into the machine, badly wrecking it, and then plunged ahead into a large oak tree where they all piled together, each one being severely hurt.

The coach tipped over and Rex Hodge, McRae's assistant, and two others who were riding inside were badly bruised by broken glass and contact with the sides of the coach as it turned over. Miss Sedgwick fortunately did not sustain any serious injuries, but, however, was badly shaken up and quite bruised from her nasty fall.

Director Allen J. Holubar has started production on a five-reel feature from Brand Whitlock's story, "The Field of Honor." Some very elaborate battle scenes have been planned for this play. Numerous trenches, pit, breast work and other war settings are being constructed by Technical Director Allen J. Holubar.

Director H. H. Barter and his corps of assistants. Director Holubar has been a student of military affairs and is considered to be better versed on these topics than any other man on the Universal lot.

Two new productions were started at the William Fox studios during the last week. One is a photoplay under direction of R. A. Walsh with Miram Cooper as the star and a cast which includes Charles Clary, Jack Standing, Jane Novak, Rosita Marstini, Jennie Lee, W. E. Parsons and Johnny Reese. Jennie Lee, Jane Novak and W. E. Parsons will make their first appearance in this picture under the Fox banner.

The other production is a George Walsh picture under the direction of Otis Turner. Doris Pawn will play opposite George Walsh and in the cast will be Herschel Mayall, Velma Whitman, Hector V. Sarno and Caroline Rankin.

The latest addition to the galaxy of pretty actresses at Universal City is Donna Moon, who has signed a contract to appear before the camera in Universal photoplays. Miss Moon is a native of Salt Lake City and was educated in the public schools there and in Los Angeles. She has had three years' experience on the stage and in pictures, but prefers the latter. She was one season in stock with Willard Mack and Marjorie Rambeau and later had two seasons in vaudeville on the Orpheum Circuit, being featured in "Wrong Bird," a one-act comedy and dramatic sketch. Miss Moon appeared before the camera with the Lubin Company under the direction of Millard K. Wilson, now at Universal City, and also made one seven-reel feature for a company in her home city.

Bessie Love and a company of Ince players under the direction of Paul Powell returned this weekk from Northern California, having followed the Cole Brothers' circus from town to town for many days. Miss Love, Josephine Headley and Jack Richardson appeared in the street parade in each city, and assisted in entertaining capacity audiences during each performance. It is understood that the management of the circus offered a good salary to the "troupe" if they would remain for the season, as they proved a valuable "added attraction" to the three-ring outfit. Every courtesy and assistance was accorded the Ince-Triangle players in securing the scenes for this story of circus life, by L. V. Jefferson, in which Miss Love will be presented as star, and they returned to the Culver City studios fully understanding why the "sawdust ring" possesses its peculiar fascination.

A new film vault with a capacity for three years supply of negatives is now being erected at the Lasky studio. The vault will be of concrete construction with both water and air compartments surrounding it, and is the last word in fireproof construction for film vaults.

Sessue Hayakawa and Fritzi Brunette and a company of 150 people under the direction of Marshall Neilan left the Lasky studios this week by special train for a Mexican border town to film some scenes for Mr. Hayakawa's forthcoming production. The party will be gone for several days.

A company of Ince-Triangle players left this week for Monterey, California, to film some scenes for a forthcoming feature in which Enid Bennett is to be starred. The company is under direction of Roy Neill and the cast includes Margery Wilson, Jack Gilbert, Carl Ullman and Gertrude Claire.

Thirteen baby wolves made their appearance at the Universal City zoo this week. They are of the species known as Siberian grays. Superintendent Hoover says the little ones are all "doing nicely" and that next winter they will make a splendid Alaskan team for the snow pictures that are being planned for the latter part of the year.

A few days after their arrival in Los Angeles, Douglas Fairbanks, his director John Emerson, and Cameraman Victor Fleming departed for "somewhere in Arizona" in quest of picturesque western background for scenes of "A Regular Guy." The filming of the interior scenes will be made at the Lasky studios, where Art Director Wilfred Buckland will co-operate with Director Emerson in the supervision of the settings.

The second episode of "The Mystery of the Gray Ghost" is being filmed at Universal City under the direction of Stuart Paton. The scenario in this exciting story called for the looting of a big bank, so Director Paton with his assistant, Martin Murphy, made a tour of the various banking houses and finally decided that the safety deposit vaults of the First National Bank would answer the purpose better than any others.

No film company has ever been permitted before to use the vaults of the big bank for a setting, but Paton is a Scotchman and imbued with a great deal of determination and persuasion. Consequently, he was able to secure from President Stoddard Jess the necessary permission and furthermore the bank furnished additional guards, permitting the company to work after the usual hours of closing.

This serial is taken from Arthur Somers Roche's story "Loot" which appeared last year in the Saturday Evening Post. Harry Carter, Priscilla Dean, Emory Johnson and Eddie Polo are appearing in the cast.

Edward and Mrs. Sloman have been receiving congratulations on the arrival of a little daughter, their first child. The American director has always wanted a baby girl and is therefore happy, and if the child grows to be as handsome as her mother, she will be indeed fortunate. Mrs. Sloman is known as Hylda Hollis on the stage and in filmland, and both she and her husband were great favorites on the other side of the water before they came to America.

One of the most successful pictures ever exhibited at the Woodley Theater was the Keystone comedy "Teddy at the Throttle," which packed the house to capacity and still some more all last week.

Lobby Display at the Woodley Theater.

A remarkably clever lobby display attracted more than usual attention from the passing crowd. As can be seen from the illustration, a realistic reproduction of a big Salt Lake engine occupies the upper part of the lobby. Charlie Pike, the representative of the Salt Lake route, supervised the installment of the big display. A large passenger train was rented by Keystone Film Co. from the Salt Lake Railroad for the taking of this picture.

Studio Flashes.

We paid a visit to the Signal studio last week and there saw a new director on the job, to wit, Helen Holmes, who explained that owing to Mr. Mac having a hurry call to cut the film, she had volunteered to take his place in order that production might not be delayed.

Saw Joe Waddell out in the wilds of Garvanza the other day in the midst of some real scenery. Joe is now shooting the piece for the George Sargent Company at the big U.

We had the pleasure of seeing Sid Franklin and Bernard McConnville out at the Fox Cafe last Wednesday. Sid is going it alone now on the direction of kid stuff, as brother C. A. is directing Gladys Brockwell, and Mac is helping out with the continuity.

We also ran into another famous team at the same studio, in other words, Dustin Farnum and Dick Stanton. They were working on an interesting looking set, doing costume stuff for a new feature in which Dusty will be supported by Winifred Kingston.

Alice Howell in New Comedies

JULIUS STERN, President of L-Ko Comedies, and J. G. Blystone, general director, have determined that Alice Howell has so firmly established herself as a favorite, through her appearance in L-Ko's, that the time has come to recognize her talents and encourage and reward her energies. They will therefore present her hereafter in a new brand of mirth-makers, to be called Howl Comedies. Three productions are ready for distribution and Director Blystone has others now contemplated or in active preparation.

Alice Howell.

"Women have demonstrated on the stage that they can be just as funny as the comedians of musical comedy, burlesque, vaudeville or farce. We propose to establish Miss Howell as a comedy star upon the screen, and we have faith in our determination. Miss Howell has 'made good' as L-Ko's leading comedienne and we are convinced that she will duplicate her past success as star of her own series.

"'Balloonatics' will be the first Howl Comedy to be distributed. In this feature the star goes up in the air to demonstrate the great possibilities of an air-ship in provoking laughter. 'Automaniacs,' her second feature, will show that a motor may be made the basis of merriment, while in 'Neptune's Naughty Daughter' Miss Howell will go under water to get the laughs.

"Under Director Blystone the star of Howl Comedies has demonstrated her fearless daring in performing stunts as hazardous and difficult as any man has ever undertaken—qualified, of course, by the limitations of sex, in some instances. She knows how to get laughs out of every situation where a laugh may possibly be planted, and she will have greater opportunities than ever to develop her talents as a comedienne in Howl Comedies."

LANG RETURNS FROM CUBA.

Arthur J. Lang, export manager of the Nicholas Power Company, who has been absent from New York on a trip to Cuba, returned last week very enthusiastic regarding conditions down there. Mr. Lang states that Cuba is rapidly recovering from the temporary demoralization caused by the revolution and that motion picture business will be as good, if not better, after complete order is restored. The revolution was not nearly as extensive as reported, and now all of the big leaders have been apprehended and, with the exception of a few roving bands, quiet prevails in all parts of the republic. Mr. Lang further stated that the projection of pictures in Havana is unusually good.

Selig's New Release

The Selig-Tribune News Reel Will Be Discontinued on Wednesday, May 16, and Will Be Succeeded by The World Library.

The Selig-Tribune, the news reel that has been released twice weekly through the General Film Service, will be discontinued, to become effective Wednesday, May 16, according to a statement issued at the Selig offices in Chicago. Supplanting the news film the Selig Polyscope Company will issue a one reel weekly feature, entitled The World Library. The release will be made every Monday through the General Film Company.

During the life of the Selig-Tribune it enjoyed unusual popularity as one of the leading news films and was considered among the foremost in originality and enterprise. The one-sheet poster, conveying the idea of the front page of a newspaper and bearing the newspaper atmosphere, which appeared simultaneously with the Selig-Tribune, was an original and effective advertisement. The fine news facilities of the Chicago Tribune were utilized, and contributed largely to the value of the news film. However, the field was considered overcrowded, and Mr. Selig finally concluded to discontinue the news film in favor of a one reel weekly release that will be both comprehensive and wide in its appeal.

The World Library, it is expected, will be as original and as enterprising as was the Selig-Tribune. Pictorials of every description, from all parts of the world, will be included. It has been planned to have the World Library both entertaining and instructive, a worthy weekly pictorial that will appeal to all classes. Cameramen have been actively engaged for some time past in filming events and unusual and interesting scenes in America and other countries for The World Library.

Bud Fisher Likes Pictures.

BUD FISHER, American's foremost cartoonist, is in the film business to stay. An announcement from the creator of "Mutt and Jeff" states that he has personally taken over the management of the "Mutt and Jeff" Animated Cartoon business. What makes this statement all the more remarkable is the fact that Mr. Fisher will not only supervise the animation of his world-famous characters, but will also introduce new methods of distribution which will come under his personal care, for it must be remembered that Fisher is a rare combination of artist and business man. It is indeed seldom that an artist of Fisher's reputation will undertake the important task of distributing his product, even though the names of Mutt and Jeff be household words. But Fisher believes in service—the better service that has become associated with his name.

Bud Fisher.

"I realize the amount of work involved in the production of the 'Mutt and Jeff' comedies," Mr. Fisher says, "but after their completion I am desirous of seeing that they get the proper circulation. Having this object in mind, I propose to personally attend to their distribution to my exchanges, which I know will in turn repeat the same service to their exhibitors. I feel certain that this arrangement will be approved by those whose satisfaction is my ultimate aim. There will be no detail too small that I will not personally supervise, no inquiry too delicate that I will not answer. This is the policy I intend to pursue, because I believe it to be the only equitable one."

Bud Fisher has located his offices in the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

Seng Speaks of "Parentage"

Says Picture Produced by Hobart Henley Is Clearest and Most Dramatic Propaganda Film He Has Seen.

FEWER and better films" is the motto of Frank J. Seng, who is soon to introduce the special feature "Parentage" to state rights buyers. He says it is a picture that comes nearer the realization of that slogan than any production he has seen thus far this season.

"In 'Parentage' we have a picture which deals with one of the big things in life," says Mr. Seng. "The average propaganda production have a tendency to be more sensational than instructive. They spread before us thrills and sensations, but it is rarely that they go to the root of the evil they are seeking to destroy and disclose the remedy. Some of these put forth the subject in such a highly sensational manner that the point is lost with the puolic, or else it is treated so crudely that no benefit is derived from the theme the picture is supposed to teach. When a production is so bad technically that it insults your intelligence, there is little chance of the suggested thought being considered seriously.

"What we need more than anything else is entertainment. Give us dramatic stories, excellent casts and fine photography. There is plenty of room for the producer who merely tries to please his audience in a clean way. Register a thought if possible, but do it in an entertaining manner.

"I have been of the opinion for some time that some of our organizations are bad boys. Up to the present I have been satisfied to be an exhibitor. However, I decided that if chance for a production came along that fulfilled my idea of what an offering really should be, I would not hesitate to invest. In 'Parentage' I have found such a picture. It is not filled with sensation; there are no murders; no girls lured to the big city; no unpleasant scenes to influence the growing minds of children and distort the righteousness of adults. There is no vampire in this production; no mortgage on the old farm to be paid off, no villain to thwart it and no crime. It is a story of 'Parentage' and shows entertainingly the effects of the environment upon children. It is not a sermon, but is a beautiful dramatic story told in an interesting way by an exceptional cast of players who are especially adapted to the roles they portray.

"I believe it will be an exceptional success, because there is just enough of the human pathos in it to hold the interest and it is a story that came with creation, and will proceed to visit in every home as long as humanity continues to exist.

"The story was written by Martin G. Chandler and Hobart Henley. The idea came to Henley two or three years ago, and he vowed that some day he would work out the story with some capable writer, play the leading role and direct the production himself. He has done all this, and I think the public will agree with me when I predict that this effort places him in the front rank of directors. He has given us something which is different. It is human, it carries many big thoughts, and yet, first of all, it is always absorbingly entertaining. I believe "Parentage" will be warmly received wherever it is shown and that it will prove a dramatic and financial success which will have exceptional strength as a 'repeat booking' production because of the word-of-mouth advertising it will get from pleased patrons."

LORIMER JOHNSTON RETURNS TO AMERICA.

After a tour around the world, which has taken three years, two years of which were spent in South Africa, Lorimer Johnston and his wife, Caroline Cooke Johnston, arrived in San Francisco last week, after a long trip from Africa, owing to war conditions, especially around Cape Town, no direct route to America was practical, so a steamer was taken for Hobart, Tasmania, a trip of more than three weeks, during which no land or ship was sighted. After a trip through Tasmania, steamer to Sydney, Australia, was secured and then after visiting Eastern and Southern Australia, he went to Auckland, New Zealand. New Zealand he reports presents a vast field for exploiting moving pictures, as scenically it is not equalled by any other portion of the world. Steamer then by way of Fiji Islands, Samoa, Tahiti, and Honolulu, changing at the various ports, brought him to America.

In South Africa for two years Mr. Johnston produced for The African Film Productions, Ltd., establishing a studio at Johannesburg, Transvaal, and taking twelve pictures aggregating 42,000 feet. These were taken in Zululand, Basutoland, Portuguese East Africa and various other portions of Africa. Arrangements are now under way for the American releases, and Mr. Johnston is in Los Angeles forming his plans for the future.

Pathe Program

"The Candy Girl," Five-Reel Thanhouser Production; First Two Installments of the New Serial, "The Neglected Wife," and Number Nine and Ten of "Mystery of the Double Cross."

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"The Candy Girl."

THE most illustrious example of the girl who started making candy in the kitchen at home and ended up by becoming the owner of an extensive shop on Broadway is Mary Elizabeth. In "The Candy Girl," a five-reel Thanhouser photoplay written by Philip Lonergan, the heroine of the story aspires to the same exalted position. She achieves the store and a deal of romance, as well. Two men fall in love with her. One is poor and a musician; the other rich, but given to wasting money. He has a good heart, however, and Nell, the candy girl, marries him. She at once discovers that life is not all love and "kisses." Young Monroe is a drug fiend and, although his father has tried every available means to have him cured, the boy is still addicted to the habit. Nell's devotion triumphs in the end, and gives her husband the moral courage to throw off his chains. The change from the simple motives of the earlier part of the story to the discovery of young Monroe's secret vice is somewhat startling, to say the least; but, taken as a whole, the picture will be enjoyed by those who may be termed middle class spectators.

Gladys Hulette is Nell, the candy girl. She enters into the spirit of the part with enthusiasm and makes Nell the wholesome, attractive little woman intended by the author. She is well supported by William Parke, Jr., J. H. Gilmour, Thomas A. Curran and Helen Badgley.

"The Neglected Wife."

The new Pathe serial, starring Ruth Roland, is the story of a young girl's struggles to become a writer and her adventures with a man who is already married. The opening installment is called "The Woman Alone" and shows Margaret Warner's brave battle against discouragement and poverty, as article after article is returned unaccepted. She makes the acquaintance of a lawyer, the husband of the neglected wife, and is given a chance to assist him in the preparation of a series of magazine articles. He falls in love with her. The number closes with an accident on an incline railway and Margaret is rescued by the lawyer.

The second instalment is entitled "Weakening." Margaret accepts a loan from Kennedy and also goes out to supper with him. In the meantime the lawyer's wife, who has gone away for her health, is shown an unpublished story, "His Wife and the Other Woman," written by Margaret Warner, whom she has met. It is also disclosed in this number that several persons are interested in Margaret's friendship for Kennedy.

So far, the serial pays more attention than usual to the development of logical situations than to speed and the piling up of melodramatic incidents. It is produced with the customary care bestowed on a Pathe serial, and is well played by Ruth Roland, Roland Bottomley and the rest of the cast.

"When Jail Birds Fly."

In the ninth chapter of "Mystery of the Double Cross," Peter Hale and the reporter are helped to escape from jail by The Masked Stranger. They then arrange a kidnapping party and carry off Bridgey and Philippa and imprison them in a deserted castle. Bridgey is made to sign a confession of his crimes, and when he is released he hurries to the District Attorney with his story. That gentleman investigates and finds that Peter and the reporter are back in their cells. Philippa, although she is positive that she was locked up in the castle with Bridgey, is assured by her friend, Therese Traver, that they went shopping that day. More mystery for the serial fans to solve.

"The Hole in the Wall."

The principal incident of the tenth chapter of "Mystery of the Double Cross" is the finding of Philippa's father. Mr. Brewster is present when his daughter is lured to a low dive called "The Hole in the Wall," and the two rush into each other's arms. Bridgey plans in this number to have one of his followers steal his confession from the District Attorney's safe. He also hopes to compromise Philippa and force her to marry him.

"One Law for Both"

Ivan Abramson Author and Director of Lengthy "Moral Propaganda" Picture—Well Cast, But Lacks Sufficient Story or Drama to Carry Its Eight Reels.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

LITTLE that is new or of more than ordinary interest has been brought to the screen in "One Law For Both," an eight-reel, so-called "moral propaganda" picture that is neither wholly moral nor wholly convincing as propaganda. It was written and produced by Ivan Abramson, and will be exploited by Ivan Film Productions, Inc. The picture is far too long, with the result that the tempo is very slow and sometimes tedious. Judicious cutting of several hundred feet of superfluous matter would help considerably.

Those who may be attracted by the title in the hope that they are going to see something spicy will be disappointed, for, while the picture approaches the danger line of dirtiness several times, the line is never quite reached, although the suggestion is gotten over unmistakably each time.

The chief merit of "One Law For Both" lies in its cast, which includes a long list of capable and well-known players.

On its psychological side the picture is more than anything else a visualized exposition of the author-director's ideas and philosophy on the subject referred to in the title. Mr. Abramson has taken his characters and, with little regard for sequence or consequence, has forced them to fit into the situations he creates for the expounding of his thesis that "society should treat the sexes with equal regard on all questions of our social fabric." In the earlier reels the reviewer is unceremoniously jumped from Russia to America and back again several times without any connection being established between the two sets of characters until along about the fourth reel, when the woman who surrendered herself to an autocratic Russian official as the price of the liberty of a group of imprisoned revolutionists reaches America, whence her brother has also fled. In getting over the idea of the woman's sacrifice we are shown a scene at the portals of the Russian official's bedroom which is flashed back to three times during the course of the picture.

It is after the action shifts exclusively to America that it becomes more involved and more full of sex, as may be seen by a perusal of the synopsis, printed on another page. Mr. Abramson has compared a couple in which a man's sins of passion are forgiven by his wife, while another man is loath to forgive his wife's sins of sacrifice; but all are reconciled in the end. In the latter part of the picture we get a situation in which a man's mistress gives up her child—the son of the man—to the man's wife.

The cast includes Rita Jolivet, James Morrison, Leah Baird, Vincent Serrano, Paul Capellani, Helen Arnold, Pedro De Cordoba, Margaret Greene, Anders Randolph, Hassan Mussali and Walter Gould. The names themselves are a sufficient indication of the work done by each.

The settings throughout are adequate. Good photography was done by Marcel A. Le Picard.

"Sacrifice"

Margaret Illington, in Her Debut in a Lasky Subject, Reveals Screen Power.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "Sacrifice," the Lasky release for May 3, Margaret Illington makes her screen debut. Her work possesses a quality that augurs well for the future. She is handicapped in her initial appearance by a role that is of the illusion-killing dual description and by a story that treats of two mythical principalities at war. We have had many themes to be found in the same category as this tale of Nordhoff and Zandria, and naturally novelty is not in them. Miss Illington wins our interest and our sympathy in these surroundings, but the story is perhaps half down before she accomplishes it.

The script is from the pens of Beatrice De Mille and Leighton Osmun from the story by Charles Kenyon and was produced by Frank Reichert. Miss Illington is seen as Mary Stephani, daughter of a secret agent, and as Vesta Boris, described in the synopsis as the illegitimate daughter of Mary's father. Vesta secures a plan of battle and when she attempts to carry it over the border is discovered and stopped. She successfully appeals to Mary to change places with her, and Mary is sentenced to death following discovery. Vesta carries out her mission and returns to the border in time to take her place in front of a firing squad, thereby saving the life of Mary. If it is a happy ending, it is because there is realization that one person is carrying two roles. It is likely, however, in life Mary would have been promptly classed as a principal in the crime and likewise executed.

Jack Holt is Paul Ekald, the captain who falls in love with Mary. Ekald is finely played. Noah Beery, too, wins praise for his interpretation of Count Wenzel, the victim of Vesta. Winter Hall is Stephani, the agent. The subject is made with the Lasky regard for detail and includes large and elaborate sets.

Triangle Program

"Happiness," Five-Reel Ince-Kay Bee, with Enid Bennett; "Souls Triumphant," Five-Reel Fine Arts, with Lillian Gish and Winifred Lucas, and "Her Torpedoed Love," Two-Reel Keystone.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"HAPPINESS" is well-designed to give what its title implies. In the first place, it is a genuine composition for the screen by a man who understands the art, C. Gardner Sullivan; direction is in the capable hands of Reginald Barker, and interpretation of the leading role falls to a young lady who is growing more capable as she gains experience, who is naturally qualified by a charming personality and who is wise enough to learn, Miss Enid Bennett. Mr. Sullivan has written a high comedy of bright originality, fairly sparkling with unforced subtitles and not jarring the audience with weary melodrama. He tells the story of the rich girl who finds the world poor in affection until she meets an unaffected and resourceful young fellow, working his way through college as a "washerwoman," taking in laundry through the instrumentality of a sweet little dolly of a girl who mothers the romantic adventures of the heiress and the poor young student.

There are several amusing characterizations in the development of this story scheme, just as there should be in any live comedy, and they are intrusted to veritable artists. It is a cast without a flaw. Mr. Barker—either he or Mr. Sullivan—is responsible for an occasional touch of theatricalism in the action and grouping, but the comedy is admirably handled for all that. Miss Bennett contributes her full share with refinement and good taste, and, what is still better, she does not make the role colorless. Her psychology, especially in the closeups, is very effective. She brightens and beautifies "Happiness" and is surely headed for higher honors. The play is bound to win wherever shown, because of its nice balance, clean motive and delightful artistic harmony.

"Souls Triumphant" flies high in motif, attempting to show in realistic fashion the two-sided character of man in his relations with womankind. It presents him before and after marriage as swayed at one moment by brute passions, at the other by those natural affections with which all men are endowed according to their early environment. This role is interpreted by Wilfred Lucas in his own style, and Lillian Gish is admirable as his wife. There is some very artistic symbolization and a skilled presentation of the subject by all concerned in production, but the subject is too big for the author, at least in this kind of a development. The entire structure is weakened by the introduction of that weary note in the modern screen story, the vampire. Her funeral is about due. The story of "Souls Triumphant" can never be effective until that purely theatrical element is eliminated. It was introduced into verse by Kipling, much to his subsequent regret, and it is too ghoulish in this country for human credulity. If we are to present human beings, let it be clearly understood that the woman who indulges man's frailty is quite as two-sided as he is, as every man of experience knows. The vampire is merely a creature of morbid imagination, and her presence in any modern story will cause it to drag. Aside from this serious defect, the story is interesting, and Miss Gish is effective every moment she is in the action. The whole is fairly good.

"Her Torpedoed Love" harks back to Ford Sterling and old time Keystone ingenuity, with an actual story as the framework of a farce. Keystone producers were bound to exhaust themselves at the pace they were cutting, depending upon mere vehicles for acrobatic comedians, the written-while-you-wait stuff, where the absence of a definite scenario becomes ten times as costly as the purchase of a live story. This one will get many a laugh, but a great improvement may only be looked for when the Keystone comedians are given an abundance of new opportunity.

"The Flashlight"

First Bluebird Photoplay Produced by Ira May Parks Is Excellent—Dorothy Phillips Wins New Honors—Released May 21.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

JUDGING by her first Bluebird production—"The Flashlight," a five-reeler with Dorothy Phillips in the featured role—big things may be expected of Ida May Parks, who, with this excellent picture to her credit, takes her place among the best directors. Armed with an unusual story and with a company of capable players and staff, Miss Parks has gone into the wilds of the Sierra Nevadas and succeeded in filming a virile story in the most beautiful settings imaginable. Even if there were nothing much to the story the offering would be worth booking on the strength of its exteriors alone. Woodland streams, photographed with knife-edge sharpness and under lighting that sets them off at their best, comprise the backgrounds of most of the exteriors.

But there IS a story to "The Flashlight"—a story in which suspense is the dominant factor, and whose working out the spectator is bound to follow with absolute concentration. Albert M. Treynore is the author, and his story in the All Story Magazine has permitted of dramatic surprises that have been taken advantage of to the full by Miss Parks, Miss Phillips and William Stowell. Miss Phillips is especially good in this offering, and does work that stamps her as one of the most able actress of the screen.

The story tells of a young man who sets a camera-trap for a fox and who gets a flashlight of a girl apparently fleeing from a cabin in which a murder has been committed. This is gotten over with a few new touches. The man is accused of the murder. He escapes and later meets the girl down the river. It is here that the mystery-tension begins to tighten even more than before, and it is not loosened until near the end. Justice cannot be done to the plot in a short synopsis. Suffice it to say that the plot is logically worked out and that neither the girl nor the man committed the murder.

William Stowell is a worthy support to Miss Phillips, as are also Lon Chaney, who plays a dual role; Alfred Allen and George Berrill.

The writer has never seen better photography than was done for this picture by King Gray.

"The Captain of the Gray-Horse Troop"

Excellent Entertainment Furnished by Six-Reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Release Featuring Antonio Moreno and Edith Storey.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

ONE of the best pictures ever produced by Vitagraph and one of the best program pictures the writer has seen in some time is "The Captain of the Gray-Horse Troop," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon release for May 7. The film is a six-reel visualization of Hamlin Garland's story and was picturized under the direction of William Wolbert, with Antonio Moreno and Edith Storey in the leading roles. The picture affords excellent entertainment, and excels many of the so-called specials. The production is unqualifiedly recommended. It is clean, wholesome, stirring and sympathy-compelling, and contains considerable drama. The action becomes melodramatic at the proper times.

Into the film has been injected much of the deeply pathetic tragedy that lies in the heart of the present-day American Indian, who, herded on to a reservation, lives only in the past and in the hope that he will be allowed to die peacefully where his forefathers ruled. Director and players have caught the spirit of the story and what lies beneath the words, and have struck the deep chord of pathos that is ever playing on the heart-strings of the fast-vanishing race of red men.

The story is not a Wild West Indian story, as we have come to know them. It is not blood and thunder stuff in that sense of the word. Primarily it is a story of the moral and physical courage of an army captain who is in sympathy with the Indians and who replaces as agent at a reservation a cheating relative of a Senator. He is forced to fight against the cattle interest and cattle men, and against the father of the girl he learns to love.

Antonio Moreno, in the role of the young army captain, gives a sterling performance. Edith Storey is equally capable. Otto Lederer has a very sympathetic part—that of the old Indian chief—which he does excellently. The whole cast is capable, and includes Mrs. Bradbury, Al. Jennings, Neola May, Robert Burns, Edward Cecil and H. A. Barrows.

Production details throughout are all that could be asked.

Two Kalems

"The Vanished Line Rider," Episode of "The American Girl" Series, and "A Race to the Drawbridge," Number of the "A Daughter of Daring" Series.

Reviewed by Ben. H. Grimm.

MYSTERY is again the axis on which revolves the plot of "The Vanished Line Rider," latest two-reel espisode of Kalem's "The American Girl" Western series. The plot revolves with much action and considerable interest. As usual, there is much good hosemanship displayed, and Frederick R. Bechdold's story is up to standard. It tells of a line rider who disappears. The picture develops that the rider has been bound and hidden by a band who are engaged in smuggling Chinese into the country. Marin Sais is seen in the leading role. She furnishes a thrill when she is let down the side of a cliff on a rope and is thrown to the bottom of the cliff when the man who is holding the rope is attacked.

James W. Horne has given the story his usual good direction. The cast includes Ronald Bradbury, Hart Hoxie, Edward Clisbee, Ronald Bradbury, L. M. Phillips and Mary Watson. Several comedy touches help.

"A Race to the Drawbridge."

This one-reel episode of the "A Daughter of Daring" series contains a good thrill. The story is evidently built up around the thrill, but nevertheless contains some interest. Helen Gibson, in this number, slides down a rope from high up on a drawbridge, holds herself suspended and snatches a man from a wild push car just before the car is precipitated into the water. The thrill gets over well.

"Moral Courage"

Muriel Ostriche and Arthur Ashley the Featured Players in Five-Reel Peerless Photoplay That Smacks More of the Screen Than of Life.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE heroine of "Moral Courage," a five-reel Peerless photoplay released by the World Film Corporation, is Scotch, clever enough to turn the tables on her father-in-law when he attempts to separate her from her newly wedded husband. She is a poor girl, a factory worker, and falls in love with the son of her employer. Contrary to the usual handling of such a situation, the young man of wealth loves her honestly, and makes her his wife, in spite of his father's opposition. It is then that the elder Anson tries to bribe his daughter-in-law to divorce her husband, or see him made penniless. She agrees to the proposition, secures a Reno divorce, is paid one hundred thousand dollars in cash, and immediately remarries her ex-husband, a Scotch trick which wins over the old gentleman.

The most sensational episode in the story is an endeavor to compromise the factory girl, at a road house, through the aid of a cup of drugged coffee. The mill owner is at the bottom of the scheme, but Mary McClinton is not caught napping, and one of the men who tries to trap her gets the knockout drops, and Mary departs by way of a bedroom window. A rough-and-tumble fight, between the hero and the men who attempt to take away the girl's character, is lively while it lasts. Stanley Dark, the author of "Moral Courage," has supplied some characters for comedy relief, and Romaine Fielding, the director, has given them several bits of always useful comic business. The production in general is satisfactory.

As Mary McClinton, the factory girl, Muriel Ostriche does one of the best pieces of acting of her career. She dresses the part properly, likewise her hair, and fulfills all the other requirements. Arthur Ashley, who is much better adapted to the role of a villain, acts the hero with earnestness and considerable force. Edward Elkas, Clarence Elmer, Robert Forsyth, Julia Stuart, Richard Turner and Edmund Cobb are helpful members of the cast.

"Within the Law"

Vitagraph Releases Eight-Reel Screen Version of Bayard Veiller's Celebrated Melodrama—Alice Joyce and Harry Morey Head the Cast.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ALL things considered, the screen version of Bayard Veiller's melodrama "Within the Law," produced by the Vitagraph, is a creditable piece of work. Some portions lose considerable of the force of the original from not having the same amount of speed. This is most apparent in the murder scene of the third act, the flashing from one character to the other affecting the intensity of the situation. The general impression made by the photoplay is excellent; but it also shows that there is room for improvement in moving picture technic when transforming a stage melodrama into a screen play. The spoken drama is able to dismiss many necessary minor points with a word of explanation and hurry on to the big moments; while the screen pauses to visualize incidents that help to clarify the story, at the expense of the dramatic action. Of all forms of fiction, pure melodrama is the most difficult of assimilation by the screen, as the art is practiced at the present time.

The merits of the version of "Within the Law," "edited" by Violet Mallory and directed by William P. S. Earle, are sufficient to afford most persons a liberal amount of enjoyment. The story in itself is full of appeal, and has been put together by its author with unusual skill. It will be followed with interest throughout the entire eight reels. There is shown in the production a desire to keep it at a high standard. The mountings are correct, and the cast has been carefully selected. Alice Joyce is the Mary Turner. Failure to always get under the skin of the character deprives her impersonation of the warmth and the human touch it requires. Mary Turner is a woman who feels deeply and suffers accordingly. Great strength of will was required to change her from the simple young girl of the earlier scenes to the woman who left the prison, armed and ready to fight falsehood and trickery with its own weapons. These qualities are not indicated by the actress.

Harry Morey as Joe Garson is such a likable chap that it is hard to reconcile him with his police record. He carries out his conception consistently, however, and is effective at all times. Adele DeGarde as Aggie Lynch must be credited with one of the best performances in the picture. In a character easy to overplay she strikes just the right note, and her amusing unmorality is always without offense. Eugene O'Rourke's Inspector Burke is another faultless character study. Anders Randolf, Walter McGrail, Billie Billings, Joe Donohue, Bernard Randall, Bernard Seigel, Robert Gaillard and Miss Bunce are correctly cast.

OF THE three new Paramounts, I think "The Marcellini Millions" comes first in interest because of the superior characterization, especially in the personalities drawn by George Beban and Helen Jerome Eddy. These able players picture the wonderment, joys and despairs of a poor Italian truck gardener and his wife, who suddenly inherit two millions. They become the easy prey of two conscienceless schemers, played by Eugene Pallette and Adele Farrington, who coolly take possession of the family and its money. The schemers become respectively business adviser to the newly rich man and social mentor to his wife. They play on lesser human chords till the higher instincts in the Italians reassert themselves, and they begin to prefer the little farm cabin to the troubled palace. The end sees the devils swept out into darkness.

It is characterization rather than story that makes the picture. It begins with a good situation, but forgets the story it opens with for the heart-struggles of two other characters, the Italian and his wife. Just a bit at the close returns it to its original path and accounts for the lesser persons. Beban and Miss Eddy seem always true and interesting. One feels at times, rather than knows, that the methods of the schemers are not true to life. They seem a bit too brazen; for, after all, the Italians were neither fools nor children, and would hardly have been taken in in just this way. But it is entertaining all the way and the picture will make strong friends. It is an Oliver Morosco picture.

"The Silent Partner."

Edmond Goulding's story has been made over for a picture by George Proctor to feature Blanche Sweet with a well-chosen cast, including Thomas Meighan. Of the three new Paramount films, it tells the most interesting, consistent and dramatic story. The heroine, called the Silent Partner, played by Blanche Sweet, is a stenographer, an unusually able woman, on whose judgment the firm depends for many things. She has been saving her money and has almost ten thousand dollars for a house for herself and her mother. The boss, Edward Royle, played by Thomas Meighan, falls prey to a society woman, played by Mabel Van Buren, who marries him for his money, though she really loves the former (George Herbert) partner, whom Royle has turned off. These two conspire to ruin Royle so that the former partner will get his money and give them enough to run away on. The situation is built up with continuity till, as it approaches the climax, Royle is absent from the office at the time of the Wall Street break engineered to effect his ruin and the stenographer is left to face the battle alone. She throws in her own ten thousand and saves the day. The villainess is shown up, and in the end the silent partner becomes the actual partner for life. It is a Lasky-Paramount picture.

"The Primrose Path."

Mae Murray has the lead in this fairy story, written by Ruth Sawyer and prepared for the screen by Marian Fairfax. Its background is a hospital and its intention is to exemplify the courageous escape from pain through human fancy, and at the same time to tell a story. It is more successful in the former. One of its best touches is "the make-believe dog" that the little incurable cripple plays with under the guidance of the nurse, Mae Murray. The sentimental story hardly fills the length of film it comes in, and, though it will be acceptable to younger folks, will hardly interest men deeply. But, taken with the fairy atmosphere in it, the children, and the pity it engenders, it will be a very acceptable offering for children. Little Billy Jacobs as the litle emotional cripple is delightful. Tom Moore plays the very scientific doctor who doesn't believe in fairy stories till he himself is hurt and feels the reality of the Ogre Pain. Then he, too, becomes sympathetic and gives the story its happy ending.

Second Forum Films Program

"Kidnapped," "The Portrait in the Attic," and "He Couldn't Get Up in the Morning."

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Kidnapped."

THE principal number of the second Forum Films program is a four-reel screen version of Robert Louis Stevenson's famous story of adventure, "Kidnapped." The picture is vastly entertaining. It is well acted by a cast which includes Raymond McKee as David Balfour, Robert Cain as the Scotch outlaw, and Joseph Burke as Ebenezer Balfour; and has been ably directed by Alan Crosland. The necessary local color is maintained correctly, a number of winter scenes in the Scottish Highlands being counterfeited with beautiful effect.

To the many persons familiar with Stevenson's story, the opportunity to see it reproduced on the screen will be highly prized. The adventures of young David Balfour, after his uncle plans to have him put out of the way and hires Captain MacPherson to kidnap him, are so full of danger and the strenuous life that the interest is always at fever heat. The writer of the scenario has acquitted himself admirably, and preserved much of the spirit, and most of the essential points of the work.

The other members of the cast are William Wadsworth, Ray Haller, Walter Craven, John Nicholson, Franklin Hanna, Sam Niblack and Horace Hain.

"The Portrait in the Attic."

Viola Dana is featured in the one-reel (800 feet) drama, "The Portrait in the Attic." The picture is not of recent manufacture, but has distinctive merit. It is a rather pathetic tale of a young girl who resents it when her father brings home a new wife. The girl refuses to call her mother, until she is imprisoned in the attic one night and dreams that her own mother comes to her and bids her, for her father's sake, to do as he asks. The picture is acted with skill by Miss Dana and her associates.

"He Couldn't Get Up in the Morning."

Raymond McKee is the leading player in this one-reel comedy (700 feet), and gives an excellent performance of a part that requires a large supply of agility. The fun moves along briskly, and the desperate measures that the hero takes, in his endeavors to arise and reach the office on time, are carried out very cleverly. All in all, the second Forum Films program has been selected with admirable judgment.

The O. Henry Series

"The Green Door," "The Marionettes," and "The Guilty Party," a Trio of Entertaining Two-Reel Screenplays Founded on Stories by Famous Maker of Short Fiction.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE General Film has ready for release three screen plays made from stories by O. Henry. Their titles are "The Green Door," "The Marionettes" and "The Guilty Party." They can be recommended to spectators that like to think as well as to laugh, and consider it worth while to get a new viewpoint on some of the unsolved questions of life. Whether grave or gay, the king of modern short fiction was always original, always whimsical and very often startling in his truth. He also never failed to be entertaining and this great virtue has passed to the three photoplays now under discussion.

"The Green Door."

The scenario of "The Green Door" was made by A. Van Buren Powell, and Thos. R. Mills directed the picture; also the others of the trio. The principal parts in "The Green Door" are played by Mildred Manning and Walter McGrail. It has no serious moments, but possesses an unfailing string of humorous incidents. Readers of the story will recall the hero, who is always on the watch for romance and adventure. Nothing daunts him, and the series of mishaps that befall him are vastly amusing. Then comes the adventure in which the green door figures, and he finds romance and happiness on the other side of it. The picture is well made in every particular.

"The Marionettes."

Helmer W. Pergman is responsible for the scenario of "The Marionettes." The story tells of a versatile physician who combines the practice of medicine with safe blowing. He, also, has an adventure one night while returning from a professional visit to an overfed strongbox, and uses his share of the plunder to relieve the pangs of poverty. The picture is dramatic throughout, well removed from the beaten track, and searching in its revelation of what strange codes of honor are cherished by different human beings. J. Frank Glendon is uncommonly proficient as the doctor.

"The Guilty Party."

This two-reel picture is a tragedy of the slums, and the leading part is given a truthful portrayal by Patsey DeForrest. Frank Brule is equally successful as Kid Mullaly. The story is not new, but powerful, and the question it propounds is answered by the author in an unexpected but convincing way. "The Guilty Party" will make you think.

"Little Miss Fortune"

Marian Swayne Featured in Five-Reel Comedy-Drama Produced by Erbograph Company for Art Dramas Program.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

WHATEVER success is attained by "Little Miss Fortune," five-reel comedy-drama produced by the Erbograph company for release on the Art Dramas program, will depend largely on how an audience feels toward Marian Swayne, the featured player. The story screened is of the type that has always been popular with a certain class of picturegoers. It is the old tale of the poor, much-abused orphan girl who makes her way from rags to riches or fame via the well-known route of cuteness, smiles and appealing personality; the girl who always meets her fairy prince along about the second or third reel, and who, after many vicissitudes, lives happily ever after the last fifty feet of film.

In this particular case the poor orphan girl has theatrical ambitions. Of course, she goes from the orphan asylum to a hard-hearted farmer's home, from which, as usual, she runs away. She gets a job in the city as a waitress at a theatrical boarding house, where she meets the hero, who sees her latent talent and brings it out. The hero saves the girl from going to prison on a false charge, and at the psychological moment the leading lady gets sick. The expected happens here, as it does all through the picture.

Miss Swayne is pretty; she has a winning smile and an amount of acting ability. But her appealing personality is needed several times to make us believe that she is a sixteen-year-old ingenue. Her support is adequate, and includes Bradley Barker, Hugh Thompson, Lucile Dorrington, Anna Day Perry and Charles MacDonald.

The picture was directed by Joseph Levering, who has done his best with the story, which was written by Rev. Clarence J. Harris.

"Christus"

An Artistic and Reverently Handled Representation of the Life of Christ from Cines of Rome.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THERE have been varied and moderately successful attempts at filming that well-known chain of incidents which, according to our knowledge, were contained in the life of Christ; but none we believe has equaled in artistic and convincing treatment the production called "Christus," which is being exhibited to the public in the Criterion theater, New York City. This production was made by Cines, of Rome, in Palestine and Egypt on the scenes traversed by Jesus of Nazareth during his sojourn here on earth, and are the more interesting for this reason.

In this picture, in which hundreds of persons have contributed to the mob scenes and sets appropriate to time and place, have been arranged at seemingly large expense, in which no effort has been spared in making it what it is. There is evident at all times an atmosphere of love and reverence in the presentation of that character which typifies the highest plane of human existence. We venture to say that to all sects and creeds the "Christus" will prove satisfying.

"Christus" is founded on the poem of the same name by the Italian poet, Fausto Salvatori, which was adapted for the screen by Maurice V. Samuels, author of "The Wanderer." The production was directed by Count Giulio Antamoro, with Giovanni Pasquali in the role of Jesus and Lydia Gys in that of Mary, the mother of Jesus. Many of the scenes of the picture are animated representations of famous paintings, among them "The Annunciation" after Beato Angelico;; "The Nativity" after Correggio; "The Baptism" after Perugino; "The Last Supper" after Leonardo; "The Pieta" after Michelangelo; "The Descent from the Cross" after Rembrandt, and "Mater Dolorosa" after Donatello. The only fault that might be found with the picture is a technical one and has to do with the too material presentation of visions. The action of the picture is smooth and realistically convincing, the characters are well cast, and the fearful tragedy of the life of the martyred Christ is in this filmed version of his story compelling in its appeal.

The performance at the Criterion theater is accompanied by a beautiful musical setting consisting of excerpts from the works of Haendel, Wagner, Beethoven, Mozart, Bach, Gounod, Mendelssohn, Tschaikowsky and Saint-Saens, and is rendered by members of the Philharmonic Symphony, Boston Symphony and Metropolitan Opera House orchestras.

A Couple of Mutuals

"Hedda Gabler," Featuring Nance O'Neil, and "The Frame-Up," Featuring William Russell, Commendable Productions.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE transferring of Henrick Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" to the screen so that it will prove understandable to the ordinary individual holds serious difficulties which have to be contended with. This is the case with all of Ibsen's plays, for the reason that what they convey are impressions rather than constructive stories. These impressions are derived principally from the words which he puts into the mouths of his characters and are so pregnant with underlying meaning that to other than the thoughtful student of literature they are well-nigh meaningless. Therefore Ibsen's intention in writing his play must first be thoroughly understood by the director and then be conveyed to the screen in a manner which will enable the simplest-minded to read and understand. This is, after all, the mission of the screen.

In the five-part Powell version of "Hedda Gabler" the director has worked hard to get his impression over, and in a measure he has been successful. Nance O'Neil makes an ideal Hedda Gabler, and it is not altogether Aubrie Beattie's fault that he fails to a degree in typifying the George Tesman of the Ibsen play, whose favorite expression, "Fancy that!" gives us our strongest impression of the man. A great deal, and we believe too much, has been made of the ribald scenes at Diana's, where Ejlert Loveborg finally shoots himself with the pistol given him by Hedda; while the climax of the play, where Hedda, always fond of toying with pistols, shoots herself, where Judge Brack faints, and George Tesman, Hedda's husband, unsuspectingly questions why, is forcefully presented. While the production as a whole has a great deal of merit, we do not recommend it for mixed audiences. To the average mind it would contain no suggestion of a nobler plane of life than that on which the coldly selfish heroine of the play is seen to move.

"The Frame-Up."

"The Frame-Up" is an unusually entertaining five-part comedy-drama featuring William Russell. The story does not appeal as being an especially well-constructed one, but the action is both amusing and thrilling.

As the story runs, the young son of a rich man is awakened one morning from a dream of a wild drive in his racer, which, by the way, is amusingly pictured, to a resolution to take a vacation from the hard task of doing nothing. In the course of the day he rescues a young woman, the daughter of a taxicab owner, from an unscrupulous chauffeur and is offered a position by the girl's mother. In taking this position he helps to capture three yeggmen, and finally marries the girl. One of the funniest things in the picture is the wild ride taken by the young man's father in his son's automobile when in rescuing the girl he leaves "pa" to run the car himself. The car goes on a mad rampage until it runs out of gasoline and has to be towed home. This number can be presented before any audience with an assurance that it will please.

"The Millionaire's Double"

Lionel Barrymore Has Congenial Role in Five-Reel Photoplay Produced by Rolfe and Released by Metro.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE latest Rolfe production, "The Millionaire's Double," is a highly improbable but decidedly entertaining screen romance. Lionel Barrymore, who plays the leading part, is called upon to impersonate a young millionaire who disappears during the action of the story. Later he meets a crook who notices his resemblance to the man that everyone supposes has been drowned, and is offered a chance to impersonate himself and gain possession of a part of his own fortune. The humor of the situation appeals to him and he enters into the scheme, finds it full of adventure, and rewards him by introducing him to the woman who consents to become his wife.

June Mathis is the author of the story and has kept to the spirit of the theme from first reel to last. Lionel Barrymore's role is a congenial one, and he makes the character of the millionaire a high-spirited, fun-loving young gentleman, who is a near approach to the heroes of the older Dumas. There are a number of other excellently played parts in the cast. Evelyn Brent is an attractive Constance Brent and Harry S. Northrup does the heavy villain without one trace of staginess. John Smiley and H. H. Pattee are also of the elect. The picture was made under the efficient direction of Harry Davenport.

"THE PHANTOM'S SECRET."

Five-Reel Butterfly Production Features Mignon Anderson and Hayward Mack in Tale of Mystery and Intrigue.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN THIS second number the new Butterfly brand gets into a better stride. "The Phantom's Secret," written by J. Grubb Alexander and directed by Charles Swickard, proves a carefully constructed, entertaining number, with a decided pull on the interest from start to finish.

Mignon Anderson appears for the first time in her new connection and is given opportunity to do her best work in the part of Jeanne de Beaulieu. She does some very effective acting in depicting the complicated and harassed career of the heroine. Hayward Mack, as Franz Leroux, makes an interesting villain of the well-grooned, gentleman type.

The story begins in France, where Jeanne and her American friend, Jane Elliot, are attending a convent. Some pleasing scenes from their school life are shown. Then comes the shock of the unexpected, when a sudden telephone call announces that Jeanne's father is badly injured. The girl is called home. Here she learns for the first time that her dying sire is none other than "The Phantom," a notorious night bird of Paris, wanted for many crimes. To save the family name, Jeanne promises to give her hand in marriage to Franz, who knows all the facts in the case and is prepared to act upon them.

After she marries Franz a world of troubles begin for Jeanne, but in the end, after much suffering, she arrives at happiness. The train wreck in the tunnel is well suggested and the scenes from American life are agreeably pictured.

Others in the past, all of whom do creditable work, are Marc Fenton, Dan Leighton, Molly Malone, Fred Church and Nellie Allen.

Contracts Closed for "Submarine Eye"

Territorial Franchises Selling Rapidly—Big Time Openings Arranged for May 13.

INDICATIONS are that Williamson Brothers' "The Submarine Eye" is "over" in splendid style, and that the picture is going to earn a lot of money for its producers.

J. M. Franke, who has taken over "The Submarine Eye" for New England, is grooming a number of companies preparatory to sending them through this territory at once. He will receive the co-operation of the Williamson Brothers' organization and will do a great deal of missionary work, which is sure to increase the value of the picture for the smaller houses, who will get it at a later date.

R. E. Lawhead, of Chicago, representing big interests there, is now in New York negotiating for Illinois and Michigan.

Three of Canada's biggest industrial centers—Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg—will be opened for long runs on May 21.

"The Submarine Eye" will open at the Auditorium, Los Angeles, Cal., on the same date. William G. Colvin, an experienced showman, is in charge of this company.

According to present plans, the first Western showing of "The Submarine Eye" will be at the Metropolitan opera house in Minneapolis on May 13, to be followed by runs in St. Paul, Milwaukee, Duluth and other mid-Western cities. E. F. Lampman is the special representative.

Another company is leading for an extended tour throughout the South and will open the Jake Wells Circuit in Atlanta on May 21. Richmond, Norfolk and other Southern cities will follow the Atlanta engagement.

Negotiations are under way for the acquisition of a "big time" theater in New York City, where it is expected that this love drama of the depths will play an extended engagement.

Theatrical men with headquarters in New York who have seen private exhibitions of "The Submarine Eye" are unanimously of the belief that it is a big money-maker. Numerous state rights buyers, who have also attended these private exhibitions, are very enthusiastic over the high photographic quality of the picture and have heard with great satisfaction the sentiments expressed by the legitimate showmen that "The Submarine Eye" is not only a unique motion picture production, but one of the best attractions they have ever seen.

It is generally agreed that the Williamson Brothers have created a product that eclipses their previous efforts in their own exclusive field of submarine photography. Not only have they secured scenes down deep under the sea photographically as good as any taken in well lighted studios, but they have put over a story that contains all the elements of success—a love theme of power, spiced with an element of mystery, suspense and thrills new to the screen, told with perfect continuity.

A number of copies of "The Submarine Eye" are being prepared for exploitation in foreign countries. These prints call for titles in Spanish, Portuguese, French, Russian, Japanese, and other languages. The best interpreters have been secured for this work, and it is expected that the timeliness of the production will insure its popularity in countries not so seriously affected by the war that prints cannot be shipped into them.

Triangle Productions for May 27th

Two Ince Features Offering Charles Ray and Seena Owen in Leading Parts.

CHARLES RAY and Seena Owen are the stars of the Triangle feature productions released May 27. Thomas H. Ince will present Charles Ray in a powerful social drama of deep contrasts entitled "The Millionaire Vagrant," written by J. G. Hawks and directed by Victor L. Schertzinger. The role which Ray is called upon to enact in this play tests his versatility to the limit. He is supported by a large cast of Ince favorites including Sylvia Bremer, J. Barney Sherry, Dorcas Matthews and Jack Gilbert. Seena Owen is being starred in an O. Henry story, "Madame Bo-Peep," taken from "Madame Bo-Peep of the Ranches," one of his best-known Western stories. Chester Withey is the director of the production, which will probably be the last filmed at the former Fine Arts studio in Hollywood.

As the hero of "The Millionaire Vagrant," Charles Ray takes the part of a wealthy idler who pledges himself, as the result of a wager, to live for a certain time among the slum-dwellers of a great city on $6 a week. In carrying out his end of the bargain, he is thrown into contact with a strange assortment of human beings and meets with many startling adventures. He is metamorphosed in short order from a handsomely groomed product of the leisure class into a half-shaven tramp, but as a result his inherent manliness rises to the surface, and when the big test comes it finds him fully equal to the occasion. There are several novel turns to the plot that keep the spectators guessing until the final fade-out.

Seena Owen's vehicle is a spirited story of the Texas sheep ranches, with an appealing love story as the main ingredient. All who are familiar with O. Henry's craftsmanship will take delight in the screen version of this favorite tale.

Minter Heads Mutual Program

Week of May 14 Brings "Annie-For-Spite" and Several Short-Length Subjects.

MARY MILES MINTER, in "Annie-for-Spite," is the Mutual star production at the head of the list of releases for the week of May 14. In this production Miss Minter is shown in a variety of roles: She appears as a homely girl—a new role for her; as a ragged little shopgirl, and also as the pampered adopted daughter of a wealthy woman, with a most extensive wardrobe and everything to make her beautiful.

"The Overland Disaster" is the sixth chapter of "The Railroad Raiders," scheduled for May 14. In this chapter occurs a spectacular wreck of a Pulman car. Going forty miles an hour, it runs off the rails, and rolls over and over down a forty-foot embankment.

"When Betty Bets" is the second Marie Cahill comedy, also released on May 14. In this comedy Betty (Marie Cahill) starts out without a cent and without even clothes to her back and earns $1,000 in thirty days.

On May 16 comes Billie Rhodes in "Trixie of the Follies," in which Mary masquerades as an actress and cures hubby of flirting.

"Jerry's Finishing Touch" is the Cub comedy for May 17, in which George Ovey is featured. The many laughs in this story arise from Jerry's aspirations to be a movie magnate.

The Vogue contribution to the fun is "Caught in the End," ready May 19, and shows Lillian Hamilton masquerading in a suit of boy's clothes.

"The Alibi" is the title of the ninth story of the "Jimmie Dale, Alias the Grey Seal" series. In this story the Grey Seal upsets the plans of a crook who is impersonating him.

"Mutual Tours" for May 15 shows "Famous French Castles Along the River Loire" and "Barbadoes, an Island of the British West Indies."

"Mutual Weekly" comes on May 16 and "Reel Life" on May 17. "Reel Life" is composed of the following subjects: "Speeding the Spoken Word," "The Toothsome Crab," "Beating the High Cost of Furs" and "A School on the Beach."

"Betty Be Good" Jackie Saunders' Next.

"Betty, Be Good" will be Jackie Saunder's next star production for Mutual. The production is under way at the Horkheimer-Mutual studio, Long Beach, Cal., under the direction of Sherwood MacDonald.

The story was written by Will M. Ritchey. Arthur Shirley plays opposite Miss Saunders. Captain Leslie T. Peacocke appears in the role of her father. The cast includes Mollie McConnell, Albert B. Ellis, William Reed, Ben Rossier, Mignon LeBrun and C. H. Voute.

Jackie plays the role of a millionaire's daughter. Tiring of her life of luxury, she decides to leave home. She drives through a giant facsimile telegram, nine by twelve feet, to avoid meeting her father, and emerges in a barnyard, where her life as a runaway begins.

First Myers-Theby Comedy on Pathe Program.

The week of May 13 will signalize the release of the first Myers-Theby comedy on the Pathe program. It is confidently expected that "The Delicatessen Mystery," as it is called, will be well received by all admirers of "legitimate" comedy and that the many exhibitors who have played Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby in the past will find that the new brand shows marked improvement over the old.

A new character, introduced in this comedy for the first time, a farcical detective, does one of the best bits seen this long while. His manoeuvers while shadowing the young married couple of the piece are certain to keep audiences in constant laughter.

Lockwood's Supporting Cast Completed.

Harold Lockwood's supporting cast for "The Haunted Pajamas," the next of the Lockwood features to be released on the Metro program, was completed this week by the engagement of Betty Ware to play the role of Elizabeth Billings. Fred J. Balshofer, personally directing the picture, has already completed nearly all of the interior scenes of the production, and the Yorke-Metro company is at present engage in filming exterior scenes, located in some of the garden spots of Southern California and in the Bay region near San Francisco. Those engaged in the production are Harold Lockwood, Carmel Myers, Lester Cuneo, Ed. Sedgwick, Paul Willis, Betty Ware, Harry de Roy and Wm. DeVaull.

Comments on the Films

EXCLUSIVELY BY OUR OWN STAFF

General Film Company.

BASEBALL AT MUDVILLE (Selig).—A one-reel comedy of a well-known but, nevertheless, somewhat humorous type. The Mudville team is to play a supposedly woman's baseball team. The woman's team is composed of men in disguise. When the rubes learn that they have been duped, things start and wind up in a whirlwind fashion.

A RACE TO THE DRAWBRIDGE (Kalem).—An episode of the "A Daughter of Daring" railroad series. The thrill in this reel is a good one, and gets over well. Helen Gibson slides down a rope from high up on a drawbridge, hangs suspended there, and snatches from a wild handcar a man who is just about to be plunged into the water. The man, a railroad detective, had been bound to the handcar by bank robbers.

THE DESERTED ENGINE (Kalem).—A number of the "A Daughter of Daring" series. Helen Gibson's chief stunt was evidently faked in this number, which is very unusual in this series. Helen is supposed to jump from a barrel on a trestle to the end of a speeding train, but she jumps behind the train and the next flash on the screen shows her landing on the platform of the train. However, the number is a worth-while offering.

General Film Company Specials.

THE VANISHED LINE RIDER (Kalem).—A two-reel episode of "The American Girl" series. Mystery is uppermost, and the resultant action is fast, melodramatic and interesting. Marin Sais as Madge King, gets over a thrill when she slides down a cliff. It is Madge who materially aids in capturing a band who have been smuggling Chinamen into the country. The release holds up to the standard of the series. A fuller review is printed on another page of this issue.

O. HENRY PICTURES (Broadway Star Feature).—Three "O. Henry" stories in pictures form "The Green Floor," "The Marionettes" and "The Guilty Party" are ready for release. They are excellent two-reel photoplays, and are reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

THE EVIL SAG (Selig).—A two-reel drama of mystery and considerable plot action. The offering is acceptable. The story, which is played by a capable cast, tells of the happenings of a family that lives on a farm with an "evil sag." The "evil sag," it develops, contains odorless but deadly natural gas, which accounts for the fact that several men have been killed there. The complicated family plot leads to a happy ending.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE FLASHLIGHT GIRL, May 21.—An unusual story has been filmed in most beautiful exteriors in this five-reeler in which Dorothy Phillips is featured, and which was directed by Ida May Parks. The offering is an acceptable one from all angles, and for any house. A full review is printed in the review columns of this issue.

Forum Films, Inc.

KIDNAPPED (Conquest), May 7.—This picture is on the second number of the Forum program, together with "The Portrait in the Attic," and "He Couldn't Get Up in the Morning." The number is excellent. It is reviewed on another page of this issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE GRAY HORSE TROOP (Vitagraph), May 7.—An excellent six-reel offering with Antonio Moreno and Edith Storey featured. The production is one that is unqualifiedly recommended. It is deeply American, touching on the present-day American Indian and his fast disappearing race. The story is full of action, and there is not a slow moment in the piece. A full review is printed in the review columns.

WITHIN THE LAW, May.—A screen version of this famous stage melodrama, in which Harry Morry and Alice Joyce have the leading roles, the motion picture will repeat much of its first success. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Historic Features Corporation.

CHRISTUS (Historic), May.—This is one of the best representations of the life of Christ that has ever been made. It is artistic and has been handled with reverence. Realistic and delightfully smooth in action, it is a production that will be appreciated by all. A full review appears elsewhere.

Ivan Film Corporation.

ONE LAW FOR BOTH, April.—An eight-reel "moral propaganda" picture that is neither wholly moral nor wholly propaganda. The picture is far too long. The cast is an exceptional one. The production, which was written and directed by Ivan Abramson, is harmless, although it approaches the danger line several times. A full review can be found in the review columns.

A-Kay Company.

GOLDEN-SPOON MARY (Terry-Made), April 30.—A one-reel (about 800 feet) cartoon burlesque of "The Poor Little Rich Girl." The cartoon was drawn and animated by Paul Terry, and as a comedy filler should go well. The animation is good and the figures perform some cartoon slapstick that is quite funny. The reel holds up with other cartoon releases. The A-Kay Company has offices at 727 Seventh avenue, New York.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD NO. 2 (Gaumont), April 24.—In this number of the "Tours" will be found a nicely illustrated description of "Pompeii, the City of the Dead," and of "Zurich, Switzerland." There will be found also a brief set of views in and about "Mourom, Russia."

KLEPTOMANIACS (Strand), May 2.—Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco are the stars of this number which may be found entertaining by some audiences. The story treats of how two young people who are kleptomaniacs become engaged and try to shield each other's shortcoming from being detected. The climax comes when the girl's mother loses her purse which is later picked up in the garden by a colored boy and returned by a detective. Each of the young people in their hearts blames the other and each purchases a purse the exact double of the lost one and returns it, at the same time shouldering the blame of the theft. Rather amusing but a poor subject.

REEL LIFE NO. 53 (Gaumont), May 3.—The subjects contained in this number, while they are interesting, are not as carefully illustrated as they might be, and are often too briefly treated. They are "Our Patriotic Maidens," showing scenes in the Y. W. C. A. Automobile School in New York; "Restoring an Old Mission," "Getting Rid of the Snow," "The Queer Tribe of Issa" and "The Queerest Newspaper," printed on a shingle.

JERRY'S TRIAL (Cub), May 3.—This time Jerry makes his bow from a prison cell from which he later escapes in disguise. Believing himself out of the reach of the prison guards he poses as a fortune teller and is collared for his pains, and taken back to his cell. A fair offering of its class.

THE PRODIGAL UNCLE (La Salle), May 7.—In this comedy Uncle, in trying to get his nephew out of trouble, himself falls in love with a dancing girl. The result is that both the uncle and the nephew leave the screen satisfied, in spite of the joke put up on Uncle by "nephew." The comedy is not exactly first grade, but does not fall far short of this point of excellence.

THE GREAT AMERICAN GAME (Strand), May 9.—This is quite an entertaining comedy, featuring Billy Rhodes and Jay Belasco. The story treats of the attempt of two men to put one over on each other. The younger man poses as a capitalist, wins the older man's daughter, and discovers that his sweetheart's father has also been doing some posing, being a mere bookkeeper when at home instead of a bloated millionaire, as represented by himself at the summer resort.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

BUCKING THE TIGER (Vogue), May 5.—This is a two-part comedy in which there is little entertainment. It consists of a lot of slapstick stuff, including the disguising of a young woman's lover in a tiger skin. Impersonating a tiger he chases about the place, putting everyone to flight.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS NO. 5 (Signal), May 7.—"A Woman's Wit" is the title of this number of the series in which a successful attempt is made to steal money from the paymaster of a construction gang. Helen, seeing what has happened, jumps on an inspection car, beats the engine on which the thieves are riding to the switch and turns it off the main track, enabling the train on which her employer and others are coming to arrive in time to get the thieves.

THE FRAME-UP (Mutual Star Feature), May 7.—This is an unusually entertaining comedy-drama, featuring William Russell. The construction of the story might be criticised by the over-particular reviewer; but he must admit that the comedy of the picture gets over. It also has a thrilling vein of adventure to commend it. A review of the production will be found elsewhere.

HEDDA GABLER (Powell), May 7.—A worthy attempt to film Henrick Ibsen's play. Nance O'Neil plays the role of Hedda Gabler and Aubrie Beattie that of George Tesman. While the picture interests from first to last the individual acquainted with the unique style of the author, we doubt if the ordinary audience would be able to grasp the deeper meaning of the pictured play. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

SACRIFICE (Lasky), May 3.—Margaret Illington makes her stage debut in this subject. As is pointed out in a review in another column, in the working out of the story there is developed a real interest. The picture is well staged.

THE PRIMROSE RING (Lasky), May 7.—A picture that will have a strong appeal to children and young folks. Mae Murray has the lead as a sympathic nurse in a great hospital. She is misunderstood and has trouble in winning her point for the fairies in the children's ward, since Tom Moore, the scientific doctor doesn't believe in them till he, too, is hurt and feels the reality of the Ogre Pain. Billy Jacobs has a very good part. For longer notice see elsewhere in this issue.

THE SILENT PARTNER (Lasky), May 10.—A Blanch Sweet picture with a dramatic story behind it that will please the general patron a good deal. Miss Sweet has an excellent supporting cast with her, including Thomas Meighan, and there is enough melodramatic suspense in it to get it over in good shape. A longer review is printed elsewhere in this issue.

THE MARCELLINI MILLIONS (Morosco), May 14.—One of the George Beban's characterizations that will, as usual, be found highly attractive to picture lovers everywhere on account of its humanity. Helen Jerome Eddy ably helps in putting the picture over. The story is not the most telling factor, but is acceptable. For a longer review see elsewhere in this issue.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE NEGLECTED WIFE (Pathe), May 13.—The first two numbers of the new Pathe serial, with Ruth Roland featured, show it to possess a good foundation in the way of plot. Both numbers are reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS (Pathe), May 13.—Numbers 9 and 10 of the "Mystery of the Double Cross" are reviewed on another page of this issue.

THE GREAT HANSOM CAB MYSTERY (International), May 13.—One of the "Bringing Up Father" cartoons, this half reel is very amusing. An educational, showing scenes in Pekin, China, is on the same reel.

JUMPING JEALOUSY (Pathe), May 20.—A one-reel Harry Meyers and Rosemary Theby comedy along the lines made familiar by former numbers of this series. This title explains the motive, the efforts of the Newlyweds to cure each other of jealousy resulting in considerable easily made fun.

LATEST FRENCH CREATIONS (Pathe), May 20.—This reel of the latest French fashions was made in Paris. The gowns and other articles of female adornment were made by the most celebrated makers of France and are very beautiful.

THE CANDY GIRL (Thanhouser), May 20.—Gladys Hulette is the star of this five-reel photoplay. It tells a fairly interesting story and is very well produced. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

TO OBLIGE A VAMPIRE (Nestor), May 14.—An entertaining and well-acted comedy, burlesquing the vampire screen stories. Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are featured as two hall room boys who fall victims to the lure. Olive Adair is amusing as the vampire lady. This is entertaining and better than the average.

FAT AND FOOLISH (Victor), May 15.—Several ingenious bits of comedy business add appreciably to this farce, presented by players headed by Ed. Sedgwick. Most of the scenes are laid on a bathing beach where the attentions of a flirtatious man are diverted in various directions. The picture is certain to arouse laughter.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE NO. 19, May 16.—In this one of the screen magazine will be found the following subjects well illustrated: "Making Cut Glass," "U. S. Aviator at School," "A Modern Paul Revere," "Life's Simplest Children" being a microscopic study of a drop of pond water, and an animated clay cartoon by Willie Hopkins.

THE PUZZLE WOMAN (Imp), May 17.—A clever detective story, featuring Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, two young crooks, with a lady assistant, make a raid in a rooming house. The surprise finish is good. An enjoyable offering.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials.

THE HONOR OF AN OUTLAW (Gold Seal), May 15.—A three-reel western subject, by Fred C. Kelsey, featuring Harry Carey as "Cheyenne," train robber and bandit. He is being escorted to prison by the sheriff, when the train is held up. "Cheyenne" escapes and carries off the president's daughter, holding her for ransom. A posse closes in on the gang and "Cheyenne" gets ten years. He is released by the girl's aid, after a short term. He loves her, but they cannot wed because of his checkered career. A characteristic subject of the type, romantic and generally pleasing.

A GOOD LITTLE BAD BOY (L-KO), May 16.—This touches off one of the funniest comic situations ever devised by this company, in the second reel. It is bound to bring roars of laughter, when the train pulls the station house along the track, pursued by the agent and friends on a hand-car. Phil Dunham, Lucille Hutton, Merta Sterling and Charles Inslee have the leading roles. This is full of amusing small business, but has a sure-fire close. An excellent comic subject.

HER GREAT DILEMMA (Laemmle), May 18.—A two-reel number, by E. M. Davis, featuring Lee Hill, Louise Lovely, E. N. Wallack and Malcolm Blevins. This presents the familiar plot of the woman who marries a man and later is confronted by her first husband, whom she thought had passed permanently out of her life. There is a new twist at the close, where the child innocently brings about the first husband's death after the accident. This is well presented, and in spite of one or two lapses in construction, holds the interest well.

CASEY'S BORDER RAID (Bison), May 19.—A two-reel military comedy, by George E. Marshall, featuring Neal Hart and Janet Eastman. The former plays the part of a private named Casey, who is the butt of all jokes. The manner in which he captures a whole bandit gang and procures the coveted carpet is very amusing. The number, as a whole, is a little slow in the first reel, but comes to a good close.

Triangle Film Corporation.

HAPPINESS, (Ince-Kay Bee), May 13.—A really delightful comedy feature of original plot, capable development, and flawless interpretation at the hands of veritable artists, Miss Enid Bennett in the lead. Sure to win with any audience.

SOULS TRIUMPHANT (Fine Arts), May 20.—A fairly interesting story, with Lillian Gish and Wilfred Lucas as stars, made interesting very largely by an intelligent interpretation by Miss Gish.

HER TORPEDOED LOVE (Keystone).—Has a great deal of the old Keystone vivacity and Sterling Ford in a new character. Will get many a good laugh.

HIS NAUGHTY THOUGHT (Keystone), May 6.—The comic adventures of Ambrose in this one-reel rapid-fire farce are full of surprises, notwithstanding this large gentleman's reputation for getting into unusual and laughable scrapes. He gets married and starts to run a restaurant at the same time, and his bride has a lively honeymoon while assisting her husband in his new business. A very amusing comedy.

World Pictures.

MORAL COURAGE (Peerless), May 14.—Muriel Ostriche and Arthur Ashley are featured in this five-reel photoplay which tells the story of a mill girl's romance with the son of her employer. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Fox Studio Activities

Weeks' Work in Studios Is Harbinger of Several Good Pictures.

R. A. WALSH, who directed "The Honor System" for William Fox, was in charge of the newest announced Fox production, "The Silent Lie," which will be released for the week of May 21. The leading role in the picture is played by Miriam Cooper, who sprang into full fame as the star of "The Honor System."

Included in the supporting cast are Ralph Lewis and Charles Clary, both sterling players.

Mr. Walsh has just begun shooting film on the Fox "lot" in Hollywood, Cal., on a new subject, with Miss Cooper again as star. In the company are also Mr. Clary, Jack Standing, Jane Novak, Rosita Marstini, Jennie Lee, W. E. Parsons and Johnny Reese. This will be the first Fox features with which Miss Lee, Miss Novak and Mr. Parsons have been identified. Jack Standing returns to the Fox fold after an excellent performance in "One Touch of Sin," a recent Gladys Brockwell film.

Mr. Walsh's brother, "Smiling George," commenced work on another razzle-dazzle production under the direction of Otis Turner. Doris Pawn will be the "opposite," and the rest of the cast consists of Velma Whitman, Hector V. Sarno, N. A. Myles, and Caroline Rankin, the more than thin woman of Fox film comedies.

"Smiling George's" next release will be "The Book Agent," to be issued on May 14. One phase of the laughs in this picture is summed up in this statement: "Where there's a will there's not only a way, but there's a bunch of people fighting to be remembered in it." The story is of the mile-a-minute type of speedy comedy and light drama.

A third screen play which was started on the West Coast in the week is a photodramatization of one of the greatest child's stories ever written—one by an author of international renown. It is now being filmed by C. M. Franklin.

The production will be a "Fox Kiddie Feature," one of the series of photoplays recently launched by Fox Film Corporation. Eleanor Washington, a direct descendant of the first President of the country, has one of the important adult parts in it.

"QUEEN X" EDNA GOODRICH'S SECOND MUTUAL.

The battle of federal authorities to wipe out opium smuggling is the basis of "Queen X," Edna Goodrich's second star production for Mutual. "Reputation," her first picture, is scheduled for release May 28.

"Queen X" was written by Edwin M. Stanton, assistant United States attorney for New York.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"A DOLL'S HOUSE" (Bluebird).

Although "A Doll's House" has served Mrs. Fiske, Eleanor Duse, Nazimova and other famous actresses as a vehicle in which to benefit their reputation upon the stage, it remains for Bluebird to offer the first screen version of this great work of Henrik Ibsen. Joseph De Grasse prepared and produced the work, with Dorothy Phillips playing the role of Nora Helmer.

The exhibitor will find many advertising advantages in this production—for the Ibsen "cult" is far-reaching, and faithful to its literary ideal. It is said in behalf of Miss Phillips that the signs of improvement she has shown in her recurring Bluebird appearances find maturity in the extremely exacting and intensely emotional role of Nora Helmer. Lon Chaney is again the "heavy" in Miss Phillips' support, playing the part of Nils Krogstad; and William Stowell, the leading man, as Torvald Helmer, is splendidly suited.

Sidney Dean, Miriam Shebly and Helen Wright play the remaining roles and under the direction of Joseph De Grasse, who introduced Miss Phillips to Bluebird, the stage version has been translated to the screen with enhanced values when the famous work of Ibsen is measured in its emotional possibilities.

PRIZES FOR CORRECT GUESS.

A prize contest on the Sam Loyd Picto-Puzzles now running in the Paramount-Bray Pictographs is announced by the Bray studios. This contest, to start with the sixty-eighth edition to be released May 20, should prove a big drawing card to exhibitors.

It has been the practice to give the answers after each puzzle has been projected on the screen, but in this release one of the puzzles will remain unanswered and the audience is invited to guess it and send their answers to their local exhibitor within one week from the day it is run. The exhibitor in turn sends all the answers received during that time to Mr. Loyd, who will send to those guessing correctly, a very handsome illustrated puzzle book of thirty-two pages.

During the week following the contest, each exhibitor will run the correct answer on his screen so that his patrons may have opportunity of learning whether or not they were entitled to a book. While the contest will be extremely costly to the Bray studios, the interest created and the added business which will come to theaters running it, is considered adequate compensation.

LATEST WILBUR PICTURE HAS UNUSUAL FEATURES.

In "The Heirs of Hate," the production following "The Single Code," one of the "Morals of Men" series being produced by the David Horsley Studios, and released through the Mutual Film Corporation, Crane Wilbur the star and author, has some wonderful opportunities to display his versatility.

Mr. Wilbur in this picture has eight different make ups. The action covers a period of fifty years and the aging processes of time are shown in the life of the principal character, "Morgan Gray," starting him at the age of thirty and showing his death at eighty. Mr. Wilbur also plays the part of "Abel Gray," the grandson of "Morgan Gray," a young man of twenty-one and both of these characters appear together in a number of the strongest scenes of this powerful drama.

Jode Mullally plays "Kane Gray," the elder grandson and the malignant embodiment of the grandmother's curse and Gene Crosby plays a sweet, young Northern girl. Harrish Ingraham is collaborating with Mr. Wilbur in the direction of the picture.

"The Heirs of Hate" promises to be one of the very best of the "Morals of Men" series.

LOIS WEBER FEATURE TO PLAY BROADWAY.

The new Universal feature which has been prepared under the direction of Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley is announced for the Broadway theater, New York, beginning Sunday, May 13. The title of the picture is "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle," and it deals with the subject of birth control. It was shown privately a few nights ago before a distinguished audience of representative New York men and women. The subject matter has been chosen because of its dramatic interest. Although based upon authentic cases which have been reported in the newspapers of this country from Maine to California, the picture does not claim to be a dramtization of any particular heroine of real life.

The new picture is in six reels, all of great dramatic interest and splendidly acted.

In the picture the principal roles are played by Miss Weber, as the rich doctor's wife; Phillips Smalley, as the doctor; Priscilla Dean, as the rich young wife; Wedgewood Nowell, as the rich young husband; Evelyn Selbie, as the wife of the poor man, and Harry De More, as her husband.

GLADYS LESLIE SMILES AGAIN.

Thanhouser's next "Smile Feature," as their Gladys Leslie plays are termed—it was of Miss Leslie that the New York Herald said: "She has a million-dollar smile"—is to be released June 1 and called "An Amateur Orphan." It is Director Van Dyke Brooke's first Thanhouser production—he who was ten years of Vitagraph.

Perhaps Agnes C. Johnston's authorship of the scenario will evidence the sunny nature of the picture along with the fact of Miss Leslie's presence in it, for "The Shine Girl," "Pots-and-Pans Peggy," "Prudence the Pirate," "Her New York" and other humoristic Thanhouser successes are from her pen. Indeed, she is working on other "smile pictures' for Thanhouser's smiling star, for it is the belief of Edwin Thanhouser that such films are an actual necessity to the public in dread war time.

Supporting Miss Leslie in "An Amateur Orphan" are Roy Hallor, Chester Morris, Carey L. Hastings, Thomas A. Curran, Justus D. Barnes, Grace De Carlton and Isabel Vernon.

Bluebird Schedule

Attractive List of Titles for Productions Extending to July 4.

THE arrival of "Fires of Rebellion" at Bluebird's New York headquarters during the past week, finished releases on hand to stock the schedule until the first week in July. As the tentative titles of several releases have been dealt with in earlier announcements, Bluebird's publicity department now submits for the information of exhibitors the complete lay-out, with correct titles, until the week including the "Glorious Fourth." May issues having been recorded, here follow the June releases:

June 4: "Bringing Home Father," featuring Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Verhon, in a comedy drama, based on a story by H. O. Davis, and directed by Wm. Worthington. The principal supporters will be Florence Mayon, Arthur Hoyt and Richard La Reno.

June 11: "A Doll's House," based on Henrik Ibsen's famous play, with Dorothy Phillips playing the role of Nora Helmer, which has served such stage celebrities as Mrs. Fiske, Nazimova and Eleanor Duse. Joseph De Grasse made the screen-version and directed the production, now presenting the play for the first time in pictures. Lon Chaney and Wm. Stowell will be featured in the supporting company, with Sidney Dean, Miriam Shelby and Helen Wright playing other important roles.

June 18: "The Little Orphan," based on an H. O. Davis story, with Ella Hall featured, and directed by Jack Conway. Prominent supporting roles will be played by Gertrude Aster, Gretchen Lederer, Ernie Shields, Richard La Reno and George Webb.

June 25: "A Kentucky Cinderella," from F. Hopkinson Smith's story, with Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford featured. Mr. Julian directed. The cast will be conspicuously efficient in that Harry Carter, Eddie Polo, Zoe Rae, Gretchen Lederer, Frank Lanning and Emory Johnson will have prominent roles.

July 2: "Fires of Rebellion," with Dorothy Phillips leading. Ida May Park wrote and directed the feature. Lon Chaney and Wm. Stowell will be chief supporters, with Belle Bennett, Golda Madden, Alice May Youst, Edward Brady and Richard La Reno playing essential roles.

"THE GOLDEN GOD" APOLLO'S NEXT.

Following the completion of "The Mystic Hour," the unusual drama of the supernatural and the occult, the Apollo Studios at Fort Lee have started work on "The Golden God," the story of which was written by Robert Hage. The adaptation of this was made by Frederick Rath.

Alma Hanlon is starred, while Charles Hutchinson takes the leading male role. Florence Short, who has won many admirers by her work in previous Art Dramas, also has an important part.

The story deals with the effect of money-lust on two happy people. Wealth comes to them suddenly, and nearly ruins their happiness. They learn almost too late that riches do not bring happiness.

Many of the scenes in "The Golden God" depict interesting moments on the stock exchange, and arrangements are being made whereby these parts can be photographed in the exchange itself. This has never been allowed before, but Harry Raver, president of the company, was successful in persuading some of his influential friends on the exchange to set the machinery in motion to grant him the permit.

The picture, when completed, will be one of the four June releases on Art Dramas Program.

BROADWAY CAST FOR PATHE'S "THE IRON HEART."

"The Iron Heart" is the title of a five-reel feature completed by Astra under the direction of George Fitzmaurice, and scheduled for early release through Pathe as a Gold Rooster play. This picture stars Edwin Arden and a supporting cast, including Leonore Harris, Forrest Wynant and Helene Chadwick.

Edwin Arden is known as one of the best actors on the American stage and he has been equally successful on the screen. One of his greatest parts was that of the husband in "Today," which ran at the Forty-eighth Street theater for a year. Leonore Harris is now appearing in "Our Betters" at the Hudson theater, while Forrest Wynant has an important part in "Turn to the Right" at the Gaiety. Helene Chadwick was featured with Montague Love in Pathe's "The Challenge," some months ago. She has been playing important parts in Astra productions ever since.

WAR NEWS WEEKLY NOW RELEASING.

The first issue of the American War News Weekly, produced by the Cinema War News Syndicate, was released on April 29, and will be followed by one reel each week. This presents something of an innovation in topical films, as the illustrated main titles and tinted scenes give a feature atmosphere to the news subjects. In matter the country appears to be well covered, as views were shown in locations ranging from Texas to New Hampshire. Paul H. Allen of New York has been retained by the Cinema Syndicate as laboratory superintendent and film cutter.

"THE PRODIGAL'S RETURN" (Selig).

The latest Selig multiple reel drama announced for release by General Film Co. is entitled "The Prodigal's Return." This drama was inspired by the parable of the Prodigal Son. It re-enacts the famous Biblical story in the present-day environment. How the younger son goes to the city and spends his inheritance, how he later returns to his father and in so doing causes rejoicing, aids in the presentment of a very pretty and entertaining drama. The son wins the love of the village belle, and also brings an end to the plottings of the elder brother, who remorsefully sacrifices his own inheritance to save the younger son.

The drama is well enacted, and the scenic effects and photography are excellent in every detail.

WM. S. HART EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK.

William S. Hart, Triangle star, left Los Angeles on May 8 for a month's vacation in New York. En route he will stop off at the principal cities and make appearances at a few of the bigger motion picture theaters. Ariving in New York, which city Mr. Hart has not visted in three years, he will be given a reception by the Triangle Distributing Company officials. He will also confer with the officials of the Triangle regarding several phases of his newly-signed contract with that organization.

While in New York Mr. Hart will look up the many friends he has in the Big Town. He is one of the best known and most loved members of the Lambs Club, and was one of the committee of five that arranged the details surrounding the erection of the Lambs' present sumptuous home on 44th street.

WARREN STARTS SECOND PICTURE.

Edward Warren, producer and director of the "Warfare of the Flesh," has started work on the second production to be released under his own trade-mark. He has engaged Rene Guissard, formerly of the Triangle and Goldwyn forces, as his cameraman and Henry Allen Farnum as his technical director, formerly with some of the leading producers in the business and remembered as the technical man on the Kalem superpicture "From the Manger to the Cross," the feature staged in the Holy Land. The entire working staff is not quite complete at this time, but a studio has been leased for a long term and work is progressing rapidly. The new scenario is by Rufus Steele, of the Saturday Evening Post staff, and author of many big feature plays.

SUBMARINE CHASERS IN INTERNATIONAL FILM.

A particularly interesting subject is shown by the International on its split-reel just released through the Pathe exchanges. This 500-foot subject shows the making, the launching, and the trials of 550 submarine chasers manufactured by the Elco Company of Bayonne, N. J., for the British Government. These chasers are in design high powered and speedy motorboats, being fitted with twin engines of 250-horsepower each which drive the boats about 25 miles an hour.

ANOTHER BATTLESHIP USED POWER MACHINE.

One of the large dreadnoughts of the U. S. Navy bought a Power's Cameragraph No. 6B just before putting to sea last week. Installations of Power machines in Post exchanges, on battleships, etc., continue in a manner most satisfactory to the Nicholas Power Company.

Kalem's "American Girl" Series

Director Horne Striving to Make Each Episode Replete With Thrilling Deeds of Daring.

WHEN the Kalem Company recently launched their new series, "The American Girl," the officials of the company predicted that Kalem had never selected a more opportune theme or a more timely title. Although the success of the early episodes of the series justified these predictions, even the wise prophets themselves were amazed at the gigantic boom in popularity that this series has enjoyed since the United States' declaration of hostilities.

"We have never experienced such a sudden rush of exhibitors to book a series of pictures," said an official of the Kalem Company, "as one exhibitor put it: 'Why, the "America" is on every tongue. The very sight of one of your "American Girl" posters hauls them in like a magnet. You are mighty lucky to have a series at this time that will justfy the word "America" in the title.'"

In order to conform the action as well as the title of this series to the spirit of the times, the Kalem officials instructed Director James W. Horne to bend every energy to pack his pictures with deeds of daring and thrilling action. In a humorous letter in answer to these instructions, Director Horne wrote: "I have informed Miss Sais and the other members of the company of your instructions. To be perfectly frank with you, the consensus of opinion among us was that you must be possessed of considerable 'nerve' to ask us to give you thrills that exceed in daring those of recent episodes. However, Miss Sais and the other are game, and agree to strive to outdo themselves on one condition—that you will not object to enormous hospital bills and will consider the expense of a funeral or two as merely trivial."

In recent productions Director Horne has justified his statement that for thrilling dramatic action, the "American Girl" pictures scarcely admit of any improvement. In a current production, "The Vanished Line Rider," Miss Marin Sais, as "Madge King," the spirited heroine of the series, pursues a mysterious band of men who eventually turn out to be dodgers of the immigration laws by smuggling Chinamen into California. During the pursuit, she is lowered over the side of a steep cliff by means of a lariat held by Hart Hoxie, who plays the ranch foreman. When she gets half way down, one of the smugglers appears at the foreman's side with a revolver, and demands that he "let go that rope!" In the struggle that ensues, Miss Sais dangles perilously in mid-air, and when the rope is finally released, she is hurtled down the side of the cliff to a gully below. After enacting this scene, Miss Sais can hardly be called temperamental because she refused to act in another scene for the rest of the day.

During the production of "The Trapping of Two-Bit Tuttle," another current release, Edward Hearn, the leading man of the company, was so badly injured in on of Director Horne's realistic struggles that he will be out of the cast for over a week. In another picture, Ronald Bradbury appears as the "heavy" with a handaged hand. Only those at the studio know that this is not a part of his make-up but the result of being dragged from his horse by a lariat thrown by Miss Sais.

Throughout the entire series, rousing thrills abound to such an extent that "The American Girl" series may be cited as a splendid example of Kalem's policy of keeping pace with the times and adapting the theme of their productions to the mood of their patrons.

"FILLING HIS OWN SHOES" (Essanay).

June 11 has been fixed by Essanay for the release of Bryant Washburn's next feature, "Filling His Own Shoes." This picture, which has been adapted from the novel of that title by Henry C. Rowland, the noted light fiction writer, has been completed, and will be given trade showings at all Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch offices within a few days. It is a comedy-drama of the same type, practically, in which Mr. Washburn made himself so famous in the now immortal Skinner pictures. The story hinges about a young American shoe clerk, out of a job in Paris, France, who goes into the Balkan war and comes out not alone the possessor of a fortune of several million dollars, but also of a Turkish harem, consisting of three beautiful girls. The trails and tribulations which this inheritance thrust upon the shoe clerk's shoulders promises many highly amusing situations, and an entertaining photo-play, withal. Hazel Daly, the "Honey" of the Skinner pictures, appears again as Mr. Washburn's leading woman. The production will run on the screen one hour fifteen minutes.

Aside from the drawing power which Mr. Washburn has built up for himself, the Rowland novel was one of the six best sellers of its time. These two facts should prove invaluable advertising for the exhibitor booking "Filling His Own Shoes."

GRAPHIC FEATURES TAKE LARGER QUARTERS.

New York's newest state rights concern, Graphic Features, which is distributing "The Woman and the Beast," had found larger quarters necessary, and early this week moves from the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh Avenue, to the Candler Building, 224 W. 47th Street, where they will occupy Suite No. 616. Almost simultaneous with the move, the first trade showings of the feature will be given in the Candler Building. These showings have been postponed for a week through the removal of Graphic headquarters.

THREE GAUMONT SINGLE-REELS FOR THE WEEK OF MAY 20.

The three "featurettes" which Gaumont will contribute to the screen through Mutual the week of May 22 are interesting examples of what the Los Angeles Evening Herald, in speaking of the Gaumont picture, called "very timely." The first to reach the screen is "Tours Around the World" No. 29, the Gaumont foreign scenic, released May 22. Its one echo of the war is the great fortress of Gibraltar, the British guardian of the gate between the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. The other pictures are of river life on the Marne before the war, Cadiz, Spain, and Martinique, West Indies.

The second single-reel of the week is the Mutual Weekly, May 23. This is edited at the Gaumont studios the day it is shipped. Hence, no advance program of its contents can be given.

May 24 Gaumont will release through Mutual its film magazine, "Reel Life." It has five interesting sections. Perhaps the most important contribution is "The Sugar Industry of Barbadoes." Next comes "Plowing With a Motor Car." It shows how the motor pleasure vehicle can be converted into machines that will help avert the famine that is inpending. Caviar, the Russian delicacy that now commands such a high price, is shown "in its native haunts." "Golfing on Wheels" shows how the autoped is being used by inveterate golfers who enjoy "pounding the pill" yet dislike the work of following it on foot. "A $1,000 Playhouse" pictures the diminutive home of a fortunate young lady and her dolls.

WAR PICTURES AVAILABLE AT PATHE'S EXCHANGES.

Following the success of Pathe's Official British War Pictures in Chicago, they opened to large business at the American theater, Denver, the fifth city in the United States to see these authentic motion pictures of actual warfare in the French battlefield.

Contracts having been signed for the complete series of seven episodes of two reels each, prints have been apportioned to the Pathe exchanges and the British War Pictures are now available to exhibitors in the territories covered by the following Pathe branches: Chicago, Minneapolis, Boston, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Washington, Omaha, Buffalo, Dallas, Denver, Kansas City, New York, Newark, Cleveland, St. Louis, Atlanta and Seattle.

In all probability, the set received by the Seattle branch will be interchanged between that city and Portland and Butte.

For the present, the following branches will not receive prints and no exploitation of the film will be made in their territories: Albany, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Salt Lake City and San Francisco.

Until it is possible to obtain additional prints, the war pictures will be available to exhibitors according to the above statement.

"BARRIER" ARRANGEMENTS PERFECTED.

Arrangements for the passing of the control of "The Barrier" into the hands of Lewis J. Selznick were perfected last week at several conferences between General Film officials, Benjamin B. Hampton and Mr. Selznick. All the booking previously arranged through the General Film offices were assumed by the Selznick exchanges, and a rush of new business began from the moment the announcement of the transaction was made.

"The Barrier" is meeting with universal success throughout the country, playing to capacity business everywhere.

In New York "The Barrier' is now playing the Loew time, after which it will be seen on the entire Fox and Poli circuits. From the Pacific coast come reports of highly successful runs at the Portola theater, San Francisco, and Clune's, in Los Angeles, and the booking for the J. G. Clemens' houses in Seattle, Portland, Spokane and Tacoma. "The Barrier" is already being booked for Sacramento, Fresno, San Jose and Oakland, in each of which cities it will play an extended engagement. The Majestic theater in Grand Rapids is playing "The Barrier" for a week, and applications are in from hundreds of other houses of equally high class, whose contracts will be closed as rapidly as the various Selznick exchanges can handle them.

The foreign rights to "The Barrier" have been secured by J. Frank Brockliss, and altogether the prospects for this production are extremely brilliant.

BEECROFT PLACES WILBUR SUBJECTS.

Chester Beecroft this week again demonstrated his facility to place American film product on the foreign market when he closed a deal with Bolton-Stewart, Ltd., of London, to supply them every month for the next two years with a new five reel feature subject starring Crane Wilbur.

So far Mr. Beecroft has placed three brands of American five-reel feature productions with the Bolton-Stewart concern. These brands are the Triumph production, the Frohman super-pictures, and now the Crane Wilbur subjects. Bolton-Stewart, Ltd., receive one new subject a month of each brand.

Increased facilities have been provided to take care of the business, which is being expanded and run along bigger lines. New offices have ben opened at 501 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Selznick's Business Birthday

"Clean House," He Says, Reviewing His Year's War on the Program System.

IT IS just one year since Lewis J. Selznick, one of the leaders of the open booking sytem of picture distribution, flung down the gauntlet to the programs. In this year booking has made remarkable strides, having won over several men who were leaders in the program system. Summing up the year's developments, Mr. Selznick says:

"Clean House—that's the slogan for spring.

"Just a year ago I sprang the same slogan. I announced the open booking system and challenged the program to a fight to a finish. They laughed at me then, but they're not laughing today. I advised the exhibitors to stop paying for pictures 'sight unseen,' like schoolboys swapping jack-knives. I told them to book their features in the open market.

"Immediately the trade launched ferocious attacks upon me. The enemy called me 'a menace to the industry,' and declared open war upon me at the Chicago convention. A certain historical conference was held at the Astor, condemning me and my proposals. At that very moment one of the leaders at that conference, the head of one of the big program concerns, had made his plans to adopt my system for the biggest stars on his program.

"About two months ago the nominal head of one of the biggest of the programs issued a long statement, arguing that program booking was the only logical method in the interests of the exhibitor. I wrote a brief reply to his argument, and a short time ago this program concern announced itself as entering the open market.

"The handwriting is on the wall—the program will continue, but its bullying methods are dead. The exhibitor does not have to stand for it one more day. If the last year means anything in the history of the moving picture, it means just that. Clean house, if you have been standing for this rank injustice.

"I have pledged the exhibitors my word of honor that I would give them the open market. I want to thank the ones who have stood by me in this last year. I will never forget their loyalty and support in playing my pictures regardless of being forced to pay at the same time for program films they did not use. The day of this imposition is past. The day of reckoning is coming. The exhibitors should not forget those fellows that made them pay for pictures they could not use.

"Every day is New Years day with me—and here's my resolution for this one: I will never be happy, regardless of success, until I land a final knockout blow on the czars of the program.

"And any man, now, who pays for a porgram while playing my pictures, or any other open market offering, is simply a plain sucker, and it is his own fault.

Pathe Program Week May 20

Gladys Hulette in Five-Reeler, Serials, Comedies, Cartoons, Scenics, Etc., Complete Program.

WITH four big stars and a comedy team of the first magnitude, Pathe presents a strong front for the week of May 20. Gladys Hulette in what is probably her best Gold Rooster feature to date, two strong episodes of "The Neglected Wife" and "Mystery of the Double Cross," a two-reel Lonesome Luke comedy and a one-reel Myers-Theby comedy are features of the program.

"The Candy Girl" is a Gold Rooster play produced by Thanhouser, written by Philip Lonergan and staged by Eugene Moore. "The Candy Girl" is a strong, interest-compelling story from beginning to end, and it gives Gladys Hulette a wonderful opportunity, while William Parke, Jr., does splendid work opposite her as a boy who fights and wins against a terrible craving for dope.

The second episode of "The Neglected Wife," in which Ruth Roland is the star, is entitled "Weakening." A crisis in the lives of the beautiful and innocent young girl and the married man, who, despite himself, has fallen desperately in love with her, is reached in this episode.

Mollie King is starred in the tenth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross," entitled "The Hole in the Wall." Fast action and thrills are the keynote of this episode, produced by Astra under the direction of William Parke and photodramatized by Bertram Millhauser from the original story by Gilson Willets.

The third of the two-reel Lonesome Luke comedies is entitled "Lonesome Luke's Honeymoon." It tells even more of a story than either "Lonesome Luke's Lively Life" or "Lonesome Luke on Tin Can Alley." The attempts of an heiress to marry Luke in order to destroy the chances of a wily villain are excruciatingly funny.

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby afford laugh after laugh in "Jumping Jealousy," a one-reel comedy, in which each member of the marriage partnership attempts to make the other jealous and succeeds beyond his or her fondest hopes.

The beautiful combitone scenic pictures are represented by the ninth release of the "Know America, the Land We Love" series, entitled "The Copper Industry." It shows splendid scenes of the great copper mines at Bisbee, Ariz., the greatest copper producing state in the Union.

The International cartoon and scenic split-reel release is made up of "Jerry on the Job," "Quinine," cartoon, and "Seoul, Korea," scenic.

Hearst-Pathe News Nos. 42 and 43 complete this strong program.

Thanhouser is "Tickled"

Highly Pleased Over Notices of Frederick Warde's Work in Modern Drama—Promises More Good Pictures.

EDWIN THANHOUSER is "tickled." He thought the millennium had arrived when the clipping bureau sent in "The Vicar of Wakefield" press criticisms—to the last one praising the picture—and it was in some fear and trembling that he ventured the "Vicar" star, Frederick Warde, in the latter's first modern screen drama from the pen of Lloyd Lonergan. Warde in modern drama—How would he be received? was the Thanhouser reflection. For forty years the classic had claimed this star; wouldn't the critics look askance at the change?

But the clipping bureau has reassured Mr. Thanhouser. The criticisms of the first Warde modern drama are all that could be asked.

"On the strength of the notices," says Mr. Thanhouser, "we have cast Mr. Warde in another production minus the doublet and hose. The Shakespeare fans throughout the country, many of whom have organized Frederick Warde Shakespearean clubs, don't know what to make of it. But they all wish him well in the change and their interest in his future pictures has increased for the very reasons that the films will reveal a new Frederick Warde to them. We have not decided on a definite title for the second modern feature as yet, but I might state the cast consists of Mr. Warde, Jeanne Eagels, Robert Vaughn, Carey Hastings, James Ewens, Ernest Howard, Grace Stevens and litle Helen Badgley.

"The new Florence La Badie feature is a seven-reeler, as was the 'Vicar of Wakefield.' But it is not that style of a play. I would call it a red-bloded melodrama. I cannot give more particulars until we have run through a first print, but I don't mind indicating that the new seven-reeler is in the sensational class. Strictly clean, of course. In Miss La Badie's support are Richard R. Neill, Wayne Arey, Gertrude Dallas, J. H. Gilmour, Arthur Bower and Claude Cooper. Ernest C. Warde, producer of 'Hinton's Double,' is the director.

"While I am speaking about our productions in work, let me mention a completed one. It is our next Pathe release, called 'The Candy Girl.' The finest notices given a feature film in a long time will be accorded this feature. Just note this production."

Future Plans for Mary Pickford

"The Little American," Under the Direction of Cecil B. De Mille, to Follow "A Romance of the Redwoods," Then "Rebecca," to Be Staged by Marshall Neilan.

UPON his return from the West Coast studios, Jesse L. Lasky, who in accordance with the recent Famous Players-Lasky-Artcraft affiliation consulted with Mary Pickford in the matter of her future productions to be released by Artcraft, announced their plans involving the next two subjects following "A Romance of the Redwoods," now just completed.

Mr. Lasky stated that the next Pickford vehicle will be a timely subject of great patriotic appeal entitled "The Little American." Work has already been commenced in the building of sets at the Lasky studios and many spectacular effects will be introduced. Among the thrills will be scenes depicting the sinking of the Lusitania. For one of these scenes an immense tank measuring 50x100 feet is being built in which the ball-room of the liner will sink. This feature alone will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000, it is said. Cecil B. De Mille, who also directed Miss Pickford in "A Romance of the Redwoods," will stage this subject and the actual filming of scenes will commence in a few days. Although the exact nature of the story has not been announced it is understood that the picture will disclose an ideal combination in presenting "America's Sweetheart" in "The Little American," produced at this time by Cecil B. De Mille.

Following "The Little American," Mary Pickford will appear in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the famous story and play by Kate Douglas Wiggin. One of the most popular sellers in the country "Rebecca" has been read by most of those who have not seen the play. It is understood that this production will also be staged at the West Coast studios. Marshall Neilan, who recently signed a two-year contract with the Famous Players-Lasky organization, will stage this picture.

The preparation of the book, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" for the screen will be in the hands of Frances Marion, whose adaptation of Miss Pickford's current triumph, " A Poor Little Rich Girl" has proved an important factor in the wonderful success of this picture, which is readily conceded to be the best Pickford offering yet released.

LESSER HAS MANY TOURING COMPANIES.

Sol L. Lesser, president of the All Star Features Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, announces that he now has ten companies playing his big film productions as road attractions touring the states of California, Nevada and Arizona. They are as follows: "Intolerance," 2; Civilization," 3; "War Brides," 2; "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," 2; "The Whip," 1.

Mr. Lesser is carrying an orchestra, advance man, second man, operator and manager with his "Intolerance" companies, and reports tremendous business with this production, and all of his road attractions are doing extremely well.

Frank G. Hall's Success

Big Exhibitor and State Rights Man Packs Houses by Judicious Advertising.

FRANK G. HALL, of Newark, New Jersey, who recently entered the state rights field on a large scale by buying outright from Edgar Lewis his nine-reel production "The Bar Sinister," is attracting the attention of his fellow-exhibitors by the strenuous manner in which he goes after business and packs his theaters at prices far above the average.

In addition to owning the New Jersey rights to "The Whip," "Joan the Woman," "Civilization" and several other special attractions, Mr. Hall is one of the most successful exhibitors in the country. He believes in big pictures and high box office prices and is proving the wisdom of his methods by the business he is doing at the Strand theater, Newark, New Jersey, where he charges from twenty-five to seventy-five cents admission. He believes that theater patrons want to see the very best pictures obtainable and are willing to pay for them. But he also believes that you have to use exceptional advertising methods to acquaint the public with the fact that you have a worthwhile attraction for them to see.

Newark was told that "The Whip" was at the Strand by a large newly painted tally-ho drawn by six beautiful horses and carrying an interesting coaching party in gay costumes, with trumpeters announcing it's approach, while a thoroughbred race horse with a jockey in attendance stood in front of the theater. "The Honor System" was advertised by turning the handsome Strand lobby into a tier of cells with prisoners looking through bars, sheriff and keepers in attendance, and a sign over the gate which admitted the audiences reading "Visiting hours 2:30 and 8:15." Something to make people talk about, the theater is arranged for every feature, but care is taken to stage the advertising "stunts" in a high class manner and make them suggest a two-dollar attraction as opposed to a cheap show. Mr. Hall is a heavy advertiser and believes that a theater manager must be a live wire, continually exerting himself to think of new methods of keeping his theater before the public, but he insists upon doing things elaborately and appealing to the best people in the community. This is accomplished by spending money and using ideas that appeal because they are clever.

For the proper presentation of "The Bar Sinister," Mr. Hall is having a special stage set made in which a prologue will be staged, introducing darkies singing old plantation melodies in the moonlight and pantomime leading up to the opening scenes of Edgar Lewis' powerful drama of the South.

GLADYS HULETTE IN PATHE'S "THE CANDY GIRL."

Gladys Hulette, who in a few short months has won an enviable reputation through her fine work in "The Shine Girl," "Prudence, the Pirate," "Her New York" and "Pots and Pans Peggie," stars in "The Candy Girl," the Pathe Gold Rooster release for May 20. "The Candy Girl" is characteristic of the type of play the public has learned to expect from Miss Hulette —whimsical, pathetic, humorous and dramatic all at once. Phil Lonergan wrote the scenario.

"The Candy Girl" is the story of a young orphan girl who is brought up by her aunt. Poverty makes it difficult for them to get along. Having acquired a reputation for her home-made candy, the girl decides to open up a shop in the city for the sale of her candy. Fortune does not smile upon her efforts, her few customers being chiefly those whom she has charmed with the sweetness of her character. A rich man's son, busily engaged in sowing wild oats, meets her and falls in love with her. They marry and she learns too late that her husband is a victim of the drug habit. Her efforts to win him back to manliness and decency, and her final success, finish the story.

The characters are well drawn, especially that of the Candy Girl herself. Miss Hulette does not merely play the part—she lives it. "The Candy Girl" seems destined to rank with the best of her previous successes. Thanhouser produced it.

MUTUAL HAS TWO WAR-TIME REELS.

"Zeppelin Attack on New York" and "Manning the Navy" are the titles of two single-reel specials produced by Watterson R. Rothacker and released by the Mutual.

The Zeppelin picture is a fictional fantasy of what might happen if the Kaiser should send a fleet of Zeps to raid New York just as London has been raided so often. The picture is given the requisite touches of patriotic fervor. There is an aviator hero who saves the city. A burning Zeppelin is shown, bombed by the aeroplane scout and sent flaming to earth. The enemy is routed and the flag waves free again. This picture is released May 21.

"Manning the Navy" is a one-reel presentation of the making of a "jackie," as is done at the Naval Training Station at Lake Bluff, Ill. The picture was taken under the supervision of and with the due official approval of the naval authorities.

SOL L. LESSER BUYS "THE WHIP."

Sol L. Lesser, president of the All Star Features Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, has just added one more big production to his endless chain of triumphs. He has just purchased the California and Arizona rights to the Paragon Film Corporation's dramatization of the Drury Lane spectacle, "The Whip."

In New Territory

Gaumont Cameraman Busy Filming Islands of the West Indies.

THE recent purchase of the Virgin Islands was the immediate cause of the trip of two Gaumont cameramen to the West Indies. It was the wish of the producer of America's great single-reels to have the American public acquainted at the earliest possible moment with the new territory which had come under the Stars and Stripes. St. Thomas and St. Croix have already been released by Gaumont through Mutual, and St. Kitts will appear in the near future. However, the possibilities of the tropics were not exhausted by the new United States possessions. The cameramen have continued their journey to the south, and now are sending back pictures from the Islands of Barbadoes.

These pictures from the West Indies, which are creating so much favorable criticism in the newspapers, appear both in "Tours Around the World" and "Reel Life," Gaumont's Magazine in Film. There are so many pictures of an entertaining character that are not strictly of a scenic nature that the Gaumont Company is wisely devoting a section in "Reel Life" to their exploitation. One of the latest is "The Sugar Industry in Barbadoes." This picture, which appears in "Reel Life" No. 56, is descriptive of the industry throughout all the West Indies. It shows just how the cane is harvested, how it is ground, and how the sugar is prepared for the refining process. Since sugar is a commodity of universal use, the interest of every spectator will be held while these pictures are on the screen.

If you wish your newspaper reviewers to comment favorably on your program, always have a Gaumont single-reel to brighten it. These offer timely news, magazine and travel pictures that are so much in demand.

"THE HOLE IN THE WALL" TENTH "DOUBLE CROSS."

Mollie King is announced by Pathe for May 20 in the tenth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross," entitled "The Hole in the Wall."

William Parke, who made two of the best Pathe features, "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence the Pirate," at the Thanhouser studios, is responsible for the production of this new Astra mystery serial, which is breaking records. It is a photo-dramatization of Gilson Willets' original story by Bertram Milhauser.

Thrills and fast action and the splendid production and direction that characterize the work of Mr. Parke are the keynote of this chapter, in which Miss King is seen as Philippa Brewster, Leon Bary as Peter Hale, Ralph Stuart as Bridgey Bentley, Gladden James as Dick Annessly, and ??? as the Masked Stranger, one of the greatest mystery characters ever created.

GAIL KANE STARTS ON "THE UPPER CRUST."

Gail Kane has started work at the American studios on "The Upper Crust," an adaptation of Charles Sherman's novel entitled "The Indiscretions of Molly."

In "The Upper Crust" Miss Kane will be seen as Molly O'Toole, a sweet village girl who, on account of reverses, goes to the city to seek a broader field of opportunity. Her love of wealth, luxury and position lead her into a series of indiscretions which go to make up a story replete with tense dramatic situations, and not lacking in a goodly amount of clean, wholesome comedy.

HOLDEN GETS "RACE SUICIDE" FOR JERSEY.

Samuel Cummins, film broker, of 1476 Broadway, New York, has closed a deal for Joseph W. Farnham by selling the New Jersey rights to "Race Suicide" to J. H. Holden, of the Boreal Film Company, 729 Seventh avenue.

Essanay Advance Announcement

President Spoor Says Exhibitors Should Have Chance to Advertise and Gives Releases to September.

ESSANAY announces its entire program of feature productions for the summer months, and supplementary to this announcement George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, issues the following statement:

"Only by closest co-operation can the manufacturer and the exhibitor get the best benefits from the business of motion pictures. The manufacturer can produce the highest class pictures, yet they will not reach the bulk of the populace unless he gives the exhibitor ample time to exploit those pictures. The exhibitor, after all, is the man who must deal with the public. He knows, better than any manufacturer, how best to get a picture before the people. But he must have the time. It is up to the manufacturer, therefore, to give him the time. For that reason, Essanay has adopted the policy of selecting its picture subjects far ahead, and of announcing its selections to the exhibitors. Thus the latter can arrange their programs and have amply opportunity to plan ways of advertising such before the actual showing. With such co-operation, both the manufacturer and the exhibitor will get the best results obtainable."

Essanay schedules eleven features for release in its announcement. Two of these already have been announced. The first is "The Night Workers," a story of newspaper life, which will be released May 21. Marguerite Clayton and Jack Gardner, the latter a well-known star of musical comedy, are to be featured in this production. The second is "Filling His Own Shoes," a Bryant Washburn picture. The story was adapted to the screen from the novel of that title by Henry C. Rowland, the noted fiction author. Hazel Daly and a capable cast are promised in support of Mr. Washburn. This feature will be released June 11.

On June 18 the first of the Essanay-Niles series of red-blooded Western dramas will be released. Its title is "The Land of the Long Shadows." Mr. Gardner will be featured in this, as well as the productions of this series to follow. Every effort is being made, according to reports from Essanay, to introduce to the public a new and novel interpretation of rural Western life of the present day. Reality will be the first aim of these pictures; however, they will not lack the thrills and popular ideals of the "wild and wooly" West.

Bryant Washburn will be starred in the feature to follow. Its title will be "The Man Who Was Afraid." This picture will present a film version of the story of that title by Mary Brecht Pulver, which was published in the Saturday Evening Post and won wide popularity. It is a dramatic production which will give Mr. Washburn a new field for his histrionic talents.

On July 16 "The Range Boss" will be issued. This is the second production of the Esanay-Niles Western dramatic series, presenting Jack Gardner.

"The Golden Idiot" will be released July 23. This production has been scenarioized from the story in Ainslee's Magazine by Robert Rudd Whiting.

"Skinner's Baby" will be released August 6. This picture will be the third of the famous Skinner series, with Bryant Washburn supported by Hazel Daly and the original cast. This picture is a sequel to "Skinner's Dress Suit" and "Skinner's Bubble," which have proved highly successful throughout the country.

Following "Skinner's Baby" will come "Open Places," the third of the Essanay-Niles series. This production will be released August 20, with Jack Gardner in the lead.

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," a comedy-drama adapted from the Saturday Evening Post's story of that title by Clarence Buddington Kelland, will be released September 3.

The next on the program will be entitled "Lost Paradise." The picture is from the story of Frederick Arnold Kummer, and will feature Marguerite Clayton.

On September 24 Mr. Gardner will again appear in an Essanay-Niles feature, entitled "The Vigilantes."

All of these features will have a screen time of approximately one hour fifteen minutes. They will be filmed and ready for release in plenty of time for exhibitors to book according to their program requirements and for advertising purposes. The Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service will handle all the releases.

CIVIL WAR SETTING IN ENID BENNETT PLAY.

One of the most charming plays that has been developed in the Triangle-Ince studios in many week is now nearing completion with Enid Bennett in the star role. Miss Bennett has had the unique experience of stepping from the speaking stage of Australia and New York into immediate popularity on the screen that bears all of the indications of being both genuine and permanent.

In this new play Enid will apear as the grand-daughter of a veteran of the Civil War. There is a delightful charm and novelty in the handling of the story by C. Gardner Sullivan, and there will be unique reality in its staging.

One of the largest of the United States homes for old soldiers is located within ten miles of the Culver City studios, and here hundreds of grizzled veterans who have fought from Bull Run to Appomattox spin their yarns under the eucalyptus and pepper trees these balmy Spring days. Against the background furnished by these real old "boys in blue," Miss Bennett will take part in as pretty and swift-moving a romance as ever gladdened the heart of a picture fan.

HOW MINES ARE LAID.

The mystery of how mines have been laid in the closely patrolled waters about England, is explained in most interesting and graphic fashion in the sixty-seventh release of Paramount-Bray Pictographs through animated diagrammatical drawings.

At the start of the war it was an easy matter for German ships disguised as fishing boats, to sow mines in the English Channel almost without interruption, but this was stopped and hundreds of English patrol ships were on constant watch for any suspicious craft. Nevertheless, mines were sowed and shipping blown up. The means employed by the crafty Germans was discovered when a peculiarly shaped submarine was captured entangled in one of the steel nets spread to interrupt just such visitors. This submarine was found to be not the expected kind with a stock of torpedoes ready to discharge at a passing vessel, but was laden with mines which it could drop at will almost under the noses of ships.

It was not possible to obtain a motion picture of this submarine, but the English authorities supplied a photograph and full description to the Bray studios, from which this film was made.

"GOD'S MAN" GOING STRONG.

Probably the greatest attestation to the "hit" which has been recorded by the Frohman Amusement Corporation with its latest super-production, "God's Man," in which H. B. Warner is starred, is evidenced by the almost unbroken stream of applications which continue to pour into the Frohman office for dates for showing this picture at the legitimate theaters and regular attraction houses.

In addition to a great number of motion picture exhibitors who are applying for dates of booking to "God's Man," the number of theaters which heretofore have been playing practically exclusively to show attractions and the higher-priced motion picture plays has brought the total inquiry up to more than 300.

As part of the recently organized Frohman play for active co-operation between its organization and the exchanges handling the Frohman attractions with exclusive territorial rights, that corporation has inaugurated a service department which is in active charge of these various applications for booking. Immediately upon the receipt of these applications, they are turned over to the territorial rights departments and also followed up immediately from the home Frohman office. The results obtained through such a procedure have proved the advisability of the augmentation of The Frohman service department.

GENERAL FILM'S NEW COMEDIES.

In accordance with its plans for adding to its list of comedies, General Film announces the beginning of a new group of such subjects from the George Kleine interests for release one a week beginning May 21. They are one-reel comedies, starring George Bickel, formerly of Bickel and Watson. With him work such favorites as Cissie Fitizgerald, Millicenti Evans, Maxfield Moree, Della Connor and H. H. McCollum. The first picture is "The King of Cooks."

Another set of comedies announced comprises five Ham and Bud one-reel subjects from Kalem, released weekly beginning May 22. This resumes the Ham and Bud pictures and is preliminary to the introduction of these popular funmakers in two-reel productions about July 1.

WORLD'S SECOND FRENCH DRAMA JUNE 11.

The second of the French photodramas purchased by World-Pictures Brady-Made for distribution upon the regular program is called "A Naked Soul," and its publication is listed for June 11. The star of this production is Susan Grandaise, whose old-world personations of sympathetic roles are so very popular that they have gained for her the affectionate sobriquet, "the sweetest girl in Europe."

World Film Advance List

Fine Line of Brady-Mades Ready, Covering Releases to Next August.

WORLD-PICTURES Brady-Made are now practically completed up to the release of August 13 next. There are fourteen of these between May 14 and the date already mentioned. The list follows:

May 14, Muriel Ostriche and Arthur Ashley in "Moral Courage;" May 21, Ethel Clayton and Montagu Love in "Yankee Pluck;" May 28, Alice Brady in "Maternity;" June 4, Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge and Dion Titheradge in "The Crimson Dove;" June 11, Robert Warwick and Gail Kane in "The False Friend;" June 18, Montagu Love, Gerda Holmes and Evelyn Greeley in "The Brand of Satan;" June 25, Ethel Clayton and Edward Langford in "The Stolen Paradise;" July 2, Alice Brady in "The Divorce Game;" July 9, Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge in "The Price of Pride;" July 16, Kitty Gordon in "The Beloved Adventuress;" July 23, Arthur Ashley, Gerda Holmes and Edward Langford in "Partnership;" July 30, Alice Brady in "A Self-Made Widow;" August 6, Ethel Clayton and Milton Sills in "Chasms;" August 13, Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge in "The Waster."

This list is supplemented by the four French photoplays directed by Louis Mercanton and purchased for America by World-Pictures to be published as folows:

May 28, Regina Badet and Albert Signer in "Atonement;" June 11, Susan Grandaise in "A Naked Soul;" June 25, Regina Badet and Paul Guide in "The Golden Lotus;" July 16, Susan Grandaise, Albert Signer and Paul Guide in "When True Love Dawns."

"These plays," said Director General William A. Brady, "possess a special value at the present time, when the American market is receiving little or no material from Europe. I will not say they are better picture plays than we have in this country, for I honestly feel that we lead the whole world.

"But the four French photodramas which we are passing along to our regular program exhibitors are entirely new in their scenic surroundings as well as the acting personalities they introduce. This makes contrast and variety, and is sure to be welcome to the public. Some of the exteriors in the imported plays are really marvelous in scenic beauty—and it is a totally different type of scenery from what we have in this country; not more magnificent, to be sure, but fresh and novel.

"I should think we might call these exteriors cultivated scenery, for they are highly embellished by the hand of man. The natural landscapes are beautified by magnificent palaces, superbly constructed terraces, elaborately laid out shrubbery and all the other ornamentation that goes with centuries of wealth and culture.

"The plays themselves are appropriate to their surroundings. The leading personages for the most part are from the higher walks of life, and they move in aristocratic surroundings, affording opportunities for many wonderful interior settings. These have been photographed from the real still life and not from studio reproductions, so that we have the genuine atmosphere, outdoors and in."

"THE DEEMSTER" ATTRACTS BUYERS THROUGHOUT WORLD.

"The Deemster" is attracting state rights buyers all over the world. Two big operators are bidding for the rights to the United Kingdom, three for Canada, one for France, one for Spain and Portugal and one for China, Japan, Singapore and other Far Eastern countries.

Messrs. Wilson and Stedman, of the American Maid Film Company, 454 Loeb Arcade, Minneapolis, bought "The Deemster" for Minnesota, North and South Dakota last week. Options are held on two other groups of states and, should advantage be taken of same, only the Pacific coast states and one or two separate states will remain to be sold.

A lucid sales plan and business-getting campaign has been evolved for buyers of "The Deemster" and their constituents, and is given gratis to all interested in promoting the great Hall Caine photoplay.

Application to the Arrow Film Corporation, 1205 Times building, either by mail or in person, is sufficient to obtain the above-mentioned data.

SOME L-KO ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Julius Stern, president and general manager of L-Ko Comedies, makes the announcement that his other enterprises will make no difference in his plans for continuing L-Ko's on their successful course. Such established L-Ko favorites as Dan Russell, Phil Dunham, Chas. Inslee, Harry Lorraine, Bert Roach, Chester Rickman, Robert McKenzie, Russell Powell, "Shorty" Richards, Jerry Asch, Porter Strong, Richard Smith, Chas. Post and Walter Stevens will do the men's share of the comedy work with Mert Sterling, Lucille Hutton, Eva Novak, Gladys Varden, Kathleen Emerson, Lou Bolton and other clever L-Ko girls helping along with the fun.

Releases for May represent the height of frolic in motion pictures. The titles are: "Tom's Tramping Troupe," "Good Little Bad Boy," "Beach Nuts" and "Roped Into Scandal." These four releases are declared to represent the best efforts L-Ko has put forward since the series began to extract laughter from the "fans."

"Neglected Wife" Exploited Nationally

Pathe Announces List of Newspapers to Be Used in National Advertising Campaign on Serial.

As part of the national advertising campaign on "The Neglected Wife," Pathe's latest serial, released May 13, Pathe will advertise on an extensive scale in eighty-two of the most important papers in the greater cities of the country. One of the most important features of this campaign is an offer of $2,000 in cash prizes for the best solution of the problems of the Neglected Wife and the Other Woman.

The newspapers in which this offer will be announced to the motion picture public include the Albany Knickerbocker Press, the Times Union, the Atlanta Georgian and Journal, the Birmingham News, the Boston American and Globe, the Springfield Union, the Providence Bulletin, the Buffalo News and Times, the Rochester Picture Play News, the Butte Post, the Charlotte News and Observer, the Chicago Examiner and News, the Cincinnati Times-Star, the Louisville Herald, the Cleveland Plain Dealer and Press, the Dayton News, the Toledo News Bee, the Dallas Times-Herald, the Fort Worth Star Telegram, the Houston Post, the San Antonio Light, the Denver News, the Denver Post, the Des Moines Register and Tribune, the Detroit News, the Grand Rapids Press, the Indianapolis Star, the Terre Haute Tribune, the Kansas City Post and Star, the Los Angeles Examiner and Times, the Milwaukee Journal and Sentinel, the Minneapolis News, the St. Paul News, the Newark News, the Elizabeth Journal, the New Orleans Item, the New York Journal and World, the Brooklyn Eagle, the Omaha World-Herald and Bee, the Philadelphia North American and Evening Ledger, the Stanton Times, the Pittsburg Press and Chronicle, the Erie Times, the Portland Oregonian, the Salt Lake Herald, the San Francisco Examiner and Bulletin, the Seattle Times, the Spokane Spokesman Review, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and Times, the Washington Times the Baltimore American and News, and the Richmond Dispatch. In addition, the story of the "Neglected Wife," which is based on the famous novels of Mabel Herbert Urner, will be published in hundreds of the smaller papers throughout the country.

Because of the popularity of the star, Ruth Roland, who played the leading roles in "Who Pays?" and "The Red Circle," the large following that Mabel Herbert Urner has won during the six years she has been writing for the greatest newspapers in the country, the strength of the story of "The Neglected Wife" and the appealing characters of the woman who, through carelessness, lost her husband's love and the other woman, who, through circumstance and misfortune, was forced to lead the life of "The Woman Alone," it is predicted by Pathe that "The Neglected Wife" serial will have a universal appeal. It is along lines entirely original in the serial field and enthusiastic reports have been received from all those who have seen the opening episode.

"THE NIGHT WORKERS" BEING SHOWN.

Trade showings of "The Night Workers," the next Essanay feature, are now in progress at all Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch offices. This production, featuring Marguerite Clayton and Jack Gardner, is receiving a strong pre-release booking, according to reports from K-E-S-E headquarters. It is receiving particular attention from exhibitors in small cities, where the fascination of a big city's night life, which the picture unfolds, has its strongest hold. Marguerite Clayton is said to have achieved the best portrayal of her screen career in the role of a little reporter. This picture also marks the debut of Jack Gardner into filmland. He is well known upon the musical comedy stage, having created the leading roles in "Madame Sherry," "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Belle of Mayfair" and Broadway's latest success, "Oh, Boy."

"The Night Workers" has a screen time of sixty-five minutes. It was written by J. Bradley Smollen and directed by J. Charles Haydon.

"THE HIGHWAY OF HOPE"—(Morosco).

Willard Mack's powerful story of the California gold mines, "The Highway of Hope," in which Kathlyn Williams and House Peters co-star, has been completed, by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and is scheduled for relase by Paramount on May 17 The story was prepared for the screen by Harvey Gates and the cast in. support of Miss Williams and Mr. Peters includes Jim Farley and Harry DeVere.

Willard Mack chose as the setting of his story a typical California mining town—the sort of "mushroom" municipality that sprang up over night in the gold fields when the pick of some lucky miner struck gold. In staging the production, the Morosco company was careful to select exactly this type of community as a background for the action, the company being sent to one of these deserted towns, the skeletons of many of which are still in existence.

FILMED SONGS FROM UNIVERSAL.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has prepared a series of songs illustrated on the motion picture screen. Arrangements have been made for the showing of current song successes and, while the song is being sung, the story that the lyrics tell will be acted on the screen in motion pictures. A plan has been adopted whereby the local music dealers, the exchanges and exhibitors may arrange singing contests.

Strong Universal Program

Week of May 14 Opens With a Five-Reel "Butterfly" Romance and Has Many Good Subjects.

WITH "The Phantom's Secret," a Butterfly, five reel feature of mystery and romance at its head, the program of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, for the week of May 14th, offers an unusually strong bill for the exhibitor. "The Phantom's Secret" was produced by Charles Swickard, from a scenario by J. G. Alexander, and Molly Malone, Hayward Mack, Mignon Anderson, with exceptionally strong support, have interesting roles.

The story has to do with the most dreaded and notorious crook in Paris, known to the police of two continents as "The Phantom," and whose ramifications carry him into many tight situations, and who in the solution of them resorts to underworld strategy of the most interesting sorts.

"To Oblige a Vampire," a Nester Comedy featuring Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, supported by Olive Adair, will also be released on May 14, and as the name implies, Lyons and Moran have opportunities to show what can be done to aid a vampirish dancer, who asks simply that a certain desperate character be dispatched.

In an effort to oblige, comedy situations follow rapidly on each other, and Lyons and Moran are at their best.

Universal's feature release for Tuesday, May 15th, is a Gold Seal, three reel Western drama, "The Honor of an Outlaw," featuring Harry Carey and Claire Du Brey. It was written and produced by F. A. Kelsey. It is a story of an outlaw, whose applied ethics work on two moral planes and who is appealed to in a desperate situation to save a girl who has befriended him when he was being carried under guard to the penitentiary. Carey has opportunities for dare-deviltry in riding and gunplay, and an excellent dramatic role of which he makes the most.

Prominent in the supporting cast are T. D. Crittenden, Fred Kelsey and Jack Leonard.

A Victor comedy, "Fat and Foolish," featuring Ed. Sedgwick and Belle Bennett is the other Universal release for May 15th.

On Wednesday, May 16, an L-KO two reel comedy, "A Good Little Bad Boy," featuring Phil Dunham, Lucille Hutton, Charles Inslee and Merta Sterling, will be released. This comedy, which was directed by Vin Moore, under the supervision of J. G. Blythestone, gives ample opportunity to each of the cast to create and share in many amusing situations which arise out of news concerning a $2,000,000 gold shipment.

The Universal Animated Weekly No. 72 is the other offering for May 16.

On Thursday, May 17, a Victor comedy appears, "Breaking the Family Strike," in which Matt Moore and Jane Gail are featured. It was written by H. J. Shepard and directed by Matt Moore. In the supporting cast are Margaret McRae and M. McGovern.

"The Gift of the Fairies," a Rex Juvenile comedy drama, with Babe Early and Elsie Albert, will complete the program for May 17.

On Friday, May 18, a Laemmle two reel drama, "Her Great Dilemma," featuring Louise Lovely and Lee Hill, with E. N. Wallack supporting in a strong role, is the principal offering. This interesting drama tells the story of a nurse whose love for a doctor prompts secrecy as to her antecedents. It was written by Emily Mae Davis, and was produced by Donald McDonald, from a scenariozation of the story by Charles J. Wilson, Jr.

In addition to Universal Screen Magazine, Issue No. 19, which contains many unique features, among them "A Miracle in Mud," is an animated cartoon by Willie Hopkins. A Big U Drama, "The Brand of Death" (one reel), will also be released on May 18.

Wallace Reid and Marguerite Fischer are featured in this interesting story of the Indian frontier.

A Bison two reel military drama, "Casey's Border Raid," is the principal offering for Saturday, May 19. It was produced by George Marshall from his own story, which was scenarioized by Charles J. Wilson, Jr. It is a comedy of the border in which Neal Hart and Janet Eastman are featured.

A Joker comedy, "The Last Scent" (one reel), featuring Gale Henry and William Franey, completes the program for this date.

On Sunday, May 20, a Powers split reel feature showing a comedy cartoon, "When Does a Hen Lay an Egg?" and a Dorsey Educational, "The River of Lost Souls," is scheduled along with an Imp two reel mystery drama, "The Case of Dr. Stanley," in which Hobart Henley is featured.

During the week of May 14 the tenth episode of Universal's mystery serial, "The Voice on the Wire," will be released. This episode carries along with all the tenseness, the suspense created by its predecessors, and the excellent acting of Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber is winning added laurels for them.

HOYT COMEDIES TO BE PICTURIZED.

The Charles Hoyt comedies have been picturized by Selig and will be released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay beginning May 28, when "A Hole in the Ground" will be offered. These comedies are in two reels and bear the following titles: "A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey," "A Night and a Day," "A Rag Baby," "A Contented Woman," "A Midnight Bell," "A Runaway Colt," "A Trip to Chinatown," "A Temperance Town" and "A Dog in the Manger."

The Selig-Polyscope Company, of Chicago, have been working on these Hoyt comedies several months, Mr. Selig having gathered together a strong and peculiarly adapted cast for them. Critics who have seen "A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey," "A Day and a Night" and "A Rag Baby" declare they measure up to 100 per cent pure comedy and will make a strong feature for theaters where a sincere effort is made to provide unusual entertainment for patrons.

ROLLICKING REELS IN ARBUCKLE'S "RECKLESS ROMEO."

Amusement-loving film fans who are accustomed to seeing Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle cavorting on the picture screen in the midst of whirling flour sacks and broken dishes or dodging motor cars which have run wild will have an opportunity to view him in a variation of his usual role—that of the spectator at one of his own comedies—when "The Reckless Romeo" is released—May 21.

In this, the second of the comedy two-reelers which have been made under the big comedian's own standard and which are released by Paramount, "Fatty" figures in the lens-light as one of the patrons in a Broadway motion picture house, where, all unsuspectingly, he has brought his family for a pleasant evening, only to find that an episode in his flirtatious career has been caught by an energetic cameraman and is being unreeled before the horrified eyes of his wife and his mother-in-law.

The theater scene in "The Reckless Romeo" is a faithful reproduction of the interior of one of New York's finest photoplay houses. In it is staged a fight between the big funmaker and Al St. John, the original Keystone cop, which promises to break all of "Fatty's" previous records when it comes to providing side-splitting laughter.

Those who have viewed the advance showings of "The Reckless Romeo" declare that the reproduction of the theater interior is one of the cleverest pieces of work ever shown in pictures.

The exteriors of the comedy were made in Palisades Park, the famous amusement resort on the Hudson.

LASKY SCHEDULES THREE PRODUCTIONS FOR PARAMOUNT IN JUNE.

Jesse L. Lasky has completed three productions to be released by Paramount during the month of June, starring Margaret Illington, Fannie Ward and Sessue Hayakawa. The literary talent represented in these three productions includes the well-known novelist Basil King, the celebrated playwright George Middleton, and such photoplay technicians as Beatrice C. De Mille, Leighton Osmun and Charles Maigne. Margaret Illington will appear in "The Inner Shrine," an adaptation of Basil King's well known novel. Fannie Ward will star in "Her Strange Wedding" and Sessue Hayakawa will appear in "The Jaguar's Claws."

"THE CRISIS" FOR CANADA.

What is said to be one of the largest prices that was ever paid for a picture was paid by the Superfeatures, Limited, of Canada for "The Crisis," a picturization of Winston Churchill's famous novel of the same name.

Charles Stevens, who represents the firm, purchased the production in his rapid, characteristic manner from M. E. Mazur, Eastern representative of the Sherman-Elliott Company, after viewing the picture at a private projection room. He expects to exploit the picture commensurate with its worth.

"Her Better Self" Finished

PAULINE FREDERICK'S next Famous Players-Paramount production, "Her Better Self," has been completed under the direction of Robert Vignola and the picture is scheduled for release by Paramount on May 21. It was for this picture that Mr. Vignola had an exact replica made of the Supreme Court, trial term part one, in the Criminal Courts Building. Thomas Meighan, who has done such notable work opposite Miss Frederick in her recent Famous Players pictures, is again in the leading role in this production. Others in the cast are Alice Hollister, Maude Turner Gordon, Charles Wellesley, Frank De Rheim and Armand Cortez.

The story of "Her Better Self" is one which differs radically from anything in which Pauline Frederick has ever appeared on the screen. It was written especially for Miss Frederick by Margaret Turnbull, and develops a new side of this versatile actress' ability.

In the opening scenes Miss Frederick is a society girl whose only thought is clothes and for the various entertainments which comprise that peculiar and illogical thing known as "Society." Because of her wealth she is pursued by a number of suitors, the favorite being Count Belloto, whose title, though unhampered by any wealth, makes him a most desirable acquisition in the mind of Vivian Tyler's mother.

LUNTZ TO MANAGE ART DRAMAS ON COAST.

Sol Lesser, who distributes Art Dramas Program for California, Arizona and Nevada, announces that he has appointed Charles I. Luntz as manager of this program for his territory.

Mr. Luntz has had much experience in the West. For the last five years he has been in the motion picture industry there, and he enjoys an enviable popularity among exhibitors. He has been associated with the Universal office in Los Angeles; he was manager of the Universal exchange in Phoenix, Arizona; manager of Bluebird Exchange in San Francisco, and of late traveling representative for Fox Film Corporation.

Notes of the Trade

SESSUE HAYAKAWA, Fritzie Brunette and one hundred and fifty Lasky players, under the guidance of Marshall Neilan, launched a peaceful invasion of Mexico by special train last week. The company will take a number of scenes in one of Mexico's border towns for Mr. Hayakawa's next picture, which shows him as a Mexican bandit.

The Cub Comedy Company has begun work on a picture dealing with the present war crisis entitled "Jerry Joins the Army," and showing the troubles of a short man who wants to fight for his country.

Winifred Allen will play the opposite role to Jack Devereaux in the Triangle comedy drama now in production at the Yonkers studio, under the supervision of Allan Dwan. William Riley Hatch, Frank Currier, Bert Starkey, Robert Crimmins and Georges Renavent have been engaged for parts in the same production.

Frank Williams, one of the first of the Keystone cameramen, is now with Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle at the studios of the Comique Film Corporation, 318 East 48th street, making the comedy two-reelers in which the big fun-maker will appear on the Paramount program. It was Williams who photographed Charley Chaplin's earliest pictures. "The Butcher Boy," first of the comedies to be made by Mr. Arbuckle since he formed his own company, is also his work.

Lou-Tellegen has completed his first production as a Lasky director, co-starring Louise Huff and Jack Pickford with Theodore Roberts in the supporting cast. Upon the completion of William H. Taylor's next picture, in which Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid are at present starring, he will direct these two in a picture to be staged at the Lasky studio.

Eugene Moore is directing the production, and the cast includes Philo McCullough, Harry Van Meter and Marion Warner.

Thomas F. Tracey, stage manager and actor, has joined the staff of the Triangle studio at Yonkers as assistant director to Albert Parker. Mr. Tracey will be remembered for his characterization of Julius Caesar with William Faversham, for his part with Francis Wilson in "The Bachelor's Baby," and as the one-armed soldier in "The Man of the Hour."

"Tours Around the World," the foreign scenic released through Mutual by Gaumont, is making a specialty of places which are of unusual interest to Americans because of war conditions.

Kitty Gordon's next World-Picture Brady-Made is called "The Beloved Adventuress," and is well under way at present in the Peerless studio, Fort Lee.

The West Indies pictures being released by Gaumont are being taken by Willard Van der Veer, with J. Norton Nellis as his assistant. They are now working in Trinidad. Pictures are being made both for "Reel Life" and "Tours Around the World."

With Herbert Rawlinson in the leading role and Alice Lake and Charles H. Mailes in the supporting cast, Director Jack Conway is making rapid progress at Universal City filming "Hands Up," a five-act feature photoplay written by George Bronson-Howard.

World-Pictures has secured four more French motion picture plays made by Louis Mercanton, director of Sarah Bernhardt in "Mothers of France," and played by the same remarkable company of supporting artists. The stars of these new photoplays are Susan Grandaise, affectionately termed "the sweetest girl in Europe," and Regina Badet, "the vampire of France." Both are rarely beautiful women and celebrated screen luminaries. The plays will be issued by Brady International Service, World-Pictures, and will go to World exhibitors at the same price as the regular program service.

Director W. W. Beaudine and the Universal Joker Company have completed a one-act comedy entitled "His Last Scent." The film play features Gale Henry and William Franey in the leading roles with Milburn Moranti in the supporting cast.

"God's Law and Man" is the title decided upon for the forthcoming Metro-Columbia feature screen version of Paul Trent's novel, "A Wife by Purchase," in which Viola Dana will be seen as a Hindoo girl. John H. Collins is directing this feature at the Jacksonville, Fla., winter studios of Metro Pictures Corporation.

Harry Carey, Universal Western actor, is being featured in a two-reel Western drama entitled "The Golden Bullet," which is being picturized by Fred A. Kelsey. The exterior scenes are being filmed at Newhall, north of Universal City.

Harold Ryerson, publicity man for Bornstein's, has gone out with the Naval Militia as an ensign.

Complete renovation of the grounds of the David Horsley studios at Los Angeles has been begun under direction of Norman Manning. New buildings are rising, stage spaces are being clothed with new diffusers, wardrobes and equipments are being overhauled and there is a general buzz of activity.

Director Rupert Julian is putting the final touches at Universal City upon his production, "A Dime's Worth of Philosophy," in which the principal parts are played by Julian, Mignon Anderson, Emory Johnson and Zoe Rae.

Theatre For Sale in Quebec City, Province of Quebec, Canada

A client of ours is ready to sell either—
(a) the controlling interest in a theatre company,
(b) or the whole concern.

This company is the X..... Theatre Company. Capital, $109,000.00, all subscribed and paid up. The controlling interest would be sold for about $180,000.00. The going concern would be sold for about $200,000.00. The buyer would have to take the responsibility of $70,000.00 debentures maturing in January 1920 and liable to be renewed wholly or in part. In other words the buyer would be responsible for either $250,000.00 (if he buys the controlling interest) or $270,000.00 (if he buys the whole business).

The theatre is one of the finest in America and is situated in Quebec city; adjoining and annexed to the theatre are a restaurant, a bar room, a tobacco shop and a few halls for lease.

Rough net profits yearly from $36,000.00 to $40,000.00 with prospects of a material increase.

The building can be enlarged easily; and an apartment house of 100 feet front by 40 feet could be built on same ground situated in the centre of the city.

Nova Scotia Assembly Passes Ticket Tax

Provides for Tax of One Cent on Every Ticket Costing Twenty-five Cents or Less —Two Cents for Higher Tickets—Children Exempted.

By F. F. Sully, The La Tour, St. John, N. B.

HALIFAX, N. S.—A bill providing for the taxation of theatergoers in Nova Scotia has just been passed by the House of Assembly. It places a tax of one cent on every ticket purchased at twenty-five cents or less, and a tax of two cents on all tickets more than twenty-five cents. Children are exempted. This law is a vast improvement from the exhibitors' standpoint over the one originally introduced by Premier Murray, which called for a twenty per cent tax. The tax on a ten-cent ticket would have been two cents, and on twenty-cent ticket four cents, graduating to fifty cents where a ten-cent tax would be imposed. It has not been definitely stated to the exhibitors when the new tax will become effective, but it is supposed that it will be in operation by the middle of May.

The problem of collecting the tax has been settled in a way that is most satisfactory to the exhibitors. All motion picture and theater owners will collect the tax at the time the ticket is sold, and at stated intervals make sworn statements to the chairman of the board of censors or the government itself as to the number of admission tickets sold at the box office. The full tax will then be turned over to the government. This arrangement greatly facilitates the handling of the money for the theater owners and eliminates the necessity of selling an extra ticket. In the original bill provision was made for a tax ticket to be put in a separate receptacle.

Lyceum at Sydney Opens.

Sydney, N. S.—Ed. Lynn, who is now running pictures to crowded houses in the Casino, is making arrangements for the opening at an early date of the Lyceum theater, which has been closed during the past winter. The policy for the first three weeks, according to Mr. Lynn's announcement, will be stock company.

Gave An Early Show for Night Workers.

Sydney Mines, N. S.—In order to meet the convenience of the several hundred coal miners who are on the night shifts in the Sydney mines, Joe Lieberman, when he was here with the war picture, ran a special performance at half past ten in the morning. As an experiment it proved a great success, and it is probable that the idea will be repeated when the next feature picture is brought here.

I. Sourkes Resigns Local Fox Management.

St. John, N. B.—Isadore Sourkes, who came to St. John about three months ago to succeed Carl M. Crawford as resident manager for the Fox Film, has resigned and returned to Montreal. Mr. Sourkes was on the road from the Montreal office for more than a year for the Fox people, and previous to that was manager of the Mid-Way. No permanent successor has yet been named. The office is now in charge of one of the company representatives from New York.

Bert Silberstein Now in Texas.

St. John, N. B.—Bert Silberstein, formerly road man for the local office of the Famous Players, and recently transferred to the Montreal office of the company, has resigned, and is now in Texas, where it is understood he intends to affiliate with one of the large motion picture concerns doing business there.

Exhibitor Honored for Patriotic Work.

St. John, N. B.—An honor that he prizes very highly has just been conferred on Walter H. Golding, manager of the Imperial theater, by Mrs. Hugh McKay, representing the Loyalist Chapter, Independent Order Daughters of the Empire, and Miss Alice Fairweather, editor of the motion picture section of the St. John Standard, representing the Young Women's Patriotic Association. In recognition of his services in connection with patriotic causes, and on the tenth anniversary of the entry of the Keith enterprises in St. John, he was presented with a life membership in Canadian Red Cross. The ladies of the societies presented a bouquet of roses to Mrs. Golding.

Frauley Bros. of the Imperial Theater Dissolve.

St. George, N. B.—Frauley Brothers, who have for several years conducted the Imperial theater, have dissolved their interests; the younger brother, A. D. Frauley, continuing the business of the house, taking in partnership Richard Doyle, the new firm to be known as Frauley and Doyle. It is understood that the elder brother, George, who was recently elected an alderman, has been obliged to give his time to other business matters. The policy of the house will be continued along the same lines of service and programme.

Local Business Notes.

St. John, N. B.—F. G. Spencer has contracted for the "Mystery of the Double Cross" serial at the Lyric theater. Mr. Spencer is now running in his St. John houses "Pearl of the Army" and "Patria."

R. G. March, resident manager for the Specialty Film Import, Limited, handling the Pathe features, announces that J. G. B. Metzler of Halifax has contracted for the Gold Rooster plays. He also says that the two-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedies, which are to be released one a month for the next year, will soon come into this territory. The first, "Lonesome Luke's Lively Life," will be seen here shortly. Exhibitors who take the series are contracting for the twelve, covering a period of a year.

St. John, N. B.—J. H. Bustin, of Windsor, one of the most prominent exhibitors along the North Shore, was in the city recently.

St. John, N. B.—Mitchell S. Bernstein, manager for the Famous Players, has returned from a trip through the provinces and announces that N. J. Wootten, of Perth, N. B., who conducts the opera house, C. W. Palmer of the Maple Leaf, Parrsboro, N. S., and D. B. Jordan of McAdam Junction, N. B., have contracted for the Paramount service of two releases a week. Joe Lieberman, who has been on the road with the Tank picture for the past few months, has returned to the home office for a short stay.

St. John, Finds Daylight Saving Awkward

City on Petition Abandons Scheme Until Idea Becomes National—Business Hampered With Distant Points Through Misunderstandings.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—St. John bears the distinction of being the only community in British North America to abandon the daylight saving scheme after giving it a year's trial. The agitation that surrounded the suspension of the measure until it could be made a national project was led to a large degree by the motion picture exhibitors, who found that it greatly handicapped and injured their business. New Brunswick time is one hour ahead of the prevailing standard in the United States and by setting the clock ahead another hour it placed St. John two hours ahead of American standard time and telegrams and bookings coming here under normally close schedule were ofttimes found to be late and losses resulted. In the shipment of films, with the picture houses running on local time and the trains on Atlantic standard, great inconvenience and frequently financial losses were experienced. Big features and popular regular programme releases were booked close, and brief delays in train service many times resulted in St. John theaters being without films for performances, and the issuing of return checks was necessitated.

Under the daylight saving standard the picture houses opened at seven o'clock, which was in reality six o'clock by the sun. The first show was naturally out at 7.30 and the second shortly after nine. The sun would just be setting over the western horizon at this time, and no lights would be burning. With such opportunities for merry-making and excursions into the country, the people naturally abandoned the evening picture performances, preferring to remain out in the sunlight and light. Such attractions of course had its reaction on the moving picture industry, and the exhibitors were among those who took up the crusade against the renewal of the scheme this year. Petitions circulated in the city resulted in 5,038 names being secured against the renewal of the scheme and 3,525 in favor of it. The common council, after considerable pressure being brought to bear, finally voted to rescind the measure until such time as it can be nationalized.

Boston News Letter.

Mabel Taliaferro Guest of Park Theater.

BOSTON, MASS.—Mabel Taliaferro and the entire cast of the "Woman Thou Gavest Me," playing at the Shubert theater, Boston, were guests of the management of the Park theater, where Miss Taliaferro's picture, "A Magdalene of the Hills," is being shown this week. The entire party had a most enjoyable time and stayed throughout the entire program.

Sherman Film Releasing "The Crisis."

Boston, Mass.—The Sherman Film Releasing Company are now located in Boston, at the new Little building, 80 Boylston street, and from this office they will distribute Wm. N. Selig's film dramatization of Winston Churchill's famous novel "The Crisis." Harry Cohen, an ex-Boston newspaper man, is handling the press work for the picture and is renewing many of his old acquaintances here. "The Crisis" will open at the Majestic theater on Monday, May 14.

Sherman Film Offices Open.

Boston, Mass.—The Sherman Film Releasing company, handling the New England rights for "The Crisis," have opened up offices in the new building, corner of Washington and Boylston streets, Boston, suits 853-854. This is a new departure as far as film circles in Boston are concerned, as the above is the first important motion picture concern in Boston to locate outside of the so-called film district.

Willis F. Jackson, for two years with "The Birth of a Nation," in the state of Iowa, is general manager.

Samuel Hasse Opens Office in Boston.

Boston, Mass.—Samuel Hasse, formerly assistant manager of the Boston Vitagraph branch, has opened a film office of his own at 16 Piedmont street, Boston, and is having great success with his initial enterprise, "America Is Ready," having booked it in over twenty-five New England houses.

D. R. Segal Is Booker for Globe Feature.

Boston, Mass.—D. R. Segal, formerly of the Philadelphia Mutual office, is now working as booker for the Globe Feature Film of Boston.

Federal Feature Film Corp. Formed.

Boston, Mass.—The Supreme Feature Film Company and the Feature Film Corporation have been consolidated and are now located in offices at 16 Piedmont street, Boston. Samuel Grand is the manager of this new combine and it will be known as the Federal Feature Film Corporation. Mr. Grand has secured the rights for distributing in New England "The Woman Who Dared" and also the New England state rights for "Warning," "The Folly of Sin" and a number of other features.

Old Soldiers Thrill a Maine Audience

Civil War Veterans March to Colonial Theater at Melfast and Bring Back an Old Time Patriotic Stir to Big Mass Meeting.

By John P. Flanagan, 15 Park View Ave., Bangor, Me.

BELFAST, ME.—Veterans of the Civil War, some 20 odd in number, shouldered their old Springfields with fixed bayonets a few nights ago at Belfast and marched to the Colonial theater, where they were one of the big features of a patriotic mass meeting. Marching down to the front, they went through their manual of arms, under the command of Hon. Lucius C. Morse of Liberty, a veteran of the 26th Maine, and in a manner they showed they had not forgotten the drill days of '61. The theater rang with cheers and it was a happy night for the veterans.

Pine Tree Exhibitors Show Patriotism.

Portland, Me.—In addition to gladly showing the recruiting slides for the various branches of the service, and in patriotic acknowledgment of the debt to its fighting men under which every country rests when at war, instructions have been issued by the management of the Elm theater, Portland, to its attendants and ushers that men in the uniform of the National Guard, the Navy and the Army are hereafter to be accorded special recognition in this theater.

America is at war, and from the first the theaters of Maine have thrown themselves into the work of doing their bit with patriotic fervor. All Portland theaters are showing the recruiting slides, are using the American flag on their screens, flashing messages to soldiers and sailors who may be in their audiences, and cooperating with the Portland Committee of Public Safety in every way.

Bangor, Me.—Because of ill health, L. D. Mathis, proprietor of the Bowlodrome, announces that he will be unable to open the moving picture theater on the upper floor of the Bowlodrome building, as he planned. Mr. Mathis, as recently stated in the Moving Picture World, has been conducting a skating rink on the top floor of the Bowlodrome, and when it closed for the season a few weeks ago decided that he would open a photoplay house. Since that time a nervous ailment that has been developing for some months has become so serious that physicians tell him it is absolutely out of the question for him to start any new enterprise at the present time. There is a possibility that Mr. Mathis will open a theater next fall if his health improves sufficiently.

Summer Picture Theaters Getting Ready

Augusta, Me.—Signs of summer are to be seen among the warm weather photoplay houses of Maine, which are now being redecorated in preparation for a busy season. These theaters close in the winter and reopen in May and June each year. Manager S. W. Patterson and son of the Tallwood Inn, Maranacook, will open in the near future, as will houses at Northport and other summer resorts on the Maine coast.

Guy Roberts Buys the Graphic.

Milbridge, Me.—The Graphic theater at Milbridge has been sold to Guy Roberts by the former manager, Mr. Sawyer. Mr. Roberts has booked "The Shielding Shadow," Pathe News, and two single reelers from Manager Corbett of the Bangor Pathe exchange.

Local Business Notes.

Bangor, Me.—V. H. Hoddup of the New York Pathe office, was in Bangor the other day installing a new sales system at the Bangor Pathe office.

Corinna, Me.—Manager F. B. Shaw, of the Shaw theater, Corinna, Me., has taken on General Film Service from the Bangor office.

Brownsville Jct., Me.—H. T. Dillon, proprietor of the Majestic theater at Brownsville Jct., was a visitor to Bangor this week and engaged General Film Service from the Bangor office.

Bangor, Me.—"The Girl from Frisco" has been booked by the Bangor General Film branch to S. A. Buck, proprietor of the Orland moving picture house.

Victor Hotlitz of Danforth is now using General Film service.

The Graphic theater of Bangor reports that the Chaplin comedies supplied by General Film are going well.

Joseph Allen, the enterprising Mount Vernon exhibitor, is using General Film service.

A. L. Hamer, proprietor of Neighborhood hall, Seal Harbor, is using General Film service from Bangor.

Five Essanay Chaplin comedies have been ordered by Proprietor J. J. Hone of Presque Isle.

Nathan Ross, Maine representative of the Selznick Co., was a visitor to Bangor this week. He reports that his company is featuring throughout Maine just now "The Price She Paid," "The Easiest Way," both starring Clara Kimball Young, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," Nazimova in "War Brides" and plays starring Violet Dana and Dorothy Bernard. A naval preparedness photoplay, "Guard Old Glory," is shortly to be released. It will be shown at the Park theater, Bangor, for the first time on May 30 and 31.

New England Business Notes.

Boston, Mass.—Metro's new super-feature "The Call of Her People," featuring Ethel Barrymore, was shown to the trade at the Park theater Friday, April 27. Over three hundred exhibitors and film men were present. "The Masque of Life" will have its first showing in Boston at the Orpheum theater on Monday, April 30. This is one of the many big state right pictures purchased by Louis B. Mayer for New England. The "Deemster" is another of Mr. Mayer's properties in the state right field. Clara Kimball Young in "The Easiest Way" opened at the Modern theater for a two weeks' stay Monday, April 30.

Is a Great Help

Capital City Feels Scarcity of Employes

Exchange Men and Exhibitors Find it Hard to Get Help, for Uncle Sam Has Need of Many Hands, and the Work is Attractive.

Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Local exchange managers are having a great deal of difficulty in securing competent employes. It seems that the various Government departments have had to largely increase their clerical forces and an invitation was extended broadcast to all whose training would fit them for the hundreds of openings to take the Civil Service examination therefor.

The work in the exchanges is largely clerical and in most cases the employes are highly skilled, salaries in this branch, like in all others of the manufacturing and distributing ends, are large and there is a sort of fascination about the business which attracts many good people. But Uncle Sam's offer is even more seductive; the pay is even larger, the hours of labor are much shorter and the young men and women are jumping at the chances afforded them of getting on his payroll.

Nearly all of the larger exchanges are hit to a greater or less degree, but the desertions from the film business is not confined entirely to the clerical force, for rewinders and inspectors, shipping clerks and porters are all finding something to do in the employ of the Government. Washington at the best is inhabited very largely by Government clerks and when the call goes forth as in this case for additional help there are very few people left from which outside concerns can draw.

Baltimore is only forty miles from Washington and it is said that this city has been hit in much the same way. Its residents can readily commute to Washington, returning home each evening. At the Capital City wages have again gone up since the commencement of the war and the rewinders and inspectors are getting $2 and $3 per week more than they were the first of the year.

The exhibitors also have found changed labor conditions for they have been called upon to sign new contracts with the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union, Local No. 224, which contains an entirely new wage scale, as follows:

"Eight hours of operating for any one man shall constitute a day's maximum of work. One operator on any regular evening run of not more than five hours, not less than $18 per week, including Sunday matinee, if run; extra matinees, 50 cents per hour. All work in houses running eight hours or more per day shall be paid for at a flat rate of 45 cents per hour. All single performances given outside of regular moving picture theaters, not less than $5 each performance. Road operators governed by International laws of I. A. T. S. E., at $45 per week. Any house not a regular motion picture theater, running matinee and evening performances of motion picture, $40 per week, one operator; two operators, $70 per week. Road productions governed by I. A. laws. Operators working vaudeville or burlesque houses, matinee and evening performances as added attraction, motion pictures, not less than $25 per week. Carrying films, posters, etc., to and from the exchanges shall not be considered as 'operating,' and shall be subject to a separate arrangement between the operator and the theater management."

It is also provided that exhibitors or their managers must give operators a week's notice before discharging them, or a week's pay in lieu thereof; an operator is also compelled to give a full week's notice of resignation or forfeit a week's pay.

Another clause provides that "operators shall not be required, except in the case of emergency, to work more than six days each week—that is, shall be entitled to one day off each week—and his relief operator shall be acceptable to the management and shall be paid by the regular operator, not less than the regular operator's wages for the day's work, and the day of relief shall be optional with the management.

"Operators on an evening's run at open air parks, not less than $15 per week, rainy days not deducted. This does not apply when a manager takes an operator from a theater to work in a park under the same management."

New Jersey Film News

By Jacob J. Kalter, 25 Branford Place, Newark, N. J.

New House in Fairview.

FAIRVIEW, N. J.—Vincenzo Pampollano is having plans prepared for the erection of a two-story brick moving picture theater to contain a dwelling and store. The theater structure will be built upon the northeast corner of Day and Hamilton avenues, Fairview. Philip H. Diemer, of 128 Humboldt street, Union Hill, architect, has drawn plans which involve the expenditure of $11,000. Work on the new edifice has already started, and the show house will be ready for occupancy in the early fall.

Mollie King Appears Here.

Newark, N. J.—Mollie King, star of the Pathe serial, "The Mystery of the Double Cross," appeared personally April 30 at the Proctor's Palace theater, 116 Market street. Miss King told very entertainingly of her work in the film studios, and her talk was enthusiastically received by the Newark populace.

Colored Motion Pictures.

East Orange, N. J.—Percy D. Brewster, of 65 Prospect place, has secured a patent for a new method for color cinematography.

Robinson-Burns Incorporate.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Robinson-Burns Amusement Company has been incorporated here with an authorized capitalization of $125,000. H. DeGroot Robinson, of 596 Riverside drive, New York, is recorded as registered agent. The incorporators are H. DeGroot Robinson, Edward H. Burns and M. Heycock. The concern owns several moving picture houses, and anticipates the construction of others.

"Honor System" at Strand.

Newark, N. J.—The big Fox feature, "The Honor System," was shown during the week of April 30 at the Strand theater, 120 Market street. Manager John B. McNally introduced a novel means of advertising the picture. A reproduction of the Sing Sing prison bars was built at the entrance to the theater. Upon the bars was a small sign containing the legend "Visiting hours 2:15, 5:00 and 8:15." A warden and attendants completed the ballyhoo. The picture did an exceptionally good business.

Pictures in South Orange School.

Hillside Park Has Pictures.

Belleville, N. J.—Hillside Park, an open amusement park on Washington avenue, has opened for the season. A moving picture theater has been opened in connection with the park.

E. A. Brown Boosting "Crisis."

Newark, N. J.—E. A. Brown, whose likeness is herewith reproduced, is a comparative newcomer to this city. Mr. Brown came here several months ago, and immediately became connected with the Crisis Film Corporation, which controls "The Crisis."

In 1909 Mr. Brown handled big features in Canada and the western part of the United States. This was the first traveling picture company in the country. Coming back in 1912 to Toronto, Mr. Brown purchased the Eastern Canadian rights for the productions of the International and sold the same afterwards to the Globe Feature Film Co.

E. A. Brown.

The biggest event in Mr. Brown's young life came in 1913 when he became film broker in Toronto for every film exchange in Canada. Practically every film production and every poster passed through his hands before reaching the exhibitor. During this time he handled foreign productions, discontinuing his enterprises in 1916.

Mr. Brown talks interestingly of the bygone days, and to get first-hand facts of the early days of the film business, just get Brown in a reminiscent mood Since his connection as traveling representative of the "Crisis," Mr. Brown has booked that feature in houses that had never before shown big stuff. He has been exceedingly successful in his line of endeavor, and has made a host of friends in this city.

Perth Amboy Incorporation.

Perth Amboy, N. J.—The Wilbur Amusement Company has been incorporated here with Jacob M. Klein as registered agent. The office of the concern is at 117 Smith street. The company, which is capitalized at $50,000, will control theaters. The incorporators are David Snaper, Sol R. Kelsey and Philip Klivian. The papers of incorporation were filed April 23.

Strand Has a New Policy.

Newark, N. J.—After a successful run of big pictures, Manager John B. McNally of the Strand theater, is about to inaugurate a new policy of double features. In line with this new policy two big features will be shown during the week of May 7. These are the great Artcraft picture, "In Again—Out Again," and the Selig production, "Garden of Allah."

Keeney's Shows Features.

Newark, N. J.—The Keeney theater, Branford place and Halsey street, which hitherto showed vaudeville, has begun a policy of exhibiting high class film productions. Essanay's "Skinner's Bubble" was the attraction May 1-2, while Jane Gail was featured in "The Liars," May 3, 4 and 5.

Metro Feature at Goodwin.

Newark, N. J.—Ethel Barrymore, starring in the Metro feature, "The Call of Her People," was the attraction at the Goodwin theater during the entire week of April 29. Mrs. L. H. Webbe, the enterprising manageress of the theater, is evidently succeeding in her avowed intention of obtaining nothing but the best attractions for her cozy little playhouse.

R. S. Clark Reports Big.

Newark, N. J.—Robert S. Clark, who has recently returned to the sales force of the Bitagraph company, reports exceptional business during the past few weeks. "Bobby" has many friends in the exhibiting end of the game, and is doing an exceedingly fine business.

Rutherford Scene of "In Again, Out Again."

Rutherford, N. J.—While Douglas Fairbanks was at work on "In Again, Out Again," getting outdoor scenes in and near Rutherford, N. J., J. T. Collins, owner of the Criterion theater, the leading local moving picture house, had the pleasure of introducing Fairbanks and his director,

John Emerson, to Mayor Black of the city. A short topical reel was made to celebrate the visit of the famous leading man and this was shown for several days so that the neighborhood could have a chance to see itself in the films supporting an unusually strong cast. Manager G. R. Alyea of the Criterion paid the World office a visit last week and we removed from his collection of kodak prints for reproduction here a snapshot of Fairbanks, Mayor Black and Mr. Collins in front of the theater.

Mr. Alyea is a new man in the film business, but is thoroughly at home in Rutherford, since he was born and reared there. This gives him an enviable position as friend and neighbor to his patrons. Rutherford is a commuter town, only nine miles from New York City, and has 8,000 inhabitants. The patrons know what's what in theatrical entertainments and will sit through only good shows. No vampire stuff goes in Rutherford. The Criterion is showing Paramount, Triangle and Art Craft at 5 and 10 cents in the matinee shows and 10 cents in the evenings. Two or three days in the week the price is raised to 15 cents for special offerings.

Alterations at Civilization.

Newark, N. J.—Due to the extraordinary increase of business brought about by the purchasing of several of the largest state right pictures in the world, the Civilization Film corporation, which until now used but one-half of the second floor of the Strand theater building, has found it necessary to utilize the remaining half, and also part of the third floor. Under the direction of Manager Lynn S. Card, the work of enlarging and altering has gone on very smoothly. The new offices are now completely furnished.

Reid Service Incorporated.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Reid Motion Picture Service Corporation has been formed here with a capitalization of $125,000. The agent named in the papers is George J. Stillman, and the registered office is given as 582 Newark avenue. The incorporators are Robert H. Reid, George J. Stillman and William F. Edwards. The papers of incorporation were filed April 14 at Trenton. The purpose of the new concern is to operate a moving picture business.

"The Whip" at Strand.

Newark, N. J.—During the week of April 23 the Drury Lane melodrama "The Whip" was the attraction. The feature was well received here. The big Fox feature "The Honor System" is booked for the week of April 30.

Kansas State Censors in New Quarters

Establishment Has Been Satisfactorily Arranged—Seats Provided for All—New Board is Likely to Conduct Viewing Fairly.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Building, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, KAN.—The Kansas Board of Motion Picture Review entered its new quarters in Kansas City, Kan., May 1. The establishment has been arranged in a fairly satisfactory manner, with a booth for the picture machine outside the main building, and sufficient seating capacity to care for the board and the representatives of the exchanges.

The significance of the later point is recognized when it is mentioned that at Topeka there were several seats in the review room, usually occupied—and often there were many visitors standing around watching the show.

The women who constitute the board stand high in the state, and will run their own affairs without interference and, it is believed, in a fair manner. The present prospects are that there will be smooth sailing. The chairman of the board has already intimated that in films cigarette smoking, drinking, loose conduct and similar matters will be cut to a minimum, though not necesarily entirely eliminated if the story is otherwise acceptable.

Exhibitors to Use Navy League Slides.

Hutchinson, Kan.—The moving picture exhibitors of Kansas are doing their bit in the building up of the army and navy, as was demonstrated at the Hutchinson convention. L. J. Smyth, a special representative of the Navy League, who is helping recruit in Kansas, was in Hutchinson during the convention, and by special courtesy of President Glamann appeared before the meeting. Mr. Smyth said that the league was willing to provide slides for exhibitors that would use them.

"Some of us are using the slides now," said Mr. Glamann. He asked for a show of hands, and besides himself there were eight or ten who had been assisting in recruiting in this way. A resolution was adopted following Mr. Smyth's talk, and the league made arrangements whereby Mr. Smyth would get into direct touch with all exhibitors who would show the slides—which meant all at the convention, and a large number who were not present.

The demonstration that met Mr. Smyth gave him great encouragement in his work—so much, in fact, that he got the leading citizens of Hutchinson, two hours afterward, into a local organization, and was securing enlistments in that city before the exhibitors left. He had also secured the personal assistance of many exhibitors for the work in their towns when he reached them.

Organize New Distributing Company.

Kansas City, Mo.—B. S. Davis, formerly manager for the Universal at Grand Rapids, Mich., and A. L. Kahn, formerly assistant manager for the Universal at Chicago, have organized the Quality Feature Service Company, with headquarters in the Gloyd building, Kansas City. They are specializing in pictures for the small towns, and are making good headway.

Fine New Theater at McPherson.

McPherson, Kan.—C. E. Oelrich, McPherson, Kan., is building a $30,000 theater, which will open late in May. This is a fine theater for a town of 3,000. But McPherson is quite a town! It has two colleges. Outside the residents whose children are going to school, most of the people are retired farmers, who have come to town to enjoy life. There is said to be an automobile in McPherson county for every four people—including men, women and children. Mr. Oelrich's present house seats 330; the new one will seat 635.

New Exhibitors and Changes in Kansas.

Wichita, Kan.—Arthur Ford and E. G. Olson now control the Colonial. They have arranged the stage for scenic effects, where sets will be arranged to suit each picture. A 7-piece orchestra will be maintained, only high class pictures will be run, and the charge of 15 cents established. Mr. Ford has been manager of the Marple, a popular price theater two years, and will retain his interest in that house.

Arma, Kan.—Joe Girard is remodeling his theater here.

Argentine, Kan.—The Photoplay theater has been hit rather hard by the call of soldiers to arms, more than 20 of the regular patrons among the young men being now at camp. Mrs. C. E. Miles manager, says she has not yet cut the services because of the reduction in patronage, but rather is seeking a way to get trade elsewhere.

Sterling, Kan.—A Hoffman is remodeling and redecorating the Empire theater, and will soon take over the management of it himself. He is now booking Paramount and Greater Vitagraph, and will go after business aggressively.

Topeka, Kan.—The Cozy theater, 718 Kansas avenue has been taken over by the management of the Orpheum and both will be controlled by G. L. Hooper, the present manager of the Orpheum.

Moundridge, Kan.—The Pastime theater has opened.

El Dorado, Kan.—J. M. Owens has been granted permission by the city commissioners to erect an airdome.

Nekoma, Kan.—An opera house is now under contruction here.

Sterling, Kan.—Joe Peters has started work on the remodeling of part of the Hodge building for a moving picture theater. Mr. Peters formerly operated the Empire.

New Theaters in Oklahoma.

Cement, Okla.—Cement's picture show opened to the public April 18.

Medford, Okla.—Robert Rooney has taken over the management of the Royal theater and he and Mrs. Rooney are now in charge.

Tulsa, Okla.—W. M. Smith plans the erection of 80x150 foot brick and concrete theater building to cost about $150,000.

Durant, Okla.—Erection of the Liberty theater will begin soon.

Idabel, Okla.—The Lyric theater has been opened by Frank Slaughter, manager.

El Paso, Tex.—R. F. Deyo is building a moving picture theater to cost $2,000.

Missouri Theaters and Changes.

Callao, Mo.—T. A. Erwin has opened his moving picture show here.

Oregon, Mo.—Bert Hamilton is installing a moving picture theater in a building formerly used for a pool hall.

Special Aids to Boost "Witching Hour."

Kansas City, Mo.—"The Witching Hour" is getting a good start in the Kansas City district, where Arthur Marowitz, president of the Imperial Feature Film Co., is pushing it with many special devices. The most striking and effective of the boosts for the picture, which exhibitors are using wherever possible, is the outfit provided for Blind Justice on horseback. Mr. Marowitz has provided a specially made sword, scales, uniform, wig; hip blanket for the horse—and is sending the outfit in cases where a white horse can be found for the rider. Stress is laid on the color of the horse, and in some instances the outfit is not shipped because such a horse is not available.

Pittsburgh Filmdom News Last Week

Weiland Exchange Moves to New Quarters — Exhibitor Meets Tragic Death— Notes and Changes Among Local Distributors and Exhibitors.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6104 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Weiland Film Co. Moves.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The Weiland Film Company has moved from 115 Fourth avenue to new and larger quarters at 210 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, where the entire second floor is occupied. The exchange has been fitted up in a complete and attractive manner, having large film vaults, and is otherwise arranged to meet all requirements of the law. The Weiland company has been enjoying an active business, and the more adequate space will aid in handling the steady increase. Mr. Weiland states that he is planning to again buy films outright.

David Snowden Dies in Auto Accident.

Roaring Springs, Pa.—Exhibitors and members of the film trade were shocked to learn of the tragic death of David Snowden, owner of the Roaring Springs theater, Roaring Springs, Pa., on April 29. Mr. Snowden was killed when his automobile ran from the county highway near Hollidaysburg. The driver of the machine was also killed and two other occupants seriously injured.

East Liberty, Pa.—A largely attended trade showing of Metro's elaborate production, "The Call of Her People," featuring Ethel Barrymore, was held at the Regent theater, East Liberty, Sunday afternoon, April 29. Much favorable comment was made on the film, which is the first of a series of seven-reel de luxe photodramas to be put out by Metro in which popular books and plays will be picturized by eminent directors and enacted by casts of well-known stars. "The Call of Her People" opened here with a three-day run at the Liberty theater May 7.

Cameraphone Puts Up Prices.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Cameraphone theater, 347 Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, which was one of the few remaining "nickel" houses in the downtown section, has changed its policy and will hereafter run pictures two days or more and charge 10 cents admission. The first week's program under the new management consists of Artcraft, Bluebird and Pathe Gold Roosters.

Rex Theater Has Been Made Prettier.

East Liberty, Pa.—The Rex theater, East Liberty, has been handsomely remodeled during the past few weeks without any interruption to business. The seating arrangement is greatly improved by the addition of another wide aisle, and the screen has been moved back. A new ventilation system is also being installed, which will make the house very comfortable during the summer months.

T. P. Kelly Back on the Job.

Erie, Pa.—T. P. Kelly, the well-known Pathe roadman in the Erie, Pa., territory, has just returned to his work after a two weeks' illness. His many friends were glad to know of his recovery and gave him a hearty welcome.

The Sheridan Square theater, the attractive moving picture and vaudeville house of the East End, Pittsburgh, has contracted for the new Pathe serial, "The Mystery of the Double Cross," featuring Mollie King.

Sharpsburg Picture House Being Remodeled.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Sharpsburg Cameraphone theater, Pittsburgh, is undergoing an extensive remodeling process, and indications are that it will be one of the most attractive houses in its locality. William Murray, the owner, states that high-class feature pictures will be continued, and he is preparing to care for an increased patronage this summer.

Penn View Theater Sold.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Penn View theater, Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, has been sold by Mrs. Aronchilds to Mr. Harris, who is making a number of improvements in the house. It will hereafter be known as the Nemo theater.

Mike Manos Buys Half Interest in the Grand.

Greensburg, Pa.—Mike Manos, who operates the Strand theater, Grensburg, Pa., has purchased half interest in the Grand theater, North Pennsylvania avenue, that place, from Mr. Petz.

T. W. Albert Buys Rankin Theater.

Rankin, Pa.—The Grand theater, Rankin, Pa., has been sold by Albert King to T. W. Albert.

Co-operative Plan at New Pickwick.

BALTIMORE, MD.—G. Horton Gaffney, proprietor of the New Pickwick theater, 115 North Howard street, has worked out a unique co-operative ticket selling and advertising proposition for his theater, which, he states, is progressing successfully. It was planned as a venture, at first, but the idea has met with the approval of all who have tried it. This is the substance: An advertising solicitor was employed by Mr. Gaffney who went around and interviewed several of the largest department, furniture, and shoe stores and one lunch room with the idea that they buy tickets for the New Pickwick in lots of 10,000, which are good for 60 days, and then give them out as premiums to their customers if they buy over a certain amount of goods. This plan was immediately grasped by the merchants as a good scheme. These tickets are good only on Wednesday and Friday nights or on any morning except Saturday. Thus, having the tickets restricted to certain days and limiting the time, Mr. Gaffney finds that the plan works on a good paying basis without lowering the standard of the house.

American Standard in New Offices.

Baltimore, Md.—The American Standard Film Service, of which Arthur D. Gans is the manager, has now changed its location from 151 to 141 North Gay street. "This change was effected," states Mr. Gans, "owing to more space being needed. While we had only the first floor at our old location, we now have the four floors of the entire building at our disposal."

Fields Takes Over Leader.

Baltimore, Md.—As mentioned in this paper two weeks ago as a possibility, J. B. Fields has now taken over the management of the Leader theater, 248 South Broadway, after negotiations having been completed with the owners, Pearce and Scheck. New innovations are under contemplation at this writing by Mr. Fields, among them being the presentation of talking pictures. A cabaret singer, Carol Hazeloff, has been engaged to render selections.

Seligman's Live Wire Work.

Baltimore, Md.—B. F. Seligman, manager of the Crescent theater, 1110-12 South Charles street, has been working in some live wire attraction methods in the operation of this house recently and is getting results. On Easter Monday he gave away 1,000 colored Easter eggs, one to every child who visited the show during the matinee. On Saturday morning, April 28, he gave as souvenirs to the kiddies little paper-pad moving pictures of Charlie Chaplin doing a stunt. Those you work by crisping the edges. In the line of patriotism he now has Gilbert Tennant, a local singer, render the national anthem on Saturdays and Mondays, with William Miller, formerly of Shanley's restaurant in New York City, at the piano.

Harry Lewy Aids Baltimore Fund.

Baltimore, Md.—Again the motion picture comes to the front in acting as a colleague to Uncle Sam and charity. This time it is used in making a forceful visualized plea to the public of this city through the medium of the screen for the hearty backing of the $1,000,000 Baltimore Fund by the people. And the big man behind the motion picture gun, in this instance, is Harry Lewy, co-proprietor of the Great Wizard theater, who not only wrote the scenario, but directed and photographed the picture as well. Mr. Lewy is a pioneer in the film game, and knows it from A to Z. He produced the subject for the people conducting the campaign.

Harry Lewy.

This film brings out the purposes of the fund in a forceful way, showing: first, a soldier leaving home and the fund caring for his dependent family; second, the wounded being cared for by the Red Cross; and, third, the bettering of conditions in the slums. At the end a close-up of a box is shown into which many hands are depositing checks and coins. "The idea being," stated Mr. Lewy, "to leave one with the desire to reach down into one's pocket and give to the fund." The Wizard, Strand and Parkway theaters will show the picture and it is expected that all the others will fall in line.

Censor Board Statistics.

Baltimore, Md.—Very recently, reported statistics concerning the financial status of the Maryland Censor Board have come to light and it seems that not only is that official department of the state government making money, but an increase is expected.

According to the statement of Chairman Charles E. Harper, the state treasury was enriched a month ago by $3,500, which was turned over by this board, and when the June, 1917, settlemetn is made the cash balance of $4,000, which is now in the coffers of the Censor Board will be very materially strengthened by a good many more "iron men."

It is understood that not only had the board paid over a surplus, but it has met all its own expenses and equipped its office out of the receipts from the fees, and the state has not spent a cent on its account.

But when it comes down to a matter of values given and received, we cannot help but think that the state is on the receiving end of the line both pro and con. And the film industry pays the bill—or does the public?

French Envoys Invited to See "Joan the Woman."

Frederick C. Schanberger, manager of the Auditorium theater, sent a telegram on Monday night, April 30, to His Excellency, Monsieur Jusseraud, French Ambassador, Washington, D. C., inviting General Joffre and the visiting French Commission to view "Joan the Woman."

Westfall Aids Y. M. C. A. Drive.

Hagerstown, Md.—On Sunday, April 29, through the courtesy of Earnest Westfall, manager of the Maryland theater in this city, a large mass meeting was held in this house to assist in the ten-day campaign to obtain a Y. M. C. A. here.

Hazleton Theater Burns.

Hazleton, Pa.—On April 26, in this city, a vicious blaze, which is supposed to have started in the wings of the Palace theater, in this city, destroyed this house completely and another large building, causing an estimated loss of $200,000

Red Cross Benefit.

Reisterstown, Md.—On the evening of Thursday, April 26, an entertainment, consisting of moving pictures and other features, was given at DeVeese's Hall, in this city, under the auspices of the Reistertown Red Cross Society.

Baltimore Business Notes.

Nat Glasser, Baltimore representative for Sidney B. Lust, handling Selznick productions, returned to Baltimore on Saturday, April 28, after having had a successful trip through Virginia and West Virginia. Mr. Glasser is a live wire and always has a good word for his friends, the Moving Picture World included.

A rousing patriotic mass meeting was held at the Academy on Sunday, April 29, through the courtesy of Manager Harry A. Henkel.

Monday, May 14, has been set definitely by Charles E. and John T. Ford for the initial presentation of D. W. Griffith's super spectacle "Intolerance" at Ford's opera house.

Moving pictures were shown at a patriotic meeting held in the Casino at Mt. Washington on the evening of Monday, April 30.

PHILADELPHIA ITEMS.

Local Theater Notes of Interest.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Manager Earle Forte of the Baltimore theater had the pleasure of dedicating a large and complete orchestral organ on Monday last. The new instrument has been installed at considerable expense to supply the sort of music which Mr. Forte thinks high class programs demand.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Germantown theater celebrated its seventh anniversary this week. Dr. Walter Steumpfig, the manager of this popular house, arranged a special program to commemorate the event.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Universal's aquatic spectacle, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," is booked for an engagement at the Forrest theater this week. This fine visualization of Jules Verne's famous novel bids fair to attract a deal of attention, judging by the advance sale. It is not usual to show pictures at the Forrest, which is the largest and finest of the several theaters in this city, under the direction of Samuel F. Nixon, and is usually devoted to showing important musical comedies. It is therefore something of a triumph for the picture to be booked at the house, even in the late spring season. Abe L. Einstein is in charge of the publicity and is planning a big campaign, which will doubtless put the picture over in fine style.

Philadelphia, Pa.—E. Warren Smith, of the Chestnut Street theater, has plunged once more into the lecture field, and is making a tour of Pennsylvania with a picture called "Fighting with the Allies." During the past month he states that he has met with gratifying success, owing to the timeliness of his subject.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John Smith, a popular exhibitor of Tacony, recently celebrated his fifth anniversary as an exhibitor here. Being a progresive theater owner, he has recently installed a $6,000 photoplayer in his 500-seat house.

Film of Early Motion Picture Experiments

From F. V. Armato, 114 N. Salford Street, West Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—An interesting record of the original experiments in taking motion pictures is in course of preparation from records in the possession of the University of Pennsylvania. George E. Nietsche, Recorder of the University, with the assistance of Edwin Faber, has recently and literally dug up a mass of from twenty to twenty-five thousand original photographs and miscellaneous apparatus, which bear on the original experiments of Eadweard Murbridge, conducted under the auspices of the university thirty-two years ago.

The Bureau of Commercial Economics of Washington, D. C., which is affiliated with various important educational institutions of the world and which circulates films of the industrial processes of the United States as well as of Great Britain, France and other countries, is now engaged in making modern, standard motion picture films of the original Murbridge picture made two generations ago. From the scenario prepared by Mr. Neitsche, there is now in course of construction a modern motion picture which will show how Murbridge accurately and scientifically worked out the principle which made the modern motion picture possible, and will visualize the various methods, laboratories and apparatus used by him in perfecting his experiments.

First Runs at Local Theaters.

Philadelphia, Pa.—First run photoplays played in general to good business at the principal photoplay houses this week. Marie Doro in "Heart's Desire" and Margaret Illington divided the week at the Stanley.

At the Arcadia, Douglas Fairbanks played a full week's engagement with his new Artcraft production, "In Again—Out Again."

The Palace featured Theodore Roberts and Kathlyn Williams in "The Cost of Hatred."

At the Victoria, William Farnum in "American Methods" divided the week with Viola Dana in "God's Law" and Max Linder's latest comedy, "Max in a Taxi," played a three days' run.

The Strand showed Carlyle Blackwell in "The Page Mystery" for the first time here.

"Joan the Woman," at the Chestnut Street opera house, will remain a fortnight longer, it is announced.

Ideal Exchange Begins Release of Wilcox Films.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Robert Etris, manager of the Philadelphia Ideal Film exchange, has started to release the series of plays based on poems of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. These consist of six photoplays visualized and produced by the Warner corporation of New York. The Ideal exchange occupies an entire building here, and on the third floor have installed a Power's cleaning plant for renovating and softening films. This department is in charge of an expert machinist, Albert Teitel, who was formerly employed by the General Film.

E. Anderson Is Making Friends.

Philadelphia, Pa.—E. Anderson, publicity manager of the local Triangle exchange, is meeting with much success in this territory. His knowledge of the game and his tactful methods have enabled him to be of great assistance to several local managers who were desirous of improving the appearance and pulling power of their programs, press matter and general advance advertising.

Exhibitor Stiefel to Have a Fine Theater

Philadelphia, Pa.—M. Stiefel, one of the picture pioneers of this city and the owner of several motion picture houses, is busy making repairs and rebuilding his Grand theater at 7th and Snyder avenue. Mr. Stiefel plans an elaborate and beautifully decorated interior, and the house promises to contain everything essential to an up-to-date house seating 1,200. A $12,000 Kimball organ, it is announced, will be installed. A ten-cent admission price will be maintained, and at this rate Mr. Stiefel expects to show all the latest pictures.

Stanley Theater Marks Third Anniversary.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Stanley theater, whose history may be said to be synonymous with that of feature films here, celebrated its third anniversary last week. In the brief period that the Stanley has been catering to amusement devotees, Manager Stanley V. Mastbaum has made a record for providing entertainment of superior sort. Musical programs have have been a potent portion of the entertainment. The innovation inaugurated by Mr. Mastbaum has been emulated by other managers. Mr. Mastbaum further realized that by catering to the comfort of his patrons much could be accomplished. Consequently a system of ventilation was another object of special care.

Stanley V. Mastbaum.

Courteous attendance, a scrupulously clean auditorium and foyer and attractive decorations were details receiving consideration.

The local impresario of motion pictures, and despite the present national character of his activities, Mr. Mastbaum will always be that to Philadelphians, is as usual, optimistic about the future of the industry.

"People think we have reached the limit of big things in photoplays," he said, "but, mark my words, the next six months will produce dramas approaching perfection of the art as well as quality in the themes. I prophesy that before the first of next year there will be a veritable revelation in photoplay attractions.

"So confident of the future am I that I am completing plans for the erection of the new theater at Nineteenth and Market streets. These plans will be finished in a short time. It is worth mentioning that since we first gave thought to the construction of this new house upon which we had intended to spend $1,000,000, there has been an advance in the prices of structural materials of about one-fourth.

Buffalo Exhibitors See No Slump Ahead

City's Industrial Prosperity Will Probably Be Heightened by the War Activities—Expect Film Business This Summer to Improve.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 152 N. Elmwood Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Buffalo exhibitors are scouring the horizon for signs of a financial slump and for anything else that might put a crimp in their box office receipts, but so far they have found no cause for alarm. Conditions here during these stirring days are marked by a shortage of men and a superabundance of work. It is believed this will be the rule until the close of the worldwide conflict.

Buffalo's present industrial prosperity promises to be stimulated still greater when this city receives its share of the government's seven billion dollars to be spent for munitions and various other war requirements. From all these features theater and exchange managers are inclined to draw the conclusion that the film business will improve, rather than suffer any marked decline this season. When the lessons of economy in handling foodstuffs are really learned by Buffalonians in accordance with the advice of the President, it is said that they will be sure to have as much money for moving picture shows as in times of peace.

Sunday Show to Open in Hornell.

Hornell, N. Y.—The Common Council of Hornell, N. Y., permitted the moving picture theaters of that city to open last Sunday. Sunday shows in Hornell had been prohibited for the past six months. A condition of the opening was that the exhibitors submit all Sunday pictures to a local board of censors. An agreement to this effect was signed by all but one of the show men. The censors say that "the pictures must be clean and free from features that might tend to corrupt the morals of the young." The theaters were first closed by Mayor Edward J. Davis of Hornell after the exhibition of a "vampire" picture one Sunday evening. The action was prompted by the circulation of a petition among the people of the city. The present decision to permit them to reopen is brought about by more petitions, which are signed by fully 75 per cent of the population of the city.

Many Big Features at Good Prices.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Buffalo film fans are spending their money freely on big feature productions this week. The Star theater is playing Geraldine Farrar in "Joan the Woman," at 25 and 50 cents. The Family is showing "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," prices 15 and 25 cents. The Teck is finishing its third and last week with "A Daughter of the Gods." The prices for this show range from 25 cents to $1.00. Not far from the Teck is the New theater, a five-cent house. Manager Jones of this theater showed considerable enterprise by booking Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter," while the same film star was at the Teck in "A Daughter of the Gods." Manager Jones proved himself a true showman and left nothing undone in the way of advertising his offering. As a result he did a record business.

Wurliter Company Buys Farm to Till

Martinsville, N. Y.—The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co. of Martinsville, N. Y., are among the leaders in a patriotic gardening campaign in Western New York. The company has bought a large farm at the junction of the Niagara Falls boulevard and Ruie road and will develop the land this summer. The concern will plant every available acre of land that it owns in that section. Fifty per cent. more planting will be done by the company this year than in 1916. The produce will be sold to the Wurlitzer employes at less than market price, as in past years.

Industrial Boom at Lockport.

Lockport, N. Y., is having an industrial boom, which is pleasing to the exhibitors there and indicates prosperity for the film business. The Lockport Chamber of Commerce is backing a movement for the construction of upward of 300 new homes to accommodate the city's increased population.

Local Notes of the Trade.

Buffalo, N. Y.—E. M. Saunders, general manager of the Metro, called Saturday on C. A. Taylor, Buffalo manager of that company.

J. E. McAuley is a visitor in Buffalo. He is doing successful missionary work in the interests of the Motiograph moving picture machine.

Paul Fenyvessey, formerly identified with Buffalo theaters, is covering a part of New York state and Pennsylvania for the Universal programme. At present he is specializing on the new Butterfly pictures.

Cleveland Screen Club to Hold Election.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Cleveland Screen Club held its regular monthly business meeting May 2. Such a statement does not mean a great deal without an explanation that at this meeting the club will be one year old and nominations for new officers for the second year will be in order.

The meeting was held in the club rooms in the evening, this being a departure from the usual course, as the meetings always have been held in the hotel where the luncheons were given.

There was a little jollification after the meeting in the form of a smoker and lunch in celebration of the first milestone of the club.

Cleveland, O.—W. O. Penn is now located in Cleveland, covering northern Ohio for Paramount. Maurice Geiger, assistant manager of Artcraft, Pittsburgh office, is covering the same territory, making his headquarters while in Cleveland at Hotel Olmsted.

The largest staff of experts in all departments makes the MOVING PICTURE WORLD the one paper in the trade that fully fills the requirements of every reader.

Screen Club Denounces Cinema Club Plan

Published Weekly List of Approved Films Would Be Apt to Be Unjust—Has a Prepublicity Aspect That Is Harmful.

From M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland.

CLEVELAND. — The Cleveland Screen club, while not wishing to oppose the general work of the women's clubs of the city, takes exception to certain proposed methods of recommending certain films. To this end at a recent meeting the following resolution was adopted and a copy of it sent to each daily newspaper:

"Resolved, That the Cleveland Screen club shall request the newspapers not to print recommendations of the newly organized Cinema club, whose purpose, it has been announced, is to issue a weekly bulletin recommending pictures to be released the following week, for these reasons:

"That Cinema club is composed of club women, whose recommendations should be no more respected than the likes and dislikes of any other organization. Furthermore, it is hardly possible for these club women to see all the pictures to be released each week in time to recommend them in their paper, and, in addition, the public may think that since certain pictures are not recommended they are condemned.

"If the newspapers print the recommendations of these women, it will be no more or less than a new form of censorship, for the absence of any recommendation for any certain picture would in the minds of thousands of readers of the newspapers be construed to mean that the women are against it.

"Further, the newspapers themselves are reviewing the new pictures each week, and the public evidently is guided by these reviews."

Bolasny Bros. Buy Temple Theater.

Cleveland.—Ed. C. Flanigan and associates have disposed of the Temple theater, East 55th street, Cleveland, to Bolasny Brothers, who own the building.

"Battleship" Nelson Finds a "Meal Ticket."

Cleveland.—One of the pioneers and most popular of film roadmen in Ohio is C. R. Nelson-Morris, representing the Cleveland Bluebird office. He has been in the business for nearly fifteen years and perhaps knows more faces of exhibitors than any other roadman in northern Ohio, because his work always has been in that territory.

Recently "Battleship," as he is known to the trade, became more popular when he played a game of billiards for a supper, which was proposed by one of his customers, A. W. Thomas, of the Arris theater, Mansfield, Ohio. Mr. Thomas is a cue shark, and although Mr. Morris is not, he beat Thomas to a frazzle. Morris says he is the only man who ever beat Thomas, and figures that in the future when he makes Mansfield he won't have to pay for any meals.

Morris Safier Representing the Masterpiece.

Cleveland, O.—Morris Safier, better known in the amusement business as "Max Stern," has been appointed Northern Ohio representative for the Masterpiece Film attractions, according to announcement of President Leon D. Netter. His headquarters will be in Cleveland, at Hotel Statler, where exhibitors can reach him by phone, telegraph, mail or a personal call.

J. H. Simpson Buys Plaza Theater.

Cleveland, O.—J. H. Simpson, owner of the Ideal theater, has bought from A. Dessauer the Plaza theater, at East 55th street and Payne avenue. Mr. Simpson will make several improvements and will personally manage the house, which he leased for a period of ten years.

Cleveland Business Notes.

Cleveland, O.—Coincident with the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Opera House, Cleveland, the Fox Corp. has reissued "The Nigger," and it was shown to a big business, week of April 22, at the Orpheum theater, East 9th street.

And down in the Haymarket district the little Alvin theater turned them away for several days with a reissue entitled "In the Clutches of the Ku Klux Klan."

Cleveland, O.—The largest banner ever put up in Cleveland for a picture theater is on the building at East 9th street and Chester avenue, heralding the engagement of Douglas Fairbanks in "In Again—Out Again" at the Mall and Alhambra theaters.

MORE NEW JERSEY NOTES.

Lee Gainsborg Buys State Rights.

Newark, N. J.—Lee Gainsborg, erstwhile manager of the Universal Film's local office, has severed his connections with that concern, and will in the future devote his entire time to the handling of big state rights attractions. Mr. Gainsborg, in an announcement mailed last week, imparts the knowledge that he has obtained as his initial production "The Sin Woman." The feature has just been completed by the Backer Film Corporation. Mr. Gainsborg has opened headquarters at 50 Proctor theatre building, 116 Market street. He also reports that he is handling "God's Law," which was formerly "People Versus John Doe."

De Duxe Changes Hands.

Newark, N. J.—The De Luxe theater, 404 South Orange avenue, is now under the house management of Eugene Steinhart. A new company, comprising Mr. Steinhart, Milton Hirshfield, and Lillian C. Hodes, has been incorporated for the purpose of buying the house. The corporate name of the new concern is the Popular Amusement Company, with registered office at 763 Broad street. Milton M. Unger is named as registered agent, and the authorized capital is placed at $10,000. The firm is permitted to conduct an amusement business.

TORONTO ITEMS.

W. L. Joy Still Owns Beaver Theater.

West Toronto, Ont.—The Moving Picture World has received a note from W. L. Joy, owner of the Beaver theater, Toronto, calling our attention to a slip in an item printed in our issue of April 28, which stated that the Beaver was owned by R. S. Marvin. Mr. Joy built the theater and still is owner of it, though it is leased to an operating company under the management of H. F. Brown. The house is following a policy of straight pictures and is doing a fair business. The Beaver theater is situated at 1784 Dundas street.

York Theater Shows 48 Reels a Week.

Toronto.—A record for the number of reels screened in a picture house is probably being made by the York theater, Toronto, where the policy of changing the program every week day has been in effect. Forty-eight reels per week are being used, the nightly program consisting of a five-reel feature, two-reel episode of a serial and a one-reel comedy or news weekly. The weather was very unpropitious during the first two weeks that the new schedule was in effect, so that a real test has not yet been made of the arrangement.

Will Fight Poor Business With Better Shows.

Toronto.—Manager Roberts of the Regent theater told the writer recently that it is his intention to put on just as good shows during the coming summer months as he can arrange. Roberts declares that he believes that it is poor policy to reduce the standard of pictures in a house just because there is the prospect of a falling off in attendance. Manager Roberts is already planning to stage big attractions, with appropriate accompaniment, during the hot weather and he hopes to hold his patronage in this manner.

Dan McKinnon Takes North Bay Theater.

North Bay, Ont.—Dan McKinnon has taken over the moving picture theater at North Bay, Ontario, which was formerly operated by the Griffin Amusement company of Toronto. He has arranged for Universal Service.

W. H. Teeple With U. Staff.

Toronto.—W. H. Teeple formerly with the Mutual, has been added to the Universal road staff. He will cover a portion of the Ontario territory.

Governing Ontario Film Shows

New Rules of Chief Provincial Inspector Forbid Speeding Up of Films to Clear House—Films Must Not Be Cut After Censors Have Passed on Them—No Woman May Hereafter Be Licensed As Operator.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard Street, East, Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, ONTARIO—Ontario moving picture exhibitors have been presented by Mr. Robert C. Newman, chief provincial inspector, with a most surprising assortment of changes to the regulations governing the operation and maintenance of moving picture theaters within the province. Favorable comment has been expressed in Toronto film circles, however, regarding the new regulations, and it is believed that they will improve conditions.

Speed Limit on Projection.

One of the requirements prohibits the speeding of pictures in order to change the crowd quickly. In announcing the amendments, Mr. Newman drew attention to the manner in which some exhibitors practice various methods by which to shorten the time of a performance. Henceforth the projection machine operator must not run a film faster than sixty-five feet per minute, or at the rate of one 1,000-foot reel in fifteen minutes. This speed limit is also intended to reduce the fire risk through the jumping or jamming of a film while the projection machine is being operated. Exceeding the speed limit will mean the imposition of a severe penalty, Inspector Newman promises.

Film Must Not Be Shortened.

Another prohibits the cutting of a subject after it has passed the censor board. This has been done for various reasons, it is declared, particularly to shorten the length of a show. Mr. Newman states that in one case which came to his attention recently a 7,000-foot subject had been cut to 800 feet after it had been censored. In the opinion of Mr. Newman this spoiled the story and the people did not get their money's worth. He has, therefore, decreed that exchange managers or exhibitors are not to do their own censoring.

No Women Operators Allowed.

Although there has been a serious shortage of men in Canada, one of the new rules forbids the granting of licenses to women operators because of fire risk. The few who have been licensed so far will be permitted to continue their trade, however.

Exchange managers or owners of films who wish to appeal from the decision of the Ontario Board of Censors will be required to do so within thirty days from the date of rejection by the board. A signed statement must accompany the appeal to the effect that no alterations or cuts have been made in the condemned subject since it was viewed by the censor board, otherwise the picture in question will not be reviewed by the Board of Appeal.

Mr. Newman also promises that the license fee for theaters in towns of less than 1,500 population will be reduced, as the present yearly rate of $75 is almost prohibitive. The license year terminates at the end of May and the fee in question will probably be reduced before the start of the new year.

Ben T. Rogers Made Fox Manager.

Toronto.—Ben T. Rogers, formerly of New York and until recently assistant manager of the Toronto Fox branch, has been appointed manager of the local Fox office in succession to Mitchell Granby, who has sustained a nervous breakdown. Granby has been [illegible] easily in the Wellesley hospital here, it has been reported.

The local Fox office is located in handsome new headquarters in the Hermant building, 15 Wilton avenue, and the first run of Fox pictures has been booked at Loew's Yonge Street theater for many months.

R. S. Marvin After Camp Borden Theater

Toronto.—R. S. Marvin, formerly manager of the Strand, Toronto, has been making quite a success of his Canadian Topical Review, a news weekly devoted to Canadian events. Six prints of the Review are now being released through Vitagraph offices in the Dominion weekly. Mr. LaRue, formerly of the Paramount, New York, is now assisting Marvin locally.

Marvin recently opened his Strand theater at Camp Borden, Ontario, where Canadian overseas soldiers are being trained. He is also re-opening his summer theater at Angus, Ontario, which is the nearest town to the camp.

W. J. Stewart Goes to Superfeatures, Ltd.

Toronto.—W. J. Stewart has resigned the management of the Casino theater, Ottawa, to become special Western representative of Superfeatures, Limited, Toronto, Canadian owners of several state-right features, including "The Whip." Mr. Stewart has already gone to Vancouver, it is announced. The head of Superfeatures, Limited, is Charles Stevens and Mr. Stewart was formerly associated with Mr. Stevens in theatrical enterprises.

"The Whip" was given its initial public showing in Toronto at the Grand opera house for the nine days starting May 9. It has already played a number of the larger cities around Ontario with excellent results.

James Crang Building New Theater.

Toronto.—James Crang, 906 St. Clair avenue, Toronto, has started the construction of a new moving picture theater on Oakwood avenue, Toronto, which will cost $26,000 when completed. The new building will be of brick and steel construction, 85 feet wide and 150 feet deep. A considerable portion of the work is being done under the personal direction and supervision of Mr. Crang.

Geo. Vaughn Leases London House for Five Years.

London, Ont.—George Vaughan has succeeded Bill Stewart at the Princess theater, London, Ont., having leased the house for a term of five years. Stewart has decided to devote all his attention to the Patricia theater, which is London's latest picture house. Vaughan has booked Bluebird Features for the Princess.

Regal Film Notes.

Toronto.—Charles Burman, of Regal Films, Limited, World Film distributors, has just made a tour of Nova Scotia, where the exhibitors, he reports, are cooperating in every way possible to improve conditions.

N. L. Nathanson, director of the Regal Films, Limited, has returned from an extensive trip through the Canadian West. He declares that the new offices of the company west of Toronto are nicely established and a good share of business is being obtained.

James Travis Leaves Essanay.

Toronto.—James Travis, special representative in Canada for Max Linder comedies, has severed his connection with the Essanay Company and is no longer associated with Mr. Cooper in the local office of the K-E-S-E.

Ohio Censors Watch All War Films Closely

Will Have No Unpatriotic Pictures or Scenes That Would Tend to Dampen Enthusiasm or Diminish Recruiting.

From Kenneth C. Crain, 307 1st Nat. Bk., Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O.—One of the most practical and popular rulings which has been made by the Ohio Board of Censors in a long time is that which is designed to eliminate the exhibition in the state of pictures which would have a tendency to diminish patriotism or hamper recruiting for the Army and Navy. Of course, the opinion of the censors has a good deal to do with this, and some pictures have been held up which their producers do not think should be branded as in this class.

Mrs. Maude Miller Murray, a member of the board, explains that many pictures passed before this country entered the war were permitted to go through because to eliminate them would have been in a sense un-neutral, but that now that the country is in the war, any picture tending to diminish enthusiasm and cut down recruiting should not be shown. Another angle of the fact is that the United States is now one of the Allies is that some of the anti-Japanese material used in "Patria," the great Pathe-International serial, is felt to be objectionable, and many of the subtitles and some scenes have been eliminated by the Ohio censors in order to soften this feature as much as possible. [Secretary Lansing, it is reported, has passed "Patria" with certain of these eliminations.] All pictures dealing with the war or with warlike subjects are scrutinized with special care since the United States entered the conflict, in order that harmful matter may not be permitted to pass through, and the manufacturers and film exchanges are cooperating heartily with the board in this aim.

Farrar's "Joan" Begins Its Cincinnati Run.

Cincinnati, O.—Cincinnati's first look at the great Lasky spectacle featuring Geraldine Farrar, "Joan the Woman," came on May 6, the picture beginning an engagement at the Grand opera house following the seven weeks' run of "The Birth of a Nation." The latter picture finished with houses as large as those attracted in its first week, and had it not been for arrangements for subsequent bookings Manager Havlin believes that the pictures could have been kept at the Grand all summer. "Joan the Woman" was a worthy successor, however, and the fame of its big runs in Eastern cities and the popularity of the star accounted for the big houses which greeted its opening, and presage a long run. J. Hesser Walraven, director of publicity for the picture, made all arrangements for the run the week before.

"The Crisis" Is In High Favor.

Cincinnati, O.—The timeliness of "The Crisis" has proved to be one of the strong points of the film version of the Winston Churchill drama during its run at the Lyric theater. Manager Houck had as his guests at one performance the officers of the First and Third Ohio Regiments, which are stationed in Cincinnati, while the historical value of the piece was recognized in the large attendance at a special children's matinee one Saturday morning. Prices for the attraction are lower than those which started the season's initial moving picture production at the Lyric, "A Daughter of the Gods," and this has helped attendance materially.

Edward T. Lux Takes a Bride.

Cincinnati, O.—Edward T. Lux, formerly manager of the Universal exchange and of the Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., and more recently engaged in the film business in New York, returning to Cincinnati not long ago to take up state-rights work, was married on April 28 to Miss Helen Gomersall, of Cincinnati. Mr. Lux intends to remain in Cincinnati indefinitely, and has quarters in the Gerke building, where he is conducting his film business.

"The Eagle's Wings" Liked in Dayton.

Dayton, O.—"The Eagle's Wings," a Bluebird production of special timeliness and interest on account of the fact that it features the conversion of industrial plants in the munition factories, ran two weeks at the Majestic, with prices raised to 25 and 50 cents, instead of the usual schedule. One reason for the success of the picture in Dayton was that many large munitions plants, with thousands of workers, are operating in the city, and the feature naturally had special interest for those employed in these plants.

Two New Film Exchanges Open.

Cincinnati, O.—Two new film exchanges have been added to Cincinnati's already long list of distributors. The Metro organization has opened a distributing office, in charge of J. H. Skirball, who has been covering the Cincinnati territory for several years, traveling out of Pittsburgh. He will handle Cincinnati and its suburbs, distributing all Metro releases, including "The Great Secret" and other Bushman-Bayne pictures, and such current releases as "The Call of Her People," the new picture featuring Ethel Barrymore. The new Metro office is at 302 Strand building, in which several exchanges have their quarters. At the same address an office for the productions of Louis Selznick, Inc., has been opened, in charge of M. Lebensburger, for the first four weeks. Mr. Lebensberger is vice-president and secretary of the Selznick company, and at the end of his stay in Cincinnati will turn the office over to Gus Muller, who is well known to exhibitors in this territory.

Feels Safe in Contracting, Sight Unseen, for Films.

Piqua, O.—Manager H. W. Kress, of May's opera house, took the original and unusual step of appearing before audiences at his theater and making a plain, straightforward talk about pictures and censorship recently, on account of the criticism which has been made by several Piqua organizations of pictures shown there. Mr. Kress pointed out that the board of censors has proved itself to be strict in its rulings, for the most part, and that all pictures coming to him and other exhibitors have been carefully scrutinized at Columbus, so that he feels that his patrons are sufficiently protected to warrant him in contracting "sight unseen." The applause of the large crowds who heard Mr. Kress indicated their approval of his attitude.

Youngstown, O.—The management of the Hippodrome has made a decided hit by a ceremony which has become a part of each performance. A handsome American flag is lowered from the arch above the stage as the orchestra plays "The Star Spangled Banner," and many of the audience join in singing the national anthem, with cheers from the rest.

Memphis Exhibitors Continue Sunday Shows

Fourteen Exhibitors Arrested for Violating Blue Law Are Not Prosecuted by Grand Jury—Theaters Will Not Accept Bullying.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The fourteen moving picture theater managers who opened their houses to the public on Sunday, April 22, and were arrested for violating the mayor's orders, were assessed individual fines of $50 in the City Court, and bound over to the Shelby County Grand Jury by City Judge Bates. The Grand Jury failed to indict the show owners, and they proceeded to reopen their houses on Sunday, April 30, with the same result. Following their second arrest by the chief of police last Sunday, the cases were held over on the city docket until the middle of the week, and it is reported that steps will be taken by the mayor and city officials to close the houses on Sunday through the means of a chancery injunction.

The theaters continued to remain open following the formal action of arrest, and showed to crowded houses the remainder of the afternoon and night. The managers would have it understood that they do not intend to be bullied, but propose to fight the proposition to a finish. Attorney Ralph Davis is representing the theater men, and will use every means within his power to allow the houses to continue Sunday operation, as was the case before the Pastors' Association became actively engaged in a campaign to close the amusement places on Sunday. The result of the second trial in the city court is not known at the time of this writing, but will be explained in the next issue.

Orpheum to Run All Summer.

Memphis, Tenn.—It has been decided by the management that the Orpheum, combination vaudeville and picture house, will not be closed during the summer months, as has been the custom in the past, but will remain running on full time. Arrangements have been made whereby after the close of the regular season feature moving pictures will be shown, together with a few acts of vaudeville, this schedule to go into effect on May 7. The theater is regularly controlled by the Orpheum Circuit, but will be under the personal supervision of Manager Arthur Lane under the summer plan, who has become allied with other interests to carry out this policy. The Orpheum is undergoing extensive interior decorations, and will be put in such shape as to provide every possible convenience for its patrons during the warm weather. The fact of this house, which is one of the leading theaters of Memphis, remaining open the year round is but another indication of the splendid business conditions in Tennessee's largest city.

Governor Rye Views "Civilization."

Nashville, Tenn.—Governor Tom. C. Rye and staff were guests of the Knickerbocker theater on Tuesday evening, April 24, while the Ince feature "Civilization" was being shown. The Governor attended the theater with full military escort, and occupied a box decorated with the national colors. Fred Grange, from the Jacksonville, Fla., office of the All-Star Features Company, accompanied the picture to Nashville, where it enjoyed a most successful run of three days.

Kaufman Gets New Series.

Memphis, Tenn.—Kaufman Specials has just contracted for the new Flora Finch series of comedies. Manager A. H. Kaufman states that bookings are showing splendid progress, and the pictures bid fair to become a leader in his territory. A number of feature rights have also been secured by this exchange, including "The Unwritten Law," "The Common Law," etc.

Tennessee News Topics.

Memphis, Tenn.—The contract to erect a one-story theater for Sam Zerilla has been awarded to F. A. Cory, of Memphis, to be constructed of brick.

Memphis, Tenn.—Beginning with the week of April 23, the policy at Loew's Lyceum, picture and vaudeville house, has been to change program semi-weekly, instead of once a week, as in the past.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Albert theater is being remodeled into a factory building after having served many years among the leading amusement centers of the city.

"Nation" Wrangle in Alabama City.

Albany, Ala.—At a recent meeting of the City Council it was unanimously voted to bar the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" in this city, which was booked for showing at a local theater. This action was taken, it is claimed, because of fear that race prejudice would be incited at a time when all classes of the American people should be united in harmonious relationship on account of the international situation. Notwithstanding this ruling, the management proceeded to run this show in accordance with original announcements, resulting in a clash between theater men and municipal authorities, the outcome of which has not been finally determined.

Censorship in Kentucky Dead Till 1918

Bill for Censorship Disguised as Tax Measure in Legislature Dies at Close of Special Session—Would Have Been Unconstitutional.

Ohio Valley News Service Correspondence 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The recently introduced censorship bill for moving picture theaters in General Assembly in the form of a taxation measure to gain revenue for the state was lost in the shuffle and died a well-merited death at the close of the special session for considering taxation. This meeting was called for the express purpose of framing new tax laws, and lasted sixty days. No other business was to be considered, but a censorship bill in the form of a tax producer was introduced, and was reported favorably by the committee to which it had been referred. Exhibitors stated at the time that, as the bill was framed principally for censorship and would only be self-supporting through the placing of an unreasonable reel tax, it would stand small chance of passing and would undoubtedly prove unconstitutional. In order to pay the salaries of three persons connected with the proposed board and still show revenue for the state, it would have been necessary to charge a reel inspection that could not possibly become effective, it is said. However, exhibitors were delighted with the fact that the matter got no further, and will have no further legislative troubles until the 1918 session of the General Assembly, when it is expected that further censorship bills will be introduced.

Death of C. F. Taylor in Buffalo, N. Y.

Louisville, Ky.—Charles F. Taylor, former manager of the Gayety theater of Louisville, who left here about two years ago, died in Buffalo, N. Y., on April 28 following an illness of four months. His wife and three sisters are living in Louisville. Mr. Taylor was 53 years of age.

Sylvester Dinelli Dies.

Winchester, Ky.—Sylvester Dinelli, 57 years old, owner and operator of the Winchester opera house, died on April 28 following an illness of eighteen months of diabetes. Mr. Dinelli was born in Luca, Tuscany, Italy, and came to this country in 1874.

Kentucky Notes of the Film Trade.

Lexington, Ky.—Miss Christine Mayo, the moving picture star, who is traveling through Kentucky and appearing in a number of theaters, aided a movement of the Lexington Kentucky women, who have started a campaign to get more men to enlist.

Shepherdsville, Ky.—The Masonic Temple theater has closed its picture shows for the present on account of the failure of the Shepherdsville Electric Light Co. to supply current.

Louisville, Ky.—The Majestic Amusement Co. has filed amended articles of incorporation under which the company's power is extended so that it may hold stock in other domestic or foreign corporations. The amendment was signed by John Marshall, Charles H. Nohmer, George M. Clark and L. J. Dittmar.

Majestic Theater Does Good Business at 15 Cents.

Louisville, Ky.—The increase in admission to fifteen cents by the Majestic Amusement Co. is working smoothly, and the house is making the best showing in its career, according to Manager Dittmar. Reports to the effect that the company might increase its price to twenty-five cents have no foundation, according to Manager Dittmar.

Teach Children to Like Good Motion Pictures.

Lexington, Ky.—M. A. Cassidy, Superintendent of the Public Schools, at a recent meeting of the principals of the various Lexington schools, issued an appeal in which he called on the teachers to endeavor to cultivate the pupils' education and taste for moving pictures in the same way that they had responded in cultivating a taste for better grade books a few years ago, when the country was flooded with cheap trash. Mr. Cassidy said in part: "Now an even greater and more destructive evil than bad books is upon us. It is the trashy, vulgar, improbable motion picture. No greater menace to childhood and impressionable youth is extant. The motion picture is an impression upon the eye, and an appeal that is much more fascinating than the printed word. Very naturally, children like pictures. In pictures the action and life-like personages render them more fascinating, and so character, good or bad, is formed."

Mr. Cassidy asked that the teachers keep in touch with what was being shown and instruct the children in the kind of pictures to be seen and those not acceptable. He stated that one of the drawbacks was that names meant little in pictures, and it was impossible to obtain any accurate idea of the picture until it was shown, and stated that a law should be passed forcing exhibitors to supply advance notices through the press. This is generally done, but apparently Mr. Cassidy has overlooked the fact.

Indiscriminate Economy Is Unpatriotic

Louisville Trade Organizations Work Together to Keep Public from Putting Brakes on Necessary Business—Would Affect Workers and Wages.

Louisville, Ky.—Local trade associations have been busily engaged during the past few days in an effort in the interest of patriotism to checkmate a movement toward indiscriminate public economy and have adopted numerous resolutions which have been printed in local papers. Such a movement, while emanating from good motives, is destructive rather than constructive in its effect, and it is figured that such a misguided policy of conservatism would not only hamper the operations of the nation, but would throw out of employment hundreds of thousands of men and women, and wreck useful industries that employ them. The merchants are on record as fostering and encouraging a safe and wise public economy policy that will eliminate wastefulness, that will tend to increase business, keep labor employed, maintain the equilibrium of industrial and commercial activities and speedily increase production, so that the nation may be kept going straight ahead as a successful economic machine.

Foolish editorials emanating in the press have given business men considerable worry, some of these editorials being of a nature that would threaten retail, jobbing and manufacturing industries. The garden movement and many others have been overdone, and it is time that matters were looked upon with clearer judgment. So far the war and resulting conditions have not injured the moving picture or show business one whit, and most of the houses are handling capacity business. In fact, not a downtown house could accommodate the big crowds which were out on Saturday and Sunday, April 28 and 29.

Should Develop Pep and Book Good Shows

Exhibitor With No Spunk Will Feel Slow Times First—Be Generous in the Show Business If You Expect Generosity from Patrons.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—While some complaint has been heard from outlying theaters that business was not up to standard, a little investigating has shown that the operators of such theaters are largely to blame for not getting a better percentage of the neighborhood business. While a suburban house cannot afford to run first run material, there is no reason for displaying films which are so far out of date that no one can possibly be interested in them.

For instance, one of the outlying theaters recently presented a bill in which the five-reel feature had been shown downtown at least four months prior to appearing on this bill. In the meantime it had been honked through practically every theater in the city, was in bad shape, broke twice while going through the machine, and was not a good production to start with. The one-reel comedy presented Frank Chance as "The Peerless Leader" when Chance was manager of the New York Americans, that being several years ago, and the film having been shown all through the city at that time.

The balance of the program consisted of current news events, which were more than eight weeks old, some of the film having been seen in downtown theaters at least six or seven weeks back. With the rapid changing in national conditions, news has to be fairly new to escape being yawned at. Here the exhibitor had a forty-eleventh rate program, which he was endeavoring to show in a theater which catered to a varied class of people, running from middle to better class. These people read the newspapers and see many of the downtown performances, with the result that the exhibitors had absolutely nothing to offer that would promise a return trip to the house, which incidentally was charging the downtown rate.

Storage Bill in Indianapolis

Every Room Where Film Is Handled or Stored Must Be Fire Proof—Handling of Film in Tenements, Hotels, etc.—Only Four Reels in Operating Rooms of Theaters—Safety Inspectors in Studios and Exchanges.

From Indiana Trade News Service, 816 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Jacob H. Hilkene, commissioner of public buildings, who took an active part in the investigation of the recent Colfax building fire, in which six persons lost their lives, has completed a tentative draft of a new ordinance, governing the storage and handling of motion picture films, which probably will be submitted to the city council at the next regular meeting. The ordinance will be submitted, it is understood, as an amendment to the present building code.

The measure contains recommendations made by W. I. Stone, engineer for the Indiana Inspection Bureau; Paul T. Sullivan, assistant state fire marshal, and Charles M. Biscay, of New York, chairman of the executive committee of the Fire Prevention Regulation and Insurance Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. Local film men also will be consulted regarding the measure before it is submitted to the council.

Mr. Biscay, who arrived in Indianapolis last week to investigate the fire—believed by officials to have been caused by a quantity of motion picture films that were kept in the basement by a film renovating concern—explained to officials the work of the committee of which he is the head, and offered several suggestions regarding the drafting of the proposed ordinance.

Among the provisions of the new ordinance is one stating that every room in which film is manufactured, kept, handled or stored shall be of fireproof construction, and it says plainly that no films shall be handled in any building used as a tenement house, residence, lodge hall, hotel or any other public or semi-public purpose. The ordinance, as it now stands, would also prohibit motion picture theaters from having more than four reels of film in the operating booth at one time.

Another provision, pertaining to exchanges, would provide for the installation of a sprinkler system in the fire vaults. Each studio, laboratory or exchange would be required to appoint a safety inspector, who must be familiar with the rules and requirements and with all other laws and ordinances. It would be the duty of the inspector to instruct employes as to the handling of films and to see to it that the rules and laws are observed. These and other provisions which the ordinance will contain will in the long run, it is believed by officials, lead to a reduction in prevailing fire insurance rates.

H. H. Friedley, state fire marshal, completed his investigation of the fire, and in a report of the same urges municipal authorities in cities throughout the state to pass ordinances containing more stringent regulations for the storing and handling of films. He predicts that if they do not take some action in the matter a law will be passed at the next sesison of the State Legislature compelling them to do so.

Mr. Friedley, in his report, says the exact cause of the fire probably will never be known, but that the cause of the intense heat and tremendous flames was no doubt due to the storage of several barrels of films in the basement. He says further that Louis R. Cereinsky, president of the firm that owned the films, and possibly other officers of the company, were "criminally careless" in the handling of the material.

Film Shows Electrification of Great Railroad.

Indianapolis, Ind. — The Indianapolis Light and Heat Company gave a theater party to its employes Monday night at the Colonial theater. "The King of the Rail," a picture made for the General Electric Company, was presented in addition to the regular program. The picture showed the electrification of a great railroad in the Rocky Mountains and was of interest not only to electric people, but to the general public as well. The theater was crowded at each performance.

"Joan the Woman" Has Two-Week Run.

Indianapolis, Ind.—"Joan the Woman" met with such great success at English's theater that it remained there as the attraction for two weeks. The house was crowded twice daily all during the first week, showing that the interest of the theater-going public in the work of Miss Farrar as a screen artist seems on the increase. "Joan the Woman" is considered one of the best pictures that has been shown in Indianapolis for some time.

Ezra Rhodes Leases Jefferson Theater at Goshen.

Goshen, Ind.—Ezra Rhodes, owner of the LaSalle theater at South Bend, has obtained a five-year lease of the Jefferson theater in this city and will assume charge immediately. Mr. Rhodes will turn the Jefferson into a first-class moving picture and vaudeville house.

Charles Sweeton Takes Over Evansville's Majestic.

Evansville, Ind.—Charles Sweeton, manager of the Orpheum theater, recently destroyed by fire, has taken over the New Majestic theater, at Fifth and Locust streets, and will conduct it along the same policy as the old Orpheum. The lease includes the franchise for Triangle and Keystone pictures and the rights to the exhibition of legitimate attractions.

Mr. Sweeton has been associated with the Evansville amusement field for years, and there is every reason to believe that his latest venture will be a success. For years he was manager of the Wells Bijou—now the Strand—and later he devoted his time to his own interests at the Orpheum and North Side theaters.

ROCK ISLAND, ILL.—"Modern Mother Goose," produced by the Fort Dearborn Photoplay company, was shown at the Spencer Square theater under the auspices of the Parent Teachers' Association. This is one of the pictures recommended by the Illinois Parent Teachers' Association and the music to accompany the film was selcted by Mrs. Frederic Michael, chairman of the better films committee.

O. A. C. Lund Here to Work for Crystal.

Peoria, Ill.—O. A. C. Lund, who has been a director-actor with the Universal company, has arrived, to begin work as leading man for the Crystal Photo Play company.

New Houses and Changes in Illinois.

Gridley, Ill.—Mrs. K. Donnelly has sold the Gem theater to Henry Wiser.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Manager Harry Redmon of the Redmon Majestic theater, on Collinsville avenue near St. Louis avenue, has taken a ten-year lease on that building and will spend about $10,000 in making it an exclusive photoplay house seating 2,000. The alteration work this summer will include raising the ceiling, putting in new floors, removing the stage, reseating throughout, recarpeting and the installation of a new lobby and front.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Maurice V. Joyce is erecting a two-story, 50x100 foot steel, stone and concrete moving picture theater on Main street near Broadway with an entrance on Main street. It is expected to be ready for occupancy about October 1. It will be designed for both moving picture and vaudeville. About $25,000 will be expended in its construction.

Michigan Showmanship Notes.

Laurium, Mich.—The People's theater is the latest to do its bit toward the better programs for children. The approving of the pictures shown will be done by the Calumet Women's club. Saturday afternoon has been set aside for these programs.

Ishpeming, Mich.—A special showing of films of Sweden was given at the Ishpeming theater under the auspices of the members of Monitor lodge, Order of Vasa.

St. Ignace, Mich.—The Grand theater, which was destroyed by fire last winter, is being rebuilt. The restored theater will be modernly equipped in regard to seating and heating.

Wisconsin Theater Notes and Changes.

Columbus, Wis.—Kit Frankland, who has been operating a moving picture show at the Auditorium, has sold his equipment to Rodloff & Altschwater, proprietors of the Rudalt theater.

Manitowoc, Wis.—The Orpheum theater, which has been showing pictures two to four nights a week, increased its schedule so it is now operating nightly.

Madison, Wis.—The Strand theater is now open only on Saturdays and Sundays.

Atlanta News Letter

By A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

Arthur Moscowitz and Jack Kuhn Change Jobs.

ATLANTA, GA.—Jack Kuhn, popular manager of the Grand theater, has been transferred to Birmingham, and left for that city Sunday night. He will assume the direction of the Bijou, the new Marcus Loew theater in Birmingham, and the third Loew house to be established in the South. He came to Atlanta in the latter part of February, having been sent South from Rochester, N. Y., where he managed the Loew theater in that city.

Jack Kuhn has won more friends in the Atlanta theatrical and moving picture circles than any newcomer to the city and it was with deep regret that the amusement world learned of his transfer.

Arthur Moscowitz, now assistant manager of the Birmingham house, will be brought to Atlanta to manage the Grand under the direct supervision of E. A. Schiller, general manager of Loew's southern circuit. Mr. Moscowitz is a well-known southern theatrical man, and has long been identified with Memphis enterprises. He was, before his transfer to Birmingham, assistant manager of Loew's Lyceum theater in Memphis.

Ralph H. De Bruler Becomes General Manager.

Macon, Ga.—Ralph H. DeBruler has been made general manager of the Capitol, Palace and Princess in Macon, Ga. This consolidation went into effect on April 30. May 1 the Palace will be open three days in the week and the Princess will remain open every day and the Capitol will still continue to present the attractive pictures as in the past. Macon is to be congratulated on having such an efficient and capable manager as Mr. DeBruler, who is well known all over the South for making all houses a success that he handles.

Montgomery, Ala., Theater Being Built.

Montgomery, Ala.—The New Empire theater building, now under construction in Montgomery, Ala., owned by the N. J. Bell estate, will be one of the most modern and mechanically equipped motion picture theaters in the South.

The building has a frontage of 72 feet and a depth of 115 feet, and is located on Montgomery street.

The lobby is 14 feet in width and 40 feet long, with red tile floors, wainscoted 6 feet high with Alabama cream marble, with ornamental plaster cornices and wall and ceiling decorations. The ticket office is located in center of lobby. The ladies' rest rooms are located on the right side, and the gentlemen's retiring rooms on left side of lobby.

There are two main entrances leading from lobby to foyer, which is located in rear of auditorium.

The theater will be under the management of H. C. Farley, who for many years was in charge of the Empire theater. Only the highest class motion picture productions will be exhibited on the screens, accompanied with similar class of orchestra and pipe organ music.

The building will be completed and ready for occupancy by June 1.

"The Desert Man" crowded the Vaudette theater to capacity Thursday and Friday. The coming of W. S. Hart in a new film causes a revival of business in any Atlanta theater.

A private showing of "The Butcher Boy," featuring Fatty Arbuckle, was given Sunday morning at the Criterion theater by Manager Freeman of the Southern Paramount to the newspaper men and friends. The film is along a line of comedy which is most pleasing to southerners and cannot help but be a success.

DETROIT NOTES.

Harry Guest, a Man Who Knows.

Detroit, Mich.—Harry Guest is editor of the Weekly Film News, the house organ of the John H. Kunsky theaters in Detroit. And its no small task to get out this wide-awake 20 page weekly, which gives the program of each house, comments upon film, upon the motion picture industry in general, and many feature stories, besides a page for questions and answers. Unless you saw the mail with your own eyes, you would hardly believe that there was so many people interested in this gigantic new industry. Not a day goes by that at least a dozen letters fail to come to Editor Guest asking some question about some play, some company or some star. To answer these questions correctly, one must certainly be "up" on motion picture history and biographies, which is surely the case with Mr. Guest. He never fails to be prompt with his answers.

How Exhibitors Are Looking at the New Paramount Policy—Some New Theaters —State Right Features and Other Business Notes.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—What the effect of the open booking Paramount policy will be on the other program companies and how it will effect those who have held the Paramount franchise for many months is having the concern of Michigan exhibitors at the present time. As soon as the Paramount announced in the trade press its new policy to take definite form later, the WORLD correspondent began interviewing exhibitors asking them what they thought about it. "Well, its a good thing in some respects because, first of all, it means we won't have to take everything, and secondly, by having the Artcraft release dates harmonize with those of the Paramount we won't have to lay Paramount productions on the shelf while we are playing Artcraft productions. But, on the other hand; it will mean that an outskirt house or a theater in a comparatively small city that has built up its reputation with Paramount pictures, as well as helping to build up Paramount, will not be able to say that he's the only one showing these productions. As soon as he refuses to take some of the Paramount productions, he leaves the field open to his competitor who can also advertise the fact that he is showing Paramount productions. And of course here's another way to look at it. We have found Paramount mighty square; we know that if they go to open booking they honestly believe that it is for the best interests of the entire industry, including the exhibitors and themselves. For that reason, we are perfectly willing to conform to any policy or requirements they lay down. Paramount needs the exhibitor because without theaters what good are productions; and the exhibitor needs good pictures—the Paramount kind—and as long as the feeling is mutual, why there be any troubles?"

The above statement was made by an out-of-town exhibitor who visited the WORLD office in Detroit this week, and whose sentiments are in hearty accord with a number of other Paramount exhibitors in Detroit and outside cities.

Orth to Build Mammoth Theater.

Detroit, Mich.—The De Luxe Theater company has definitely decided to proceed with its plan to erect a mammoth theater for motion pictures at Kercheval and Parkview avenues. C. M. Orth, a former exhibitor at the same location, has practically disposed of sufficient stock to build the house, which will also have stores and living apartments. C. M. Orth, president and general manager of the company, hopes to see the theater in full operation by late fall. The name of the house will be the De Luxe, and its location is just one block north of the Gladwin Park theater on East Jefferson.

Kunsky Buys Michigan Rights on Ince Productions.

Detroit, Mich.—John H. Kunsky has bought the exclusive Michigan selling rights on the Ince productions. Mr. Kunsky has not decided just how he will release them, but presumably through his Madison Film Exchange, of which J. O. Brooks is manager.

Mr. Kunsky also controls the Metro exchange in Michigan, so that in addition to his circuit of ten theaters, he has plenty of things to think about. He is fortunate and is to be congratulated for having surrounded himself with an able and efficient organization of advisers as well as managers.

Mr. Kunsky is a director of the Metro Film Corporation in New York, and was recently included in the membership of the newly organized National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc.

Beardslee Takes Over Royal Theater.

Royal, Mich.—Edward Beardslee has taken over the Royal theater here and is having plans prepared for the remodeling of it. The seating capacity is to be increased to 900. Royal Oak now is practically a suburb of Detroit and is growing very rapidly. Mr. Beardslee is showing excellent judgment in enlarging the house, it being the only playhouse there.

Secures Franchise to Ivan Pictures.

Detroit, Mich.—Warren & Palley Film company, Campau building, who recently took over the Billy West comedies for Michigan, now announce that they have also secured the franchise to the Ivan productions for Michigan.

Chapoton Leases Princess

Detroit, Mich.—Louis Chapoton, one of the pioneers in the motion picture industry in Michigan, being this city's first operator—about twelve years ago—is now the lessee of the Princess theater, Woodward avenue. For some years he has been manager, but a new deal recently consummated makes him the owner as well as the manager of the theater. It's always a pleasure to recite the success of any man who starts in at the very bottom and works up to the top. It took Louis Chapoton a long while, but he finally made it. And now he is riding about town in a New King Eight automobile.

Detroit Business Notes.

Geoffrey Jefferson, a former exhibitor at Calumet, Mich., has been appointed publicity manager at the Detroit-Paramount exchange.

Harry Zapp, formerly traveling salesman for Paramount, is now traveling in Michigan for the Fox Film Corporation. He succeeds Mornay Helm who resigned to do musical writing in New York.

Up in Whitehall, Mich., there is one of the best known showman in the country. He is Frank A. Adam, who runs the Nufer-Adams Playhouse. He is the author of "The Page Mystery" now being released as a regular feature on the World Program. He also wrote that popular musical comedy "The Time, The Place and The Girl." He has many other famous writings to his credit.

A. J. Reed has been appointed manager of the K-E-S-E exchange in Detroit, succeeding W. H. Irvine, the change taking place April 25. Mr. Reed for the past few years has been at Kansas City where he has been associated with the K-E-S-E, V-L-S-E and Triangle companies.

James Steele, treasurer of the Famous-Players-Lasky company, and manager of Paramount exchanges, was in Detroit this week to arrange for the merging of the local Paramount and Artcraft exchanges. It is understood that the Artcraft organization will move over to the Paramount quarters, 278 East Jefferson avenue, some time before the first of June. It would mean that H. A. Ross would have charge of Paramount and Howard A. Bauer of Artcraft.

The Bijou theater at Port Huron, Mich., has been sold by C. E. Hubbard to Herb Weil, managing editor of the Port Huron Times-Herald, also manager of the Majestic theater there. The Bijou was closed a week for repairs but re-opened April 28.

Lillian Walker and New Co. Begin Work

Harry Ravier as General Director and a Complete Cast Are Making a Picture at Ogden, Utah—Ogden Picture Corporation and Its Officers.

OGDEN, UTAH.—Lillian Walker, well-known motion picture actress, has arrived here, accompanied by practically a complete cast and staff of operators, to begin work on the first picture of the new Ogden Picture Corporation. The initial venture will be a feature production entitled "The Last of the Ages." Work in preparing the temporary studio in the Alhambra theater is now being rushed so that the company may begin work immediately.

In addition to Miss Walker, the party consisted of Harry Revier, general director, and Mrs. Revier, Thomas Paul Parker, leading man, Nellie Parker Spaulding, character, Miss Frances Stanson and Miss Betty Mack, Joseph Clement, technical director, Amos Stone, laboratory director, August Grassi, electrician, and Lloyd Lewis, photographer.

One of the first duties of Mr. Revier will be to find a location upon which to build a high class studio. A site near the city and at the base of the mountains is being sought. Arrangements are also being made to assemble the usual crowd of extras, together with herds of animals to be used in the picture. A great part of the film will be made in the Alhambra theater while the new studio is being completed.

The Ogden Picture Corporation was organized March 1 of this year and has a capital of $100,000. Albert Scowcroft is president, Lester Park, vice-president and general manager, Fred W. Bossner, secretary and treasurer, J. J. O'Connor, general representative, with W. H. Wattis, Mayor A. R. Heywood, R. B. Porter, Dr. W. H. Petty and Fred W. Taylor, directors.

Salt Lake Notes of the Trade.

Salt Lake City.—William Fox spent two days in Salt Lake on his way east. This was his first visit to the city and was made, he said, on that account, and because Fox pictures were being so well received here.

Rose Tapely, Vitagraph star, who is touring the west, delivered several talks here this week. She was cordially received both by professionals and laymen. The Screen Club gave a luncheon in her honor and voted her an honorary member.

Mayor Helped Screen Club Kill Censorship.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—Activities of the Screen Club have been few since the strenuous days of the legislature. The club succeeded in killing all four of the measures calculated to injure the industry, including the censorship bill. In the fight against this measure they enlisted the help, not only of the women's clubs of the city, but also of Mayor W. Mont Ferry, of Salt Lake City. Mayor Ferry wrote a strong letter, urging the legislators to leave the question of censoring motion pictures to the producers and exhibitors themselves.

Minneapolis News Letter.

By John L. Johnston, 704 Film Exchange Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

R. C. Fox Becomes a Benedict.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Sh-h. We didn't find this out until a week later. Nobody else did. R. C. Fox, the little fellow who wears a smile that sounds like Doug Fairbanks and who is managing the Artcraft exchange here, was married on Saturday, April 21, to Miss Hartzberg, of Minneapolis. No wonder Fox didn't speak to us on the elevator last Tuesday.

Sprague Greene Managing Gilosky's Rex.

St. Paul, Minn.—Sprague Greene, former manager of the New Garden theater, Minneapolis, has become manager of Gilosky's Rex theater, St. Paul.

H. C. Andress at the Helm of the Lyric.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Hugh C. Andress, former Vitagraph roadman and manager of the Hearst International exchange, has been appointed manager of Ruben & Kinkelstein's Lyric theater here and took over the reins Sunday, April 29.

Kerrigan Couldn't Stay for Convention.

Minneapolis, Minn.—J. Warren Kerrigan, who appeared in person and drew capacity business to the Calhoun theater here Sunday and Monday, April 29 and 30, gave a like performance at the Blue Mouse theater, St. Paul, two days previous. Mr. Kerrigan had intended to remain in Minneapolis for the cabaret May 1 as the guest of the Moving Picture World, but a switch in his booking sheet made it necessary for him to leave April 30 for Des Moines.

At the Releasing Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn.—John Margoles has been appointed manager of the Bluebird exchange to succeed Julius Bernheim, who has become manager of the Universal-Laemmle exchange.

Manager Otto N. Davies of the Metro exchange has returned from an extended business trip to New York and has announced that within a short time he will be able to set inquisitive ones aright as to the future policy of the Minnesota Metro service.

Manager Harry Graham of the K.-E.-S.-E. exchange has received numerous requests for bookings on "The Trufflers" following a full page publicity campaign in local newspapers recently. Mr. Graham states that the demand for Linder comedies is increasing at a rapid rate.

W. C. Hoffman, special representative for the McClure series, has arranged for first runs of "Envy" at the New Astor, Minneapolis, May 3, 4 and 5, and at the New Majestic, St. Paul, May 10, 11 and 12.

Manager Joseph E. Schwartzbine of the Pathe exchange has secured George L. McKrone to cover the Southern Minnesota territory for him. Mr. McKrone has been actively engaged in the film business as an exchange man and as an exhibitor for several years.

State Rights Exchange Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Mannie Gottlieb booked "The Libertine" in the New Garden theater for second Minneapolis run at fifteen cents, and the feature enjoyed a splendid business the first half of the week. According to reports from the Walker theater at Aberdeen, S. D., "The Libertine" had an advance sale of $147.25 when scheduled for showing April 18 and 19. Fred Hunsler, the Milwaukee exhibitor, has been secured by Manager Gottlieb of the Favorite as roadman.

Jack Elliott, of the Elliott-Sherman Film Corp., has returned to his desk after a week's illness. M. E. Maxwell, of the same exchange, has taken charge of the Wisconsin division of "The Garden of Allah." Harry Sherman was scheduled to return from New York Tuesday, May 1.

H. R. Brandt has reported great success in booking "Guarding Old Glory" and his six-reel Scandinavian feature.

Clarence Cuthbert, of the Victory Film exchange, Loeb arcade, has been kept busy of late filling dates for "Victory," which shows many scenes of the naval and military activities of the United States.

E. A. Westcott has resigned as secretary and general manager of the Westcott Film Corp. and J. Earle Kemp has been appointed his successor. The firm will continue business under the name of the Westcott Film Corp. Mr. Westcott has not announced his future plans.

Harry Rathner, of the Supreme exchange, has returned from a business trip to Chicago. Dan C. McClellan has returned to Minneapolis after a nine weeks' tour through Iowa with "Civilization."

Minneapolis, Minn. — Edward J. Frye, of the Lochren Film Corp., has secured the right to display "America Is Ready" in the states of Washington, Idaho and Oregon. Mr. Frye is also dickering for territorial rights of the Edward Warren production, "The Warfare of the Flesh." Mr. Frye will leave Minneapolis for Seattle in a few days to attend the premier of the film, "America Is Ready," on the North Pacific coast.

James V. Bryson has announced that "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" is now available by exhibitors on a flat rental basis. Joseph McDermott, former publicity manager for Mr. Bryson, is now on the Atlantic en route to the French battlefields, where he seeks service in the ambulance corps. This is Mr. McDermott's second trip to the war theater.

E. Oddy Freeman, Film Exchange building, gave his territorial rights feature, "The Battle of Gettysburg," its Minneapolis premier at a midnight military movie staged at the Strand theater, April 27. A good crowd was loud in its appreciation of the feature.

Newspaper Man Becomes Best Pathe Manager.

Minneapolis, Minn.—And they say a newspaperman can't make a good film man. Looky here, kind readers. The gent whose facial likeness is reproduced below was newspaper man once, twice, four times, and now he is the best Pathe exchange manager in the good old U. S. A., according to Pathe Sun. This gentleman with the alert eyes watching for an exhibitor is none other than Joseph E. Schwartzbine (we have called him John at that), Grand Mogul at the Pathe exchange, Minneapolis.

J. E. Schwartzbine.

Mr. Schwartzbine has been assistant advertising manager of the San Francisco Daily News, Omaha Bee, Duluth Herald, and in charge of the motion picture department of the Minneapolis Tribune. C. R. Seelye took a fancy to Schwartzbine's way of getting business upon their first meeting and immediately Joseph E. left the Tribune and came over to Pathe. When H. E. Friedman was transferred from Minneapolis to New York Mr. Schwartzbine took the local throne and within three months has climbed to the top. Not bad at all, we should say, and as Mr. Schwartzbine gets all kinds of nice letters from Pathe headquarters in Manhattan it looks as if he will not have to rush back to the Tribune for a job for some time yet. Mr. Schwartzbine has won a reputation for square dealing with exhibitors and his cashier has showed us four checks from exhibitors sent in for film rentals and with space left for him to put in the price. Mr. Schwartzbine has a warm greeting for everybody and a smile that would do Doug. Fairbanks credit.

Manager W. K. Howard of the Vitagraph exchange has announced that Rose Tapley of the Brooklyn studios will in all probability be in Minneapolis for the convention. We hope that Miss Tapley's smile, so much in evidence at Chicago last July, has not wilted.

Praises Local Operators.

San Francisco, Cal.—Herbert Griffin, representing the Nicholas Power Company, was a recent visitor here, calling upon the distributors of Powers projecting machines and some of the leading theater owners in the Bay territory. He paid a tribute to the ability of motion picture operators here, declaring that the projection to be found in local theaters is superior to that in other parts of the country. He found that the men here were being paid high wages and that in return they were called upon to give the best possible results. He will return home by way of the Southwest.

Selznick Secures Exchange Quarters.

San Francisco, Cal.—Ben S. Cohen, representing the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., has secured quarters in the Easton building on Market street, where the Greater Vitagraph, the Duhem Motion Picture and the Pathe exchange are located, the space secured being adjoining the home of the Pathe exchange. Fixtures are being installed, a working force assembled and the exchange will be in full operation within a short time.

Many Exhibitors in Town.

San Francisco, Cal.—The many changes that are taking place in the film distributing field is bringing out of town exhibitors to the metropolis in large numbers to arrange for film service. Among those who have been here recently are J. L. Davis, Ukiah; J. J. Wood, of Anderson & Wood, Redding and Chico; Frank Atkins, Marysville; A. K. Adelbery, Marysville; Mr. Throckmorton, of the Victory theater, Oak Park, and L. F. Williams, of the Unique theater, Santa Cruz. Pete Hanlon, of Vallejo, was here recently and stated that he had placed his house in the hands of a manager and was again in the services of his country, having formerly been an officer on the retired list. Elmer Tompkins, of the Opal theater, Hollister, was also in the city recently and purchased another Powers 6B projection machine.

Big Film Men Expected Soon.

San Francisco, Cal.—Al Lichtman, general manager of the Arteraft, and B. T. Schulberg, manager of the Paramount, are expected on the Pacific Coast shortly, and Herman Wobber, manager of the Progressive, will meet them in Seattle to discuss the understanding reached by these concerns in regard to future release dates, booking policies and other matters.

Sol Lesser Gets Rights to "The Whip."

San Francisco, Cal.—The All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., of which Sol L. Lesser is the head, has purchased the California rights to "The Whip" and this will be shown at the Cort theater following the engagement of "Joan the Woman."

Strand Adds Demonstration Room.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Strand theater, conducted under the management of Sid Grauman, has added a demonstrating room to permit the inspection of films whenever convenient, instead of after the regular performances or at film exchanges. The equipment was installed by Walter G. Preddey.

Davis Bros. Put Out Road Man.

San Francisco, Cal.—Davis Bros., who recently entered the feature film field, have secured the services of Raymond C. Wilson as road man and the latter is now covering northern California and Nevada with "Purity" and "Where Are My Children?" Mr. Wilson was formerly with Clune, of Los Angeles, and traveled for some time with "The Clansman."

The Pathe exchange recently gave a special showing of "Our Fighting Forces" to Col. Gardner, Col. Mathewson and other army officials, who strongly recommended it.

San Francisco Film Row Gives a Frolic

Young People in the Local Film Business Have a Good Time in Big Room at American Player Piano Company Office.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Film Row, as the lower part of Golden Gate avenue is now popularly known, lost its austere business aspect on the evening of April 19, when the first informal social event held by film folks since this district came into prominence as a distributing center for moving pictures was observed in Photoplay Hall. Not only was it the first real gathering of those interested in the industry since the establishment of this district, but it was the first since the passing of the Screen Club and the only one ever arranged and managed exclusively by the employees of the local film exchanges. This event, planned and managed by a committee of one, Miss Sadie Litzenstein, of the office force of the Triangle Film Corporation, proved to be a hugh success, more than three hundred persons being present to enjoy the entertainment that had been arranged.

The gathering was held in the spacious rooms of the American Photo Player Company, which occupies the entire second floor of the Film Exchange building at Golden Gate avenue and Jones street, and not only did H. J. Werner of this concern furnish the hall, but he supplied the decorations, the music and the refreshments. Punch was served throughout the evening and there was also ice cream and cake. The musical instruments were moved off the floor of the big display room, potted plants were artistically arranged and colored paper decorations gave the room a festive aspect. Colored spot lights were installed and many beautiful effects were secured through the use of these. An attendant in full dress, furnished by the New Mission theater, met the guests at the entrance and gave the one touch of formality to the occasion.

A number of the film exchanges on the row furnished their latest comedy releases and there was a continual showing of these in the exhibition room before dancing commenced. Dancing proved to be the most popular form of diversion and was kept up until long after midnight. There were prize waltzes, tag two-steps and romantic moonlight dances, with some original creations that will doubtless become famous as the Triangle slide, the California dip, the Keyes jingle and the Fox galop. Many of the charming young ladies from the various exchanges adorned themselves with cut-out emblems of the firms with which they are connected, lending a distinctive touch to the affair. The event was voted a great success and plans are being made for future gatherings, Mr. Werner having offered the use of the big display room whenever desired.

Among those who enjoyed this informal event were: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hicks, of the General Film; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Quive, of the Greater Vitagraph; William J. Citron, of the Fox Film; W. O. Edmonds, of the K-E-S-E; B. F. Simpson, of the Triangle; Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Child, of the McClure Pictures; H. Salmson, of the Peerless Film; Harry Schmidt, of the General Film; Mrs. E. B. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. McCullough, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Levin, Louis Greenfield, Frank R. Macauley, D. McGregor and Mr. Heilbourne. Almost every film exchange in the city was represented and talent from various local theaters assisted in furnishing entertainment.

Thrill Producer Appears at Theater.

San Francisco, Cal.—Helen Holmes, who has been here for some time with a large company making scenes for "The Railroad Raiders," appeared in person at the Theater St. Francis a short time ago with some of her co-workers and was enthusiastically received. This production is being featured at this house and its patrons are now looking for some thrilling ferry scenes made on San Francisco Bay. During the week that Helen Holmes appeared at this house the new Flora Finch comedy "War Brides" was shown, the first of the Flora Finch productions to be featured here. Plans are being made to make a new entrance to the Theater St. Francis from the rear, the present arrangement not being entirely satisfactory.

Walter Preddey has furnished a Wagner motor-generator set to the theater conducted under Government auspices at Mare Island, Cal.

No Price Raise in Portland, Ore.

Committee of Five Cent Theater Men Discuss Proposed Raise to a Dime—Probabilities Are That Price Will Remain Though Length of Shows May Be Cut—Vaudeville Competition at Ten Cents the Reason.

By Abraham Nelson, Majestic Theater Building, Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—A committee comprising the majority of the exhibitors conducting five-cent theaters met at the club rooms of the exhibitors' league April 27 and discussed the advisability of raising the admission price from five to ten cents. While no definite action was taken, the discussion indicated that there would be no raise, but rather that a limit would be placed on the number of reels constituting a show and that added attractions would be done away with.

It was voiced that inasmuch as the Strand theater, with a big seating capacity, showed first run pictures and four or five acts of vaudeville for a dime and that the Hippodrome showed five-reel features in connection with A & H vaudeville for ten and fifteen cents, competition with these theaters with second run pictures at ten cents was out of the question.

Some of the five-cent showmen stated that four reels were sufficient for a show and decried the dearth of suitable programs. Other exhibitors maintained that a five-reel drama was enough for a program if a comedy night was featured during the week. Still others held out for a five-reel drama and a comedy for five cents.

"Sapho" Gets By.

Portland, Ore.—"Sapho," the starter of legalized censorship in Portland, has finally been screened in the Rose City. The picture that got over was the Pauline Frederick version and the theater showing it was the Columbia. People commented upon the artistry of the production, but, said Mrs. Colwell, "It is still 'Sapho.'"

Several years ago Edwin James at the Majestic wished to show a version of the famous Daudet drama and to prevent its showing the city council passed the first real censorship ordinance with an emergency clause. The picture was offered a year or so ago and again barred. In fact, it was intimated that no "Sapho" picture could ever be screened in Portland.

A viewer issued a permit for the Pauline Frederick picture to show, and when this came to the knowledge of Chairman F. T. Richards of the regular censor board he attempted to have the permit revoked. There was one dissenting vote to this action, however, and the permit was ordered to stand, the city ordinance requiring a unanimous vote of the board before a picture once approved can be withdrawn.

Recruiting Affects Small Theaters.

Portland, Ore.—Theater men in the small towns state that business is falling off because the young men are leaving for the army and navy. This is particularly true in towns of a thousand or thereabouts in population. Dallas, Ore., was hard hit, about fifty young men leaving there to join Uncle Sam's forces. At Rainier, Ore., over twenty young men left. Oregon stands second in proportion to her population in securing recruits. Exhibitors anticipate that after the feeling of uncertainty wears off, business will be nearly back to normal, even if the boys are gone. [They must be proud villages, though.]

Recent Theater Sales.

Forest Grove, Ore.—F. L. Watrous, formerly an exhibitor at McMinnville, Ore., has purchased the Star theater from E. A. Hoffman. The Star is now the only theater in Forest Grove.

Bandon, Ore.—W. C. Sellmer has purchased the Grand theater from J. G. Lemansky. Mr. Sellmer formerly owned this house, selling to Mr. Lemansky about a year ago.

Butte Rialto Opens May 1.

Butte, Mont.—The Rialto, the big new Jensen & Von Herberg theater, is scheduled to open Tuesday, May 1, with C. S. Jensen, of the owners, in charge. Mr. Jensen will manage the house temporarily until a resident manager is appointed.

Pendleton Theaters Combine.

Pendleton, Ore.—The Pendleton Amusement Company has been formed by J. F. Gruelich and C. G. Matlock, two of the city's prominent exhibitors. The new company owns the Alta, Cosy, Pastime and Arcade theaters. The Alta was formerly owned by Mr. Gruelich and the Pastime by Mr. Matlock.

General Film Opens Office.

Portland, Ore.—B. J. Sperry, former manager for Pathe and more recently with Universal, has been appointed manager for the General Film Company in this territory and has opened an office on the second floor of the Strand Theater building. Jack Tillman, shipping clerk for G. F. before the big office closed, is assisting Mr. Sperry.

L. A. Todd, former manager, now in charge of the Seattle office, made a trip to Portland recently in the interests of his firm.

Portland Territory Briefs.

Portland, Ore.—W. L. Loudy, representing the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., was in Portland recently and placed the agency for Motiograph machines with C. H. Johnson. Mr. Loudy was accompanied by Mr. Finck, of Waring & Finck, Seattle.

G. A. Metcalf, of San Francisco, was a visitor in Portland on his return from the East.

Spokane News Letter

By S. Clark Patchin, E 1811 Eleventh Ave., Spokane, Wash.

Marine Corps Film "The Peacemaker."

Spokane, Wash.—The Marine Corps film "The Peacemaker," depicting the life and experiences of Uncle Sam's "Soldiers of the Sea," property of the United States Government, will be shown in Spokane for two weeks, starting Monday, April 30.

Sergeant Schuman of the local marine recruiting station in the Granite block is arranging to show the picture at five theaters, the Clemmer, Liberty, Casino, Majestic and Rex. Two or three-day stands will be at each theater.

The film consists of two reels of one thousand feet each. The first reel shows the every-day life of the marine in the barracks and aboard ship, being posed, but true to life.

The second reel was selected from some twelve thousand feet of film taken by Carl D. Pryer, of the marines in actual warfare in Haiti about a year ago, while suppressing the revolution there.

"Told at Twilight" Shown at Benefit.

Spokane, Wash.—Sixty youngsters of the Spokane Children's Home were guests of the Hippodrome theater management to witness the photoplay feature, "Told at Twilight," a juvenile offering, starring Little Mary Sunshine, Pathe child actress. The Spokane Traction Company donated transportation both ways for the children.

The children of St. Joseph's orphanage were also entertained by the management.

Two Pictures by Herbert Brenon Make Hits.

Spokane, Wash.—The much discussed Annette Kellermann film "The Daughter of the Gods" will be introduced here Sunday, May 6, at the Liberty theater. The picture has been shown in nearly every large city in the United States and was one of the leading attractions in New York for several months. It is one of the most costly pictures ever manufactured and exhibits Annette Kellermann in an attractive role.

"War Brides," which is being shown at the Liberty theater, promises to break attendance records of the house and the picture is making a great impression. It is the only picture in which Alla Nazimova has ever appeared.

Sponsorship Asks Help of Ministers.

Spokane, Wash.—The "Sponsorship" committee of the City Federation of Women's Clubs expects to make an effort at the meeting of the ministerial association to have all ministers of the city recommend to their congregations that only the shows approved by the committee be patronized.

Exhibitor in Financial Trouble.

Spokane, Wash.—Robert G. Clendenin and wife, proprietors of a motion picture house in Colfax, filed in federal court petition in bankruptcy, showing liabilities of $5,129 and assets of $4,040.

Prairie State News Letter.

Omaha to Have Fine New Theater.

OMAHA, NEB.—A. H. Blank, of Des Moines, Ia., president of the Strand Amusement company and a stockholder and officer of the Triangle Film corporation, is planning a new photoplay enterprise for this city. He has secured a site 132x132 feet at the northeast corner of Douglas street and plans to erect a moving picture theater and business building to cost $250,000. It will have a seating capacity of 3,000. A twelve story building is contemplated. Plans also are being made for the improvement of the Strand theater next summer to be used as a moving picture house.

Improvements at Pathe Exchange.

Omaha, Neb.—Joe Cowan has been made assistant to Chief Booker Wilman at the Pathe exchange. Manager C. E. Holah has installed a private projection room. The machine is located outside of his office and the pictures are shown on a screen in his office.

Theater Changes in Nebraska.

Pawnee City, Neb.—The World moving picture show has been sold to E. S. Nesbitt.

Fairbury, Neb.—The Majestic theater has been sold by Robert Talbot to C. W. Bartlett. The house now seats 480 and the new owner will increase it to 600.

Nebraska City, Neb.—J. R. Jackson, who has had a lease on the Overland theater, has transferred it to J. E. Gordon, of Sioux Falls, S. D. Jackson will go to St. Joseph to engage in the show business.

Dakota Theater Notes.

Brookings, S. D.—A. C. Workman has purchased the Fad theater from C. C. Erie.

Maddock, N. D.—Odin Erickson has been making plans to open a moving picture in the opera house.

Webster, S. D.—Charles Bailey has assumed the management of the Lyric theater.

The Moving Picture World Brings First Aid to Picture Shows

Iowa State News Letter

By Dorothy Day, Register-Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

Comings and Goings in Des Moines Film Circles.

DES MONES, Ia.—D. B. Lederman, manager of the Laemmle Film service in this city, was a visitor in Omaha two days of last week.

R. S. Ballantyne, manager of the local Mutual exchange, was out of the city a couple of days last week, paying a business call to each of the following cities: Dubuque, Ottumwa, Waterloo and Davenport.

Manager Skirboll of the Metro exchange was in Chicago last week attending a meeting of the four Metro managers of Pittsburg, Chicago, Kansas City and Des Moines.

Freddy Martin Back in Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia.—Freddy Martin, who left the local Metro when the former manager, Cresson E. Smith, was transferred from this city to Chicago, and who has been working the Illinois territory out of Chicago for the past eight months, has returned to the Des Moines office as salesman and will work Western Iowa.

C. R. Michael, salesman for Essanay in Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Northern Iowa, was in this city last week with the big Essanay picture "The Trufflers" and the "Skinner's Bubble." The Majestic will show the latter, since "Skinner's Dress Suit" made such a decided success when it was shown some weeks ago, in that theater. "The Trufflers" will also be shown there.

R. L. White, who formerly acted as special representative for the Max Linder comedies in this state, has been transferred to Canada, where he will sell the comedies and other Essanay productions.

Butterfly Pictures Opens Special Office.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Butterfly Pictures will have a special office at 918 Locust street, to take care of their bookings for this territory.

President of Art Dramas in Town.

Des Moines, Ia.—R. C. Cropper, president and general manager of the Standard Film Company, paid Des Moines a three days' visit last week. Mr. Cropper has only praise for the way in which Marty Williams, the local manager of the Standard, has handled the Art Dramas in Iowa. He went from Des Moines to Minneapolis, where a branch office of the Standard Film is to be opened, to handle the Art Dramas in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Northern Wisconsin.

"Twenty Thousand Leagues" Goes In Initial Iowa Run.

Des Moines, Ia.—Z. M. Harris, who opened an office at 918 Locust street, for the distribution of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," through the state of Iowa, is more than pleased at the showing the big submarine picture made on its initial run in Des Moines last week. For, in spite of the continued rainy and cloudy weather, the Majestic enjoyed the greatest crowds since it has opened, exceeding those attracted by "Civilization" and the return of "The Birth of a Nation." Letters have been pouring into the office with inquiries on dates and terms and Mr. Harris feels that his picture will have a big success in Iowa.

Harry Hiersteiner, who has been salesman in this territory for several different firms and for so many years serial salesman for Mutual, will act as state representative for "Twenty Thousand Leagues."

Des Moines, Ia.—The Exhibitors' Convention of the 27th drew many exhibitors to the city and all the exchange managers were busy shaking hands and entertaining their customers throughout the day.

Too Many Picture Shows in Juneau, Alaska

Seattle Film Man Just Back From North Says There Are Four High Class Theaters in City of Only 8,000—Houses Are Up-to-Date.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE, WASH.—In the opinion of an exhibitor, well known in the motion picture circles of Seattle, who has just returned from a trip to Juneau, Alaska, that town has more theaters than it can support, especially if they continue to give the high class shows and put them on in the big way that they are doing now. Juneau has only 8,000 inhabitants, and there are four picture theaters, two of them practically new and incorporating all the latest and most expensive devices in architecture and equipment. These two are W. D. Gross's house, the Coliseum, and George Irvin's new theater, the Palace. The Coliseum shows Metro, Artcraft, Clara Kimball Young, and big state rights features, while the Palace uses Mutual Masterpieces, Triangle, and Pathe, and the pictures are interpreted by five piece orchestras. The older and smaller houses, the Dream, managed by W. H. Thompson, and the Orpheum, operated by John D. Spicket and Mrs. Spicket, are still giving the two newer houses a run for their money by constantly adding improvements and giving fine service. Mr. Spicket has just returned from Seattle, where he arranged for quite a number of improvements in his house and bought a lot of new equipment. He uses Vitagraph, K-E-S-E, and Fox service. The Dream uses Paramount service. Our exhibitor friend states that the business done by these houses only justifies the existence of two.

Private Showing of "Womanhood" in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash.—The city officials of Seattle, the heads of the Army and Navy departments at Fort Lawton and Fort Bremerton, and the principals and teachers in the Seattle schools, as well as the heads of the Seattle press and other representatives from the Press Club, were invited to a private showing of the new Vitagraph feature, "Womanhood," at the Moore theater Thursday evening, April 26. The 2,200 seats of the Moore were filled and some had to wait to see the picture until the regular opening at the same place on the following Saturday.

Just before the curtain went up Major Lemuel Hold made a patriotic speech, lauding the sentiment of the picture, and when the showing was finished the audience were so touched that they spontaneously broke into the songs "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" and "The Star Spangled Banner."

Before the regular performances on Saturday afternoon and evening a band of bluejackets from the naval base at Bremerton will lead a parade about the streets, and a recruiting officer will be stationed at the door of the theater.

Bart Bertleson, advertising manager of the Clemmer theater, is the man who is so capably handling the publicity for "Womanhood" in Seattle.

World Film News.

Seattle, Wash.—J. A. Koerpel announces that he has received the advance paper on four new foreign made pictures that feature actors and actresses well known abroad. The names of them are "Atonement," featuring Regina Badet and Albert Signer; "A Naked Soul," featuring Susan Grandaise; "The Golden Lotus," featuring Regina Badet and Paul Guise, and "When True Love Dawns," featuring Susan Grandaise, Albert Signer, and Paul Guise. The pictures will be released on the regular Brady program.

Mr. Koerpel has just returned from Portland, where he assisted the manager of the People's theater in planning the opening of the Sarah Bernhardt feature, "Mothers of France."

R. C. Montgomery, road representative for World, returned this week from a trip through southern Oregon, which he reports as very successful.

Jack Lannon in New York.

Local Paramount Notes.

Seattle, Wash.—Mrs. Gertrude Huff, auditor from the San Francisco Paramount office, is spending this week in the Seattle office, installing a new system of accounting.

Manager F. S. Fountain reports the office swamped with bookings for the new Arbuckle comedies.

Press Agents Form Drum Corps.

Seattle, Wash.—To show their patriotism in these days when every one's thoughts are turning to war, the press agents of Seattle have organized a drum corps. According to Gordon F. Fullerton, press agent for the Liberty theater, the reason for their choice was that drums are, like press agents, full of wind and make a lot of noise.

A. A. Bruce Transferred to the Rialto, Butte.

Seattle, Wash.—A. A. Bruce, bookkeeper at the Liberty theater, has been transferred by the Greater Theaters company to the new house in Butte, the Rialto. Mr. Bruce will leave for his new post in a few days.

Local Artcraft Changes.

Seattle, Wash.—B. C. Cunningham arrived in Seattle from Philadelphia this week to take charge of the Artcraft office. Al. Lichtman, general manager of Artcraft, will be in the city Saturday for a conference with Mr. Cunningham and A. S. Kane, coast division manager.

Fox Activities in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash.—Harold Johnson and C. H. Code, roadmen for Fox, have resigned and W. A. Mead, formerly McClure representative in Los Angeles, is now working out of the Seattle Fox offices. All the roadmen of this territory spent April 26 at the Seattle office, talking over with Manager A. W. Eden plans for the Spring drive on the new business. Mr. Eden has just returned from a trip to San Francisco and is leaving shortly for Montana. He is handling personally the super feature, "A Daughter of the Gods," which he books to regular Fox exhibitors, wherever possible. Mr. Eden states that he will soon start another print out in his territory.

SELIG.

SELIG-TRIBUNE NO. 32.

Bayonne, N. J.—Submarine chasers of this type are now being constructed as rapidly as possible by every boat building concern in the United States.

San Diego, Cal.—The cultivation of the Burbank spineless cactus for cattle fodder is growing in importance as the grain crops are more and more in demand for the warring nations.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Not to be outdone by those who have the open fields in which to plant their crops, the hotels are starting to raise potatoes on the roofs.

Wake Up Young Men.—Your sister, mother, sweetheart may want you home, but they need you on board these and other great American vessels of war. Enlist now!

Eureka, Cal.—Following the loss of the $3,000,000 cruiser Milwaukee in an effort to save the wrecked submarine H-3, a private firm of contractors are moving the submarine across two miles of sand hills, where it will be launched in the water of Humboldt Bay.

Boston, Mass.—Three hundred sailors from German ships interned at this port are transferred from the immigration station.

Riverside, Cal.—Thousands of persons attend the sunrise Easter services on the summit of Mt. Rubidoux, perpetuating a sacred custom originated by Jacob Riis, and participated in by America's most famous men.

New York, N. Y.—The "Yankees" open the American League season with the World's Champion Red Sox at the polo grounds.

SELIG-TRIBUNE NO. 33.

New York, N. Y.—With the raising of a monster flag across Broad street, thousands of brokers and their employees pledge themselves to aid the nation.

Cambridge, Mass.—Soldiers' Field proves its title to that name when 1,000 Harvard men drilled together through three hours of drizzling rain.

Washington, D. C.—Members of the crew of the French battleship Jeanne D'Arc visit this city, where they are greeted by Secretary Daniels.

There being considerable discussion about a new design for "Old Glory," we show the most popular suggestion made for a grouping of the stars.

Wake up young men! Your mother, sister, sweetheart may want you home, but they need you on board these and other great American vessels of war. Enlist now!

Elo Paso, Texas.—Military authorities are taking into custody persons suspected of being German spies.

New York, N. Y.—These 30 under-graduates of the Cornell Ambulance section are to leave shortly for France. They constitute the first American unit to leave since war was declared.

Boston, Mass.—Ex-president Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt arrive here to attend the wedding of their son, Archibald B. Roosevelt, and Miss Grace S. Lockwood of Boston.

New York, N. Y.—Pretty actresses of the Midnight Frolics show their patriotism by raising a large silk flag.

SELIG TRIBUNE NO. 34.

New Orleans, La.—Young women students at Newcomb College hold their annual spring pageant before several hundred members of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs now in session.

El Paso, Texas—Fifty Red Cross nurses arrive here and report for duty at the base hospital at Fort Bliss.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—One person is killed and several are injured when a section of the subway collapses.

Boston, Mass.—Students of the Boston Institute of Technology hold their annual "book rush," which results in the usual number of bruised shins, sore heads and blackened eyes.

New York, N. Y.—Led by the National Guard and Naval Militia, thousands of children parade on Fifth avenue in the interests of the "Wake Up America" movement.

Oakland, Cal.—Washington University wins the triangular intercollegiate regatta, defeating Leland Stanford and the University of California.

Boston, Mass.—After unfurling "Old Glory" the members of the Riverside Canoe Club paddle down the Charles River in 1,000 canoes.

Washington, D. C.—President Wilson reviews the parade of Boy Scouts as they pass the White House on their way to the public park donated by the government for garden purposes.

SELIG TRIBUNE NO. 35.

Washington, D. C.—Headed by Arthur James Balfour, British minister, the High Commission from Great Britain arrive here to attend the great international war conference.

New York, N. Y.—At this critical period in our history, the launching of our newest giant sea fighter, New Mexico, has a peculiar significance.

West Point, N. Y.—Every time the American eagle gets his eye on these boys, destined to become the future generals of the greatest army on earth, the old bird loosens up a scream that can be heard clean to Berlin!

New York, N. Y.—The Eighth Coast Defense regiment, the first artillery organization to weed out members with dependent families and the physically unfit, parade on Fifth avenue with each of its twelve companies recruited to full strength.

Orange, Texas—Under the direction of General Goethals, a vast fleet of wooden cargo ships are being built to replace the steel tonnage destroyed in the sub-sea war.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Once a year the school children of this city assemble in Elysian park and do honor to Hans Christian Anderson by a revival of his fairy tales.

THE EVIL SAG (Two Parts).—The cast: Howard Mitchell (Casson Ferguson); James Stanley (Jim Hilton); Dick Stanley (M. C. Von Betz); Edward Hale (Edgar Murray); Helen Stanley (Byrdine Zuber). Written by John B. Langan. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

James Stanley becomes the owner of the Mitchell farm through his marriage to the mother of Howard Mitchell, and his children, Helen and Dick, live with him. Howard, who comes of age after the death of his mother, accuses Stanley of marrying his mother for the farm. They quarrel despite Howard's love for Helen. Edward Hale, the county attorney, also loves Helen.

There is a depression of the land in one corner of the farm, and the spot has a sinister reputation, for several men have been found dead there. Edward Hale, after an investigation, discovers that the evil influence is odorless natural gas. He realizes that a gas well means wealth to the owner of the land, and Hale redoubles his courting of Helen.

Howard and James Stanley have another quarrel, and Howard leaves the farm. The next day Stanley's lifeless body is discovered, and Howard is arrested. Hale, however, knows that it was the gas that caused Stanley's death, but tries to fasten the crime of murder on Howard. He fails.

When Howard takes possession of the farm, Helen refuses to remain as his wife, and she leaves, accompanied by her brother Dick. Howard, deserted by everybody, becomes known as the Hermit of the Sag.

Hale still plots against Howard and induces Dick Stanley to join with him. The two entice Howard to the deadly spot on the farm, believing that he will be overcome by the poisonous gas. Helen overhears the plot and decides to save Howard. Hale and Dick endeavor to stop her, but she gets to Howard in time to save his life. In the excitement Dick lights a match near the dangerous spot and in the explosion of the gas Hale is killed and Dick injured.

Howard and Helen thus learn of the gas, which ultimately is to make them rich, for they marry and Helen forgives her brother for the harm he tried to do.

BASEBALL AT MUDVILLE.—The cast: Spike (Lee Morris); Boots Milligan (John Lancaster); Bill Hoskins (Wm. Hutchison). Written by J. J. Roberts. Produced by Norval MacGregor.

Spike, a young pitcher, signs to play with the Milligan Bloomer Girls, supposedly a girls' baseball team. Mudville is billed for a game. The team, in reality, is composed of men.

On the way to the ball park the "girls" flirt with the local boys, causing many a heart to go pit-a-pat.

During the game Spike, sliding for home, loses his wig. The ruralites come to the realization that they have been humbugged, and start to mob the team. The "bloomers," devoid of wigs, start across country on the run, with the crowd in pursuit, and barricade themselves behind closed doors.

A SOCIAL CLIMBER (Two Parts). The cast: Viscount Redvers (Casson Ferguson); Jimmy Burke (M. C. Von Betz); Folwell (Fred Eckhart); Jane Folwell (Byrdine Zuber); Heloise (Miss Valentine). Written by Elmer Clode. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

Viscount Redvers, disappointed in love, visits America. On the same train westward bound with the English nobleman, is "Gentleman" Jimmy Burke, a confidence man. The train is wrecked, and Burke, thinking Redvers killed, takes the Englisman's baggage and assumes his name.

At Hicksville, the crook gets off the relief train to "work" the town, and Viscount Redvers is also left there by accident, in a weak and dazed condition.

The leading family of Hicksville is the Folwells, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Folwell and their two daughters, Heloise and Jane. Heloise is a social climber, while Jane is a regular girl. Folwell owns a lumber yard, and Jimmy Burke selects him as his victim.

Jimmy poses as the Viscount Redvers, and Heloise is in raptures with knowing a real-for-sure English nobleman. In the meantime, Redvers cannot establish his identity. He is broke and has lost his baggage.

Jimmy Burke involves Folwell in a scheme, and swindles him out of a check for $20,000. He then prepares to elope with Heloise, who still thinks him an English nobleman.

Jane befriends Redvers. To humor him, Jane cables to England. Redvers discovers that an impostor is making use of his name. He battles with the crook, and prevents Jimmy's elopement with Heloise. Jane's cablegram brings the British consul to the rescue. Redvers is identified at last as the Viscount, and makes Jane the Countess of Redvers.

RESCUING UNCLE—The cast: Uncle Bob Finley (John Lancaster); Allen (Sidney Smith); Elmer (Wm. Scott); Hays (Franklyn Hall). Written by W. E. Wing. Produced by Norval MacGregor.

Uncle Bob Finley is the wealthy uncle of Allen, Elmer and Hays. The boys come into the estate of their dead father, and Uncle Bob cautions them against squandering their inheritance. He is made furious when news reaches him that the three boys have invested respectively in motor boats, automobiles and fine horses.

The boys visit Uncle Bob's office and discover a letter which leads them to believe that their uncle is to be defeated in a stock deal. They go to a broker and order him to sell a particular stock short, believing they will help Uncle Bob. In order to gain sufficient funds to put this deal through, they mortgage their home. When this news reaches Uncle Bob, he writes the boys a letter, telling them he wants to have nothing more to with them.

Uncle Bob fights his unknown enemies in the stock deal. He does not know that the enemies are his own nephews. Uncle Bob is victorious and the boys' money is wiped out. By accident, Uncle Bob learns of what his nephews have done. He likes their affection for him even if it were misguided, and he sees that all their securities are returned to them.

VICTOR.

FAT AND FOOLISH (May 15).—The cast: Bill (Ed. Sedgwick); Old Maid (Violet Eddy); Roger (Harry Mann); His Sweetheart (Belle Bennett); Dude (Jay Belasco). Written by Harry Wulze. Produced by Roy Clements.

Bill finds a note in a bottle from an old maid saying she will marry the finder. As she is rich, he consents. Bill sees Roger's girl, and stealing the old maid's purse, goes off with the girl. Roger thinks the dude is at fault, and buries him in the sand. Bill goes to a cafe with the girl, and the dude tells Roger where they are. The old maid discovers the loss of her purse and goes after Bill. Roger is also after him. They all end up in the water, where a cop arrests both Roger and Bill, while the dude rescues both the women, gets the old maid's money and the girl's heart.

BREAKING THE FAMILY STRIKE (May 17).—The cast: Mr. Carter (Matt Moore); Mrs. Carter (Jane Gail); Dolly Dimples (Margaret McRae); The Policeman (M. McGovern). Written by H. J. Shepard. Produced by Matt Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter have a quarrel. She tries to make him sign the "demands" of the Wives' Club to which she belongs, and leaves him when he refuses. He telephones to the Strike-breaking Bureau, and the manager gets a girl from the burlesque troupe to act as strike-breaker till wife gives in.

Dolly Dimples fits wonderfully well into the Carter household, and all goes merrily till wife telephones to ask hubby if he is ready to accede to her demands. Dolly's voice over the phone and the reply of Carter that her place is satisfactorily filled by the strike-breaker makes her furious and she sets out in hot haste for the house. Hubby has telephoned that he needs police protection, and when the cop appears he gives Carter a whistle, saying that he is to blow it if help is needed.

When wife sees the blonde beauty she rushes at her to scratch out her eyes. Hubby calls the cop and threatens to have her arrested. She succumbs, and he makes her tear up the "demands" before his eyes. She consents, so that she may have the pleasure of dismissing the blonde strike-breaker.

JOKER.

THE LAST SCENT (May 19).—The cast: Carlotta Highsee (Gale Henry); Lizette (Lillian Peacock); Onion Tim Brady (Milburn Moranti); Seldom Feeds (William Franey). Scenario by C. B. Hoadley. Produced by W. W. Beaudine.

Carlotta, the prima donna, is a vampire. She meets Onion Tim, who is always covered with onion jewelry and followed by the Secret Service men. He meets and falls for Carlotta. Seldom Feeds is a tramp. He begs of Onion Tim, who drops an onion out of his ring. Seldom grabs it and takes it to an onion expert, but can't sell it because it is twenty-one per cent. garlic. Tim has a million-dollar collection of onions set into a necklace for Carlotta and exhibited in the jewelers window.

He takes it to Carlotta, who is enraptured. Seldom sees her put it in the safe. He steals it, but can't sell it as no one has enough money to pay for it. He is finally forced to eat the onions to keep from starving. Then he sees that a reward of twenty-five thousand dollars offered for it, and has a fit. Carlotta has notified Tim of her loss, but he first refuses to believe her and then says that he has spent a million on her and that's enough.

THE GIFT OF THE FAIRIES (May 17).—Marion was a little crippled girl who lived with her grandmother. One day the old lady told her the story of a little lame boy who was healed by the fairies. Marion went out to look for the fairy queen to heal her. She peeped through a hedge and saw a girl whom she took for the fairy queen. She entered the garden and asked the girl if she was a fairy, telling her the story of the lame boy. The girl made a plan to help the little girl, telling her to return that night.

When she came again there was a man with the girl, whom she took for a magician. He gave her a flower to smell, and presently she went to sleep. When she woke she found herself in a strange place, feeling very queer. But soon she was better, and after a time she found that she could walk. Then she returned to her grandmother, saying that the fairies had made her well. In reality, the magician was a famous doctor, who had cured her lameness.

BIG U.

THE BRAND OF DEATH (May 18).—A small party of surveyors invaded the solitude of the Hopi country. Singing Pine, an Apache and a graduate of Carlisle, was the life of the party. He met a Hopi maiden called Laughing Water, and they fell in love. The surveyors wondered what had become of their comrade. He had returned to the life of his people, with the Hopis. The marriage day was set, and the tomtoms beat out the news to all neighboring tribes.

After the wedding Laughing Water discovered the brand of Apaches on Singing Pine's shoulder. According to Indian tradition the marriage of an Apache and a Hopi meant death to both. The cry went up, "There is an Apache among us!" Singing Pine was seized and bound to the stake to await his death, but Great Bear, his friend from childhood, rescued him.

NESTOR.

TO OBLIGE A VAMPIRE (May 14).—The cast: Harold (Eddie Lyons); Willie (Lee Moran); The Russian Dancer (Olive Adair). Written by Fred Palmer and C. B. Hoadley. Produced by Louis Chaudet.

Harold and Willie are broke and hungry, but they stop to admire the poster of the Russian Dancer. She passes and drops her purse, which Harold picks up. He returns it to her apartment and she takes a fancy to him. He refuses a reward, so she gives him a rose. He is charmed, but Willie is disgusted.

The landlady brings them a note and a box for the performance. At the show the dancer throws kisses to them and invites them to her dressing-room. She takes them home, and shows Harold the picture of a man whom he is to kill for her. As he is hesitating, two bearded men enter and inform him that they will hold Willie captive and kill him if Harold fails.

Harold goes to the man's house and manages to stab him. He is chased by the servants, but eludes them and returns to the dancer. Here he finds her making love to Willie. She tells Harold to fade away. The two boys start a fight, and just then Harold rolls out of bed and realizes that it has been a dream.

IMP.

THE PUZZLE WOMAN (May 17).—The cast: Cliff Jordan (Francis Ford); Slim (Irving Lipner); Shorty (Harry Mann); The Girl (Grace Cunard). Written by Grace Cunard. Produced by Francis Ford.

Cliff Jordan is down and out. He meets two crooks, Shorty and Slim, who live in his hotel. The crooks plan to rob a safe and to use Cliff and a girl as unconscious confederates. They hide the money in a box of candy, which they pass to the girl. She gives it to Cliff to hold for her.

Detestives are chasing the crooks. Cliff, in his room, opens the box and finds money instead of candy. He goes with his find to the crooks. They tell him that he has been used as a tool. The detectives overhear this. They enter and arrest the crooks. They are about to arrest Cliff, too, when he pulls out a card, with "Phil Kelly, Detective," on it, and asks them to meet his wife, who is responsible for a large part of their joint success.

THE CASE OF DOCTOR STANDING (Two Parts—May 30).—The cast: James Standing (Charles Ogle); Ben Hammatt (Frank O'Keif); Betty (Marie Wiernan); Mother of James (Minnie Mordock); Judge Hallows (Jack Ridgeway); Hal Willard (Henry Wesbert). Written and produced by C. H. Weston.

Standing and Hammatt, two young surgeons who have quarreled because Hammatt is a drug fiend, and neglects his business, agree to dissolve partnership. Later they both meet Betty at the home of Willard, who is giving a party. Hammatt, to disgrace Standing, puts dope into his glass. The drug makes him appear intoxicated, and Betty shrinks from him. Willard places Standing on a couch, behind a screen. Hammatt suggests that they play cards. Willard is called to the telephone, and Hammatt takes advantage of his absence to examine his cards. Willard notices that the order of his cards has been changed, and accuses Hammatt of cheating. This leads to a fight, in which Hammatt stabs Willard with a paperknife. Hammatt is about to leave, when the screen falls and he sees Standing on the sofa. He arranges the room to throw suspicion on Standing, and disappears. Standing is arrested.

When Betty reads the news of the murder she faints. The jury brings a verdict of guilty against Standing. Later we see Betty visiting him in prison. She begs the warden to allow Standing to visit his dying mother. The warden has to refuse. Standing escapes and is pursued. He reaches the residence of the judge who convicted him. There is a thunderstorm.

The judge's daughter is eating plums, and a pit sticks in her throat. She is at the point of suffocation. Standing appears and pleads with the judge to save him as he is innocent of intentional murder. The judge promises to help him if he, as a surgeon, will operate and save his daughter. The judge orders out the guards when they arrive. Standing performs the operation successfully. The judge then sends Standing to his mother's bedside in his auto.

Hammatt has been going down hill under the influence of drugs. In a fit of insanity he confesses. Standing and Betty are reunited and his mother recovers.

POWERS.

SUCH IS LIFE IN SOUTH ALGERIA (Hy Mayer Travelaugh—May 13).—This is a Travelaugh with Hy Mayer through some of the unfamiliar spots of southern Algeria. We see a view of the Bogharie Road, which changes into a cartoon of a family outing. A weaver is seated at his historic trade. Then we see a street in Sidi-Okba, and the famous oasis of Biskra, the first of the desert cities. Dances of the natives to the music of a drum orchestra are shown. Then an Oriental caravan, and a fete day in Ouled Nails. A squad of cavalry in the picturesque Saphi rides by, and then we see a group of Nomads traveling towards the south. The gorges of El-Kantara finish the picture, which is interspersed with amusing cartoons from the clever pen of Hy Mayer.

THE RIVER OF LOST SOULS, AS SEEN BY DR. DORSEY (May 20).—The Yangtze River is the busiest in China. It flows through densely populated regions. Special types of steamships are built to navigate its dangerous waters. Captain Plant was the first to take a ship into the upper river. Thousands of Chinese junks are operated by the natives. They have to have long, heavy oars for steering against the swift current. The rapids are so strong that not one man in a thousand who falls in ever comes out alive. For a hundred and fifty miles the river flows through rocky gorges.

WHEN DOES A HEN LAY AN EGG? (On Same Reel as Foregoing).—Zippy buys a hen, thinking that he will have fresh eggs every day. He does everything that he can think of, but she refuses to lay an egg. Six months later a professor sees the hen, which has grown fat under Zippy's treatment. He recognizes it as a rare specimen of an almost extinct breed. He wishes to buy it and will give $1,000. Zippy meets him and invites him to dinner. This is a fine time to get the worth of the hen, he thinks. It is killed and served for dinner. When he hears that he has lost the thousand he has a fit.

UNIVERSAL.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE (No. 19—May 18).—The reel begins with a demonstration of the making of cut glass. Then we see the school of aviation, with the army of birdmen who are preparing for war service. Compared to the European armies, our air service is almost negligible.

A screen oddity is a modern Paul Revere, who guards "Death Avenue," the most dangerous thoroughfare in Greater New York. His flag warns pedestrians away from the trains which run in the street.

Life's simplest children are the minute organisms which become visible when a drop of pond water is magnified hundreds of times by a powerful microscope.

The reel ends with a "Miracle in Mud," a cartoon in animated sculpture by Willie Hopkins.

A GOOD LITTLE BAD BOY (Two Parts—May 16).—The cast: The Black Sheep (Phil Dunham); Salvation Liz (Merta Sterling); Claude Worcestershire (Charles Inslee); Tabasco Lil (Lucille Hutton). Directed by Vin Moore. Supervised by J. G. Blystone.

Phil steals pie from his little sister, and breaks her Teddy Bear. When he makes her cry, her parents try to pacify her by putting money in her bank, and then Phil schemes to steal the bank. For this pa kicks him out, and he wanders into the cruel world.

Claude Worcestershire and Tabasco Lil read in the paper that the station master is to receive a consignment of $2,000,000. This determines them to stop at Beetville. Phil is in the billiard parlor when the villain and villainess arrive. The sheriff throws Bill out, and falls a victim to the charms of Lil. Phil enters a saloon, where he vainly tries to take some free lunch from the counter. But the proprietor has a sliding cover for it which works by a push button, and Phil is foiled.

Salvation Liz appears with her concertina, and starts right in to convert Phil. She is successful, and he joins in the singing. She leads him to his home and begs forgiveness for him.

He meets Tabasco Lil, who decoys him into going for a walk. She gets him to climb a tree for her, and goes off and leaves him there. Then she tries the same tactics on his father, the station master, so that Claude can get to the safe. Phil manages to get down by sawing off the bough and falling with it.

In the meantime Claude has opened the safe, and is waiting for Lil to make a getaway. Phil has converted Lil, and she leads him to the station to fight Claude. While they fight she gets into the safe with their guns. Claude ties a rope to the safe, after knocking out Phil, and tying him to the track. He jumps on a passing train, and the safe pulls the whole station after the train, while Claude holds the rope. Salvation Liz saves Phil, and on a hand car they pursue the flying station. Phil climbs on the roof and cuts the rope. He drags Lil out of the safe just as a train comes and crashes through station and all.

LAEMMLE.

HER GREAT DILEMMA (Two parts—May 18).—The cast: Mary Blanton (Louise Lovely); Marc Grayson (Lee Hill); "Red" Shang (E. N. Wallack). Scenario by Chas. J. Wilson, Jr. Produced by Donald MacDonald.

Mary Blanton, one of the best nurses in Mercy Hospital, meets Marc Grayson, an interne, and when he takes up private practice and prospers, he and Mary are married; a child is born and they are happy.

Mary does not tell Grayson of her past. She was raised in the slums, and became the wife of Red Shang, a notorious character. On reading of his death in a raid, she renounced her old life and entered the hospital. The report of Red's death was incorrect, and he was surprised to see her on the streets with her son, after he had served his term in prison. He followed her home, got the doctor away by means of a fake phone call, and entered the house.

Mary was dumbfounded when he revealed himself and threatened her, and she gave him her necklace to keep silent. Just after leaving, he was struck by Dr. Grayson's auto, and the doctor rushed him into the house, and found an immediate operation was necessary and asked Mary to assist. While he was in the next room preparing, Mary secured the necklace. The doctor told her the slightest pressure on the spine would cause death, and she was about to yield to the temptation when he returned to the room. The operation proceeds, and she can hardly wait for advice of the result, when the doctor tells her there is no hope. Mary sinks into her husband's arms with a silent prayer of thanksgiving for her deliverance.

CASEY'S BORDER RAID (Two Parts—May 19).—The cast: Casey (Neal Hart); Girl (Janet Eastman); Corporal (Bud Osborne); Mexican (Joe Rickson); 2d Mexican (Pedro Leon). Scenario by C. J. Wilson, Jr. Produced by Geo. Marshall.

Casey is with the troops on the border. The boys send him to get the key to the flag pole, and he is bawled out by the sergeant. He is put on sentry duty, where he imagines a burro is the Mexican army, and alarms the camp. It is then he meets the sergeant's sister. Casey is afraid to fight, so he remains behind. The girl thinks he has stayed to protect her, and makes a hero of him. The boys return to take it out on Casey, and find him with the girl. They drive him away.

Casey is made to do the dirty work around the camp. The girl tells the boys, who are all in love with her, that she will marry the one who secures for her the Mexican blanket worn by the leader of the bandits. They all are licked by the Mexicans and return without the blanket. Each soldier, unknown to the other, tries to bribe Casey. The result is that Casey is deluged with bribes, and decides to attempt to make good. The Mexicans have left the camp to attack the Americans. All the boys, with the exception of the sergeant, wander away with the girl for a picnic. The Mexicans arrive, overpower the sergeant, and make away with the machine gun. Casey arrives at their camp, finds the guard asleep, and puts the Mexican blanket under his coat.

The American captain comes on a visit of inspection and finds the outpost deserted and the gun gone. When the boys return with the girl he orders them put in the guard house.

Casey, among the bandits, stands the abuse of the Mexicans until they start to trample on the girl's handkerchief, which he has long treasured. He knocks down the lot of them and starts away with Mexicans after him. He runs to the gun, wheels it around, and turns it loose, capturing the entire Mexican army. He then ties them with a rope to the front of the machine gun and makes them pull it back across the Mexican border. He arrives in the American camp just as the boys are being taken off to the guard house. He turns the Mexicans over to the captain. The girl falls in his arms when she discovers that he has brought the blanket as well as the gun and all the bandits.

THE HONOR OF AN OUTLAW (Three Parts—May 15).—The cast: "Cheyenne" (Harry Carey); The Girl (Claire du Brey); Her Father (T. D. Crittenden); Deputy (Fred Kelsey); Conductor (Jack Leonard). Written and produced by F. A. Kelsey.

The railroad president's daughter, in her private car, is bidding her parents good-by. "Cheyenne," free him and take the girl. "Cheyenne" on his way to serve a sentence for robbery. A band of outlaws plan to hold up the train. The conductor tells the president's daughter of "Cheyenne" Harry's presence. She recalls a hold-up at a dance in her honor where he was recognized and asks that he be brought to her car.

The outlaws flag the train. The sheriff rushes to the door to find out the trouble, and is shot dead. Two of the outlaws recognize "Cheyenne," free him and take the girl. "Cheyenne" accompanies them. All board an auto and ride away. The conductor cuts the engine loose, rides to the nearest station, and gives the alarm. The father rushes to the scene in a private baggage car accompanied by a posse and their horses.

Meanwhile, the outlaws mount their horses and make for the mountains. Upon arrival they write a letter to the girl's father asking for money. They then bring out the sacks of plunder, which include six quarts of champagne, and begin drinking. "Cheyenne" tosses his wine to the floor; the others get drunk. They cut the cards to see which one goes into the other room where the girl is. The Mexican wins, starts to the door and is shot down by "Cheyenne."

A fight starts. As "Cheyenne" is about to lose his fight the posse arrives and place the men under arrest. The girl is released and tells her father of the bravery of "Cheyenne." The father offers "Cheyenne" a position. He makes good, and falls in love with the girl. The father sees this with alarm. He tells Harry he is the sort of man a woman either hates or loves, and asks him to go away. Harry pretends to the girl that the West is calling him. They say a hasty good-by, and part with the misunderstanding on her side uncleared.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

THE VOICE ON THE WIRE (Episode 10—May 20).—The cast: Shirley (Ben Wilson); Polly (Neva Gerber); "Red" Warren (Francis MacDonald); Renolds (Jos. Girard); Cronin (Howard Crampton); "Frisco" Ida (Evelyn Selby); James Welsh (Wadsworth Harris).

On the special train "Red" Warren sits by Polly, who is terrified. In the forward part of the car Renolds sits with bound hands and feet, Tokonuga and Taylor watching him carefully. "Red" instructs four crooks to watch from the rear of the train.

Shirley is about to step onto the other special train when he receives a message from Laschlas which causes him to let the train move on without him. He hires a machine and pursues the first special.

On the second special, Cronin questions the crook and smiles with satisfaction. They discover that Shirley is not on the train and Cronin asserts that he knew Shirley would double cross them. He suddenly stops the train.

"Red" is warned that the second special is following and he instructs his men to unhook the rear coach so that the second special will collide with it. Cronin stopped the train in time to prevent the collision, and he and his men hurry on foot to the next station and force a chauffeur to drive them to the city.

Polly is put in an auto with the crooks and they hasten to "Frisco" Ida's gambling house. Polly is now utterly dejected. "Red" and Ida sneer at her misery. They force her to phone James Welsh, a man of about fifty, who is a bon-vivant. But she is determined she will not concede to "Red's" orders further. Warren and Ida are afraid that she may give away their game. Then "The Voice" informs them that Polly will be there.

Shirley at last arrives at Welsh's apartments and tells Welsh "The Voice" has threatened to get him if he leaves his apartment that night, but Welsh laughs. The phone rings and Welsh hears Renolds' voice telling him not to go out without Polly, that he fears Shirley is delayed.

Renolds, in Ida's apartment, has succeeded in knocking over the phone and then rolling onto the floor is able to send the message.

"The Voice" now tells Shirley that "It" was on the wire; to remember eight o'clock. Getting a promise from Welsh that he won't leav without Polly, Shirley leaves and is attacked by Cronin and his men, who do not recognize him. Questioning the double-crossing crook, Shirley learns "Red" has taken Polly to "Frisco" Ida's gambling house and they all start for that place.

It is now eight o'clock. Polly lies on the bed, her eyes closed. Slowly the mytserious hand appears. She stirs restlessly while the fingers of the hand extend toward her.

TYPHOONS COOL & VENTILATE

TYPHOON FAN COMPANY 1544 B'WAY NEW YORK CITY

(Nellie Allen). Scenario by J. G. Alexander. Produced by Charles Swickard.

Jane Elliot tells her friend, Jeanne de Beaulieu, that after she graduates from the convent school she will leave for America, to make her home with an aunt whom she has never seen. Later, in the dormitory, the two girls pour over the newspaper account of Paris' greatest criminal, "The Phantom," who is terrorizing the city with his bold robberies. Hearing footsteps, they hastily extinguish the light and cling together with fright, because of the terrible adventure they have just read.

Meanwhile, Count de Beaulieu, Jeanne's father, is battling for his life, having been shot while making his getaway from the scene of his last escapade. His chief assistant, Franz Leroux, together with his deformed servant, "The Rat," holds his life in their hands. Leroux insists that he send for his daughter, and the Count agrees.

At the school a pajama party is in progress when Jeanne receives the message. She hurries to Paris and finds her father dying. He urges that she marry Leroux. She refuses Leroux announces that she is no better than he, being the daughter of a convict. The Count confesses he is "The Phantom." Jeanne bows obedience to her father's wishes, and he falls back dead.

A year later Jeanne awaits her husband's return with fear and hate. "The Rat" announces the police are on their trail, and that they must leave for America.

After they reach America Leroux forces Jeanne to assist him in his work. They enter a beautiful home, and Jeanne makes her way into a strange bedroom, while Leroux goes for the library safe. Gun in hand, turning her searchlight about, it rests on the word "Paris." Another instant and the room is a blaze of light.

Dazed with astonishment, she sees Jane Elliot. Explanations follow. Jane grabs the revolver, and confronts Leroux and commands him to move on. Jane plans to have Jeanne accompany her to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Marston. Hiding in the shadows Leroux learns the girls' destination and plans to follow.

The train is wrecked and Jane is killed. Jeanne decides to impersonate her friend. She removes the bracelet Leroux gave her and places it about Jane's arm. Leroux spies the bracelet, and tells "The Rat" that his wife has been killed in the wreck.

Meantime, Jeanne has been received by Mrs. Marston and her son, Henry. Frank Van Dyk, a wealthy but unscrupulous bachelor, is introduced and claims to have known Miss Elliot abroad. He is puzzled, but keeps the mystery to himself. The acquaintance between Henry and Jeanne ripens into love, but when he proposes the girl realizes the impossibility. She confesses her love, but declares they never can be married. Van Dyk also proposes and, on being refused, threatens to expose Jeanne if she doesn't marry him.

Leroux picks the Marston home for his next haul. He is astonished to find his wife, who is talking to Van Dyk, the latter having forced an entrance into her room. Leroux informs Van Dyk that he is Jeanne's husband. Henry appears and Jeanne explains how she was forced to marry Leroux and how she took Jane's name; that Van Dyk forced his attentions with threats of exposure. Ordering Van Dyk from the house, Henry turns to finish with Leroux, when a hand comes through the window, a gun is fired, and Leroux falls dead. Later "The Rat" is discovered writhing in pain. Confessing that Leroux double-crossed him, he falls back dead.

Jeanne is leaving when Henry breaks the news of her husband's death, and explains that he loves her for herself alone.

JERRY'S FINISHING TOUCH (May 17).—Jerry (George Ovey); Hank (George George); Bill (Louis Fitzroy); Sam (C. E. Feehan); Father (Harry Archer); Mother (Janet Sully); Daughter (Claire Alexander); Maid (Louise Horner).

In this skit Jerry becomes a motion picture magnate, learning much of a difficult art in a short time. Realizing that costuming is an important element in the equipment of a company, Jerry makes love to the maid of a wealthy woman who is out of town, persuades her that she has the makings of a star, and induces her to throw open the house of her employer to the hopeful actors and actresses whom Jerry has promised a million a year each to join him. The proprietor of the mansion returns and gets on the job with a shotgun. Exit Jerry and his pals amid amusing confusion.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS (No. 6—"The Overland Disaster"—Two parts—May 14).—The cast: Helen Holmes (Helen Holmes); Thomas Desmond (J. P. McGowan); Morton Webb (Thomas G. Lingham); Wallace Burke (Leo D. Mahoney); Steve Arnold (Paul C. Hurst); Homer Frost (William Buhler); Roy Wilson (William Brunton); Sam Lowenstein (Will Chapman); Lord Montrose (G. H. Fixhussen); Lady Montrose (Florence Holmes); "Buck" Masters (F. L. Hemphill); Officer Tommy Marshall (W. A. Behrens).

Thomas Desmond is made general superintendent of the "K" system and he launches a new line of investigation into the mysterious robberies that have come close to impoverishing the road during the previous two years. The first thing that impresses him is the suspicious behavior of Burke, the disgruntled "K" official, whom Helen Holmes insists is in league with the raiders.

Acting upon his suspicions with regard to Burke, the new superintendent trails him to the rear room office of Lowenstein, the pawnbroker, and, having overheard a criminal conspiracy between the two, with Helen as a witness, Desmond confronts Burke with proof of his guilt, and terrifies the conspirator into agreeing to betray his gang into the hands of the railway secret service organization.

Immediately following his agreement Burke wrecks the private train of the "K" system's president by derailing it. Roy, the president's son, and Helen Holmes' persistent suitor, narrowly escapes death with his father, owing his life to Miss Holmes' foresight and warning.

Helen's activities against the raiding gang harassing the "K" system have so narrowed the scope of their operations that early capture of the ringleaders is considered by Superintendent Desmond to be practically assured, but while the desperate gang sees the end of MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTION.

ANNIE-FOR-SPITE (American—Five Parts—May 14).—The cast: Annie Johnson (Mary Miles Minter); Willard Kaine Nottingham (George Fisher); Mrs. Emily Nottingham (Eugenie Ford); Mrs. M. Nottingham (Gertrude Le Brandt); Andrew Walters (George Periolat); Dr. James Macelroy (Robert Klein); Launders (Charles Newton); Miss Turner (Emma Kluge); Norah (Nellie Widen); Mrs. Cadogan (Lucille Ward). Directed by James Kirkwood.

Annie Johnson is an orphan living in a tenement as assistant to Mrs. Cadogan, mother of six children. She works in a department store basement all day and cares for the younger Cadogan children half the night.

The dream of Annie's life is that some time a rich lady will adopt her and that she will live in a marble palace, drive in big motor cars and wear beautiful clothes.

Annie's dream comes true through the hatred for the scheming relatives of Mrs. John Grant Nottingham, who adopted Annie for spite."

Emily, the old lady's sister, the chief schemer for possession of Mrs. Nottingham's millions, has a son named Willard, a manly young fellow who falls in love with Annie.

When Mrs. Nottingham, leaving her millions to "Annie-for-Spite," the relatives contest the will, and succeed in breaking it, but Willard marries Annie and they are very happy.

DAVID HORSLEY.

THE EYE OF ENVY (Five Parts—May 14). The cast: Ambition (Crane Wilbur); Ambition's Father (F. A. Thompsons); Ambition's Mother (Julia Jackson); the Sweetheart (Lillian Webster); Innocence (Gene Crosby); the Dream Maker (Edgar Sherrod); Avarice (Jode Mullally).

Ambition, a youth blessed with all the masculine graces, starts out on his donkey (Opportunity) into the world. He covets worldly possessions when he comes to realize what riches may mean. His envy becomes centered upon Avarice, a crafty old libertine, who is wealthy and powerful—but despised. Avarice is married to Innocence but he is a husband in name only. She became his wife to save her father from the ruin of an overwhelming debt.

Ambition and Avarice meet and a friendship springs up. Avarice views this with alarm. The wanderings of Ambition take him to a wishing tree, where, if one raps, the Maker of Dreams will appear and grant all wishes. Ambition summons the Dream Maker and utters the wish that he might have the wealth and power of Avarice to win Innocence.

Avarice also yearns for the love of his wife and he, too, visits the wishing tree. He believes if he could take the form and face of Ambition he might still love in the heart of Innocence. He makes his wish accordingly.

The Dream Maker brings Ambition and Avarice together and offers to grant each wish providing each man will give his soul to the other and at the death of either the remaining one will give up his body. The two men subscribe to the pact. The exchange of souls follows.

Ambition now possesses all Avarice's characteristics. He is transformed for the worse. Avarice, on the other hand, is softened and with Ambition's soul within him wins the love of Innocence. Ambition realizes his error, denounces the other and is thrust from the home of Avarice. He is killed by lightning while raging through the forest.

The Dream Maker then visits Avarice and tells him of Ambition's death. The pact to surrender the body at the death of the other is recalled. Avarice thus finds himself on the brink of the grave when all he craved is within his hands.

But Ambition, who has dreamed it all, is found asleep at the foot of the wishing tree. He wakens, realizes that wealth and power make but little and he is richer by far with the God given qualities he has possessed. He summons his faithful donkey, Opportunity, strikes out for home and finds that there resides true love and all that he holds dear.

GAUMONT.

TOURS AROUND THE WORLD (No. 15).—Two highly entertaining sections comprise this issue of "Tours Around the World." These are the castles of France and the Island of Barbados, a British possession, showing a state of civilization akin to that of the Virgin Islands.

The castles shown are situated along the River Loire. At Blois Castle the Duke of Guise was assassinated by order of Henry III; at Chambord Castle once lived Stanislas, King of Poland; at Ambroise Castle, where Charles VIII was born and died, is buried Leonardo da Vinci, painter of "Mona Lisa" and "The Last Supper." at Leprals Castle Charles VIII married Anne of Brittany, and at Chenonceaux Castle once lived Catherine de Medici.

The Barbados pictures give an excellent understanding of this island which was visited by Columbus in 1493. There are numerous views of Bridgetown, including the water front and the principal squares and buildings. The sugar estates are seen, as well as the life of the natives away from the towns. One unexpected picture is the tomb of Ferdinando Paleologus, last Christian emperor of Greece, who died in Barbados in 1678.

REEL LIFE, No. 55 (May 17).—When it comes to showing how things are done "behind the scenes" in business, Gaumont's "Reel Life" is intensely interestingly to all spectators. This number shows the "insides" of three entertaining industries, and as a fourth section entertains with a pretty school teacher who holds school on the beach clad in a one-piece bathing suit.

"Speeding the Spoken Word" is a romance of the telephone. The pictures show the surveyor as he breaks the trail for the line through the wilderness, the supply wagons that carry the materials for the countless lines, the tests for trouble, repair men at work, underground cables, the intricate switchboards, and what happens when San Francisco calls New York.

"The Toothsome Crab" is an article of diet which we take as a matter of course, never pausing to think of the operations necessary before the dainty is ready for the table. It is an interesting sight in this picture to see 2,500 crabs dropped into a steaming vat for cooking. How the meat is canned is shown. There are numbers of pictures of crabs and of the way the eggs adhere to the swimmerets until ready for hatching.

"Beating the High Cost of Furs" is nothing more than the counterfeiting of expensive pelts with the skins of the humble rabbit. This is an extensive industry in Southern California. The fur farm has 500 animals kept for breeding. All the processes whereby the skins are made ready for market are shown.

"A School on the Beach" shows a class of California "kiddies" in bathing suits. The teacher is a pulchritudinous personage in a one-piece bathing suit.

BERNSTEIN FILM PRODUCTIONS.

WHO KNOWS? (April).—The cast: Jerry Weaver (Betty Brice); Surgeon Thomas Rawn (Jay Morley); Hank Weaver and Dr. Raymond Pratt (Charles Arling); Shad Applegate (Sam Wood); Mrs. Weaver (Stella Wilson); Dusk (Edna May Wilson); Dawn (Dorothy Love Clark). Directed by Jack Pratt.

Dr. Raymond Pratt, county treasurer, is caught in the toils of political robbers and loses money belonging to the treasury. He disappears, leaving a note for his friend, Tom Hammond, in which he says he will not return until he has paid back all that he has lost. Hammond pays the loss out of his own pocket and dies in the poor house, unknown to Dr. Pratt, who never learns that his disgrace was never made public.

Years later Surgeon Thomas Rawn, nephew of Tom Hammond, is sent out West to investigate a mysterious disease, the blue death, which is rampant upon the "Quien Sabe" Ranch, and he finds the owner is his uncle's friend, who is masquerading as Hank Weaver, and struggling to amass enough money to pay off the debt.

Dr. Rawn falls in love with Weaver's daughter, Jerry, and the young lady thinks he is a spy from a rival ranch, and fights all his efforts at love making. It is not until the doctor discovers the cause of the blue death and saves her from it that she relents.

In the end her father learns that he is not in disgrace, a position is offered him in Washington, and at the embassy ball, Jerry and the doctor decide that it is no longer "Quien Sabe?" for now they know!

THE HERO (April)—Billy, the waiter in Mack's Cafe, has high ambitions. While he chases the tall glasses of foaming brew for his customers, his mind is filled with visions of fair dames clamoring for a nod or smile from him. As a waiter in a cheap cafe he is decidedly a frost, his only asset being an ability to handle rough patrons. During his leisure hours he wanders through the park flirting with the girls. His flirtations with the sweetheart of the Count get him in bad, and he is invited by the Count to indulge in a duel to the death. Billy espies Ethel struggling with two ruffians who have beaten up Babe. Billy routs the thugs and escorts Ethel home.

Ethel's ma is one of those grand dames whose first question to all strangers is, "Where is your family tree planted?" When she gives Billy the once over, Billy feels like an angleworm on a hook, but he comes back strong and flashes the Count's card before mother's eyes. The card wins Billy an invitation to Ethel's reception, much to the chagrin of Babe who is jealous of him. At the reception Billy gives a fine imitation of how to behave in society. Just when he is having the time of his life, Billy remembers that it is time to be back on the job, so without even pausing to say goodbye, he is on his way to the cafe.

The wine he consumed during the reception gets in its work, and Billy is in wrong more than ever. Babe has learned that Billy is an impostor, and he has discovered the cafe where he works. With the desire to show up his rival, Babe invited Ethel and other guests to go on a slumming trip and escorts them to the cafe. The first Billy knows of Ethel's presence is when he attempts to take her order, and then tries to pass himself off as a guest. This strategy is frustrated by Babe, who openly denounces Billy and in the mix-up that follows Billy not only gets the gate from Ethel, but a trimming from Babe as well.

TREASON (Five Parts—May 14).—The cast: Floria Natarre (Lois Wilson); Luella Brysk (Dorothy Davenport); Pettrus Baariot (Allen Holubar); Gergus Natarre (Joseph Girrard); Rodane Keestelt (George Pearce); Danick Rysson (Edward Hearn); Jossef Natarre (Leo Pierson); Nyrkess Ledyard (Burton Law); Sedrik Radore (L. M. Wells). Scarnio written by Robert Lee Weigert. Produced by Allen Holubar.

The principality of Statiria is at war with a neighboring nation. Pettrus Baariot is assigned to duty as telegraph operator on the firing line. His chief, Danick Rysson, envies him so keenly that his passion turns to hate.

Floria Natarre, daughter of the head of the secret service, is in love with Baariot and Rysson designs to win this love while Baatiot has gone. Luella Byrsk, paramour of Rysson, jealous, watches his every move. Thus matters stand after Baariot has gone off to report. There he distinguishes himself and wins high praise from his government.

Baariot, wounded, is first sent to the hospital and ordered home as soon as he is in condition to make the journey. Rysson makes advances to Floria and is repulsed. Great is Floria's joy when Baariot is sent home on sick leave to recuperate. The government sends an order to Rysson that he shall assign Baariot to "light duty," but Rysson changes it so that Baariot is degraded to the position of messenger for Rysson's dispatches.

Baariot becomes resentful against his government. He tells his troubles to Rodant Keestelt, who, pretending to be a togaconist, is a spy in the enemy's service. Keestelt seeks a copy of the new telegraph code and urges Baariot to procure it for the enemy's use, promising Baariot a rich reward—enough to permit the traitor to marry Floria and spend the rest of his life in America. Baariot yields but on the instant he delivers the code his conscience smites him and he disdains the reward.

Gergus Natarre, of the secret service, who knows of Baariot's treachery, begs his prospective son-in-law to undo the great wrong he has committed against his country and recover the code. At the instant Baariot is leaving to overtake Keestelt, the minister of war calls upon him to confer a belated decoration, the reward of his government for Baariot's great bravery. Through a mistake a bestowal of the honor has been overlooked. Luella Brysk has betrayed Rysson's treachery toward Baariot and an apology from the government comes with the honors the minister of war is empowered to confer.

Baariot dashes away in an automobile to overtake Keestelt. Gergus Natarre has been struck down by Keestelt's motor when the secret service chief attempts to capture the spy and recover the code. Natarre is taken to a hospital where, by strange fate, Baariot is soon brought in and placed in a cot beside the only man who now knows of his treachery.

Baariot had overtaken Keestelt in his automobile. When a struggle ensued Keestelt's machine was percipitated over a bluff and the syp was killed. The code was recovered by Baariot who escaped more than the severe injuries that brought him to the hospital. The two men swear secrecy and leave the way open to a happy ending of the narrative.

THE BOOK AGENT (5 parts—May 14).—Harry Kelly makes his living by selling "The Housewife's Guide," "The Farmhand's Almanac" and such literature. His adventures begin with an escapade in a young ladies' seminary, the main result of which is his meeting Mollie Lester. Later his wanderings bring him to Mollie again. She is now nurse to Crandall Barker, who is wealthy. He is also an invalid. Mollie is his granddaughter. The audience knows this. Barker doesn't—until the film's end, for many years since he had disinherited her mother for a foolish reason, of course.

Kelly's sunshiny disposition charms old Barker so much that he hires the book agent as a rather glorified jester. For this kindness, Kelly repays him by thwarting three men who are anxious for the invalid to pass on that they may benefit from his estate. The trio of hopefuls is made up of Dana Sneed, Barker's nephew; the Rev. A. Ginem and Dr. Newdope. The Rev. Ginem even abducts Barker. When Kelly rescues his master he finds him in strong constitution from having read one of the books he sold him. The book agent works fast then. He establishes Mollie's identity and Barker decides to leave his money to her. He likewise leaves her to Kelly.

ONE LAW FOR BOTH (8 parts—April).—The cast: Elga (Rita Jolivet); Ossip (James Morrison); Helen (Leah Baird); Hutchinson (Vincent Serrano); Slazek (Paul Capellani); Magda (Helen Arnold); Count De Fernac (Pedro De Cordoba); Renee (Margaret Greene); The Governor (Anders Randolf). Written and directed by Ivan Abramson.

Elga Pulaski, the orphaned daughter of noble parents, who resides in the city of Warsaw, with her sickly brother, Ossip, is a member of a secret revolutionary society, whose object is the liberation of Poland and Russia from the yoke of the Romanoffs. She is loved by Baron Jan Slazek, an impoverished Polish nobleman.

Ossip dislikes Slazek, who is in fact a spy in the employ of the Russian government, and who causes the arrest of Ossip and the members of the secret society. Slazek aids in the escape of Elga who, with a view to liberating those arrested, calls upon General Gourko, the Governor-General of the Province of Warsaw. She pays with her honor the price of the prisoners' liberty.

Ossip goes to New York, where under the name of Gregory Sergeioff he earns his living as a piano teacher. Elga, of whom the Governor is enamored, and who has become the subject of his unwelcome attentions, later goes to New York in the company of friends, through whom she meets Norman Hutchinson, the owner of an influential newspaper, and whose book on Modern Diplomacy she translates.

Helen Hutchinson, Norman's sister, mistaking the glamour of a title for love, is married to Count De Fernac, whose marriage to Helen was prompted by her wealth. Helen, learning that De Fernac has a mistress who is the mother of his child, separates from him. Hutchinson and Elga marry. Elga introduces Ossip into her home in the guise of her piano teacher and under his assumed name.

De Fernac, realizing Helen's nobility, learns to truly love her. He quarrels with his mistress and appeals to Hutchinson for aid in effecting a reconciliation between Helen and himself. Hutchinson is unsuccessful in his appeal to Helen, and enlists the aid of Elga, who succeeds. Later she tells her brother, Ossip, of her success and is horrified to learn that Ossip loves Helen and had hoped to marry her in the event of her procuring a divorce. Elga is overcome by Ossip's declaration. Ossip takes her into his arms to comfort her, and in that position she is discovered by Hutchinson. Questioned by her husband, she confesses in the absence of Ossip, that he is her brother. Hutchinson compels her to tell the cause of the assumption of another name by Ossip, and Elga confesses that the price for the release of Ossip and the other members of the secret (revolutionary) society in Warsaw, was the surrender of herself to the Governor-General. She also confesses that Slazek, learning of her surrender to the Governor, threatened to make her shame known to the world and that in order to prevent his doing so she killed him. She also tells Hutchinson that Ossip in order to shield her, assumed the guilt of the murder.

Hutchinson casts her out of his heart and home. She is leaving when Helen learns the cause of her going. Helen appeals to her brother, declaring that he requested her to forgive her husband, whose sin was the result of passion, and that he ought to forgive Elga whose sin was prompted by her sacrifice for others. Hutchinson realizes the justice of Helen's plea, begs Elga's forgiveness, assuring her that he will gladly surrender his appointment to the Cabinet which he has received, and and that they will live in the safety of private life, and the assurance that there is one law for both.

THE HALF BLACK (Three Reels—April 30)—The cast: Joel March (Yale Boss); Wallace Clausen (Ogden Childs); Peg Leg (Harry Harrington); Coach Remsen (Frank Gargan); Bartlett Cloud (Scott Fletcher); Wesley Blair (Thomas McNamara); Farmer Marsh (William Wadsworth); Mrs. Marsh (Jessie Stevens); Professor Wheeler (George Brennan); Professor Dupres (William Orlamond); Proctor (F. B. Phillips); Coach of St. Eustace (Jack Brown); Cook, the Fat Boy (Vincent McManus); Adapted from Ralph Henry Barbour's book by P. H. Sloane. Directed by Benjamin Tourbett.

Joel March's parents send him to Hilton School for a solitary term. Knowing that their meagre means will not pay his tuition and expenses for a longer period, he determines to win the Goodwin Scholarship, which carries tuition and $250 a year. Although rural in his mannerisms, he is decidedly likeable, and gains the regard of all his fellow students with the exception of Bartlett Cloud, a wealthy snob, and Wallace Clausen, a weak imitator.

Cloud is jealous of the football prowess of March, and with Clausen's assistance cuts the chapel bellrope and places nearby a letter addressed to Joel, in an effort to fasten the guilt upon him. Despite his protestations of innocence, Joel is placed on probation by the faculty, and barred from all athletic activities until such time as he may be reinstated. The turn of events fills him with dismay, particularly as his grit has won him a place on the varsity team.

Later Joel rescues Cloud and Clausen from drowning, but the former feels no remorse over what he has done to bring his rival into disrepute. Clausen, however, weakens, and confesses to the faculty the part he played with Cloud in the bellrope escapade. Joel is reinstated just in time to get into the last few minutes of play in the Hilton-St. Eustace game, the big gridiron event of the season, and snatches victory from impending defeat. He plunges through the line for a touchdown and kicks the goal, Hilton winning by the score of 6 to 5. Joel is chosen captain of the eleven, but as he is announcing that he cannot return the following year, he is notified that he has won the Goodwin Scholarship. He does not know that Blair, a friendly rival, preferred to be a gentleman rather than a scholar, and sacrificed the honor for his companion who could not afford to lose it. Cloud is dismissed for his treachery and sneakiness, and Joel rises to a position of leadership in the student body of Hilton.

David Balfour, a young boy, is shanghaied at the instigation of an uncle who is desirous of obtaining property that rightfully belongs to the lad. A tyrant of a captain and two mates transform the brig into a hell-ship for David, who has been pressed into service as a cabin boy, and when he meets with Alan Breck, a Scottish outlaw, he plans his escape. The two hold the ship's crew at bay while they make their way over the side into a small boat. They are finally picked up and landed on the Scottish coast, where they become involved in many adventures.

The shorter units of the five reel lock program are "The Portrait in the Attic," a romantic drama featuring Shirley Mason; and "He Couldn't Get Up in the Morning," a short comedy.

THE SOUL OF A MAGDALEN (Popular Plays and Players—Five Parts—May 14).—The cast: Heloise Broulette (Mme. Petrova); Leland Norton (Wyndham Standing); Carter Vail (Mahlon Hamilton); Mrs. Vail (Mrs. Mathilde Brundage); Lil (Violet Reed); Alice Vail (Gene Burnell); Mrs. Broulette (Frances Walton); Louis Broulette (Richard Bartholmes); Valet (Boris Korlin); Doctor Crane (Frank Moore). Directed by Burton L. King.

Heloise Broulette, the sole suport of an invalid mother and a young, crippled brother, tries to keep the wolf from the door by teaching languages, but her pupils are few and the remuneration small. She is in despair when told by the doctor that an operation is necessary to save her mother's life. She tries to borrow the money for it, but is unable to do so.

Leland Norton, a patron of the arts, sees Heloise, admires her, and goes to her studio on the pretext of having her translate a foreign book into English for him. Norton has a secret room which he calls his "Garden of Eden." He wants Heloise for the newest "Eve" to grace it. Discovering that she is in the depths of despair he asks her to deliver some work at his home, and then apparently in search for a rare old book, takes from the safe quanities of money, jewels and costly works of art. In her need, Heloise is overwhelmed at the sight of so much wealth. Norton tells her it is all hers, for so long as she needs it. Fully realizing his meaning, she says coldly, "It is a bargain."

Mrs. Broulette recovers, and cannot say enough in praise of her daughter for the luxuries with which she surrounds her. Mrs. Morris, the woman who is taking care of her, has a "sporty" daughter, Lil, who tires of hearing Heloise's praises sounded. She works in a fashionable modiste's establishment, from which Norton selects a number of gowns for Heloise. She sees Heloise when she goes to deliver them, and recognizes her when she comes to visit her mother. Being well acquainted with Norton's unsavory reputation, she attempts blackmail, but her efforts to collect money are repulsed by Heloise. In revenge, Lil tells Mrs. Broulette the truth. Mrs. Broulette refuses to believe it, and Lil offers to prove her statement.

She takes Heloise's mother to Norton's home while a party is in progress. Having struck up a flirtation with the valet, she succeeds in opening the secret door, and the two women enter the "Garden of Eden" just as a toast is being proposed to Heloise. Mrs. Broulette falls heavily to the floor, and does not survive the shock.

Heloise follows her brother, Louis, to a suburb, where he is slowly gaining strength after his hard work on an invention. She becomes secretary to Carter Vail, an author, who lives with his mother and sister. They are kind-hearted peo-

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE GRAY HORSE TROOP (5 parts—May 7).—The cast: Capt. George Curtis (Antonio Moreno); Jennie, his sister (Mrs. Bradbury); Crawling Elk (Otto Lederer); Cut-Finger (Al Jennings); His Wife (Neola May); Cal Streeter (Robert Burns); Lawson (Edward Cecil); Ex-Senator Brisbane (H. A. Barrows); Elsie, his daughter (Edith Storey). Directed by William Wolbert.

Trying to prove that as an Indian agent he can better the red man's condition by kindness, Captain George Curtis fights political greed and the cattlemen's desire for the Indian lands and wins respect of his opponents, and the approval of his government. The Indians begin to resent imposition by settlers and government agents who are unscrupulous.

Curtis is made agent as a measure of reform. He dispossesses the plotting agent, Streeter, but his position is made difficult by Elsie Brisbane, the heroine, niece of Streeter and daughter of ex-Senator Brisbane. She hates Streeter, but her patrician breeding makes her hostile to the handsome young soldier. Going home to Washington she learns of Streeter's dishonesty and writes a letter of apology to Curtis. The stockmen open a campaign on Curtis before Congress and he goes there to defend himself. This, offset by agitation fomented by the stockmen on the frontier, makes the Indians dangerous. Elsie, although engaged to Lawson, a wealthy landowner not unfriendly to the Indians, follows Curtis back to the reservation to see how he comes out of his difficulties there. Learning of the engagement Captain Curtis is disheartened, for he has fallen in love with the girl.

The murder of a sheep herder brings a crisis. Curtis refuses to surrender an innocent victim of the white men's wrath to them. Elsie backs up Curtis and saves him from being mobbed. The situation flares up again the next day, and a triangular battle between white men, Indians, and troops is only averted by the arrival of the latter in such force as to overawe the crowd. Curtis induces the Indians to give up the real murderer. This proves to be old Crawling Elk's son, who flees to the hills. Curtis, single-handed, arrests him.

Now he alone stands between the mob and the culprit. Through the efforts of Elsie he gets the prisoner safely to town. Brisbane, who has arrived from the East, complicates the situation by rousing the white men, and Curtis is burned in effigy. Curtis, without a friend in the territory, still manages to declare his love for Elsie, having discovered that her engagement is not final. The mob gets the Indian prisoner, but under the stimulation of Elsie's love, which she has now declared to him, Curtis subdues the mob and brings the situation back to normal.

A ROMANCE OF THE REDWOODS (Five Parts—May 14).—The cast: Jenny Lawrence (Mary Pickford); "Black" Brown, a road agent (Elliott Dexter); Jim Lyn, head of the Vigilance Committee (Charles Ogle); Sam Sparks, a gambler (Tully Marshall); Dick Roland, a miner (Raymond Hatton); the Sheriff (Walter Long); John Lawrence, Jenny's uncle (Winter Hall).

Around the table of a New England parlor are seated friends of the Widow Lawrence. What to do with Jenny, the only child, is the topic of the conversation. Several offer to take the little girl to live with them, when the lawyer announces that the last wish of her mother was that she be sent to her uncle, who left for the California gold mines two months previous. The idea appeals to Jenny and thus, during the big gold rush of '49, she leaves for California to live with her uncle.

John Lawrence, the uncle, has been killed by Indians and his body is found by "Black" Brown, a road agent who is being pursued by the sheriff's posse. Substituting the clothes and papers of the dead man for his own, the bandit passes as a wealthy man from Boston and lives in the little mining camp of "Strawberry Flats." In secret, however, he still plies his outlaw trade on stage coaches and pack trains.

Jenny arrives at the cabin of "John Lawrence" and begins to straighten things out. From her bag she takes a pair of carpet slippers which she embroidered and with a little card places them on the mantel to surprise her uncle. When Jack, as the imposter is known, enters, Jenny asks the whereabouts of her uncle. With an evil leer the bandit advises her that he is "uncle," and tells her of her uncle's death. Later in order to protect herself from the hands of a ruffian, Jenny is compelled to establish herself as the niece of Jack.

At the cabin Jack finds the slippers and the card, "With love, from Jenny." He begins to realize the sincerity of the little girl. Jenny refuses to sleep in the house and is put to bed in the horse shed and the next morning makes the best of things. Taking complete charge of the house, she prepares for Jack the first good breakfast he has had for some time and a warm friendship springs up between the two.

One morning, while cleaning up the cabin, Jenny finds a handkerchief in which are cut two eye holes and suddenly realizes what this man reallly does. In the meantime one of the miners is robbed while taking a load of gold to the depot to be shipped home. In rage his partner rushes to the saloon to kill the sheriff for not giving the gold proper guard but the sheriff draws first and the miner drops with a bullet through his heart. Jenny connects the robbery with the handkerchief, picks up a letter to his mother from the murdered miner's hand and goes to her cabin where she prepares to leave immediately.

Jack enters with a new dress, bonnet and doll for Jenny but the latter refuses them and shows the letter of the dead boy to his mother, together with the bandit mask she discovered. Jack acknowledges his guilt and vows his love for her. Jenny promises to stay if he will send the gold to the boy's mother and live "straight," which Jack agrees to do. Later Jack becomes discouraged with his lack of success as a miner and determines to "turn one more trick." He holds up the coach in which unknown to him Jenny is riding. Drawing a little derringer she shoots at the outlaw, wounding his hand.

Back at the cabin Jack pleads with Jenny that he could not let her support him with the washing which she had been doing for the miners, but Jenny is not won over. At this point a knock comes at the door and the Vigilance Com-rather bitter. Jenny throws her shawl over the gold sack and then begins a battle of wits. Jack is finally cornered, however, and his immediate execution is arranged despite the pleadings of Jenny. Just as her sweetheart is about to be hung from the cabin rafters, Jenny returns to the room with a little white dress, which she has taken from the doll, and the apparent significance of the situation dawns upon the men, who are very fond of her. They agree to give Jack his freedom if he marries the girl at once, and a justice of the peace performs the ceremony. After the newly married couple have left the cabin for all time the men find a half naked doll and they realize they have been tricked. Several grip their guns and are about to start after the couple, when Jim Lyn, the leader, orders the men back, saying: "Boys, I reckon when twenty men have been fooled by one woman —they better take their medicine."

WORLD PICTURES.

MORAL COURAGE (Peerless—5 parts—May 14).—The cast: Mary McClinton ((Muriel Ostriche); Chadwick Anson (Arthur Ashley); Joshua Anson (Edward Elkas); Willie McDonald (Clarence Elmer); Angus McClinton (Robert Forsyth); Nancy Somers (Julia Stuart); Baggot (Richard Turner); Walter Green (Edmund Cobb). Directed by Romaine Fielding.

Joshua Anson came to America from Scotland, and by hard work became the owner of a large ribbon mill. He loved his money, his power, his position—but better than all these, he loved his son, Chadwick, and aimed to give him the advantages of wealth and education. Returning from college Chadwick is attracted to Mary McClinton, who is employed in the mill and is the daughter of the oldest employee. Anson tells Chadwick the day he chooses any one of the several girls of prominent social position, he will come into control of the Anson fortune. Chadwick decides he has been loafing too long, and goes to work in the office of the mill. Anson is pleased. Most of Chadwick's time is occupied in watching Mary and protecting her from the unwelcome advances of George Baggot, his father's secretary.

McClinton considers Willie McDonald, another mill worker, a suitable match for his daughter. While Willie is visiting Mary one evening, she slips away to meet Chadwick at the skating pond. Willie on his way home sees Mary with Chadwick, and returning to McClinton, withdraws his offer of marriage. McClinton goes to the pond and after threatening Chadwick not to trifle with his little girl, takes Mary home.

The next day, Mr. and Mrs. Barker, with their daughter, Evelyn, come to the mill. Evelyn is the girl Anson has selected for his son. McClinton tells Anson Chadwick has been trifling with his daughter, and that it must be stopped. When Anson's efforts to prevent their meeting fail, he orders Baggot to find cause for which he might discharge Mary.

Walter Green is promised five hundred dollars for pulling off what he is told is to be a joke on Mary. He pays court to the unsuspecting girl, and to make Chadwick jealous, she accepts Green's attentions. When she refuses to reject the stranger's suit, Chadwick leaves her in a rage. The following Sunday she snubs him in his father's presence. Mary accompanies Baggot and Green on an automobile trip. The car breaks down and they are compelled to repair to a roadhouse. While luncheon is being served Baggot drugs Mary's coffee. Mary sees this in a small pocket mirror. Baggot leaves to phone Anson, who starts out for the roadhouse. Mary substitutes her cup for Green's, pretends to be overcome, and is carried to a bedroom where she makes her escape through a window. Baggot leaves, fearing Anson will learn that it is a frame-up. Green falls into a stupor. Anson arrives and finds Green, whom he believes to be drunk. The innkeeper, fearing the law, denies that a girl accompanied Green. On his return, Anson dismisses Baggot.

Meanwhile Mary reaches home, where Chadwick is waiting and they elope that night. McClinton returns and finds Mary's note which asks him not to worry about her. He believes the worst when he learns Chadwick went with his daughter, and erases her name from the family Bible. When she returns with a marriage license, he is surprised.

Anson asks Mary what amount she wants for restoring his son's freedom. She is indignant, but when he tells her he will disown them both if she refuses to divorce him, she agrees to a separation, stipulating that Anson pay all costs and give her one hundred thousand dollars. Anson advances her enough money to go to Reno and taunts Chadwick with the fact that his wife has proved how much she loved him when she was willing to sell him to the highest bidder.

Six months later, Mary returns with the divorce decree and Anson gives her the money. Mary immediately proposes to Chadwick and when he realizes what she has done, he takes her in his arms.

They face Anson, and Mary tells him he forced her to divorce his son by taking away everything from them, but now that she is wealthy they are independent. Feeling that she is more than a match for him as an adversary, Anson relents. Mary's father enters and there is a complete reconciliation.

THE GIRL AT HOME (Lasky—Five Parts—April 26).—The cast: Jean Hilton (Vivian Martin); Jimmie Dexter (Jack Pickford); Squire Padgate (James Neill); Diana Parish (Olga Grey); Mary Dexter (Edythe Chapman); Detective Hagen (Billy Elmer).

Jean Hilton, a wealthy orphan, is in love with Jimmie Dexter, with whose mother she lives. Mrs. Dexter is about to send Jimmie to college when she loses her small income. Jean hears this, and, through Squire Padgate, her guardian, induces Mrs. Dexter to let her supply the funds. Jimmie goes to school and promptly gets in with a fast set of older students. He meets Diana Parish, a young cabaret singer, and immediately falls in love with her, and when he proudly declares that his monthly check of $200 is his weekly allowance, she makes a net for him. Jimmie spends most of his time with Diana, while his mother and the little girl back home are doing their own housework in order to help him.

Jimmie expects to go home on Thanksgiving Day and great preparations are being made by his mother and Jean for his arrival, but he meets a crowd of friends, has a mild celebration and misses his train. The next day Squire Padgate sees him and gives him a severe scolding. Jimmie promises to do better and next morning banks his check for $200. The same day Diana, seeing a set of furs worth $350, decides to buy them and get the money from her college boy admirers. Jimmie gives her a check for $35, which she raises to $350. The check is turned back to the bank and Detective Hagen is sent to investigate. Diana tells him Jimmie gave her the check, and Jimmie, to protect the girl, says he did, and will make it good upon the arrival of his parent that day. Diana realizing the danger, pleads with Jimmie to save her. Just as she puts her arms about his neck in walk Squire Padgate, his mother and Jean. The Squire tells Jimmie bluntly that it is Jean's money which is supporting him, Jean breaks the engagement and Jimmie flings himself from the room, announcing he will earn his own living. He has a hard time of it trying to make his living. Finally Detective Hagen meets him and induces him to return home. Jimmie does so and all is forgiven.

HEART'S DESIRE (Famous Players—Five Parts—April 30).—The cast: Fleurette (Marie Doro); Paul Le Roque (Albert Roscoe); Henri Le Roque (Mario Majeroni); Jacques (Jean Gauthier); Helene St. Simon (Helen Dahl); Le Roque's secretary (Harry Lee); Mother Mathilde (Gertrude Norman).

Henri Le Roque has inherited the tiny island of St. Anne's and writes his nephew, Paul, a young physician, to join him there, especially to look after him, as his heart is troubling him. The younger man's heart is more or less out of commission also, as Helene, his fiancee, has just broken off their engagement because of his apparent poverty. On the island, matters are not proceeding to the satisfaction of Henri Le Roque, who resolves to make his tenants pay much more rent than they had to his predecessor.

There is one little family, however, which has not yet felt the severity of the new master's rule, and this is the home of Fleurette, who keeps a home for her grandmother and small sisters and brothers. Their family had been exempted from rent paying by an ancestor of the present master whose life had been saved by an ancestor of theirs. From that time it had been the custom for them to bring on rent day nothing but a cluster of lilies from their garden. When the girl brings these, Paul, who is watching the proceedings, is touched by her beauty, and annoyed at his uncle's sharpness. Vowing to help the little family, he proceeds on his errand, which happens to be hunting. He accidentally kills the girl's cow but replaces it by another which he appropriates from his uncle's estate.

When his uncle visits the little home to collect the rent, he sees the cow and accuses them of stealing it. Fleurette does not know where the animal came from, and regards it as a "gift from the saints," but, fortunately, Paul arrives in time to explain the matter. This causes Fleurette's vilage sweetheart many jealous moments.

In an effort to appease the "Seigneur," Fleurette carries him a rose from her garden which he admired. She takes it in the evening and Henri, seeing her through the shrubbery, shoots at her, thinking her a thief. Her arm is badly hurt but Paul cares for her, and she is kept at the castle until she can be moved.

In the meantime, Paul's old fiancee, Helene, hearing where he is and that he will one day inherit the island, decides to visit the place and comes with a party of friends. Uncle Henri, thinking to please his nephew, invites them all to become his guests. Helene, seeing Paul's devoted care of Fleurette, becomes jealous, and makes the girl believe that she is engaged to Paul. Fleurette is heartbroken at this and leaves the castle only to find that the enraged peasants, furious at the unaccustomed oppression, are planning to attack the castle that night. Fleurette, although still weak from her wound, rushes back to warn her friends and arrives just as the furious crowd of islanders is about to attack. Standing between them and Henri, Fleurette risks her life. Her village sweetheart, mad with rage, is about to murder her when he is stopped by a shot from one of the more reasonable peasants. After this scene, Helene decides that the hotel will be a more comfortable place for her and her friends, especially when she turns to find Fleurette happy in Paul's arms.

IN CURIOUS COLOMBO (Burton Holmes Travelogue No. 64—April 30).—Ceylon is the land of perpetual and exceeding beauty, her people picturesque in dress and quaint in personality; often amusing and always entertaining in their methods of daily life. Mr. Holmes will first take your patrons along the beautiful palm-fringed shores of Ceylon and finally bring them to the city of Colombo from the sea. In Colombo bathing is the chief topic of interest, every man, woman and child bathe in the waters of Colombo.

PARAMOUNT-BRAY PICTOGRAPH (No. 65—April 30).

Unmasking the Mediums—Hereward Carrington, the American authority on psychic research, working in co-operation with the Bray studios, discloses before the camera, in a series of most interesting releases, the tricks that have fooled some of the most eminent scientists.

Mr. Carrington has actually been able to prove that more than 98 per cent. of all so-called phenomena are fake. The remaining 2 per cent. are in no wise of spiritual origin, it being simply a case of where the supernatural is natural and not yet understood.

This is sure to prove an interesting topic and will serve toward enlightening those of a superstitious turn of mind.

Transplanting the Peasant Arts of Europe.—In this section the most remarkable of all peasant arts is shown, "lace making." The picture was only made possible because some of these women peasants, driven from their homes by the invading Germans, came to America, where they could pursue in peace the art they loved.

One of these women in her little home in the outskirts of New York City was discovered by a member of the editorial staff of Pictographs and consented to pose before the camera that Paramount audiences might have the opportunity of seeing how this remarkable work is done.

Preparing the School Boy Athletes.—In order for a youth to have a healthy mind a healthy body is essential. In this section of the Pictographs it shows one of the student corps of one of America's foremost institutions of learning going through a setting-up drill. Each set of muscles is called upon through certain forms of exercise, and those exercises can, by the watchful observer, be duplicated in the home of every man, woman and child.

Stung.—The Bray studios have deviated somewhat from their regular cartoon subjects in order to help the exhibitors do their "bit" in this great national crisis. The cartoon in this release is political and touches on the submarine question, the point that brought the United States into the war.

Here we find Bill Hohenzollern handed a new toy by his trusty naval chief, Von Tirpitz, in the form of a submarine. He takes a bang with it at John Bull and his allied playmates, each in turn being decidedly upset. It is not until he takes a shot at Uncle Sam that he finds he has hit a hornet's nest.

SACRIFICE (Lasky—Five parts—May 3).—The cast includes Margaret Illington, Jack Holt, Minter Hall and others.

Margaret Illington makes her screen debut in this picture, playing a double role. She portrays the part of Mary Stephani, the daughter of an important personage in the little kingdom of Zandria, and as Vesta Boris, a notorious dancer in a neighboring principality, Nodorff. The two countries are at war, and Vesta, who is in reality the daughter of Stephani, is induced to get the enemy's plans from Count Wenzel, who has long had her as his favorite. In the struggle to get the desired information, the Count is killed, and when Vesta is about to make her escape she finds her passport has been recalled, but on finding her sister Mary and noticing the marked resemblance of herself and this girl, whom she had never seen before, she induces her to give up her passport to replace the one which has been recalled.

Armed with Mary's passport, Vesta reaches Zandria with the information and saves her country from attack. Then the trick is discovered, Mary is seized and sentenced to be shot. Learning of this, Vesta rushes back to Nordoff in time to save her half-sister. Vesta is shot as a traitor and Mary finds herself free to marry Paul Ekald, with whom she has been in love.

THE NEGLECTED WIFE (Episode No. 1, "The Woman Alone"—Two Parts—May 13).—The cast: Margaret Warner (Ruth Roland); Horace Kennedy (Roland Bottomley); Mary Kennedy (Corene Grant); Edgar Doyle (Neil Hardin); Frank Norwood (Philo McCullough).

Horace Kennedy, a successful lawyer, is drifting from his attentive and loyal wife, Mary, for no apparent reason, save that she is fading and he is losing interest in her. On the charge made by Margaret Warner, a struggling magazine writer, Kennedy disbars Attorney Doyle, contending that as a man must protect the honor of his wife and home, so must we guard our courts from prowling jackals.

Because of his masterly handling of the disbarment case, a magazine requests Kennedy to write twelve articles dealing with the subject. Mary, his wife, persuades him against his wishes, to write these articles, suggesting that she will take his dictation on the typewriter. She proves an inefficient helper and the first night on which they work she falls and sprains her wrist, making it necessary for Kennedy to look elsewhere for assistance. Margaret, living in a cheap boarding-house is poor, as her short story manuscripts are returned day after day by the magazines. Desiring to help her Kennedy engages her for the work.

Doyle, forced out of his profession, continues his work in the field of crooked-stock jobbing, taking the hard earned savings of the poor for bogus mining stock. The last night of their joint work, Kennedy accompanies Margaret home, but on their way they are caught in an accident. Kennedy escapes injury, but Margaret faints. Calling to her to speak to him, Kennedy, with Margaret in his arms, rushes to a physician. Is the girl he is beginning to love to be thus taken from him?

MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS (Episode No. 9, "When Jail Birds Fly"—Two Parts—May 13).—The cast: Philippa Brewster (Molly King); Peter Hale (Leon Bary); Bridgey Bentley (Ralph Stuart); Dick Annessley (Gladden James); The Masked Stranger (????).

With the assistance of the mysterious masked stranger, Peter whose inheritance of the Hale millions depends upon his marriage to the girl of the double cross, and Dick Annessley, cub reporter, who is trying to unravel the mystery, escape from jail where they landed as a result of their attempt to get evidence against "Bridgey" Bentley, social gangster.

Learning through the Stranger of Bentley's plot to marry Philippa that night, Peter and Annessley arrange a kidnapping party. They hold up Bentley's automobile and carry off Bridgey and Philippa as prisoners to a deserted castle. There they try to get from Bentley a confession of his nefarious crime. He refuses, and, securely bound, is left a prisoner over night. Philippa, caught by Peter in an attempt to rescue Bridgey, is also locked in a separate room.

The next day, when Peter and Annessley return, they find Bentley willing to sign the confession they want. He asserts that the only reason he desires to marry Philippa is because he believes her to be the girl of the double cross and he is anxious to get his hands on the Hale fortune.

Upon his release, Bentley hurries to the district attorney with his story. He tells how Peter and Annessley, having escaped from jail, forced him to sign a confession. The prosecutor, greatly disturbed, rushes off to the jail and to Bentley's great surprise finds Peter and Annessley securely locked in their cells. It develops that, aided by the stranger, they escaped with a gang of masons working in the jail and returned to their cells in the evening in the same disguise.

Philippa, returning to the home of her friend, Therese Traver, starts to tell the story of her thrilling experience. Miss Traver is greatly surprised, reminding Philippa that on the previous day, when she said she was held under lock and key at the castle, she spent the day shopping with her. As proof, she shows Philippa, to her amazement, the results of the shopping expedition.

Miriam Somerset, hounded by her mother to marry in order to regain their lost fortunes, a rich but intemperate man quite a number of years older than she, had fallen in love with and secretly married Richard Cameron, a young and good looking man who told no one who he was or where he came from. Richard was called out of town, and the train on which he was traveling was wrecked. His name was among those missing.

The pressure brought to bear on Miriam by her mother was too much, so believing Richard lost in the wreck she married Van Horn, but her mother failed to live long enough to view the life to which she forced her daughter. Life became unbearable. Her brother, Page, continued to live his life around the clubs.

Receiving a wire from his chief, Richard and his companion had left the midnight express at a small station just before the wreck, in order to track an international spy. Unsuccessful in their task they returned to New York in order to take up the trail that would lead them to Europe. Thinking to see his wife for a few moments, Richard went to her old home but only to learn that she had moved. Going to the new address he found the true state of affairs and explanations cleared the air, but before he could leave the house, Van Horn returned home intoxicated. They hid in their boudoir but unfortunately he came there also, and in the ensuing fight he was killed. Her brother, on circumstantial evidence, was sent to prison for the crime. She remained in New York and Richard went to Europe and captured his prey, but he belonged to the service which knows no word but obey.

TRIANGLE FILM CORP.

THE PINCH HITTER (Ince-Kay Bee—5 parts—April 29).—The cast: Joel Parker (Charles Ray), Abbie Nettleton (Sylvia Bremer), Obediah Parker (Joseph J. Dowling), Jimmie Slater (Jerome Storm), Alexis Thompson (Darrel Foss), Coach Nolan (Louis Durham).

Joel Parker is known among the inhabitants of Turkey Creek, Vt., as the "bashfullest critter in the country and sort of dummified." He finally gains permission from his crabbed old father to attend Williamson College. Looking not unlike Ichabod Crane, he invades the campus, and is greeted as a prehistoric animal by a squad of college boys, who straightway conduct him to the "Students' Progressive Cream Puff Parlor" and exhibit him to the pretty proprietor, Abbie Nettleton.

She sympathizes with the gawky youth and encourages him to try out for the baseball team. At first he is put on as mascot, but his chance comes and he wins a spectacular victory for the school. Incidentally, he wins the love of a girl and the respect of his crusty father.

HANDS UP (Fine Arts—5 parts—April 29).—The cast: John Houston (Wilfred Lucas), Marjorie Houston (Colleen Moore), Dan Tracy (Monte Blue), Elinor Craig (Beatrice Van), Rosanna (Rhea Haynes), Tim Farley (Bert Woodruff), Mrs. Farley (Kate Toncray).

Jim Houston in his youth was a poor boy, but has succeeded and become a successful business man, the president of a railroad. While making a tour of his road with his daughter the train is held up. The daughter is thrilled with the adventure, and exchanges rings with the bandit leader. Later she meets him in the city and they elope. The father, whose suspicions have previously been aroused, believes the boy to be his own son by a woman he loved during the days of his youth. He follows the couple and rescues his daughter from the very gang with which he was at one time associated. The young bandit is killed by a Spanish girl, whom he has betrayed. The daughter is convinced her father knew best.

MIGHT AND THE MAN (Fine Arts—5 parts—May 6).—The cast: McFadden (Elmo Lincoln), Hiram Sloan (Wilbur Higby), Mrs. Sloan (Lillian Langdon), Winifred (Carmel Myers), Clarence Whitman (Clyde Hopkins), Billings (Carl Stockdale), Kate (Luray Huntley), Pansy (Mazie Radford).

McFadden is a trainer in Clancy's sanitarium, to which Hiram Sloan, a multi-millionaire steel manufacturer, comes to recuperate. Sloan expects Government plans of a submarine destroyer, which is to be built at his plant. Billings, an emissary of a foreign power, comes to the sanitarium for the purpose of stealing these plans. Learning that the documents are on the way, Sloan returns to his home, taking McFadden with him to serve as his trainer. Billings asks to call at the house to continue exercise under McFadden. Subsequently, the lives of Sloan and his daughter are endangered by the spy's attempts to gain the Government secrets, but McFadden succeeds in frustrating these. The spies are arrested and thrown into prison.

THE SNARL (Ince-Kay Bee—5 parts—May 6).—The cast: Helen Dean and Marion Dean (Bessie Barriscale); Monte Bruce (Charles Gunn); Jack Mason (Howard Hickman); Helen's Nurse (Aggie Herring); Opera Manager (Thomas Guise); Doctor (J. Barney Sherry).

Helen and Marion Dean are twins, identical in appearance, but widely different in character. Several days before her debut in opera, Helen is struck down by an automobile and crippled. The impresario substitutes her twin, Marion, to act the role, while Helen sits behind the scenes and sings the words. The public is duped and Marion receives an ovation. Later she marries Monte Bruce, and sends for Helen to accompany them on a yachting tour. Monte is blinded by a powder explosion, and Marion, who has little time for a blind husband, turns him over to Helen's care. One day he recovers his sight, detects his wife in the act of robbing him and eloping with his secretary. That night the boat catches fire. Marion and the secretary are lost, while Monte and Helen, whose strength is recovering, face a life of happiness.

The Customary "Summer Slump" Can Be Avoided!

Every little annoyance that is to be found in a majority of the photoplay theatres is magnified during the warm weather. Unless the service given is practically perfect, there usually comes a "Summer Slump" in business.

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS

correct all of the troubles which are properly laid at the door of the projection surface. They practically eliminate "flicker" and positively banish forever eye-strain, glare and "fade-away."

Twenty Years in the Carbon Business
An experience of vast proportions

HAVING achieved unparalleled success in the various other carbon products, we were compelled by the enormous demand of exhibitors and operators to also enter into the manufacture of "Speer Projector Carbons."

OUR factory was first devoted to the manufacture of high class cored and solid carbons, the styles with which operators are most familiar. The latest developments also produced the famous "Hold-Ark" negative carbons, which are making tremendous strides in revolutionizing the entire motion picture industry.

IN order to produce the best photoplays, high amperages are necessary. The metal coating of the "Hold-Arks" provides the additional carrying capacity and still permits the use of a small carbon in the lower holder.

"HOLD-ARKS" are also manufactured in several different sizes for all operating conditions on direct current.

ABSOLUTE steadiness of arc, the paramount requirement of critical operators is the essential feature of these carbons. The hard core turns the trick.

EXHIBITORS and operators who desire perfect projection should trim with a Speer cored upper and a "Hold-Ark" lower. A mere trial of this combination will afford proof of this statement.

A BEAUTIFUL theatre and elaborate equipment, with inferior carbons in your lamp house is like a ship without a rudder. The start may be ideal, but trouble will soon follow.

WHY have a light with ghosts and flickering shadows when they can easily be eliminated? Speer Carbons are today recommended by projection experts and indorsed by skilled operators and critical exhibitors as a remedy for these ills.

THESE carbons, stamped with the well known slogan, "Made in U. S. A.," have taken their place in the foremost ranks of the carbon manufacturers of the world. That they will remain there is evident, as quality alone is the first consideration.

OPERATORS who find their projection inferior to the high standards they desire, should familiarize themselves with Speer Carbons. Results that others have obtained can easily be told, yet first hand facts are invariably the most convincing.

WRITE today for prices and request that samples be sent.

"MARTIN" ROTARY CONVERTER

FOR REAL SUN-LIT PICTURES

PERFECT REEL DISSOLVING

The voltage of the "MARTIN" polyphase converter is maintained constant, so that the starting of the second arc does not disturb the light given by the first, making the dissolving of the reels as simple as if the arcs were operated in a Direct Current district. Our emergency panel does away with expensive compensarcs and cuts the wiring and installation cost in half.

The Improved Model Motiograph

Standard of Value and Quality

Made of the very best material and yet reasonably priced.

Just a Few of Its Important Points of Merit—

Lamphouse—Large, well made and well ventilated.

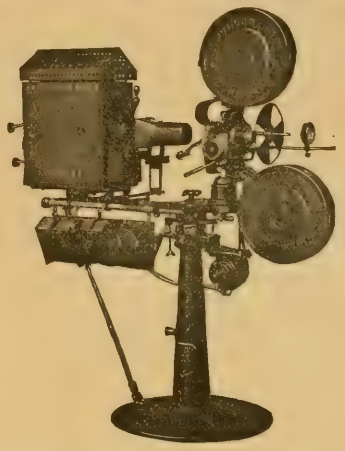
Arc Lamp—To take 8" lower and 12" upper carbons; has 8 different adjustments.

Condenser Mount—So arranged that either condenser can be removed separately when desired; one of the latest improvements on the MOTIOGRAPH.

Mechanism—Runs quiet, requires very little attention from operator; projects rock-steady pictures, due to accuracy in manufacturing.

Star and Cam—Accurately ground and run in oil bath.

New Patented Sliding Disc Connection—which has been used in the MOTIOGRAPH for over fifteen months—is becoming more popular every day with the users, due to its "no wear" qualities and rigidity produced in the framing device. (Ball Arbor, used in former models, has been discontinued.)



Two Balance Wheels—to insure perfect action and steadiness of picture.

Pedestal—Heavy; designed so as to eliminate vibration.

Magazines—Made of heavy material, will hold 2,000 feet of film.

Motor—¼ H.P., entirely enclosed. Machine can be purchased with or without motor.

Rheostat—Adjustable, 20 to 55 amperes.

Regular MOTIOGRAPH Lens with each equipment.

Outside Shutter—Now used on the MOTIOGRAPH instead of inside shutter, as on former models.

Place MOTIOGRAPH projectors in your booth and you will get —Maximum machine life at minimum cost.

—Superior service with supreme projection.

"NEWMAN" BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

Read What Josiah Pearce & Sons Say About Our Goods

Gentlemen:

Now that you have completed equipment in our new theatres here in New Orleans, and Houston, Texas, we want to take this means of expressing to you our appreciation of the manner in which we have done business with you, also as to the character of your goods. You have, without exception, filled our orders just as promptly as we could ever expect and probably quicker than we had anticipated, and the fact of your having supplied us with brass frames and various other equipment in our fifteen theatres is evidence that we are pleased with your goods, for they are the most attractive, durable and practical that we have as yet found.

We wish you good luck in the prosecution of your work.

Yours very truly,

Don't Lose Your Peace of Mind—and Lose With It a Piece of Money—By Gambling With Your Negatives

It's silly, and an evidence of faulty business judgment, to sacrifice quality in an attempt to "save" a fraction of a cent per foot—cheap developing and printing means extravagance, not economy.

It's so easy to be mislead by untruthful advertising and exaggerated claims. Beware of promises that are not guaranteed, and statements made without proof.

Our institution has recognized ability and reliability—we have been a factor in the motion picture industry since 1910; we take good care of our established reputation for superior quality, satisfying service and fair dealing.

Be safe and sensible and place your business where you will enjoy security and receive the treatment and results you desire and require.

Benjamin Chapin Pictures Hailed as Epoch-Making By Thousands of Writers

Another Great Mass of Letters Received by Mr. Benjamin Chapin in Connection With the Recent Trade and Professional Showing at the Strand Theatre.

About 500 more letters, some of which are here produced, have been received from that audience, and, well, what do they say?

The "press agent" has not had a chance to "edit" these letters—they are exact quotations, over signatures of real people, not paid to write up press matter.

I have shown at my theater, and seen most of the so-called "Big Productions," but never have I seen as good a feature as your Lincoln Cycle. It touches the heart, it has plenty of good clean comedy. In fact, it is a true picture of the Great President and his life. To my mind, it surpasses the "Birth of a Nation."

(Signed) W. D. ECCLESTON.
Wall St., Huntington, L. I. Manager of New Bijou Theatre.

No amount of sermons can be so effectual and far-reaching in character building as your play. My friend said, "That beats anything I have ever seen, heard or read." Then he brushed away some tears and began to laugh.

(Signed) REV. J. M. NEIFERT,
234 East 116th St., N. Y. Clergyman.

It gives a more realizing sense of the man himself than a library of books.

(Signed)
JOSEPHINE ADAMS RATHBONE,
Librarian.
146 South Elliot Pl., Brooklyn, N. Y.

As to the screen cycle, I can truly say that it is worthy of being placed in the archives of the nation to be shown to children of future generations as a great monumental lesson in self-sacrifice, brotherly love and patriotism in its highest sense.

(Signed) J. WILLIAM FOSDICK.
33 West 67th St., N. Y. Member of Nat'l Society of Mural Painters, Architectural League of N. Y., Nat'l Society of Craftsmen, Pres. Les Anciens de l'Academie Julius, formerly President Copley Society, Boston.

I was more than pleased. I must say it was well acted, from beginning to end, and never could have come to the front at a better time. It must inspire patriotism throughout the country.

(Signed) URIAH SEELEY,
National Patriotic Instructor, Grand Army of the Republic, Newark, N. J.

Artistic, vivid, forceful, wonderfully executed. It seemed like a piece of real life—we lived with Lincoln, felt his griefs and his joys. Your sympathetic portrayal of this great and simple man should be a wonderful force for good in the building and development of the character of our American youth. It is better than a thousand sermons.

(Signed) MARY ALLAN STUART,
Author and Educator.
27 West Thirty-sixth St., N. Y.

A wonderful picture. I was held spellbound. It will arouse and stimulate patriotism throughout the land, and the nation will feel indebted to Mr. Chapin.

(Signed) AMELIA JOHNSON,
Hotel Breslin, N. Y.

Approved by the National Juvenile Motion Picture Board for all ages.

(Signed) MRS. ADELE F. WOODARD,
Hotel Colonial, Eighty-first St. and Columbus Ave., N. Y. National Juvenile Motion Picture Board.

You have produced a marvelously faithful representation of Abraham Lincoln's boyhood life and conditions, and of the beginning of his administration. I am acquainted with his boyhood homes in Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois, and have been a close student of his life.

(Signed) DUNCAN J. M'MILLAN,
226 West 129th St., N. Y.

The finest photoplay of the day, and one of the best gifts to posterity. Shall do all in my power to advertise the "Lincoln Cycle" in our community and in our congregation, of which my husband is pastor.

(Signed) MRS. E. R. JASCHEIMER,
166 Syosset St., Woodhaven, L. I., N. Y.

It is a great picture, and not only interesting and thrilling, but the picture at this moment to sweep the nation and do much good! It is as if Mr. Lincoln had returned—and the words he spoke so many years ago are the sentiments we must listen to and feel to-day. This picture will bring again the same response, and they will come 300,000 strong. In his portrayal of Lincoln, Mr. Chapin is wonderful! He is the Lincoln we have loved!

(Signed) MRS. F. W. JOHNSON,
Hotel Breslin, Broadway and Twenty-ninth St., N. Y.

I cannot overstate the significance of such an achievement. As a means of developing a real and sound patriotism in the hearts of your people. I can think of nothing more effective. I was stirred to my very soul on that morning, and I noticed with interest how the same experience was being given to nearly every member of that vast audience, hardened as many of them were to every sort of experience. (Signed)

REV. FRANK K. SANDERS, Ph. D.,
Director Board of Missionary Preparation.
25 Madison Ave., N. Y.

I was deeply moved by the representations of the boyhood of Lincoln. It is a sweet, strong and patriotic presentation of one of the great men of history, and I congratulate you upon the effective manner in which it is done.

(Signed) HENRY EVERTSON COBB,
West End Collegiate Church, Seventy-seventh St. and West End Ave., N. Y.

It was realy the most charming, best rendered and altogether artistic and realistic picture that I ever saw. It didn't seem at times like a movie at all, so realistic was it—had none of the absurd exaggerations that so many of them have. The whole was a great success, and should be shown all over the country.

(Signed) E. L. HENRY, N. A.,
222 West Twenty-third St., N. Y. Painter.

I consider it the very finest photoplay I have ever seen. is educational, wholesome and inspiring.

(Signed) MRS. STEPHEN H. LUTZ.
284 Hancock St., Brooklyn, N. Y. Educator.

Your work is most artistic, inspiring and excellent, and it is no wonder that with a standard as high as yours your performance should meet with success.

(Signed) DR. CORNELIUS RUBNER,
Head of the Department of Music,
Columbia University, N. Y.

Think they were most interesting, spendidly done and most excellently taken.

(Signed) L. TUTHILL,
Advertising Agency.
345 West Seventieth St., N. Y.

A remarkable picture. Perfect in every respect.

850 Kelly St., N. Y.

I consider you entitled to great credit for having produced so interesting and instructive a "Cycle." The pictures were admirable, and so true to life that it was hard to realize that they were pictures. I thank you sincerely for the effort you have made to present so complete a representation of the blessed man, whom I knew so well during the last three years of his life, and whose fame has grown with the years that have gone by since his life was finished.

(Signed) ALBERT S. CHANDLER,
389 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., formerly Head of Postal Telegraph.

As an American history teacher for many years I was much interested in your interpretation of the Great Emancipator. Every step of the plot shows the great study you have given it. I have nothing but commendation for the pictures.

(Signed) JAMES H. BEACH,
Teachers' College, Columbia University, N. Y.

They were not only wonderfully portrayed, but a wonderful history lesson for all children, and I shall advocate every school child (as well as grown-up) to see them. As a clubwoman and a thorough American, I say every one should see these pictures.

(Signed) MRS. WILLIAM D. BEAM,
65 West 68th St., N. Y., Corresponding Secretary, Society New York State Women.

I consider the first group of the Lincoln Cycle of benefit to the public, both from the point of view of an extremely well-acted motion picture well put on, and from the broader historical point of view.

(Signed) S. B. MINOR,
157 West 105th St., N. Y.

I was greatly impressed with the careful attention to detail in your renderings. They made one feel that we were actually living the pictures with you and not looking at a screen.

(Signed) PAUL SPENCER JOHST,
1777 Broadway, N. Y. Artist and Illustrator.

Great educational value.

(Signed)
FRANCIS TREVELYAN MILLER,
450 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Historian.

I enjoyed the Lincoln Cycle very much, and it is very timely for a Lincoln revival. Lincoln's boyhood, his father and mother are all educational.

(Signed) GEORGE HARRISON M'ADAM,
313 West Thirty-fourth St. N. Y. Writer.

I do not know how to express our enjoyment and appreciation. You can certainly feel assured of the instant and complete success of the Cycle. It is indeed very hard to say what part pleased us most, but I think your scene in which the President leaves the White House by the private entrance and stands beside the column is a masterpiece. Aside from fame and from monetary success, I am sure your work will be a service to the nation at this present crisis that cannot be adequately expressed now, but will surely be appreciated when the pictures are shown to the public.

(Signed) WILLIAM J. MORRISON, JR.,
Ridgefield Park, N. J. Lawyer.

It has plenty of exciting situations and a goodly apportionment of comedy. It is a picture that can be played now and always.

(Signed) T. CELLER,
1676 Broadway, N. Y. Moving Pictures. (Interested as Exhibitor.)

For true pathos and beauty, and for the good lessons inculcated, this is the finest film I have ever seen.

(Signed) JOHN SEYMOUR WOOD,
18 Gramercy Park, N. Y. Writer.

I was delighted with the pictures that were shown last Friday morning. We want more of that kind.

(Signed) A. M. COUCH, Teacher.
Girl's High School, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The pictures were wonderfully acted; carefully thought out, and artistically photographed. Your impersonations of the two Lincolns are masterpieces—full of feeling, truth and intellect. I am full of praise for the casts, also particularly the boy Lincoln, and Nancy Hanks Lincoln.

(Signed) WILLIAM C. MORRIS,
930 St. Nicholas Ave., N. Y. Cartoonist.

I enjoyed the four features very much indeed. I do not think they could have been better done. Should very much like to see more.

(Signed) MRS. G. W. EATON,
230 West 122d St., N. Y.

Your reconstruction of the life of Lincoln was a fine production of an important historical period. It kindles patriotism, and awakens our interest in the bigger things of life.

(Signed) VICTOR SEMAN PERARD,
78 West Fifty-fifth St., N. Y. Artist.

Thanks so much for a most interesting morning.

(Signed) BIJOU FERNANDEZ,
Actress, Dramatic Agency.
214 West Forty-second St., N. Y.

Found it extremely interesting, a good study, and one that will educate.

(Signed) SILAS SWARTZ,
143 West Nineteenth St., N. Y.

A most artistic achievement in which the historic interest is not submerged, but enhanced by the emotional and artistic appeal. I shall certainly spread the news of this splendid presentation.

(Signed) LEO MIELZINER,
52 West Twelfth St., N. Y. Artist.

It is a relief to be able to attend a moving picture exhibition without being subjected to scenes of frivolity and questionable morals.

(Signed) JESSE M. SMITH,
194 Riverside Drive, N. Y. Exhibitor.

The pictures are great.

(Signed) C. WARDE TRAVER,
Painter.
The Central Park Studios, 15 West Sixty-seventh St., N. Y.

From either an artistic or a patriotic standpoint.

(Signed) MRS. C. C. KENNEDY,
President Rutgers Alumnae Association of New York.
150 West Ninety-fourth St., N. Y.

We would like to hear at what price we can rent the picture for one day, or two performances. We think that it is very appropriate for exhibition in our High School.

THE EXHIBITOR'S GUIDE

Big Situations

Mark Every Episode of the Surprise Mystery Serial, "The Voice on the Wire"

POLLY MARION, HYPNOTIZED, ATTEMPTS TO KILL HER LOVER

At every episode of the Universal's surprise mystery serial, "THE VOICE ON THE WIRE," there are big situations, so original and unique as to compel the attention and draw the crowds back week after week. Ben Wilson, the popular Universal star, playing the part of Shirley, relentlessly trailing the gang back of the mysterious "voice," is suddenly confronted by his own sweetheart, Polly Marion, armed with a gun, which she proceeds to press against his heart with the words, "I am going to kill you!" That's a sample of the unexpected situations that keep the fans on the edge of their seats. The play is founded on the novel of the same name (already enjoyed by multitudes) by Eustace Hale Ball. The producer of the wonder drama, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," Stuart Paton, directed the serial and again proves his mastery. Exhibitors everywhere report record business on this latest Universal success serial. Book now through any Universal Exchange.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE

Meeting the demands of Exhibitors by giving them what the public wants is a happy habit with the mighty Universal. True to its reputation it has scored an immense hit with its great one-reel novelty feature, the Universal Screen Magazine. Leaping into favor over night, a demand for its release every week instead of twice-a-month, was quickly met. Today it leads the list of novelty features that are booked by Exhibitors to boost a program, bolster up a weak performance, or help put over a

Unprecedented Demand for Short Subjects Fully Met by the Mighty Universal Program

STICK TO THE PROGRAM if you want to win," says a Texas exhibitor in a leading trade paper. (Name on request). "Quit letting the feature stars make all your money after you spend money building and developing them." This is the experience and advice of thousands of successful exhibitors. The growing demand for short subjects which patrons may see without having to attend the theatre at a certain set hour under penalty of seeing the show backwards, is responsible for the success of the mighty Universal Program, which in quantity and quality is greater than all competition. Read the list of releases below and you will understand the overwhelming popularity of the mighty Universal Program.

SPECIALS

BUTTERFLY—"THE CIRCUS OF LIFE" (Five-Reel Drama)—Little Zoe Rae, Mignon Anderson and Emory Johnson.

Goldwyn Pictures

The World-Famed "Strand" Books All Goldwyn Pictures

MITCHEL H. MARK and Harold Edel, Managing Director, have signed a contract that makes their New York Strand Theatre the home of Goldwyn Pictures in America's greatest city.

All twenty-six Goldwyn productions made in our first year of operation are booked under this contract for presentation in the largest picture theatre in the entire world.

That one of the ablest and keenest exhibitors in the industry should demand Goldwyn Pictures for his tremendously successful institution proves to all other exhibitors that Goldwyn productions have the quality claimed for them.

The Strand is one of the greatest of all the picture theatres—and the pioneer quality house in America. It has given faith and courage to all producers with ideals. It has educated a vast public to demand motion picture superiority.

Into this splendid house, beginning in September, come Goldwyn Pictures—with their beauties, their dramatic values, their refinements and their remarkable stars.

Is there any exhibitor anywhere who requires greater proof of Goldwyn quality than this?

OFFICE OF HAROLD EDEL
MANAGING DIRECTOR

MITCHELL H. MARK
PRES. AND GEN. MGR.

May 7, 1917.

Mr. Samuel Goldfish,
President, Goldwyn Pictures Corp.,
16 East 42nd Street,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Goldfish:

From the day of the first Goldwyn announcement we have expected much from your organization. The personnel of ownership places the stamp of expertness and thoroughness upon your company.

As you know, we have seen but portions of your four completed pictures -- untitled and still unassembled -- but on the basis of what these revealed to us we have been willing to close an annual contract for what we consider to be truly remarkable pictures.

The quality of your photography is undeniably beautiful. The novelty and fineness of your settings introduce a new note into pictures. The cleanliness and strength of your stories is another thing to be commented on. We are convinced that you will still further uplift the motion picture art.

The contract we have signed for The Strand Theatre is the best proof of our belief in Goldwyn. If there is value to Goldwyn in linking our names or the prestige of our theatre with your organization, this letter is at your disposal for that purpose.

We do not hesitate to tell you that the quality and excellence of your productions will further stimulate the Strand to maintain the high levels of picture showmanship which we are known to have established and for which we have received credit throughout the industry.

Sincerely.

Mr. Loew, who owns many theatres in New York City, knows that a picture which can make a real run in the metropolis to capacity business, as "The Whip" did at the Park Theatre, is the thing not only for him and for the patrons of his houses, but also for theatres throughout the state.

DE LUXE FEATURE FILMS

The rights for the great North-west have been bought by the De Luxe Feature Film Co. of Seattle. This Company takes it for Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho. The men in charge know their territory thoroughly, and a picture as good as "The Whip" is what they want.

SOL LESSER

At the Cort Theatre in San Francisco, "The Whip" has started off to a run with phenomenal success, and its reputation is spreading so quickly that Sol Lesser, who bought the rights for California, finds an unusual demand for the spectacular picture in other cities of the state. Mr. Lesser has also bought the rights for Nevada.

Week in and week out over a period of three years a million picture devotees have patronized the Strand, knowing the features are Paramount pictures.

There has been an occasional added feature, such as the Mary Pickford and George M. Cohan productions released through Artcraft.

This hostorical affiliation between New York's two most noted theatres and the two greatest distributing organizations is made possible through the adoption by Paramount of the open-booking system commencing August 5th, announcement of which was made here two weeks ago by Mr. Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Power of Paralta Plan

THE cry of the times is—PREVENT WASTE! Make 100% efficiency your mark and shoot straight at it.

Any product that is not kept directly moving develops WASTE, for every potential dollar-making quality in it that is not worked to its limit means loss. This is particularly true of a moving picture film.

A successful production on the regular dramatic stage, playing twice in a day in a theatre of 1,250 capacity, can show to but 2,500 people.

On the other hand, a successful photoplay may be shown to a million people for every thousand who may see a regular old-time dramatic play. It is only a question of intensive development of exhibiting possibilities.

It is not incredible, when one indulges in a little calculation based on well known facts, that a single successful photo-drama could be developed in its exhibiting possibilities so as to be seen by 20 millions of people. That's 100% exhibiting efficiency.

Every day a successful production lies in a can on the shelf it means loss of rental—loss in its earning capacity. If this be not developed to the limit and the picture is not constantly kept running till its exhibiting possibilities are exhausted, there is waste.

ACCORDING to conservative calculation, the fullest possible exhibiting limit of a successful picture would be presentation to over 20 millions of people. If this be true, the greatest element of waste in connection with any picture is represented by the difference between the number of people who actually see it and the number who possibly could see it, and who would see it if given opportunity.

This difference represents a tremendous waste, which could, under favorable conditions, be turned into cash.

Why not do away with this waste and develop a production to its full exhibiting possibilities, as far as practicable?

That is an essential part of the Paralta Plan.

There is more money in making a really great artistic production and exploiting it to the limit of its exhibiting possibilities—for, perhaps, the entertainment of the larger part of 20 millions of people—than there is in a production distinguished mainly by "footage," which attracts but passing attention, meets mainly with but faint praise and soon passes to the film scrap heap.

Both may have originally cost about the same, but the income to the exhibitor and producer is not to be compared, especially if the exhibiting possibility of the "better than ordinary" one is developed to its full limit.

Real merit in a picture assures its booking. The greater the booking the lower the rental; the more constant the booking the smaller the percentage of waste and the greater the profit to both exhibitor and producer.

THE Paralta Plan stops waste by turning it into cash to the benefit of the exhibitor in the form of lower rentals, exclusive exhibiting territory and repeat runs without charge.

The Paralta Plan does not maintain idle prints; it supports no "deadwood"; doubt has no place in it, and certainty, to the limit of human knowledge, is its foundation.

The sense of doubt—uncertainty—is one of the greatest evils the exhibitor has to face. Under the present "System" of distribution he doubts the quality of the picture he books; he is in constant doubt as to what his rentals are going to be next week, or next month, and he is always in doubt as to whether or not next month he will have the program he has been pushing. He can never forget that cancellation clause in his contract.

To eliminate every possible doubt and element of uncertainty from the Paralta Plan of distribution, its founders worked and investigated for two years before they formed Paralta Plays, Inc.

STUDY!!!

THE PARALTA PLAN — an original system founded on principles of fair play to all exhibitors in distribution of Paralta Plays

Absence of All Doubt!!

THEY had to know every point of certainty or uncertainty in relation to star-value, individual drawing power in different localities, the sectional popular likes and dislikes as to productions and where thrills are most wanted and laughs are best liked.

They had to know every detail of distribution and exhibition in every centre of the country; rentals charged in different localities on the same productions, or otherwise; and every influence that had any bearing on the booking and exhibition of films, general or specific, from Maine to California.

All this labor was to eliminate doubt and uncertainty—to prove the Paralta Plan and establish it free from known existing evils. The Paralta Plan is as clear from doubt as any business proposition ever conceived, for it is based on the surest possible foundation—exact knowledge and actual experience.

Its success naturally depends on the merit of the productions it releases and to this end it has sought to eliminate all doubt by seeing to it that Paralta Plays shall actually be of the highest class in every feature—in stories, stars, supporting casts, details of production and in technical and dramatic direction.

ALL Paralta Plays will be notable stories by notable writers—there will be no doubt of their merit. The principal roles will be played by widely known and well established artists who are screen stars of great talent. There is no doubt of their ability and drawing power. They will be supported by players who are well known and have large personal followings. This eliminates another element of uncertainty.

The productions will be as well made as a liberal outlay of money can insure, and the direction, both dramatic and technical, will be in the hands of directors who have been identified with many of the most successful photo-dramas ever presented on the screen. Even these directors have established box office value.

There is not an inexperienced person connected with the development of the Paralta Plan or Paralta Plays—everyone is seasoned timber; his ability and experience are essential elements in establishing the absolute absence of doubt and uncertainty in every part of the Paralta Plan.

In distribution the Paralta Plan will have the co-operation of the ablest and most experienced men in this work—men who really know the needs of the local exhibitor through years of intimate association with him. These men will honestly co-operate with him in securing the best results for all concerned, for their success depends entirely on the exhibitor's success.

Devoid of all uncertainty, the Paralta Plan stands a tower of strength, unshakably founded in that most powerful of all human motives—self-interest and co-operation for greater personal financial gain and benefit than can be had in any other way, or from any other source, in the moving picture industry.

That's absolute absence of doubt.

Because the title compels consideration. Because the story and production are different! The producer was given an opportunity to take time to develop an idea he had worked on for years. It has none of the commercial rush and hurry earmarks which mar program releases.

Convincing

Because there are no vampires or seducers—none of the chessboard melodramatic characters! It shows home life sincerely, squarely and honestly. The thoughts hit hard and appeal.

Human

Because by painstaking care the producer has made the carefully chosen cast live their parts. They do not "act." Thought, pathos, smiles and tears are all beautifully and naturally blended. The story deals with tremendous thoughts and still concerns things which happen every day —not some times but millions of times. And above all else

PARENTAGE

A MONEY MAKER

The advertising possibilities offer an exceptional chance to provide crowd-compelling exhibitor helps and every piece of advertising has a seat-selling message.

Advertising

Big, vital questions of home life are treated in this story. The problems considered will pull exceptional crowds to any theatre—particularly when it can be guaranteed that the treatment of the problems is clean, wholesome and entertaining.

Longer Runs

When a film deals with big problems in a human yet forceful manner it makes for exceptional word of mouth advertising. When these "talkers" recommend the production as not only vitally interesting but entertaining—it means longer runs.

Repeat Bookings

Where contract systems still have some exhibitors tied so that longer runs are impossible—they will immediately book "PARENTAGE" for repeat dates to take advantage of their patrons' praise of this film.

"The Bar Sinister is one of the best things that has ever been seen on the screen."

Every State Rights Buyer and Exhibitor who has seen "The Bar Sinister" is struck by its tremendous commercial value. The powerful human appeal of Anthony P. Kelly's gripping story and its intensely interesting treatment of the race question, approached from an entirely new angle, together with Edgar Lewis's masterful staging of its red-blooded climaxes, gives "The Bar Sinister" a wonderful drawing power equally effective in every section of the country. It strikes a responsive chord in the hearts of men, women and children of every race and creed, while its advertising possibilities are recognized immediately by every "showman."

"MOTION PICTURE NEWS" says:

"This film is so vastly different from the general run of tour films that it stands in a class by itself; it is comprehensive and treats with every conceivable feature of Chinese life: her customs, fashions and beliefs. It is at once geographical, historical and scenic—hence, very interesting."

"MOVING PICTURE WORLD" says:

"Ten reels of remarkable pictures covering historic China: her people and her customs. One of the most interesting groups of pictures that have reached America. One is impressed with the fact that little of informational character with regard to the daily life and superstitions of China has been omitted and that they contain much that is of historical value."

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS EXCHANGES

MAY 26, 1917

MARJORIE RAMBEAU HAS EXTRAORDINARY ROLE IN "THE MIRROR"

MARJORIE Rambeau is the star of one of the two Mutual Star Productions released the week of May 21st. This is the fourth Rambeau-Mutual Picture released to date. The others are "The Greater Woman," "Motherhood" and "The Debt." The new one bears the title "The Mirror." It is in five acts. Clara S. Beranger wrote it. Frank Powell directed the production.

Story of Theatrical Life.

"The Mirror" is a story of theatrical life. It offers Miss Rambeau a most extraordinary role—one remarkably well suited to her talents. As an ingenue with ambitions Miss Rambeau comes to New York to win fame and fortune on the stage. The picture has to do with her struggles to secure a hearing, and what happened after she was given "her chance." It is lavishly mounted—superbly costumed. Some of the scenes are laid in the famous big restaurants and cafes that make Broadway what it is. The costumes worn by the feminine members of the cast will prove of exceptional interest to women. It is in every respect an unusual attraction—one that will draw big houses.

Directed by Frank Powell.

Frank Powell directed "The Mirror." Marjorie Rambeau, the star, is drawing houses of $10,000, $12,000 and $15,000 per week on Broadway in "Cheating Cheaters." And now any exhibitor can offer this popular Broadway star in his theatre. The nearest Mutual Exchange can arrange bookings on the whole Rambeau Series of Mutual "Big Stars Only" Pictures.

Juliette Day Now American — Mutual Star

American Film Company Inc., Signs Famous Star of "Chin Chin," "Upstairs and Down," etc.

Juliette Day has just been signed by the American Film Company, Inc. She has enjoyed a continuous series of triumphs on the speaking stage. She has been cast in principal roles in such productions as "Chin Chin," "The Yellow Jacket," "Marrying Money," "Twin Beds" and "Up Stairs and Down." She is noted for her beauty and talent. Now, in films, she bids fair to duplicate her speaking stage triumphs. Vehicles especially written for her will be provided. She will work at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Company, Inc. Rollin Sturgeon, the famous director who has been supervising the Gail Kane-Mutual Pictures, will be in charge of production on the Day Pictures, thus insuring their artistic excellence.

Miss Day began her stage career at the age of six; in fact she is scarcely out of her teens at present. After playing under the management of Charles Dillingham, she toured the country with the Ben Greet Players—appearing as Puck in "Mid-Summer Night's Dream." Winthrop Ames became her manager and her first decided triumph was scored in the role of Plum Blossom in "The Yellow Jacket." Exhibitors may be sure she will be cast in roles specially suited to her ability. All the productions in which she appears will be of the superde luxe sort released under the Mutual's "Big Star Only" policy. Reservations on the Day-Mutual Pictures may be made now at all Mutual Exchanges.

Juliette Day

JACKIE SAUNDERS' THIRD MUTUAL FILM IS "THE CHECKMATE"

The third of the Jackie Saunders Series of Mutual Pictures will be released the week of May 21st. "The Checkmate" is its title. Capt. Leslie Peacock wrote the story. Sherwood McDonald directed it. It is in five acts.

Star in Dual Role.

Miss Saunders appears in a dual role in "The Checkmate." She plays the part of a country lass who goes to the city, as well as that of her sister. The roles are of a widely different type but Miss Saunders succeeds in interpreting them wonderfully. In one she is sweet and winsome but mature. In the other she is younger, more unsophisticated and inclined to be reckless. The older sister in the city discovers that men are inclined to take advantage of her beauty and inexperience. In terror she flees to her country home and resumes her old life. Shortly afterward she discovers her sister is enamored of the same man who, in the city, had attempted to mislead her. Then and there the older girl sets about a plan to checkmate the man who would wrong her sister. For a time it seems her plan may fail, but at the critical moment she succeeds in carrying it out in spite of all opposition and both girls find happiness as the picture ends.

Released May 21st.

The week beginning May 21st is set as the release date of "The Checkmate." This is the third Jackie Saunders-Mutual Picture. Those now showing to capacity business are "Sunny Jane" and "The Wildcat." Exhibitors who have shown any of the Saunders-Mutual Pictures do not need to be reminded of the drawing power of this star. They are eager for other releases of the same series. Bookings on all of the Saunders productions can be made now at your nearest Mutual Exchange.

Two Big War Specials Are Now Available

Mutual now has ready for release two big new War Specials—pictures which are particularly timely and up-to-the-minute. They are entitled "Manning the Navy" and "A Zeppelin Attack on New York." Each is a single-reel subject. Both should prove unequalled attractions now when the whole country is throbbing with patriotism. These pictures will enable you to "do your bit" to aid recruiting. Your nearest Mutual Exchange can arrange bookings on either or both of these one-reel subjects. Be the first in your territory to show them.

FILM REVIEW REPORT TO THE PRESIDENT:

"RAILROAD RAIDERS"

The unanimous verdict of the Viewing committee at today's pre-view of the early chapters of "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" was that HELEN HOLMES has "out-Holmesed" herself—in which opinion I most heartily concur.

I feel confident that we can rely upon record-breaking bookings on "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS".

J. J. Sullivan
Assistant General Manager.

FILM REVIEW REPORT
TO THE PRESIDENT:

"THE RAILROAD RAIDERS"

Judging by the first six chapters of "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" this latest serial featuring HELEN HOLMES the writer believes bids fair to excel all previous offerings of this kind.

The story opens splendidly, the producers work is immense, the sub-titling is novel and effective. I feel certain "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" will go over even better and bigger than any serial we have ever exploited.

Edgar O. Brooks
Sales Manager.

FILM REVIEW REPORT
TO THE PRESIDENT:

"THE RAILROAD RAIDERS"

Director McGowan demonstrates in the very first chapter that he has another wonderful serial with HELEN HOLMES.

The action starts at the opening of the very first reel and the suspense is held from chapter to chapter. Miss Holmes' work is excellent and the production promises to uphold the Signal standards.

I noted several exceptional novelties in titling which add considerable to the artistic value of the production.

TO THE PRESIDENT:

"RAILROAD RAIDERS"

The early chapters, seen today, indicate that this will prove a record-breaking serial.

It is full of incidents and action. The work of Miss Holmes will uphold her reputation.

The photography is excellent and the titling exceptional.

Howard Tirrill

FILM REVIEW REPORT TO THE PRESIDENT:

"THE RAILROAD RAIDERS"

I witnessed five chapters of "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" at today's pre-view.

There is no question in my mind that "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" will eclipse every previous HELEN HOLMES serial.

I have never seen better photography or direction in a serial.

D. A. Poucher

REVIEW REPORT TO PRESIDENT:

RE "RAILROAD RAIDERS"

Unquestionably the new serial, "THE RAILROAD RAIDERS" is a powerful one. It is, in my opinion, excellent serial material and well up to the present day standard of feature productions.

Mr. McGowan has told his story simply and swiftly, crowding an incredible amount of action and material into each chapter. His introductory work in the first chapter clearly establishes sympathy and the trend of the story. The titling is unique and effectively

Terry Ramsaye

The reports shown here are those made by the individuals composing the Viewing Committee of the Mutual Film Corporation. Note how enthusiastically they endorse The Railroad Raiders. Action—punch—thrills—in every chapter. The "One Best Bet" in continued photo-novels.

"THE SILENT LIE," NEW R. A. WALSH DRAMA, IS STELLAR PROGRAMME ATTRACTION

Director Who Made "The Honor System" Completes Another Production.

"The Silent Lie," an R. A. Walsh drama and a coming William Fox release, is one of the greatest programme attractions any exhibitor could desire. Mr. Walsh, who directed it, is, of course, known throughout the country as the genius who staged the stirring cinemelodrama, "The Honor System."

The cast of "The Silent Lie" includes such noted players as Miriam Cooper, Charles Clary, Ralph Lewis and Monroe Salisbury. Larry Evans wrote the story.

"The Silent Lie" is Mr. Walsh's first cinema since "The Honor System." He has also made such sterling photoplays as "Carmen," "Blue Blood and Red," "The Serpent" and "The Regeneration."

JEWEL WAS AT HOME

Jewel Carmen was right at home in the French atmosphere of "American Methods," the Fox feature starring William Farnum. Jewel taught the "parlez vous" language for two years before entering filmdom.

MARY MARTIN MAKES HIT

Mary Martin, who played opposite Stuart Holmes in "The Derelict," a recent William Fox photoplay, has just returned from Philadelphia, her native heath.

Miss Martin, a veteran Fox player, made personal appearances at several theatres showing "The Derelict." She and her talk upon motion pictures were received enthusiastically.

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE PAID TO "THE HONOR SYSTEM"

Big Theatre Plays a Film Two Weeks for First Time

"The Honor System" deserves thoroughly its title of "the heavyweight champion of the box office." It was booked for a week at the Academy of Music, one of the country's leading photoplay houses. Although the doors opened daily at 10 A. M., the crowds seeking admission were so great that the Academy retained R. A. Walsh's master drama another week. This is the first time in the theatre's long history that any production ever played there for two weeks.

"The Honor System" was also held over for more "time" by three other big theatres in New York City.

SCREENING "KIDDIE FEATURE"

No more are heard the dramatic tones of actors and actresses who once held sway in one of William Fox's Fort Lee, N. J., studios. In their stead is the childish treble of many youngsters. These are being directed by Kenean Buel, who is filming one of the "Fox Kiddie Features" soon to be released.

SCREEN STAR WHOSE BRILLIANCY IS LIKE THE DIAMOND

REMORSE

PEARSON WASN'T THIRSTY AT THE END OF THIS SCENE

Virginia Pearson has declared in favor of films without a headache.

The statuesque William Fox star had an experience in "Royal Romance," her most recent release, which resulted in this declaration. Miss Pearson had one scene in which she drank wine. For one reason and another it was necessary to have six re-takes of the wine-imbibing act. Each time the star had to drain a glass. Tableau!

BARA WEARS SCARAB RING

Theda Bara, the incomparable William Fox artiste, soon to be seen as Cleopatra in a film classic made by J. Gordon Edwards, wore throughout the picture a scarab ring which archæologists declare to be an antique of extraordinary value.

Eighth Caprice Photoplay

June Caprice, William Fox's "Sunshine Maid," is now acting before the camera for her eighth photoplay. John G. Adolfi, who screened "A Small Town Girl" and Miss Caprice's other subjects, is the director.

Violet Palmer Cast

Violet Palmer, co-star in "The Blue Streak," is in Valeska Suratt's supporting cast in "The Slave," a coming William Fox release. Miss Palmer is an accomplished pianiste and did concert work for several years.

William Farnum Back East With Director

William Farnum, the notable William Fox star, returned to New York City last week from Hollywood, Cal., to make films in the East. The screen's preeminent fighting man comes back after ten tremendously successful productions in the West. His initial screen drama on the Coast was "Fighting Blood;" his last, "When A Man Sees Red," is based on Larry Evans's well-known Saturday Evening Post story, "The Painted Lady."

Frank Lloyd, who has directed Mr. Farnum's super productions, came with the star and will continue to stage his photodramas.

FIRST SUNSHINE COMEDY

In the first Sunshine comedy, directed by Henry Lehrman and presented on the Foxfilm programme, Billie Ritchie is supported by Gertrude Selby and Victor Potel. Miss Selby has the feminine lead in "The House of Terrible Scandals." Mr. Potel will be recalled for his fine work in "Hearts and Saddles." For laughs, thrills and surprises it is one of the most unusual pictures ever screened.

Reminiscent Note

Velma Whitman, appearing with "Smiling George" Walsh in "Some Boy!" played with Corse Payton's company when a child.

BROCKWELL SUPREME IN EMOTIONAL WORK

Has Won Reputation For Strong Screen Portrayals

Gladys Brockwell has come to the fore as an actress of unquestioned versatility and dramatic talent in the comparatively short time since she allied herself with the William Fox forces.

She has been aptly termed "the girl of a thousand expressions" because of her remarkable facility in interpreting emotions. The Fox star always plays with admirable repression—witness her work in "Her Temptation"—and never acts "all over the shop."

"WHITE WAY" IN PICTURES

You'll see some of the most famous places in New York's Great White Way when "The Broadway Sport," with Stuart Holmes in the title role, is flashed upon the screen. Contrast with rural scenes earlier in the film adds to the effect. The subject is a forthcoming Fox production, directed by Carl Harbaugh.

Owns Expensive Airedales

Miriam Cooper, who plays in R. A. Walsh's drama, "The Silent Lie," is the owner of some of the finest Airedales in the West. They are the envy of Miss Cooper's companions in the Hollywood, Cal., film colony.

Here is what E. C. Bostick of the Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, says: "It was a knock-out. We played a four days' engagement and a return of three days, the entire seven days to capacity houses. Greater than 'Skinner's Dress Suit.'"

Chicago exhibitors in their reporting service rated "Skinner's Bubble" 95 in excellence. "Equally as good as 'Skinner's Dress Suit.' Clean, wholesome, absorbing, very pleasing throughout. Plot, acting, photography, settings very good."

O. HENRY IN THE MOVIES.

"The Green Door" Shown on the Film at the Strand.

If a photoplay is flat, stale, and unprofitable, as many of them undeniably are, the fault is pretty apt to lie with the author of the scenario. Given an idea the director will transmit it more or less effectively through the medium of the screen to the audience. The trouble with many films is that the director does not get an idea. "The Green Door," a photoplay exhibited at the Strand yesterday, illustrates this. It is based on O. Henry's story of that title, the story of the piano clerk who pursued romance and adventure in unromantic Manhattan until he found a real romance. The camera caught some of the O. Henry flavor, and the picture is so far superior to the majority of its kind that the suspicion arises that what the movies need is ideas.

"The Sixteen Wife" was the feature shown at the Rialto. Peggy Hyland and Marc MacDermott acted the principal rôles.

Here is proof of the worth of the O.HENRY photoplays. The N.Y. Times noticed two Broadway first nights. It gave the 5-reel feature but casual mention, although the picture was fine of its kind. To the 2-reel O.HENRY offering it devoted almost exclusive space, with a tribute to its excellence.

"The Green Door" is but one of the short films of quality upon which the GENERAL FILM COMPANY focusses its vast distributing system.

Facts and Comments

LEVEL heads in the Cabinet at Washington, level heads in all our houses of legislation, Federal and State; level heads in all our industries, and level heads in all branches of our own moving picture business. Surely if ever there was an occasion for level-headedness everywhere in the country it is the present moment and in the months that are just ahead. Steady hands at the helm. Stout hearts for the duties ahead. Are we ready? YES.

TAXED out of existence is the fate that stares many exhibitors in the face, and consequently a large part of the producing and renting end of the business, if the proposed Federal tax bill becomes law. On top of the taxation that many states and communities have placed on the theatre men the new war tax will compel a large proportion of theaters to close their doors. That taxes must be increased is evident, that amusements may not be classed as necessities in the final analysis we also admit, but that moving pictures play a large part today in the life of the people is beyond question. Just how far the tax may be paid by the theatergoing public rather than the exhibitors remains to be seen.

ONE of the most encouraging signs of the times is the revival of genuine interest in organization by exhibitors throughout the country. Reports of recent state conventions, at St. Louis, at Minneapolis, in Kansas; plans for early conventions in Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, North Carolina, Texas, Pennsylvania and elsewhere indicate that the exhibitor is more than ever awake to the need for union and co-operation within his own ranks. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has believed in and advocated strong State organizations from its very foundation and rejoices in the present outlook. Under wise and unselfish leadership of big men with the best interests of the industry at heart, what great things may be accomplished. All self-seeking tricksters who only want office to enable them to use the organization for their own ends must be eliminated now and forever. Now is the time to put in a solid foundation with cleanhanded, honest, above-board, four-square men who play straight.

MUSICAL adaptations can be of immense supplemental value to a photoplay production. We know what has been achieved along this line by those responsible for the musical programs of the Rialto and Strand theaters in New York. Possibly it is because of the excellence of these examples that some recent attempts to furnish musical accompaniments to feature films have seemed mediocre in the extreme. We have in mind a production released a few days since where the musical numbers suggested and used were a positive drag. To borrow a musical term, the picture and the music should "harmonize."

AN exhibitor puts up a screen to project motion pictures on; but many exhibitors make slides a part of the show. Advertising slides can never be a part of any show or "play"—photoplay—they are business and no one "talks business at a club." But any good club talk or play talk can be used on slides and add to the popularity of the show. There are patriotic slides and they are wonderfully appropriate and popular just now. The best patriotic slides are those the exhibitor writes himself. He knows his patrons. He can talk to them better than any society that doesn't know those particular people can. Some exhibitors watch the daily papers and make up two or three mottos with local flavor and change them daily. It is a good plan.

MOTION pictures have a high military value and a great chance for patriotic service is in the hands of American producers at this time. The writer was recently informed by a medical military reserve officer, who has been keenly interested in all the medical problems of the war, that the proper use of motion pictures in the hospitals probably results in an added five. per cent. of recoveries. The right kind of film is needed both for troops at rest behind the lines and for those wounded in the hospitals. Both will be in splendid physical condition, even those who are wounded, save for the pains they suffer. The great need is for pictures that will carry the boys away from the monotony of their discipline for an hour's vacation. Optimistic love stories with the soldier boy for the hero in the home land, not at the front, and home-land stories that will show him his sweetheart are wanted.

From the Lambkin

By Louis Reeves Harrison

There are three ways of telling the story.
By printed words in the novel.
By picturing and uttered words in the drama.
By picturing and imprint on the screen.
The NOVELIST must be many men in one.
He must be a creative genius.
He must be a constructive genius.
He must be a critic of his own work.
He must have the knowledge of a printer.
He must master the refinements of language.
He represents composite artistry in himself.
He is the most intellectual of writers.
Yet he must be capable of all the emotions.
Form, treatment and interpretation are all his.
There are great difficulties in his way.
To read language is an intellectual effort.
His audience is limited in two ways.
To those who use the same language.
To those who can grasp what he says.
He is denied the emotional effect of utterance.
Also the visual effect of movement.
His story goes to individuals alone.
How they receive it is almost unknown.
He can only guess at their receptivity.
No matter how brilliant his conception.
His medium is forever inadequate.
Compelled to do all his own work,
His flame must burn longer on that account.
Chapters afford a constructive advantage.
They relieve the strain of long tension.
They allow wandering in by-paths.
They permit flights of philosophy.
Then the author controls interpretation.
Characterization is all his own.
The DRAMATIST is a first cousin.
A creative and constructive genius.
He masters the language of discourse.
He studies theatrical requirements.
To know picture composition will help him.
His direct writing is less complicated.
It is for use of the characters alone,
To interchange thoughts and sentiments,
So far as mere utterance is concerned.
There is an indirect writing besides.
The scenes must be pictured in words.
General movements of actors are indicated.
Still more important is psychology.
There is the pantomime of thought and feeling,
Now silently revealing mind and heart,
Again suiting the action to the word.
Much reaches the mind through vision,
Without great intellectual effort,
But there is an emotional instrument besides.
Heart strings throb to the human voice.
Eyes delight in human personality.
The interpreter has a great part to play.
"Give me opportunity!" the actor cries.
For that the author's mind must soar.
High his flights, yet not in the clouds.
He must keep close to sympathetic attention.
He may call sweet music to his aid,
But there are serious obstacles in his way.
He cannot put Nature within three walls.
Her sweetest smiles are not in back-drops.
There must be a strain of high suspense,
With only three or four piers to hold.
He enjoys no introductory leisure.
Characterization is swift and sharp.
There is little time for explanations.
Then the mood of his play may be spoiled.
There are directors who adhere to tradition.
There are stars bent on self-exploitation.
There are producers limited to imitation.
They may provide inadequate treatment.
On them depends interpretation.
Yet they may beautify what he has done.
Theirs to give his ideals new meaning.
Their minds may illumine his composition.
A wondrous harmony of art is possible,
To make his melody both sweet and strong.
He can get in touch with his audience.
His finger is on the public pulse.
For him and his cousin, the novelist,
SUCCESS spells both wealth and fame.
FAILURE is the same in every art.
Labor of mind and heart all lost,
Effort unpaid-for, gone to waste,
Sometimes with health and hope besides.
But there is at least a CHANCE of success.
Now comes a little, kindly LAMBKIN
Bleating blithely, in he toddles,
A story-maker for the movies.
Not a dramatist, nor yet a novelist—
He has no name to put an "ist" on.
He counts his readers by the millions,
Instead of merely tens of thousands.
Into every town and hamlet,
Goes the message of his fancy.
His medium almost universal,
Knowledge he can spread, or error.
Throughout the world where there is vision,
He can stir all hearts and minds.
If there is to be a brotherhood,
Among all classes of all nations,
A greater age of though and feeling,
His the potent instrumentality
To overcome the Tower of Babel.
"Whither goest thou, tender Lambkin?"
"To be sheared," he gently bleateth.
"For me there is no Hall of Fame.
I often breathe and sometimes eat.
I must do that to grow the wool
With which the others warm themselves.
Oh, joy! Oh, joy! I'm a hopeful kid.
I may yet get as much as the office boy."
Thus blithely bleating he goes his way.
What is the structure he must build?
One long span of highest tension.
No support of acts and chapters.
No aid from emotional utterance.
A subtle and silent revelation
Of mind and heart, thought and feeling,
On a background of art enchantment.
Novelist of creative ability,
Dramatist of constructive talent,
Artist sensing visual appeal,
Craftsman of specialized skill,
Judge of what is strong and vital,
Critic of all social fabrics.
Student of universal audiences,
An exhaustless font of originality.
An author of infinite resource,
All this the new art exacts of him,
And we expect it FROM THE LAMBKIN.

Speaking of Conventions

By Sam Spedon

DON'T forget that you are going to the National Convention in July. There will be an exposition also. That's where we make some money. Funds are needed, and needed badly, to finance the League and enable it to get a good start, but the exposition, after all, is secondary to the convention, which means everything to the national organization. But we can get along without an exposition. That was proved last year, when the funds collected went to enrich individuals and not the League.

All eyes and hearts are centered on the Convention to be held in Chicago the week of July 14-22. It will mark an epoch in the history of moving pictures. It will be a great boom to the whole industry or a gigantic fizzle. It is up to all of us to see that it does not miscarry. If the National Convention of 1917 does not make the National League the hub around which all the minor leagues revolve, does not establish the purpose for which it was intended and should be, it will be a thing of the past, and just as sure as God made little apples every state league and organization will be a law unto itself, regardless of the National League, and transact its own affairs within its own jurisdiction. Let us get together in July, stick together and not sacrifice the organization upon the altar of political preferment and personal ambition.

Don't

TAKE a fool's advice. Don't fail to count on the producer in considering all matters which are the mutual concern of the exhibitor and producer. Don't let anybody tell you differently and try to give you the impression the exhibitors are the whole thing. Reports from exhibitors and producers tell us they are in exactly the same boat as far as present earning capacity goes. Some one may tell you that the exhibitors beat the producers to it a year ago; that listens well, but don't you kid yourselves nor let anybody else do it. The exhibitor and producer have got to work in harmony if either expects to get anywhere. We believe everybody knows the purpose of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and is aware it has as much interest in the Chicago Convention as the National Exhibitors' League which indorsed the N. A. M. P. I. at the League's convention last year. The exhibitors and producers are held by a common bond. If that bond breaks—good night! We hate to think of it. Business conditions are none too good now; suffice to say they would be worse.

Presidential Timber

THE possible candidates we heard mentioned at the Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest convention were Dave Rogers, of Minneapolis; Fred Herrington, of Pittsburg; Frank Rembusch, of Indianapolis; Tom Furniss, of Duluth; Lee Ochs, of New York, and Joe Hopp, of Chicago. We are playing no favorites, no matter who our preference might be. What we would like to see is the right man in the right place, one who will take the helm untrammeled and unpledged to any clique or faction.

The Man for President

THERE is a variety of opinions as to the character of president the National League ought to have. We heard one the other day, viz: "We need a good mixer." We must say there is nothing like a good "mixer," a "good fellow" to make friends and secure the good will of others. We all wish such a man well and would go out of our way to do him a good turn and throw business in his way. That's the way we feel towards a "mixer," but we would do him and others an injustice if we were to elect him to a position for which he is not fitted and in which he would be a failure. Everybody in the industry is not a "mixer"; we have those who are more or less conservative, hence a "mixer" is not a "mixer" in an all-round sense of the word. The president of the National Exhibitors' League must be a many-sided man, with a keen insight into human nature, a man of good address, with a propensity to meet all comers without sacrificing his necessary dignity and self-respect. In selecting the president of the National League you are not selecting a "mixer," a "good fellow"; you are selecting a man who can be all things to all men without losing caste and can maintain the office conferred with credit to himself and the up-building of the league and the whole industry.

Laws are Made for Evil Doers, But—

By Rev. W. H. Jackson.

'TIS the old, old story, There's a black sheep in every flock. There's the fool who rocks the boat, etc. Under all conditions whenever and wherever the questions of censorship or Sunday closing have come up, the one and only reason has always been advanced that someone somewhere had either produced or exhibited a picture which was a disgrace to the art of moving pictures. It was only natural therefore that stringent laws should be passed to restrain these people who took it upon themselves to be a law unto themselves, only to find that the authorities had something to say about the matter.

As a result the good and great majority were compelled to mobilize their forces in protest against these unnecessary stringencies called for by the small minority of more evil tendencies who were among the pictures as the fool-rocker in the boat, or like the black sheep among the white flock.

Under no circumstances has there been any proposal either for censorship or Sunday closing as a result of a general objection to moving pictures; at all times the pictures have been duly and rightly praised as of great educational value But; then comes the stumbling block BUT. How easily a good man's character may be libelled by the statement that he is a good man—BUT; the little "but" being sufficient to discount all else that may justly be said in his favor. An eminent authority once said that he preferred to be called a bad man, rather than a good man with a "but." Time and time again the writer has, in courts of justice and in the halls of legislative assemblies heard the moving pictures most highly commended, yet with the inevitable "BUT" and because of that little stumbling block of a word Sunday closing or censorship was demanded.

Who is responsible for the "BUT"?

In the state of Florida when the assembled legislators were called upon to pass laws restricting the free use of moving pictures the writer was able to enquire if there was any reasonable objection to moving pictures in general to call for such proposed restrictions; he was assured that there were none, BUT in one of their larger cities (which shall be nameless), a certain exhibitor for reasons not explained had shown a picture, which the majority of exhibitors in the state would not think of showing, and had thereby so shocked the state at the evil possibilities of the moving pictures that "lest an evil should creep into the state" prohibitory laws were proposed. Thus one lone exhibitor was responsible for all the trouble and by putting the "but" in the otherwise good reputation of the moving pictures had brought about a great fight. It should be well understood that this particular "but" is a Satanic libel on the good character of whatever it is so mischievously imposed upon.

In other legal inquiries the opponents of the free uses of moving pictures have had no grounds but that imposed by this pernicious little imp and the oftener they could point out his presence the greater would be the percentage of evil in the sum total of moving picture productions.

It follows that whosoever places before the public one of those pictures is responsible for the evil and is guilty of a grievous wrong to the whole world of moving picture proprietors, among whom his traitorous conduct is resented.

It is a well known fact that the moving pictures of today are as a class of the highest order, ever increasing in entertaining and educational value, together with a growing reputation and character which is lifting them to the highest possible position in public morals and estimation. The class of people who are handling the pictures are also drawn from the more educated and cultured, along every line there is the evidence of a standard of morals, efficiency and sound judgment most commendable to any industry and institutional work; consequently anything that casts a reflection upon them must be treated with more than ordinary criticism but rather with condign punishment. It seems difficult to suggest any particular course of procedure, fines and even imprisonments are becoming stains upon a man's record which item can eradicate and the world forgive; what however can be done if the evil remains? From time immemorial, to be an outcast among one's brethren has seemed to be the most cutting form of permanent punishment, and to seek the good will of the outraged society the best form of reformation; let this be done. Let the manufacturers ostracize any one of their company who jeopardizes their interests and beclouds their productions with an unworthy subject; let the exhibitors show to the world at large that no man can remain in their leagues who puts the "BUT" in their reputation.

The public, the courts, the state legislatures will be slow in taking extreme measure when they know that a transgressor is so surely to be dealt with by his own associates. Let it be known to the world that all the moving picture people "Have a Law" and that they themselves judge their delinquent members by that law and the judgment that comes from within and is enforced therefrom will be the most effective besides having perfect influence upon those outside. One of the best defences which the moving picture people have made when called upon, has been their own repudiation of the evil within their ranks; let this now be put in definite and concrete form, let every organization take definite action which the public is well informed and "Freedom of the Pictures" will live up with that of the press and painful rankling fights be entirely eliminated.

GLUCKMAN GETS MUTUAL CHAPLIN RIGHTS.

The rights for the showing of the Mutual-Chaplin specials, the present series of two part comedies, in Argentine, Chile, Uruguay, and Paraguay have been sold to Max Gluckman, of Buenos Aires, Argentine, by the Oceanic Film Corporation, the overseas agents for Mutual productions. The price paid has not been announced, but is admitted to run into five tall figures. The prints to be used will each be separately purchased on a footage basis. The negotiations between the Lone Star Corporation, owners of the pictures, and Mr. Gluckman were conducted by the Oceanic's manager, B. J. Brandon, and Frederick H. Knocke, New York purchasing agent for Mr. Knocke.

War Tax Hearing at Washington

By Sam Spedon.

NUMERICALLY it was not a formidable representation of exhibitors and producers who went to Washington last week to make their appeals to the Senate finance committee. The only one who appeared before the committee for the exhibitors was Isadore Stern of Philadelphia, attorney for the Exhibitors League of America and allied theatrical interests, who, after a short presentation of facts filed a brief, agreed upon caucus of the exhibitors, favoring a tax on all admissions in place of the 10 per cent. tax on receipts.

The producers did not file a brief on Saturday but through their spokesmen, W. A. Brady and P. A. Powers made an appeal not to tax the producers on raw material and unused product, urging that it was prohibitory and would drive them out of business. Most of the producers did not arrive in Washington until the night before and on the day of the hearing, May 12, and it was impossible for them to get together with the exhibitors for deliberate consideration of the proposed tax and the fullest co-operation in the premises.

Again we have in this lack of action, this absence of co-operation and united effort—a striking instance of the need of getting together at some central point of unity. We are hopeful that the industry will receive the favorable consideration of the finance, the ways and means committees, the Senate and the House and secure the much needed relief in the war tax, but we must not be too sanguine of success, lest we be so disconcerted and demoralized by the shock. This is an epoch of preparedness and we should be prepared for the worst.

Personal Notes.

Maibel Heikes Justice has gone to Chicago for a short visit, as the guest of The Selig Polyscope Company, in connection with a large feature film under production, which she has written for that company.

Don Meaney, of Los Angeles, is in New York in the interest of his booking and publicity affairs. He is stopping at the Hotel Somerset, where he will be until May 18th or 20th.

Mack Sennett is in New York. His headquarters are the Hotel Knickerbocker. Sam Rourke is with him.

Antonio Moreno has severed his connections with the Vitagraph and returned to New York. He has not affiliated with any other company, but has two or three bids for his services.

REEL CLUB REELS OFF SUCCESSFUL BALL.

The first annual ball of the Reel Club, which is an organization made up of employees of the different film concerns, was reeled off at Palm Garden, New York City, on Saturday evening, May 12. The affair was a complete success, judged from a financial as well as a social standpoint, and the amount netted will be used in promoting the building up the club. A conservative estimate places the number who attended at 3,000, and the jollification kept up until the break of dawn the following day. Mr. and Mrs. Drew led the grand march, followed by Wilton Lackaye and Mother Maurice. Among the prominent film folk present were William D. Hart, Beatrice Anderson, Harry J. Kelton, Hughie Mack, Hortense Alden, Kathryn Page, of the Imp Company; J. T. Paine and K. S. Guimond, of the Triangle Film Company, and Bobby and Helen Conley.

WISCONSIN WON OVER BY HERRINGTON.

Through the efforts of National Organizer Fred J. Herrington the exhibitors of Wisconsin have decided to come back into the fold of the National League. Mr. Herrington attended the special meeting of Wisconsin exhibitors at Milwaukee on May 7, where he met exhibitors from all over the state and persuaded them to make application for reinstatement at the convention in Chicago.

Picture Men Urge Substitute War Tax

By Clarence L. Linz

Before Congress Committee They Ask Inclusion of Five-Cent Theater in Houses Subject to Provisions of Law

Washington, D. C., May 12.

WITHOUT sputter or sparks, or any great amount of noise, a small bunch of energetic exhibitors today placed before the Senate Finance Committee in concrete form their views on the pending war emergency revenue bill, passing by all "hot air" propositions and placing their faith in a well edited brief. The history of how these exhibitors got together in Washington is an interesting story.

For the past month or more, at the request of President Lee Ochs, of the National League, Harry Crandall, the well-known Washington exhibitor, has been looking after various matters of legislation pending in Congress. These two have been urging upon other exhibitors throughout the country to prepare to come to Washington and join with them in prevailing upon Congress, when enacting legislation affecting the motion picture business, to temper this legislation so that the industry might be permitted to live. The response has largely been by telegraph, for when the roll was called Friday morning, May 11, it was found that only a few had made the journey. This little handful of "patriots" got together early in the morning to see what could be done.

The first conference was between Harry M. Crandall, Joseph P. Morgan, of Washington; Lee Ochs, of New York, and D. W. Chamberlain, chairman of the Lower Legislative Committee of the Exhibitors' League of Minnesota. After a talk the two latter proceeded to call upon the members of the Senate Finance Committee who could be reached, and in the House of Representatives the members of the Ways and Means Committee. Later these joined with Maurice Davis, Harry Schwalbe, representing the Stanley Mastbaum interests in Philadelphia, and Ernest Horstmann, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts, and with Isadore Stern, an attorney, went into executive session and remained behind closed doors for seven and one-half hours, during which time they made a complete survey of the situation and prepared a brief, which on Saturday was presented to the committee for its consideration.

On Saturday the exhibitors who were in Washington joined with the producers and exchange managers to further go over the field. At a meeting Friday night of the producers William A. Brady was selected to present their views.

Congressmen Surprised at Spirit of Co-Operation.

It was a great surprise to the memers of the Finance Committee when it dawned upon them that the exhibitors were not trying to "duck the issue" and were perfectly willing to be the instrument through which the war revenue in part should be derived.

"We respectfully suggest," the exhibitors stated in their brief, "that all admissions up to and including 15 cents be taxed 1 cent on each ticket; from 16 cents to 25 cents, inclusive, 2 cents on each ticket; from 26 cents up, 10 per cent. on all tickets, or one cent on each additional 10 cents admission, or fraction of additional 10 cents admission. The difference between the original bill as drafted and the amendment as suggested lies in the fact that all 5-cent tickets are taxed 1 cent, whereas, under the original, the 5-cent theaters are exempt. Our reasons for including the 5-cent theaters in this measure is to equalize the 1-cent tax on the 10 and 15-cent admissions, so that the Government will derive a revenue from every ticket sold. We, as representatives of the industries, can see no legal reason for discriminating against the higher priced theaters for the benefit of the theater charging only 5 cents admission. Our experience and observation has taught us that the patrons of the 5-cent and 10-cent theaters and the 15-cent theaters are practically the same, and we believe that the Government is legitimately entitled to a tax on all tickets. We apprehend that thousands of houses now charging 10 cents admission would change to 5 cents in order to avoid the tax if the exemption of 5-cent houses should prevail, thereby depriving the Government of a vast revenue.

"We respectfully suggest that the act become effective September 1, 1917, because we believe that the Government will require all of the time during this interim to prepare the necessary printing and administrative acts to make the bill effective, and we further submit that the majority of the theaters will be closed from June 1 to September 1, as the summer months are always dull in the theatrical business, and an enforcement of the act on June 1 will probably result in the closing of practically all of the theaters during the summer months.

"We further respectfully suggest, as a matter of expediency, on behalf of the Government, that instead of issuing revenue stamps to be affixed to the various tickets, that the Government be empowered to print and distribute standard tickets to all theaters, which could be printed at approximately the same price as the ordinary revenue stamps would cost. One of the principal reasons that leads us to suggest that the Government print these tickets is the fact that nearly all of the theater business is done in the course of 15 to 20 minutes before each performance, and it would be impracticable to accommodate the public if the ticket sellers had to affix revenue stamps to each ticket as sold, in addition to making change, and otherwise accommodating the patrons of the various theaters; in fact, the nature of our business absolutely requires this, and we are drawing these conclusions from the experiences of the picture men in Canada, who have covered the same ground, under the same conditions during the past three years.

"When the law first became effective, the Canadian Government issued stamps, which later on had to be changed about to meet the above conditions. In addition to this, on behalf of the Government, it would simplify the work of the Government inspectors to a great degree, and we are prepared to submit plans to the administrative department that would work out in full detail to the mutual benefit of the Government and our industry.

"We would also respectfully suggest that all free passes be eliminated, so that the Government tax be paid on all admissions, whether children or adults.

Urge Redemption of Unused Tickets.

"We also respectfully suggest that the administrative department be empowered to redeem tickets unused at their face value, and provide for the cancellation of used tickets. This redemption of tickets is suggested by us for the protection of theater owners, who have an advance sale of seats, and who may not dispose of all of their seats for a given day's performance, and who would, therefore, be legitimately entitled to redemption for the unsold portion of their tickets.

"In conclusion, we desire to state that, with the few exceptions herein mentioned, we are satisfied with the provisions of the bill as they stand, and that this brief is presented on behalf of about 16,000 theaters out of a total of 24,000 in the United States. Whatever amendments we have suggested are put forth in good faith, and not alone for our convenience, but having in mind the needs of our Government at this time, feeling sure that the Government is desirous of fostering a popular educational industry instead of crushing it. We, therefore, strongly urge the individual members of the Finance Committee, on the part of the Senate of the United States, to seriously consider the few reasonable changes herein suggested.

"We further desire to suggest that we are at present paying a war tax, under the act passed for providing revenue when the European war situation developed. This act levied taxes on telephone companies, telegraph companies, express companies and other corporations, which said corporations had this special tax since removed. We want to convince this committee that our industry is not attempting to evade just taxation, but is vitally interested in meeting the proper adjustment and equalization of taxation, as well as the method of the collection of the same. Any additional tax imposed upon the manufacturer as provided for in Section 600, Page 26, Lines 15 to 21, will, of necessity have to be carried by the theater owners presenting this petition, because of the fact that the manufacturer will fasten the cost of the taxation provided for to his cost of sale of films. The burden falls on the theater owner and cannot be carried by the majority of them. This would defeat the purpose of the bill by closing a number of theaters which would therefore pay no revenue tax to the Government. All of which is respectfuly submitted."

The argument of the producers was set forth ably by William A. Brady, representing the motion picture industry of the United States as president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. He told the committee that this has a membership which includes at least 90 per cent. of all engaged in the motion picture industry, including the distributing and exhibiting ends, as well as the making of machines, and, in fact, everything that pertains to the motion picture industry.

Brady Sets Forth Picture Men's Position.

"We do not wish to wave an American flag," said Mr. Brady. "We are not here to preach our patriotism. I believe we have proved that already by turning our screens and our films over to rercuiting and gardening and to farming. A group of us spent several hours in New York this week conferring with Government and State officials to learn their desires, and we have guaranteed to go into every corner of the United States, places where newspapers are unknown, where they do not even have a weekly newspaper, and we are to circulate, free of all cost, any propaganda that the Government of the United States desires to have circulated.

"It is a popular idea that the motion picture business is an El Dorado. This is the popular idea in the press. The pioneers in the motion picture business probably made a great deal of money, for they came in at the time the game was little known, got their actors and actresses cheap, got their film cheap and sold it cheap, but the industry grew and is growing. At the present time actors and actresses are expensive, as you read in the newspapers, and all material is expensive. We object not to the taxation, as a whole, but as to the method of taxation, and our principal objection is this: You tax our film, our product; you tax what you call non-exposed film and exposed film. To my mind, films will take the place of books in the schoolrooms, and in view of the great educational possibilities offered by motion pictures I sincerely hope our national representatives will not tax the industry too much. We are perfectly willing to accede to the wish of the Government and pay these taxes, but we object to your taxing the stuff we use in production.

"You put a 1½ cent a foot tax on the film we use. We use 5,000 feet of film in making a five-reel feature. Sometimes as much as 40,000 feet of raw film is used to produce these five reels. Scenes must be taken over and over again; scenes must be taken and cut out. The result is that fully 75 per cent. of the film used in the production of a subject is thrown away; it is a total loss. Then why charge us for that? In many, many cases, since, to use a popular expression, the 'boobs' have entered this industry, there has been more money lost in it than in any other business. In many instances pictures are made in which 200,000 feet, yes, even 300,000 feet of raw film are used and these pictures may never reach the public at all, because when the subject is completed it is found to be a failure and cannot be sold. Is it justice, then, to tax the manufacturer 1½ cents a foot for film that is a failure? We call your attention to the fact that all our producing firms and exhibiting firms are either incorporated or are partnerships and are paying excess profits taxes and corporation taxes.

"Every theater in the United States and every manufacturer in the United States pays license taxes. We pay local taxes. We call your attention to the fact that in several States in this Union and in many cities we are forced to take our films and pay somebody anywhere from 25 cents to $2.50 to see if they are fit for the public to look at. In our business there are certain films which should not be used, but these are a very small percentage, and the film industry as a whole is getting together and would be pleased to put some of these gentlemen in State's prison. Now the industry will do that, yet we are obliged to pay somebody else—we have to pay taxes to have outsiders view the pictures. That amounts to many thousands of dollars a year.

"Now, in your present trouble, we are willing to be taxed as much as any other industry in the country. But we resent the imputation made by a previous speaker that the tax should be loaded on to motion pictures and chewing gum. Ours is a respectable industry. We have got artists, authors—we have Sir Gilbert Parker, Sir Herbert Tree and others; we have the leading actors and actresses, the leading managers, the leading newspaper writers and the leading authors of the United States. But what right has that man to say that Congress should tax chewing gum and motion pictures?

Opposes Tax on Raw Material.

"We are perfectly willing to pay taxes, but think it unfair that we should be discriminated against in this tax on raw material. It is not imposed in other lines. For instance, a man is engaged in the shoe business. He pays a tax, for instance, on his shoes, but you do not tax him on the leather. Take musical instruments. They are taxed 5 per cent., but are not taxed for the celluloid that they put into the disks that are used with graphophones and phonographs. Suppose they were taxed $1 a pound. Would it be just? But that is what you are doing to us.

"Ours is the poor man's amusement. We represent the poor man's amusement. For 5, 10, 15 or 20 cents a man may see a news film, a funny picture, and a drama; he can take his whole family for one-third of the amount he used to pay for admission to a regular theater. When you come to the poor man's theater you should let it alone.

"You read in the newspapers that $1,000,000 a year is paid to Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford—$1,000,000 a year each. If that is true, tax them and each will have to pay $333,000. These enormous salaries come from the motion picture business. If you get the revenue from the actors, and we hope you do, for the actors are getting it all, but do not tax, do not strangle, do not put us all out of business. You see people getting rich in the movies. This is showman's brag and bluster. We have a great national figure who indulges in the same practice. A natural born showman exaggerates. Only two companies in the United States making motion pictures this year will pay any dividends."

Additional testimony introduced by the producers showed that there was little or no profit in the business under existing conditions, and that to burden it with taxation would be to ruin it.

P. A. Powers, treasurer of the Universal Company, also took up the question of the tax on raw stock, pointing out that as only one concern in the United States produces it the film companies would eventually have it put on to them. In lieu of the footage tax, as he put it, he would have the Government place a tax on the pictures when completed, based on their selling price. He declared that the footage tax on the raw stock and the footage tax on the completed films would drive the news films and the cheaper grade of productions, such as the readily-made comedies, etc., from the market. His company, which produces by far the largest volume of film subjects, would be forced to limit its production. These films are short-lived and the tax, when one considers how much raw stock is wasted, would be prohibitive.

Cromelin Explains the Foreign Aspect.

Paul H. Cromelin, vice-president of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, asked that the provision in the bill be so amended as to exempt from the footage taxes the films intended entirely for foreign business. He declared that if the producers of film intended for shipment to South America, Europe and other parts of the world had to pay these taxes they would find themselves discriminated against when competing for such business. As it is the cost of raw stock abroad, he intimated, is cheaper than in America, and the English, French and Italian producers would have the advantage of lower overhead charges at the outset.

Mr. Thornton, of Price, Waterhouse & Co., New York, referred to the recent investigation of the film business at Albany, when the New York legislators found that the industry was now in no condition to be taxed.

He confirmed the statements of the previous speakers that there was little or no profit in the business as it now is; that the companies would have to wait until the conclusion of the war to cash in on their prospects of a good foreign business. But the Government, he said, would not be willing to take some of these surplus films or deal in futures in securing this tax money.

The committee seemed very much impressed with the several talks. It is reported that wholesale changes are to be made in the revenue bill as it is now drawn up, and exhibitors, manufacturers and all others interested in the industry are hopeful of having their suggestions accepted and incorporated in the new measure which is to result from the hearings under way in the rooms of the Senate Finance Committee.

Among those who thronged the hearing rooms other than those already named, and there were many others whom it is understood could not get inside because of the number of other people waiting therein to be heard on other sections of the bill, were F. W. Thornton, representing the National Association of Motion Picture Industry; C. R. Seeley, Pathe, Inc.; Joseph P. Morgan, of the Crandall Amusement Company; Maurice Davis, proprietor of the M Street Theater; Carl F. Senning, manager Fox Film Corporation, Washington; D. F. O'Donnell, manager, Pathe, Inc., Washington; Sam Spedon, representative of the Moving Picture World, New York; Francis Holly, Washington, D. C.; Hamilton Smith, Sanger Picture Plays, New York; Vivian Whitaker, Artcraft Film Corporation; J. A. Golden, Crystal and Triumph Film Companies; Harry Schwalbe, Stanley Mastbaum interests, Philadelphia; Ernest Horstmann, Boston, and J. E. Brulatour, New York.

Wheeler Bill Dead and Unmourned

Senator Brown Fails to Take it Out of Judiciary Committee, Where Chairman Walters Was Sitting on It

THE Wheeler bill imposing a tax as well as a State Motion Picture Commissioner on the film industry in New York died an ignominious death at Albany on Thursday evening, May 10. The mourners were few. Of eulogy there was none. Flowers adorned the desk of many members of both houses, but none reposed on the desk of Assemblyman Heber E. Wheeler, author of the measure, or above the mortal remains of the bill as represented by a dozen printed pages. Without parting words of praise or condemnation the bill expired in committee.

The following epitaph could well have been used:

"Died in the Senate, Albany, May 10, 1917. The Wheeler Bill Killed by Public Sentiment."

The motion picture industry did its work and did it well. Slated a few weeks ago in its first form for passage apparently beyond a question of doubt, the bill was killed during the last few hours by a flood of telegrams and letters that demonstrated to Governor Charles S. Whitman, to Senator Elon R. Brown and to every member of the Senate that the measure was an unjust one devised and designed to cripple the poor man's amusement.

Governor Whitman and Senator Brown apparently heard the voice of the people. The latter, wise in legislative matters, "forgot" to introduce a resolution discharging the Senate Judiciary Committee from further consideration of the bill and placing it to a vote. On Tuesday night, Assemblyman Wheeler made the statement that the bill was absolutely certain to pass. He was then a man flushed with success. Thursday found him crestfallen and downhearted through the death of his pet measure, a bill that had been amended until it lost all semblance of its first form and so far as being one which the committee wished became almost a joke.

Men and women were present in the Senate Wednesday night expecting some action on the bill. Word went about the Chamber in the early part of the evening that there was a strong sentiment, said to emanate from the executive chamber against the bill. Members of the committee who had stood with Assemblyman Wheeler lost heart. As the hours dragged by there was no mention made of the bill. Matters were repeated on Thursday.

Assemblyman Wheeler took a look in the Senate Chamber at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and later on in reply to a question expressed the belief that the bill was as "dead as a door nail." The Senate Judiciary Committee, of which J. Henry Walters of Syracuse is chairman, had held its own. For days Mr. Walters, who had steadfastly opposed the bill, refused to report it out, believing it to be a pernicious measure. The fact that the motion picture industry had treated the Governor with the utmost kindness and prominence at the last election no doubt was a factor.

Senator Brown, at first believing that he could shove the bill across by an adroit move, "counted noses" and then decided not to chance matters when there was so much sentiment showing itself readily on the surface to down the bill.

Whether or not censorship and the taxation of the movies will be taken up next year can only be surmised. Assemblyman Wheeler has had enough. While Senator Brown, bent on bringing in money to the State, was in favor of the Wheeler bill, a year from now may result in many changes. Anyhow, the Wheeler bill is ancient history and the motion picture men of New York State, standing back to back, have well earned the victory which came to them at Albany last Thursday.

William A. Brady was instrumental in downing the bill through the following telegram, which reached the senators Wednesday afternoon: "We ask you to vote for fair play to the motion picture industry. If you tax us, tax all other classes of entertainment that can stand it better than we can. If we are given a chance we will regulate ourselves without outside interference. Energetic methods are now being adopted by the industry as a whole to eliminate the small percentage of objectionable films from being made or circulated."

It was the latter sentence that did the business. Believing that the motion picture industry will take care of itself without unjust tax or legislation the senate of New York has now given the business a chance to prove its assertions.

Bill Passed the Assembly Tuesday.

In the hopes of beating Senator Henry Walters at his own game, Assemblyman Heber Wheeler, author of the bill licensing all branches of the motion picture industry, played a clever card Tuesday, May 8, when after a conference in the Assembly the bill was passed by a vote of 81 to 42 and sent to the Senate with the understanding that Senator Brown would ask that the Senate Judiciary committee be discharged from further consideration of the bill and requesting farther under a special ruling that it be put to a vote at once. For two or three weeks past, or even longer, the Wheeler bill, referred to the Senate Judiciary committee, has been tied up as tight as a drum by Senator Walters, the chairman.

Flushed with his success in the Assembly, Mr. Wheeler on Tuesday night predicted the ultimate passage of his bill and the signing of the measure by the Governor sometime during the next thirty days. In view of the fact that it was at Governor Whitman's request that the salary of the Commissioner of Motion Pictures in this State was advanced from $7,000 to $7,500 there seemed to be no question as to what the State's chief executive would do if there ever came a time when he could act on the bill through its passage in the Senate.

In connection with the progress of the bill from the Assembly to the Senate, Mr. Wheeler took occasion to state publicly that he was not fishing for any position in the proposed new department, in fact that he was to enter a bank at Canandaigua within the next few days.

Assemblyman Wheeler still maintains his views that his committee was not treated on the level in some instances during its trip of investigation in New York. Some of the things which were said about the committee and its endeavors do not seem to sit lightly on Mr. Wheeler's mind, either, for Tuesday night he supplemented his remarks as to the outcome of his bill by saying: "The distributors and producers cannot come up here and bluff and bulldoze the Legislature."

The bill went to a vote in the Assembly Tuesday afternoon. The Democrats stood almost to a man against the bill, the majority of Republicans lining up with Mr. Wheeler, although an occasional one, apparently realizing the injustice which the bill would do to the entire industry, strayed from the fold and was listed as a "black sheep."

Assemblyman Clarence Welch, speaking in opposition to the bill, asserted that it would conflict with local authorities, especially in regard to the regulation of Sunday performance. Mr. Welch was the person who brought about the adoption of a resolution back in January that gave the Wheeler committee its existence, but with the words "To see if the motion picture industry is in a position where it should be subjected to taxation." The very fact that Mr. Wheeler and his committee in their first report went on to say that it was the opinion of the committee that the business at the present time was not in fit condition to be further burdened, and then turned right about and started in with a tax that would cripple and kill a large percentage of the concerns and at the same time advance the price of the general admission is something that Assemblyman Welch and others cannot understand.

Robert L. Tudor, Henry S. Shimmel, Minority Leader Callahan and others of the Assembly refused to swallow Mr. Wheeler's assertions before the vote was taken and in unvarnished language told him so. Mr. Callahan said that the whole scheme was purely and simply a political one to build up the Republican party, a political machine which the motion picture industry was being called upon to bear the expense of creation and sustaining. He called attention to the statement of Mr. Wheeler at the outset that the business was not in a condition to stand for taxation and then proceeded to tax it.

Walker Sunday Bill Is Killed

New York Senate Decides Against Measure 24 to 17—Strong Speech by Mr. Walker

WITH the petitions of two million or more persons desiring that Sunday movies be legalized in this state, piled high around the desk of Senator James Walker, staring them in the face, twenty-four Senators succeeded in defeating the Walker Sunday opening bill at Albany at 10 o'clock Tuesday evening, May 8. With nine Senators absent, the vote stood 24 to 17, with the up-state legislators standing almost to a man in opposition to the bill. Backed against the wall, Senator Walker made the fight of his life, but to no avail. The recent amendments made in the idea of corralling at least a few of the votes of Senators from the smaller sections counted for little. Even had the measure passed the Senate, it would have found little support in the Assembly, according to Assemblyman Heber Wheeler, who predicted that it would not have had the support of one-quarter of the members of the lower house.

Final action settling the fate of the Walker bill was staged in a spectacular way. For days the bill had dragged in the Senate. On one occasion it was reached, then laid aside at the insistent demand of many of those present. Everyone knew that the bill meant a fight to the finish. Word passed through the Capitol late in the afternoon that the bill was up for life or death Tuesday night, with the result that the galleries were thronged.

Edmond Barkley, John Morris and Fred W. Anson arrived from New York during the late afternoon, bringing with them two steel cases containing the names of two million men and women, signers to petitions asking for the legal Sunday motion picture show. There were long rolls of names, hundreds were on postal cards, others in books of tablet form, thousands upon thousands, all following a petition which read: "I petition against the closing of any motion picture theater on Sunday. The motion picture house has become a part of the pleasure and profit of our lives, and to deprive us or any of the 3,000,000 patrons in New York of the privilege of spending a part of our Sunday in viewing motion pictures is an infringement of our liberties and a reflection on the moral character of the overwhelming majority of the cities of the Empire State."

The petitions represented all cities of the state. The petition has the distinction of being the biggest ever presented to the Legislatures of this or any other state.

No sooner were the two cases brought into the Senate chamber than Senator Walker's desk became the cynosure of all eyes. Senator Walker announced to those around him that he was "ready to go to the mat with the proposition." In order to guard against any assertion that only New York City was represented by the petitions, Senator Walker asked that certain petitions from up-state be laid on his desk for examination. Binghamton presented an enormous list. Syracuse, Schenectady and many other cities did nearly as well. Nyack was well to the front, showing the activity that had been manifest in that place.

The opposing forces clashed shortly before 10 o'clock, Senator Walker firing the opening gun as he arose in his seat and demanded that the Senate take action on his bill without further dillydallying. From the first it was evident that the bill was doomed to defeat. Senator Brown, at the very outset of Senator Walker's speech, demanded that the five-minute rule limiting speeches be effective.

Declaring the vast army of laboring people in the state wanted the legislation that legalized their innocent amusement, Senator Walker directed a large part of his remarks to Senator Elon R. Brown, the Republican leader, saying that some day the three million persons would swing the whip even as one Simon Legree's whip is now being swung from the second floor of the Capitol.

Senator Walker, in defending his bill before the vote, said in part:

This is the most difficult bill that has been on the calendar this year, perhaps, to explain. It leaves the introducer, whosoever he may be, in the difficult position that shows an angle on which to either explain, vindicate, and eventually justify the bill. It is one of those things which in the last analysis I have come to the conclusion are local issues.

This is a serious matter. I have always felt that it was. I think there is just as much desire on the part of some of us to take a piece of legislation of this kind out of the category of politics and geography, if that is possible, as with any piece of legislation that that ever came before this body; but the great difficulty we have here is one that is very disconcerting to the proponents of the bill. Into this bill has been injected the popular "moral" issue, and that, I say, makes it very difficult to argue whenever a man maintains himself in a proper manner, to say that when a man conducts himself like a law-abiding citizen that he cannot choose his honest, legal amusement—to argue that as an academic proposition would be ridiculous. The very evidence that it is academic is that it is a fact today, so I find it more difficult every minute to see from what angle to approach it.

You have on your statute books today a law that makes it technically illegal to open moving picture shows on Sunday. That law has no effect throughout the state. This is no news to anyone in the Senate. In Schenectady—I am choosing a near-by city—there were seventeen arrests for showing moving pictures on Sunday, and seventeen defendants were acquitted. In one case, though, the judge charged the jury that they could do nothing but bring in a verdict of "guilty."

Now, that suggests this to me: That, while it is illegal, it is illegal without the concurrence of the people, or of popular approval. Was there ever such a ridiculous situation, in your recollection or the recollection of the oldest man in the Senate, that you have a law that you cannot get a jury of twelve of your peers to find a man guilty for a violation?

I offer you this bill, and the majority of the men around this circle, I guess as a matter of fact hardly with an exception, will say to you confidentially, will say to you in the corridor, will say to you outside the Capitol, "I know, there is no harm in moving pictures on Sunday. I know that they ought to be open, by law; but, let me out. I hope you pass your bill, but don't look for my vote." "Well, why?" "Somebody at home would not like it."

Now, it was a source of great regret to me, when we had the hearing, that so many churchmen came here and opposed it. It was difficult to understand. It made me feel a deep sense of regret that they could not join in legislation for which there was such a demand. But the thing which they did not explain to me, which I could not understand, was how an action on the part of a citizen that could be legal on Saturday, and Friday, an act that will not be immoral on Monday or Saturday, can become immoral because done on Sunday. I have yet to understand, from whatever meagre information that has come to me that there is only one day in the week, the Lord's Day. I am one of those willing to believe that seven days a week are the Lord's days, and that you cannot give the Ten Commandments any additional force by enacting them into law.

Now, I don't care very much about the other charge that is made, that it is all right, but the difficulty is that it is commercializing the Sabbath. There would not be any necessity for commercializing the Sabbath if a few of our philanthropists would subsidize them and open them on Sundays. But how are you going to open them, if you do not support them?

The next question put to me was, "Why don't you pass a referendum and make it a matter of local option?" I say it is not necessary; that if it is a perfectly proper, decent thing to do, that is the question with us. There will be no movies on Sunday unless the people approve, because, unless the people approve, the houses will not be supported and they will no longer exist. That is the local option, and the fact that they now exist is the evidence that they are supported, and if they were not supported they would not last. After all, there are no pullers-in outside the moving picture house. No one is ever pulled into the picture houses. The people have gone to them of their own volition. Let me read you a little thing from the New York Times, which will carry a great deal more weight for the bill than anything I could say: "But to the advocates of a Sunday devoid of all worldly diversions they are all objectionable, including the concerts of pure music, such as those of the Philharmonic and Symphony Societies, which thousands of good citizens find edifying. One million persons in this city, three millions in the State of New York, derive pleasure and measurable intellectual profit from the exhibitions of moving pictures on Sundays."

That is the brief! Three millions in the State of New York go to moving picture shows on Sunday. It has been adduced, right in this chamber, that the pictures have done more to bring families together than any other one vehicle of amusement known to the people of the State of New York. That is recognized throughout the state. That where, heretofore, a man spent his time in some place by himself, since the movie has come, he is permitted to take his family with him for a few pennies and go to the shows on Sunday.

I have here two million signatures to a petition asking for this. Yes, two million. Without the aid of a net, either. And some day they are going to assert themselves about this. Some day you are going to find a greater necessity for a back-flip such as you get used to. I don't know whether those two million people, or three million, that are going to moving pictures on Sunday have more influence with you than one Simon Legree's whip that might be swung from the second floor of this House. I wish every one of them would get a whip and come in here and play "Uncle Tom's Cabin" with you. There is a kind of a whip they can swing, though, and they are going to swing it. It won't be swung in one direction, either.

The vote showed some interesting little features. While it was a foregone conclusion, from pressure that had been brought to bear by the churches in the small communities on the representatives from many of the up-state sections, that these Senators would vote against the bill, it was noticeable that Senators Burlingame, of Brooklyn; Graves, of Buffalo; Gilchrist, Lockwood and Murphy, each of whom hails from Brooklyn, linied up with the opposition forces. The vote stood as follows, with the home addresses of each Senator: Ayes—Boylan, Cotillo, Cullen, Dowling, Downing, Dunnigan, Foley, Heffernan, Koenig, Mills, Ottinger, Sheridan, Wagner and Walker, all of New York; Daly, of Astoria; Ramsperger, of Buffalo, and Wellington, of Troy. Noes—Adon Brown, of Leonardsville; Elon R. Brown, of Watertown; Burlingame, of Brooklyn; Carson, of Rushville; Gilchrist, of Brooklyn; Graves, of Buffalo; Halliday, of Ithaca; Hewitt, of Locke; Hill of Lestershire; Knight, of Arcade;

Lockwood, of Brooklyn; Marshall, of Malone; Murphy, of Brooklyn; Newton, of Geneseo; Robinson, of Mohawk; Sage, of Menands; Slater, of Portchester; Stivers, of Middletown; G. F. Thompson, of Middleport; G. L. Thompson, of Kings Park; Walton, of Kingston; Whitney, of Mechanicsville, and Wicks, of Sauquoit. Argetsinger, Carroll, Cromwell, Emerson, Gibbs, Lawson, Mullan, Walters and Yelverton were absent.

While Senator Walker made the usual motion asking that the bill be reconsidered and laid on the table, it is generally conceded that even with each side forced at last to show its hand and consequent strength, that the bill is defeated beyond any question of doubt, at least for this year, for the session is due to adjourn this week.

Report Out Federal War Tax Measure

House Ways and Means Committee Proposes Ten Per Cent. Levy on Receipts—Would Assess Films Also.

Washington, D. C., May 9.

MOTION picture exhibitors, it is believed, can hardly take offense or be "peeved" at the provisions of the so-called war emergency revenue bill which was presented to the House of Representatives this afternoon by the House Ways and Means Committee. This measure has been before the committee for some little time and for more than a week has been the subject of no little wrangling among the members. It was at first contemplated to charge a flat ten per cent. on the gross box office receipts of all places of amusement. It was pointed out to prominent members of the committee that such a tax as this would prove to be the ruination of the business, as it is now taxed about all that it will stand. Whether or not this had the desired effect cannot be stated, but at any rate when the measure appeared befor the House it was in much better shape, for the paragraphs covering motion picture theaters and other places of amusement were better treated.

The taxes upon admissions to motion picture and other theaters and other places of amusement are covered in the following text:

"Section 700. That from and after the first day of June, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid a tax equivalent to 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place, to be paid by the person admitted, and a tax of 5 cents for each admission of each person (except in the case of a bona fide employe), and children under twelve years of age, admitted free to any place for admission to which a charge is made, to be paid by the person so admitted. Provided, that the tax on admission of children under twelve years of age, where an admission charge is made, shall in every case be 1 cent. These taxes shall not be imposed in the case of a place the maximum charge for admission to which is 5 cents.

"No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to any admission all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious or charitable institutions, societies or organizations, or admissions to agricultural fairs all the proceeds of which inure exclusively for agricultural purposes.

"The term 'admission' as used in this title includes seats and tables, reserved or otherwise, and other similar accommodations, and the charges made therefor.

"Section 702. That every person, corporation, partnership or association (a) receiving any payments for such admission, dues or fees shall collect the amount of the tax imposed by section 700 or 701 from the person making such payments, or (b) admitting any person free to any place for admission to which a charge is made shall collect the amount of the tax imposed by section 700 from the person so admitted, and (c) in either case shall make returns and payments of the amounts so collected at the same time and in the same manner as provided in section 503 of this act."

The theater tax alone is expected to yield to the Government the sum of $60,000,000. The total amount of revenue to be raised is $1,810,420,000. A further fund, a part of this huge sum, amount to $7,000,000 is to be obtained from the following:

"(c) Upon all moving picture films (which have not been exposed) sold by the manufacturer or importer a tax equivalent to one-half of one cent per linear foot; and

"(d) Upon all positive moving picture films (containing a picture ready for projection) sold or leased by the manufacturer, producer or importer, a tax equivalent to one cent per linear foot."

The import duties on films is advanced 10 per cent. Taking it all in all, the film industry fares fairly well. The only trouble is that the bill will be materially changed when it reaches the Senate, and no one knows what will happen then.

Arrest Two for Film Thefts

General Film Company's Campaign for Ferreting Out Men Who Prey Upon the Industry Has Denouement.

AS the direct result of the General Film Company's energetic steps to carry war to the persons guilty of the widespread looting of film exchanges all over the United States, two significant arrests were made in New York shortly after midnight Saturday, May 5. Two men, former employes of a prominent film exchange, were seized as they were leaving the premises of the World Film Corporation and arrested. The specific complaint was the theft of several reels of a feature film.

The prisoners gave the names of Alex. Wolfheimer and James McSorley. Advance hints of a visit such as the complaint involves had been received by General Manager George Schaeffer of the World and Business Manager H. H. Buxbaum of the General Film Company, and police aid was enlisted. Wolfheimer and McSorley, after pleading not guilty, were held for the grand jury, bail being fixed at $1,000.

For a long time there has been an extensive thievery of motion picture films all over the country, becoming a perfect epidemic in the last year or so. It is estimated that the losses have easily reached a total of $500,000 in film itself, to say nothing of the further losses through piracy of stolen film by duplication for sale. This unbearable situation moved legitimate film distributors, and prominently the General Film Company, to take decisive steps to check the evil. Under date of last February 17, the General Company distributed to its branch managers instructions to co-operate with exhibitors and the police department to apprehend film thieves. Rewards from $50 to $500 were authorized for information leading to the detection, arrest and conviction of film thieves.

The trial of the men accused in the present instance will demonstrate whether their actions were such as to call for severe punishment. The charge against them is that they left the building with film which was the property of the exchange. Loyalty of employes is responsible for the presence of police in the neighborhood of the transaction. It is also claimed that an employe of another exchange had been approached to make some "easy money" by permitting the unauthorized removal of film for a nominal consideration.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of May 13 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"Sacrifice" at the Rialto.

Margaret Illington made her screen debut at The Rialto the week of May 13 in "Sacrifice," a Lasky-Paramount production. The story of the play was written by Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling." Frank Reicher directed the picture. The story deals with a notorious cabaret dancer in a small European principality, and the daughter of a high diplomat in the neighboring country. Both roles are played by Miss Illington.

The second installment of "Sailors of France" showed French submarines and torpedo boats in action. The animated magazine and a new comedy were included in the program.

Mary Pickford at the Strand.

The Strand presented Mary Pickford in "A Romance of the Redwoods," as its feature picture. A western subject of full-blooded dramatic action, the story was written by Cecil De Mille in collaboration with Jeanie MacPherson. The settings are of the days of '49 during the time of the big gold rush. Mary Pickford as Jenny Lawrence, a little New England miss, journeys to the West in search of her only relative, an uncle. There are various clever twists in the story. "The Cop and the Anthem," another O. Henry story, was also presented in film form.

The soloists were Walter Vaughn, Irene Stolofsky, Lola Chalfant, Arthur Depew, and Ralph H. Brigham.

"The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" at Broadway.

"The Hand That Rocks the Cradle," a new feature prepared by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley for the Universal Company, opened a limited engagement at the Broadway Theater, Sunday night, May 13th. The picture is in six reels, and deals with a subject of vital interest to all humanity. Lois Weber appears as the wife of a physician who believes in preaching to women that their greatest heritage is the right of motherhood. Phillip Smalley is the physician.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

WRITE US EARLY AND OFTEN

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD carries the most complete record of Exhibitors' News. This department aims at being the fullest and fairest chronicle of all the important doings in the ranks of organized exhibitors. To keep the department as complete and as useful as it is now we request the secretaries of all organizations to favor us with reports of all the news. Coming events in the ranks of the organized exhibitors are best advertised in this department of the Moving Picture World.

EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE ORGANIZER.

In answer to recent inquiries in regard to the Exhibitors' League Organizations and for the information of exhibitors in any of the States, readers will kindly note that Fred J. Herrington is National Organizer for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. All correspondence on the subject may be addressed to him at 310 McCance Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Northwest Convention a Record Affair

Rodgers Deposit Plan Adopted—Treasurer's Report Shows Balance of $1,164.45.

By John L. Johnston.

THIS gathering of Northwest exhibitors at Minneapolis was undoubtedly the most spirited of any on record here, but it remains to be seen whether the drastic action the convention voted favorably upon will have any startling effect—immediately. If the convention's word goes, advance deposits will be a thing of the past shortly. The May 1-3 convention adopted the Rodgers plan of battling advance deposits and gave Mr. Rodgers power of attorney, or, in other words, full charge of their warfare against present systems of "pay before you enter."

From where we sit it looks as if it will be a long drawn out battle that will have the Chicago convention as a Waterloo. The exhibitors are fighting capital. There will be many exchanges that will drop the deposit system at once and many to uphold it. There will be many exhibitors who have been making money only because they get their films from advance deposit exchanges, and they will in all probability "back water" when the tide comes in. R. E. Bishop, of the Triangle, has proudly announced that the deposit system has been dropped and we have heard several other exchangemen in discussing probable action of exhibitors say that "they won't get far" with their exchanges.

The treasurer's report read at the last convention showed that as small as the Northwest branch of the National League was as far as membership was concerned, financially it was "well heeled." The Northwest's income for 1916 was $7,743.41, $4,616.08 of this being from the exposition held May 2-5, 1916. Expenditures amounted to $6,578.96, leaving a balance in the bank of $1,164.45 and outstanding $128.33. Subscriptions and contributions toward the 1917 convention amounted to $1,116.67. The exposition was abandoned this year because it was believed it took the interest of exhibitors away from the convention, but it must be admitted that this same old exposition did wonders as regards putting the organization on its feet. The receipts from the grand ball this year did not amount to half that of last year. The exposition in 1916 attracted good crowds and monetary support for the organization because of the presence of Anna Held, Valeska Suratt, Carl Laemmle, Bryant Washburn, Edward Arnold and C. M. Giffin. This year the grand ball was widely advertised, but apparently the presence of Rose Tapley and Richard Travers did not satisfy the public's curiosity.

The action of the recent convention in regard to allowing the "Four-Minute Men" to talk in theaters during intermission seems commendable, as was also the action on the proposed war tax and music tax discussions. The organization voted to make its fiscal year from May 1 to May 1 and keep members paying dues since March 1, 1917, in good standing until May 1, 1918. In discussions the exhibitors giving their views of a fair war tax appeared more favorable to doubling their present Federal tax than to charging an extra cent per ticket at the box office.

President James G. Gilosky has been presented with a handsome silver loving cup by members of the organization. Mr. Gilosky has begun his third term as president of the Northwest body. The visit here of Fred J. Herrington, national organizer; William Sweeney, national secretary, and National President Ochs did much to stir things up in the organization. Many new members have been added to the roster since May 1, 1917.

Activities at the Exchanges.

Manager Lee A. Horn, of the Selznick exchange, was host to exhibitors Wednesday evening (or rather midnight), May 2, at the Strand, where "The Barrier" was shown. About three hundred exhibitors and friends were in attendance.

Manager Joseph E. Schwartzbine of the Pathe exchange and his able crew of roadmen, Rose, Johnson, McCone and Maas, corralled a majority of the exhibitors at the top of the stairs at the convention, and after the evening festivities were over the Gold Rooster gents were hosts to exhibitors at special showings at the Unique.

Exchangemen not members of the F-I-L-M club were somewhat surprised to see and hear their interests so well presented by W. K. Howard, the youngest man in the hall, at the convention during the last meeting of exhibitors. Mr. Howard put across his plea "with a punch in every word." Joe Schwartzbine and Harry Rathner tied for second honors.

Harry Cohen, noted cucumber machine man, here from Noo Yawk, gave exhibitors a few pointers when allowed the floor at the convention the final day. Mr. Cohen's words were few but forceful, and his arguments apparently carried some weight with the exhibitors. Mr. Cohen also gave exchangemen some figures to think over.

Manager R. C. Fox of the Artcraft started off the first day of the convention by getting eleven contracts. Mr. Fox also passed out a few of Doug Fairbanks' books, entitled "Laugh and Live," and the best part of it was that we got ours before asking for it. Mrs. Fox was hubby's "right-hand man" at the convention.

Newton Davies, plump, dashing, flirtatious, winsome Universal assistant manager, was a busy man at the convention. Newt passed out paper pistols, Bluebirds, telephones, heralds, pictures, buttons, pennants, ribbons, balloons, more heralds and cards until he suffered an attack of cashier's rheumatism.

L. Chandler, of the Universal, was wed to Miss Olga Ludik, while Dick Travers and twoscore others looked on. Governor George Malone of the Universal was busy at the convention. George was every at once.

A. A. Hixon, Metro strong man, right arm broken and in a sling, came near putting over a David stunt on a hick town Goliath who was an unwelcome visitor at the convention cabaret. Hix states that if he ever had landed on his opponent he would have splintered both his under pinions.

Milwaukee to Have State Convention

Exhibitors Issue Call For Session at End of May For Purpose of Sending Delegates to Chicago.

FRED J. HERRINGTON, former National President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, and at present the national organizer, was in Milwaukee Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, May 5-7, assisting in the organization of a Wisconsin Exhibitors' League, working with the local exhibitors organization. Mr. Herrington was successful in arranging for a state convention in Milwaukee May 30 and 31, at which time arrangements will be made to send an uninstructed delegation to the Chicago Convention.

According to Mr. Herrington, exhibitors all over the country realize that if the war tax on a percentage basis on the gross receipts is put through, it will mean that many houses will be forced to close and that the only way that they can save themselves will be by presenting a solid front.

Mr. Herrington says that there is not a man in the exhibiting end but who is willing to bear his share of a just tax on net profits. "A tax on the gross receipts would be nothing more or less than a tax on the gross losses of many exhibitors," said Mr. Herrington.

Mr. Herrington received a most enthusiastic reception when he arrived in Milwaukee. A special meeting was held by the Milwaukee exhibitors, Monday. The Milwaukee exhibitors filed an emphatic protest against the proposed federal tax on gross receipts.

The Milwaukee exhibitors have practically perfected their plans for the resurrection of the defunct exhibitors association, and from all indications at this writing, the state convention should be a large and enthusiastic one. The Milwaukee exhibitors are profuse in their praise of Mr. Herrington's activity and it is to him that the credit should go for the bringing to life of the state organization.

Mr. Herrington reports an enthusiastic reception at Cleveland, where he was April 26. Cleveland exhibitors have decided to call a state convention, and will send an uninstructed delegation to Chicago. On April 27 Mr. Herrington met the Chicago exhibitors. From there he went to Des Moines, arriving in Des Moines the night of the 27th. There he was dissappointed in meeting as many exhibitors as he expected, as the two-day meeting had been adjourned Friday night. However, he took matters up with the individuals and from all indications Iowa will have an uninstructed delegation at the Chicago Convention.

Mr. Herrington came from Minneapolis to Milwaukee, where he says he looks for big things from Milwaukee exhibitors. He also met Mayor Hoan, while in the city, and was greatly impressed with his friendliness to the local exhibitors.

Mr. Herrington went into detail and explained to local exhibitors exactly what conditions were confronting them. "It is difficult for me to say," said Mr. Herrington, "what branch of the industry is making money. I am sure that from my observations, that it is not the exhibiting end. In many states that I have been in, I find the exhibitors in the small towns and suburbs, where the houses are only open evenings, are employed during the day in other positions working for wage."

PENN. CONVENTION IN PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 25, 26, 27.

Philadelphia exhibitors are elated over their victory in having won for the Quaker City the State Convention of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, which will be held at the Parkway Auditorium, Broadway and Charry streets, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 25, 26 and 27.

The committees in charge have already plunged into the work of arrangements, and they promise that, with the cooperation of their fellows, they will make the convention an epoch in the industry. From all over the State applications for membership to the League have been pouring in and indications are that every independent exhibitor in Pennsylvania will be connected with the organization by the time the convention takes place.

The committees and their members and officers are:

General Exposition Committee—B. Amsterdam, chairman and treasurer; B. Schindler, secretary; A. E. Altman, vice-chairman; J. O'Donnell, C. H. Goodwin and S. B. Blatt.

Publicity and Membership Committee—C. H. Goodwin, chairman; P. S. Greenberg, H. Hustler, B. Herman and William Pierce.

Entertainment Committee—S. B. Blatt, chairman; C. Buerghart, B. Schindler, C. Rappoport, P. R. Spruill, W. Boyd, C. Stamper, A. Brown, H. Lewis, C. Miller, H. Anck, George Naudascher, Mr. Resnick, Mr. Conway, F. Bubeck, S. Hyman, R. Iannarelli and H. Green.

Finance Committee.—J. O'Donnell, chairman; Mr. Conway, N. Fisher and H. Green.

All correspondence should be sent to the state secretary, 606 Abbott Building, Philadelphia.

PITTSBURGHERS GOING TO PHILADELPHIA.

The exhibitors of the western end of the state are planning to turn out in force for the annual state convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitor's League of Pennsylvania, which it has just been announced will be held at Philadelphia June 25, 26 and 27. Secretary G. A. Sahner, of the Pittsburgh local, is preparing to give the support and cooperation of the exhibitors here in making the convention and exposition one of the most successful in the history of the organization. The rapid growth in the membership of the League during the past year has been highly encouraging and a grand rally is expected to do much to maintain this space. A call has been received from Charles H. Goodwin, secretary of arrangements in Philadelphia, who states that a large and suitable location has been secured for the sessions and trade show.

GRIEVANCE COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The grievance committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest has announced the settlement of the case of C. J. Woodmansie vs. Fox exchange. Mr. Woodmansie is to receive $37.50 in service in payment for failure to receive film Dec. 26, 1916.

The corporation has also been active in fighting the proposed 10 per cent. war tax. Telegrams from exhibitors, individually and collectively, have been sent to Washington by the score.

The corporation has also adopted a resolution declaring the proposed music license an imposition and hardship and stating that the organization will use its influence to assist the independents.

EXHIBITORS EXTEND INVITATIONS.

Two important branches of the industry are invited to share the convention halls with the National League at the Chicago Coliseum in July—the F. I. L. M. Clubs of America and the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The committee of arrangements is working hard to make the seventh annual convention of the Exhibitors' League of America the greatest convention ever held.

PLANS FOR BIG BALL IN OREGON.

The Exhibitors' League of Portland, Oregon, is perfecting plans for a moving picture ball that promises to be the biggest event of its kind ever given in the Rose City. A committee composed of Messrs. Myrick, Meighan and Parker is making the arrangements and several Callfornia studios ave promised to send stars for the occasion.

Testimonial Dinner to Lee A. Ochs

Two Hundred Exhibitors and Other Film Men Greet National League President.

AT Healey"s, New York City, a testimonial dinner was tendered on May 10 to Lee A. Ochs, the National League President, on his return from his tour of the West in behalf of the organization. There were at least two hundred exhibitors and other representatives of the industry in attendance. Robert Rubin acted as toastmaster and introduced as the first speaker J. Stuart Blackton.

Mr. Blackton said: "In conversation with Mr. Ochs he told me New York exhibitors do not know how to show pictures. He found the West far ahead of us. I believe this, we have a whole lot to learn. The Motion Picture business will not be what it should be until we do as we did six or seven years ago, in the days of the old General Film. We must go back to sound business principles. The greatest fault, however, has been boasting and bragging, the press agent stuff. Our business would not have been harassed as it has by censorship and taxation if the press agent stuff had been soft pedaled."

The second speaker was Sam Trigger, who briefly relowed the previous speaker on the 10% tax. He stated that things will be easy if we do it. Legislation and all else we have to contend with."

Sam Rothapfel of the Rialto was the next speaker. After extending felicitations to Mr. Ochs he gave utterance to some very pointed suggestions to the exhibitors. He said: "My ambition has been to put the motion picture where they would respect it. Some exhibitors may be jealous of my success, but they have no reason to be. It has only been accomplished by hard work and what any intelligent man should do in the same way." Mr. Rothapfel agreed with Ochs, that they know better in the West how to exhibit pictures than they do in the East. "They have us beaten a mile," he said. "Make the name of your theatre stand first by running it the right way. The name of your theatre should be bigger than the stars, make it first, last and always. Don't have a gum-chewing cashier with a frowsy head of blonde hair, nor a tobacco-chewing doorkeeper, sloppy ushers, dirty floors, a tin pan piano, all out of tune, with a truck driver pounding it. Keep yourself looking neat, well dressed. Say Good evening to your patrons. Call them by name. Don't neglect the smallest detail and you will bring your prices up to twenty-five cents. The motion picture is no longer the poor man's theatre. It is a regular theatre. Some people think I am rich. I am just comfortable. Sometimes I don't care for money. I have an ideal and every man should have. I want to do bigger things and am going to do them. I will get money later. That will come."

Mr. Varner, of North Carolina, said, "Sam Trigger's sentiments, get-together, is the key note. The proposition in Congress to tax the theaters 10 per cent. on gross receipts is impossible. Patriotism should not lead us to rush in and agree to pay an impossible tax and drive us all out of business. It is impossible to pass it on to the public by charging eleven cents on a ten-cent ticket. We ought better raise the price of admission to 15 and 25 cents. If the government puts 10 per cent. tax on our gross income it will put us out of business and defeat itself. The only fair way is to tax profit and not gross receipts. Get-together, go to Washington, present your case, and you have a chance of getting a fair consideration."

Theodore Mitchel, representative for D. W. Griffith, followed the previous speaker on the 10 per cent. tax. He stated that the exhibitors had stood alone in fighting adverse legislation. Out of the producers a fund of only $2,000 had been raised. As a member of the legislation committee of the National Association he had occasion to know that the exhibitors were always in the foreground and had been solely responsible in defeating censorship and tax bills in thirty states. The Ways and Means Committee had an idea way back in their heads that the tax would be passed on to the public and in that way the motion picture industry would be spared the burden. If the industry would go to Washington Monday they could help things very materially.

Mr. Rubins was of the opinion the tax could be handled in the same way it is in Canada.

The last speaker was Mr. Ochs, who said: "There are three reasons why I made my trip through the west, namely; organization, conditions and my pet idea, the Exhibitors Trade Review. I visited sixteen states. The West is in wonderfully money making condition. Five cent theaters are a thing of the past out there. Prices range from 10 to 50 cents. Three great evils exist in the industry. First, it does not co-operate; secondly, high priced stars; thirdly, extravagance in distribution. If exchanges were reduced to twenty-five distributing centers in the United States the producers were save $7,000,000 a year. We are not paying too much for our films; we are paying for distribution. We must sooner or later deal direct with the distributor.

"I have done the best I could. I have made mistakes, not intentionally. I have always worked for the exhibitor during my presidency of the National League. I could have done better if I had had co-operation. Stand by your officers while in, don't knock them. If you don't like me don't knock, put me out, put someone else in, and I am for you just the same. If you don't think you owe me any thanks for what I have done—I should worry. I am with you first, last and always.

"When I took office I was the greatest little fellow in the world until I started a trade paper. I read in the Motion Picture News that exhibitors should mind their own business. I wonder if the same rule applies to journalism? I thank you."

Testimonial Dinner to Lee A. Ochs, National League President, on His Return from Western Tour.

Michigan to Hold Annual Convention

Grand Rapids Is the Place and June 12 and 13 are the Dates.

THE annual convention of the Michigan Branch, No. 4, M. P. E. L. of A., will be held at Grand Rapids June 12 and 13, with headquarters at the Hotel Pantland. President Kleist and Secretary Moeller have not yet announced the complete program of the meetings, but a rigid business program is being outlined.

It will be to the interest of every exhibitor in the State of Michigan to make an earnest endeavor to be in attendance. Grand Rapids was selected on account of the many complaints from exhibitors in the central and northern parts of the state that the distance to Detroit was too far. It is expected that these exhibitors will be in attendance. In view of the fact that the consor bill was defeated and that the Sunday closing bill was not put over Michigan should now begin to prepare for what will come up at the legislative session two years hence.

In all the other states exhibitors are realizing the necessity for organization and are taking steps that are bringing them together. Personal assurances from several of the largest exhibitors in the state have been received with the advice that they will take an active interest. This is very encouraging.

The following telegram was received by Secretary Moeller from Washington:

"Telegram received. I shall oppose the assessment of tax being placed on gross business of theaters. It is an unjust tax and I shall oppose it vigorously.

WM. ALDEN SMITH."

In view of the existing conditions surounding us at this particular time, every effort should be made to get together and see what can be done for the benefit of all exhibitors in Michigan. More and more we come to realize the necessity of organization. It is with pride that we state that approximately 25 per cent of exhibitors replied to a personal letter sent out by the secretary stating that they were interested and would be in attendance regardless of their business, so long as it was held at a place within a reasonable distance. The fact that every officer of the organization was in attendance at an executive meeting goes to show that interest is not waning, but on the incline.

Details of the program will be sent to every Michigan exhibitor, and a goodly attendance is anticipated.

A. J. MOELLER,
Secretary Michigan Branch.

Ludwig Schindler Happy

The Manager of the National Exposition Returns to Chicago Much Enthused Over His Successful Stay in New York City.

LUDWIG SCHINDLER, manager of the National Exposition of the M. P. E. L. of America, who spent two strenuous weeks in New York, returned to Chicago May 2, and immediately took hold of his work with renewed zest. Mr. Schindler beamed as he made the following reply to a query:

"It was hard work, but well worth the battle. Just look at this bunch of contracts I brought home with me. They represent $15,000 worth of space and also reservations for $10,000 more that I can absolutely bank on.

"Outside of these I have the promise of Mr. Warren, publicity manager of the Goldwyn Productions, that there is a great likelihood that the queen of grand opera, Mary Garden, may be the bright particular star of the coming exposition.

"Sid Chaplin and Mr. Freuler also spoke very encouragingly as to the chances of the appearance of Charles Chaplin, the world's popular comedian."

Mr. Schindler also placed an order for 500,000 labels, in two colors and of artistic design, which are intended for use on all mail and parcels sent out by the various branches of the industry. He will be pleased to supply these labels to any who wish to use them. All orders will be filled by address Ludwig Schindler, exposition manager, 1416 Masonic Temple, Chicago.

Mr. Schindler, at the time of writing, states that the following contracts, signed in order, have all been approved and the locations of floor space already assigned:

Moving Picture World. Exhibitors' Trade Review. Universal, Typhoon Fan Company, Enterprise Optical Company, Fox Amusements, Morning Telegraph, Motography, Goldwyn, Exhibitors' Herald, Motion Picture News, Selznick, Pathe, National Carbon Company, and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

OHIO EXHIBITORS PROTEST AGAINST TAX.

Secretary Bullock Writes to Senator Harding Outlining Position of Northeastern Organization.

SAMUEL BULLOCK, secretary of the Exhibitors' League branch for the Northeastern District of Ohio, has written a letter to Senator Warren G. Harding of his state protesting against the proposed 10 per cent. war tax on gross receipts of motion picture theaters. He assures the Senator that the exhibitors of his district are not objecting to the principle, but rather to the method. Secretary Bullock writes that of the thousand picture theaters in Ohio 800 have less than 500 seating capacity, and of these 400 have less than 300 capacity; that 50 per cent. of all are not making 10 per cent. now. The secretary further requests the Senator to submit to the proper Congressional committees the following resolutions passed by his organization after mature consideration:

WHEREAS, The U. S. Government has declared a state of war exists between the U. S. and Germany; and it is necessary to levy and collect extraordinary taxes to meet the expenses incurred thereby; and it is proposed by the Government, by the Secretary of the Treasury, to place a special tax of ten per cent. upon all tickets sold at motion picture theaters; and as we believe said proposition is unjust, and further that the said tax would mean the confiscation of the property of a great number of our fellow exhibitors; and as we firmly believe it is essential to the public good that some cheap form of mental relaxation be afforded the community in times of stress; and as we firmly believe that the motion picture theaters will give to the people said mental relaxation; and we respectfully submit that every line of business should bear its equal share of the war tax without discrimination; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we, exhibitors in the Northeastern District of Ohio, are opposed to any form of taxation for war purposes on motion picture theaters except a direct tax upon the net income, on the same basis as other incomes are to be taxed.

SAM BULLOCK, Secretary,
M. P. E. L. of A., Northeastern District of Ohio.

Charles Simone

CHARLES SIMONE, one of the oldest and best known motion picture executives, has just completed a lengthy tour of the southwestern States and is back home in Bayonne, N. J. While away Mr. Simone filmed a few industrial subjects and, in a measure, laid the foundation for the Simone Pictures Corporation, whose field of operation will probably be Oklahoma.

Charles Simone.

Mr. Simone waxes enthusiastic over Oklahoma and Oklahomans. The former he declares an ideal country for picture producing, and the latter he proclaims very progressive, straightforward and hospitable. He was particularly delighted with Clairmore, Tulsa, Sapulpa, Muskogee, Okmulgee and other cities in the oil belt. As it was to be expected, Mr. Simone's frank nature and pleasing personality have gained him the friendship of many influential Oklahomans. He speaks most highly of Okmulgeeans for the warm hospitality shown him. Even now he is arranging for a return trip, though certain Eastern propositions may change his plans.

Long ago Charles Simone earned the distinction of being "The Worth While Film Man." Old timers know that it was Mr. Simone who created "The Worth While Film," and who advocated nothing but worthwhile pictures. In the days when the picture industry was lightly referred to as "the game," he was one of the first to use worth-while business tactics. There are not many men in film circles who are as well informed, as artistic, as practical, as reliable, as thorough and as efficient as Mr. Simone.

Guetlein Brings Many Feet of Film

Gaumont Cameraman Searches Central America for Reel Life and "Tours" Subjects.

DESPITE the fact that he was hampered in many places by conditions created by the war, Edward Guetlein has returned to the Gaumont Studios at Flushing, N. Y., with many thousands of feet of film which is the cream of his motion picture work in the tropics. Mr. Guetlein was sent to Central America specially for "Reel Life" and "Tours

Edward Guetlein, Gaumont Cameraman, Picturing Porto Rican Milk Vendor.

Around the World," the popular Gaumont single reels which are released through Mutual.

"Although I have not been arrested as often as Mr. Van der Veer, who is taking Gaumont pictures in the West Indies," said Mr. Guetlein, in discussing the war as it affects Central America, "I have had two black marks registered against me as a suspicious person. Happily, these were erased by the good offices of officials who were acquainted with the character of my mission. I was arrested at Cartago and at Asseri. In Panama I was not arrested, for the simple reason that the minute I stepped ashore I was informed that I would get into serious trouble if I attempted to unpack my cameras.

"Panama was my first port, but there I was only a sightseer under war conditions. I was able to cross to the City of Panama, but I did not get a foot of film. At Port Limon, my next stopping place, I secured excellent pictures of the banana industry. From Port Limon I traveled by rail to San Jose, the capital of Costa Rica. In addition to filming the city, I made a number of trips on horseback to get characteristic pictures of the country districts. It was in San Jose that I saw Pavlowa in the magnificent opera house, one of the most costly in the Western Hemisphere. Perhaps it was due to the competition of motion pictures, but the noted dancer lost money on her San Jose engagement.

"The government supplied me with such pack animals as I required, as well as riding horses, and everywhere I was accorded that gracious hospitality which one always associates with the people of Spanish America. I returned from San Jose to Port Limon and went next to Bocas del Toro. From Bocas I sailed for Havana. In the Cuban capital I again encountered difficulties because the nation is also on a war basis.

"The delights of travel as a cameraman do not blind me to the inconveniences and hardships, yet the romantic side of the calling appeals the stronger, and I am now ready for another trip. However, I am not unmindful of the great storm we encountered on the way south. The waves broke over the deck, flooding my cabin. I stood for hours one night with my camera most of the time above my head, while the boat tossed and pitched. Inconveniences ashore consist of the daily rain at this season, primitive means of travel when you get off the main highways and the overwhelming desire of the small boy to get into every picture.

"The Central American towns I visited showed more foreign pictures than they did American. A complaint about the American pictures was that they did not have Spanish titles. The pictures from abroad were mostly French, and the prints were not in the best condition at San Jose. Panama City had both American and foreign pictures. At Bocas del Toro I had the pleasure of seeing a Gaumont picture I had myself taken in the 'See America First' Series. On the same program was an American-Mutual, 'Immediate Lee.' Both were enthusiastically received, since Spanish America has an inordinate interest in our republic and loves a good, red-blooded photodrama. At Port Limon French features are most in demand. The showing here is intermittent.

"Throughout Spanish America the great Gaumont series, 'Fantomas' and 'The Vampire,' are having deserved popularity. I found that they were particularly popular in Havana and throughout Cuba."

Mr. Guetlein is now engaged in cutting and titling his various pictures. It is planned to incorporate them in early issues of "Reel Life" and "Tours Around the World."

Thorne Making a Japanese Picture

Former American Director, Now in Yokohama, Tells of His Work in Flowery Kingdom.

FRANK A. THORNE, for three years director for the American Film Company in Santa Barbara, Cal., is now in Yokohama, where he is employed by the Fuji Yama Film Company. Mr. Thorne is accompanied by his wife (Lizette Thorne), also an American player. Mr. Thorne writes:

"I am directing an eight-reel feature, for which the company came here to make, entitled "Nami-Ko." The entire cast is composed of Japanese actors, and while it is very interesting to see these quaint people work before the camera it is nevertheless quite a task to handle them, as everything has to be done through an interpreter, and when night comes I am quite weary from the work.

"These people are very much alive to the picture game, but, of course, in their own peculiar way, and while they have progressed, they have a lot to learn in order that their pictures may become popular outside of their own country. There are several companies producing pictures here, but they are large concerns owning a chain of theaters, in which they exhibit their own films, and they do not try to market outside; at least they are not successful in doing so, as yet. Their studios are fine and their settings are very elaborate; their actors are very good, and in many ways they can teach us, but they don't understand construction and cutting for dramatic value, and most of their plays are tragic and much overacted. Naturalness seems foreign to them, and if they can be taught this simple art their productions are destined to give the world at large very keen competition.

"Once in a while they make a modern picture, dressing the cast in European clothes, but they are terrible to look at, for their directors are of the old Japanese school and can't change.

"Weather conditions are quite a problem, as it is seldom clear a whole day at a time, and the light is weak, giving a flat picture. The landscape is dull and drab, not near as pretty as it is pictured in the steamship folders, but there are many interesting things, and they will appeal to a foreign audience. I expect to be here for some few weeks producing this picture, and my wife in the meantime is seeing the sights and taking a good rest after her long and hard work with the American. We have our little boy, Frank A. Thorne, Jr., with us, and he and his mother are on the go all the time keeping the kodak busy.

"After I finish here we are going back to Los Angeles where we both have had good offers, and will be connected with one of the companies there."

Mayfair Leases Studio

President Schlesinger Making Many Alterations—Director Brabin Begins Work on May 21.

THE Fifty-fourth street studio, situated at 515 and 517 West, has been leased for a long period by the Mayfair Film Corporation. M. A. Schlesinger, president of the Mayfair Films, desired a plant which would be easily accessible to all members of the company and which could be reached from all parts of town in a few minutes. The acquirement of this property situated so centrally will save a great deal of time to the performers, giving the company the benefit of this saving by reason of the loss of time in travel to studios situated out of town.

Extensive alterations are being made at the present time under the supervision of experts in studio lighting. Many extra banks of lights are being installed, and when completed the lighting facilities of the studio will be second to none in the city. An extra loft has been secured away from the studio proper and here the scene banks will be erected and the carpenter and workshops housed so that no noises will interfere with the work of the players. With the idea of giving the studio an atmosphere of newness and conducive of pleasant surroundings the entire plant is being repainted and renovated.

These alterations will be completed by the 21st of May, when Miss Peggy Hyland, under the direction of Charles J. Brabin, will commence on the first Mayfair production.

Decorative Titles

By Theodore Lynch Fitz Simons

Those of the "Submarine Eye" Tell the Story and Are Artistic Achievements as Well

THE recent artistic movement in the large film companies is very noticeable in the effective film titles for the production of "The Submarine Eye" by the Williamson Brothers of New York City. These film titles, printed in neutral tones of gray and in black and white, are strikingly decorative in composition and mass and seem to give a unity to the moving picture as a whole that it otherwise would not have if the titles of the different motives of the story was merely the blank letter headings as in bygone days, unaccompanied by illustrations. Thus by the aid of these illustrations the main ideas and subject are continually held before the audience, and not only do these illustrations seem to help tell the story, but they are in themselves real artistic achievements and a delight to the eye.

It is a consoling fact to know that the motion picture, far from rivaling the artist and putting him in the shade, is today his best friend and patron, and by including the artist in its ranks and using him as an auxiliary is indeed uplifting the dramatic themes of the screen to the plane of real art. Of course it is not every company that has the good taste to employ real artists to do their film titles, as in the case of the Williamson Brothers and their selection of Kaeselau and Sutter for their production. We must admit that we have seen in our time some very deplorable film titles in little ten-cent movies, whose art was on a par with the melodramatic pictures they illustrated. But we let these pass in silence. Just as in the other branches in commercial art, one sees loads of insipid stuff in the magazines, yet this does not contradict the fact of the real illustration which is occasionally produced.

Let us draw a slight comparison between the illustration work for the modern magazine and the artistic work of the firm titles. In the former one sees bad drawing, false values, clever technic and an insipid appeal to the shine in the eye of the public by chic brush work and the use of unnatural high lights, a strange medley of confused drawing, where composition is as scarce as clothes in the Garden of Eden before the fall of man! In the later work of the painter of film titles the very nature of the temper medium enforces simplicity of massing and composition, and simplicity is, of course, the sole of art working in three values, black, white and gray. Every brush stroke should tell the story and be exactly what is required, no more, no less. The fuss and feathers of magazine art is not to be seen in the simplicity of their line of arrangement. Yet we notice in several of these decorations under consideration a real landscape and quality and modeling in the figure motifs and atmosphereic realism, as in that supremely decorative film entitled "Midnight."

In this picture we see the dark silhouette of the steam yacht against the silver light of the moon on the water. On the right hand side of the picture in the background is to be seen the shadowed shore of stately palms and mango trees pleasantly placed, and the moon makes a decorative white spot in the sky above the shadowed trees. The spirit of the intense tropic moonlight is to be felt in this painting and it is hard to believe that the painters whose handiwork these pictures are have not been in the tropics, for in every picture of the palm-crowned islands and intense deeply colored seas and lonely surf-wreathed sea beaches one feels the true spirit of the Bahamas and sees the decorative and stunning contrasts of light and dark that are so characteristic of the islands near the equator, for, though the shadows are colorful in the far south, they are deep in tone and almost inky in their blackness at night, as in a strange stage setting. It is this quality of strong contrast that Kaeselau and Sutter have so successfully captured in these film titles.

It is an interesting fact that Mr. Williamson remained in the Bahamas over a month, waiting for an opportunity to photograph the moonlight scene, such as the picture "Midnight." However, he gave up in despair owing to unfavorable conditions in the weather; it was impossible to use the camera. As this scene has been so sympathetically depicted by these before mentioned artists, they need not feel anything has been lost and, in fact, it is one of the few rare instances where the imaginative work of the artist has been able to counterfeit the work of nature.

Perhaps one of the most decorative of all the film titles is that one entitled "I Believe You Are Two Old Pirates." This depicts two small figures digging in the sand. Not far away is the graceful line of the surf-curving shore, with white-clipped billows. In the background looms a dark, black grove of palms and tropical trees, grim and ominous. Surely a fitting setting for Captain Kidd and his dauntless band of buccaneers, where one might expect to find buried iron-banded chests of red Spanish gold surrounded by white bleaching bones and skulls that no longer heed the wild tales of treasure trove. Another effective film title is the one under the head "Thirty years ago I was a mate aboard an old wind jammer, beating up from Rio." This picture shows the upper deck of a ship, old-fashioned rigging, piles of barrels in the ship's hold and the figure of a man gazing out to sea through a telescope. The contrast of the sunlit deck and the black sea is very striking. Another picture in which the same decorative quality is plainly visible goes under the caption of "We had sighted the Bahamas and sent the long boat ashore." We will not describe these, as the title is a commentary in itself. There are two other film titles to which we wish to draw attention. One of the white steam yachts silhoutted against the gray, cloudy sky of the tropics speeding over a dark, troubled sea. The flowing movement of the wind is very happily rendered. There is yet another painting of flying fish leaping from the water, skimming over the deep, so accurately recorded in this picture that one finds it hard to believe that these artists have never seen a flying fish!

To conclude, one finds a strong decorative quality in all these film titles. They are more than clever in their technic. They are sincere and, besides being ornate arrangements, they help to keep the interest of the story keyed up to the highest note. However, we have forgotten to mention the negro diver and the sharks. The movement of the negro's body is very full of action and the figure is suggestive of Machiste, though not so brutal.

One is very much impressed by the work of Messrs. Kaeselau and Sutter, both in landscape and portrait painting, and nowadays, when technic is the Mecca of all artistic pilgrims who, once having arrived there, have nothing to express through their painting, it is refreshing to find that the work of these two artists is interesting as much for the spirit that lies behind it as for the manner in which it is portrayed.

The film production of "The Submarine Eye" is a delightful movie and presents many fascinating scenes taken near Nassau, in the romantic region of the Bahama Islands.

There are marvelous pictures of deep sea diving and under sea color effects where one sees drifting sea weed, star fish and coral reefs and the monsters of the deep. The water being so clear that one hardly believes that we are several fathoms below the surface. There are hairbreadth escapes of gleaming nude divers, who attack those mysterious tigers of the deep, the man eating sharks, and altogether this picture marks a new epoch in film history.

FAIRBANKS MAKES WILD WEST WILD.

Douglas Fairbanks is a rather original person. He believes in practical originality, backed up with self confidence. His recent prearranged Los Angeles greeting for Al Lichtman, general manager of Artcraft Pictures Corporation, and Ben Schulberg, general manager for Paramount, is a shining confirmation of this theory.

When "Doug" learned that Lichtman and Schulberg were about to arrive in Los Angeles, he engaged forty real Mexicans, supplied them with costumes and guns, and as the train pulled into the station, Fairbanks, in the make-up of General Villa, attacked the Pullman carrying these two film executives. The Pullman conductor was ordered to deliver Lichtman and Schulberg, and as they stepped off the train they were greeted with three shots from every gun.

After enthusiastic greetings were exchanged, "Doug" ushered the two into a typical '49 stage coach and in this manner, trailed by the Mexicans on horseback, the party arrived at the Lasky Studio in Hollywood. Work ceased temporarily while Mary Pickford and Cecil B. de Mille extended the studio key to the half-frightened Easteners. With Fairbanks as the jesting guide, they started on a tour of the studio, stopping long enough to witness John Emerson direct Eileen Percy and Sam de Grasse in a scene of "A Regular Guy."

Messrs. Lichtman and Schulberg stopped at Chicago, Denver, Seattle and San Francisco en route to Los Angeles, where Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Geraldine Farrar are now engaged in the making of Artcraft pictures bearing their own respective names for trade marks. They report unusual Artcraft business all along the line, and that exhibitors are patiently awaiting the new productions scheduled for early release.

Putting Life in Films

Interesting and Informative Possibilities of Animated Pictures Being Realized By Gaumont Company.

ALTHOUGH the cartoonist was the first to recognize the possibilities of animated drawings, the development of this branch of the motion picture industry will bring to the screen a far more important contribution. The present status of the animated drawing is due to the pioneer work of the man with the humorous pen, but now he sees his field invaded by men whose intents are far more serious. The animated drawing is now to do work for the screen which the camera finds it impossible to accomplish. In this respect the Gaumont Company is found in that premier position which one expects of this great world-wide organization.

The Flushing studios of the Gaumont Company have a department specially devoted to work of this character. The pictures are shown in "Reel Life," a film magazine which is issued weekly. This single reel has several sections of diversified interest, and hardly a week passes without having something representative from the animated department. No matter how impossible it is for a camera to record a certain process or invention, it may be of absorbing interest to millions of people. It is the quick appreciation of what the public wishes to know which is an attribute of the Gaumont editorial staff.

Two great menaces to health are the fly and the mosquito. Popular knowledge regarding these pests has not been crystalized to the extent that their danger is fully appreciated. The Gaumont Company realized no greater power existed than the motion picture, and determined to do its part in disseminating information that might save countless lives. It prepared two pictures which brought home to the spectator the nature of the insects. Under the heading "Trench Warfare Against Mosquitoes," a series of animated drawings was prepared which showed not only the ravages of the mosquito, but also the most effective means of destroying all its breeding places. The fly was pilloried in pictures described trenchantly as "The Diary of a Murderer."

These two series of animated drawings show how invaluable are drawings in getting to the public in entertaining as well as instructive form information that makes for better living conditions. Another issue of "Reel Life" contained charts showing how many accidents of certain kinds there are in any 100,000 such mishaps. These also were the product of the Gaumont animated department. The nature of the accident itself was depicted with drawings instead of furnishing a set of comparatively lifeless charts.

In the realm of invention the animated drawing has a unique position not attainable by the ordinary motion picture. This is the depiction of operations obtainable in no other way. For example, there may be some new invention heralded which has not actually been perfected, yet the artist can make a series of drawings from plans and descriptions which give a mobile representation of what the inventor seeks to accomplish. This is frequently worked out to advantage at the Gaumont studio.

Announcement was recently made by a naval authority that the day was coming when there would be one-man submarines. From his description of these submersible vessels the Gaumont company prepared animated drawings which showed every operation from the time the small undersea boat was lowered from the battleship until the operator had discharged his torpedo at an enemy ship and scored a hit. Here was a new engine of naval offense and defense which was taking a great hold on the popular imagination, and the Gaumont Company satisfied the desire for information by visualizing the machine on the screen.

Along the same line was the proposed aerial torpedo. This is carried below a seaplane and launched as the air traveler nears the surface of the water. Only by animated drawings could the process be illustrated, since there was no such machine in existence.

A recent project to defeat the submarine is the proposed construction of a fleet of vessels of 1,000-ton capacity with an extremely shallow draught. A torpedo strikes a ship about five feet below the surface of the water. Hence it would pass beneath a ship of shallower draught without causing damage. Obviously no motion pictures could be taken to explain this. Hence, the value of the animated drawing. In the studio the artists can work out with mathematical precision the problem under discussion and then illustrate it so that the public can get a comprehensive understanding of it at first glance.

MONTAGU LOVE IN "THE BRAND OF SATAN."

For his first vehicle as a motion picture star Montagu Love will have "The Brand of Satan," in which are featured Gerda Holmes and Evelyn Greeley.

British Notes

THE campaign to enlist the services of every man and woman upon work of national importance under the direction of Neville Chamberlain, Director of National Service, has been successfully launched by the aid of the moving picture. John D. Tippetts has gratuitously placed the entire resources and organization of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company at the disposal of Mr. Chamberlain and the first fruits of their joint labors will be seen at nine out of every ten picture play theatres in the United Kingdom next week. It is a short length film with the title "The Call of the Land" and the subject is as mundane as its title. It is a moving picture object lesson urging the necessity and importance of agriculture during the exacting times through which the country is passing. A number of admirable pictorial studies of the countryside are embodied in the production, contributed, I believe, by Kineto Ltd., Charles Urban's former company. "The Call of the Land" is the first of a series of similar subjects designed to place the claims of industry paramount before the public. Subsequent reels will deal with shipbuilding, women's work, munition manufacture, transport, etc.

Three schoolgirls gave first hand evidence about "the pictures" before the Kinema Commission sitting in London last Monday. Two were South London girls, the third Irish and all the same age, 13.

"Suppose, when you were going into the box office of a picture palace you met a fairy who told you that you could see whatever picture you wished. What would you like to see?" asked Dr. Marie Stopes. "I should like to see a picture of the circus," said one girl. "I should like to see a good drama, but not a love drama," replied the second, "a drama like 'Little Miss Nobody.'"

"Then you don't like love dramas?"

"No, I don't, there's too much fooling about in them," replied the child emphatically. "There's always hatred between two men and two women. It's a lot of silliness and I don't think it would happen in real life." Even the Bishop laughed loudly at this answer.

"What sort of pictures do children like?" ventured the inquirer. "When cowboys and Indians come on they are loudly clapped," agreed the girls. In reply to other questions they admitted enthusiastic approval of the doings of Charlie Chaplin, but confessed an indifference for topical and travel pictures.

Cecil Leeson, of the Howard Association was another witness. After enduring an extensive course of penny picture shows he inclined to the view that they served to carry blame which properly belonged elsewhere; yet delinquency could not be associated with the film. The moving picture had developed just in time to re-act with other undesirable war effects upon the mind of the child. On hygienic grounds there was still much to be said against it. At the next sitting of the Commission the evidence of schoolboys will be taken.

That there is no limitation to the life of first class comedy films, be they slapstick or refined, has been established by the successful re-issue on the British market of the early successes of Chaplin. A number of exhibitors, convinced that present day comedy has not materially changed during the past year or two, have asked the Trans-Atlantic Film Co. to re-issue a selection of the early works of Ford Sterling. One, probably the best of Sterling's features, "Love and Lunch," is to be marketed again within a week or two.

T. P. O'Connor, president of the British Board of Film Censors, has laid down four fixed principles for dealing with "crime" pictures submitted for censorship. They are as follows:

No serial dealing with crime will be examined in future except as a whole.

No serial in which crime is the dominant feature and not merely an episode in the story will be passed by the Censor.

No film will be passed in which the methods of crime are set forth and form the chief theme. This rule will have to be applied even in cases where, at the end of the film, retribution is supposed to have fallen on the criminal, and equally when the detective element is subordinate to the criminal interest, or when actual crime is treated from the comic point of view.

The British Board of Film Censors propose to issue monthly to the licensing authorities a list of the films passed by them.

As previously indicated in Mr. O'Connor's speeches, the exploitation of crime in moving pictures for little more than the sake of crime and its attendant excitements is to be put a stop to. The number of foreign films which have been turned down by the Board of Censors since the beginning of the year is far in excess of the record in any previous corresponding period. To a certain extent the recent general press and pulpit agitation against the visualization of crime is a contributory factor, nevertheless the "crook" play has of late monopolized such an amount of screen space that on its own account it would seem deserving of some rest.

A case of moment to exchangemen has just gone through the Courts which sets aside a cherished immunity from responsibility in film-hire contracts. A stereotyped clause in film-hiring contracts in use by exchanges in this country shifts all liability for delay or non-delivery of films, from any cause, off the shoulders of the exchangemen, a clause long regarded as prejudiced and unfair by exhibitors but usually so clearly and explicitly set forth in contracts that its legality has hitherto passed unchallenged. It has remained for a Derbyshire exhibitor to discover the clause bad in law, which he did upon being sued for payment by his exchange for a film that did not arrive. The judge held that the clause was designed to shield the renter at the expense of the exhibitor and he accordingly gave judgment in favor of the exhibitor.

The post office authorities ask that letters in future be suffixed not only with the letters of the postal area under which they would come for delivery but with a sub-divisional number. Example: The Trans-Atlantic Film Co., Ltd., Universal House, Oxford street, London W. 1. The sub-division W. 1 embraces the majority of addresses in the moving picture business and all bounded by Oxford street, Dean street, General street, Wavelour street, Coventry street and Regent street. The trade colony abounding in Charing Cross Road and immediate environs falls under the sub-division of W. C. 2.

At the sitting of the Kinema Commission at Westminster on Monday afternoon the chief constable of Edinburgh was the principle witness. His evidence amounted to a categorical repudiation of the evil influences attributed to the moving picture by a few chiefs of police in the North of England. The simple fact that the kinema was popular among all classes and conditions of men and women was a guarantee that in Edinburgh the kinema had had little or no effect on crime committed by the young. It attracted many people who would otherwise have resorted to the public house. In Edinburgh the picture theaters had been instrumental in reducing intemperance.

Later in the day, the Commission adjourned to the private projection theater in Oxford street of the Trans-Atlantic Film Co. to view films of which complaints had been received in the evidence of previous witnesses at the conferences. Three or four films by different makers were shown but as the Commission unanimously adjudicated them harmless no useful purpose would be served by giving them titles. As a warning to the critics the Bishop of Birmingham, the chairman of the Commission, announced that the Commission would not in future judge any film complained about unless they had an opportunity of seeing it.

Newspapers, with their limited space for anything but the stern responsibilities of the nation, are not at present over extravagant in reviewing photoplays. But a lengthy article indicating the necessity of entertainment, in the "Daily Mail" pays what must surely be the most unique tribute to any entertainer on the stage or screen. It is a review of the Chaplin film "Behind the Screen" and describes the one and only Charlie as "a national asset." Taking up the same thread a writer in the "Star" diagnoses Chaplin's success as due to the war. "His levity is largely counterpoise to our anxieties, a violent re-action against events, an attempt to keep the balance of things even. The strain on us is so heavy that we tend to go a little wildly in the other direction."

Griffith in London

"Intolerance" Packs Old Drury and Makes New Record in London Box Office Picture Receipts.

AFTER an uneventful voyage; he confessed disappointment at submarine inactivity, David Griffith arrived in England a few days prior to the presentation at Drury Lane theater of his spectacle "Intolerance" on Saturday, April 7th.

The first visit of a notable foreigner to the Metropolis invariably provides our newspapers with an opportunity of holding up the mirror, "seeing ourselves as ithers see us" as Burns says, and D. W. Griffith was most assuredly no exception. He must have disappointed some of the scribes in his appearance for the absence of the green cigar, the chewing-gum, padded shoulders on a 5.7 check suit and high-toe boots has convinced a few of them that this gaunt fellow is no ordinary American but a living dreamer of dreams, an idealist continually idealizing, and perhaps there is much truth in their observations. Ideals are not usually matters of commercial enterprise and a man who can get them to pay to the tune of over a million a year is no ordinary fellow. And that they do pay we have first hand proof. The receipts at the first performance of "Intolerance" at Drury Lane exceeded by $500 the record receipts for a film show in London.

The performance I attended will be remembered by the trade for many years, not merely for the presentation of "Intolerance" but for the touching speech of its producer upon his first appearance upon a public platform in Europe and coinciding as it did with his country's declaration to cast in her lot with the Allies in the supreme struggle for freedom and liberty. "I hope you like my picture," he answered in response to the audience's calls for author, "It is an honor to have it shown within the walls of Old Drury, these walls with their atmosphere of the great actors of the past. But if you do not like "Intolerance" I will try and do better next time. This is my first visit to England but with what little I have seen I am already very much in love with this land my forefathers left many years ago. It may interest you to know that the first girl I fell in love with was an English girl. Yes, little Emily in 'David Copperfield.' I remember how eagerly I read and re-read that book of Dickens because my parents were of a very strict kind and regarded books unfavorably as a recreation for children. But I stole away with 'David Copperfield' and read it, most of it in the garden (applause). But upon account of one other thing I am prouder to be upon this historic platform. The decision of Mr. Wilson (loud cheers) to enter the great struggle now progressing is now known and I am happy to think my country will soon be taking part with yours in this greatest fight for freedom."

Present at the performance were among other notables, Lady Paget, Sir Thomas Beecham, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, and Hall Caine. During his short stay in London Mr. Griffith's program has been a remarkable one. Within twenty-four hours of landing he had completely "done" the Tower, St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey, Hampton Court, Richmond and other sights besides making the acquaintance of many celebrities in the literary and theatrical worlds.

His enthusiasm for England has amused the men of Fleet street. There is something almost childlike in his desire to talk of English life, was the impression of one. His next picture is sure to possess scenes of country cottages with gabled roofs or an old castle in Wales, said another, for he has intentions of producing here in the future but exactly what or when is uncertain.

Of censorship Mr. Griffith has had little or nothing to say beyond that our voluntary system is not to be compared with the American States censorship.

Film Export Notes

BY F. G. ORTEGA.

SAYS "The Bioscope," of London, in a recent editorial under the caption "New York or London?"

The last of the three articles referred to appears in the Moving Picture World, and is in some ways the most interesting of all. As might be expected from a journal which published a well-written and highly creditable edition in the Spanish language, it deals chiefly with business in the Latin-American republics. Cine-Mundial always interests us, and we are glad to take this opportunity of stating how much we appreciate the admirable selection and arrangement of material which makes this publication almost unique in the world of journalism. But, having said this, we must admit that the World's article is less to our taste than either of those we have mentioned above.

America is a friendly country, and we have a great respect for Americans, but that is no reason why we should make them a present of our export trade.

We find ourselves in a difficult position indeed. The compliments paid Cine-Mundial have touched us deeply, as from no other source could praise be more welcome. Then again, the troubles of London as a distributing center for films, although, in our judgment, bound to arise sooner or later, have been accelerated by an illegal factor that at this moment we ourselves are trying to eliminate.

The foreign film trade of Great Britain and all the other European countries is at the mercy of outside forces beyond the control of the exporters. We are in exactly the same boat as far as Europe is concerned, and for this very reason we have carefully refrained from discussing the Continental activities of the London houses handling American films.

Conditions are radically different in regard to the 21 republics of Latin-America, Spain, Portugal and the Philippine Islands. As long as the present disorganiation in the transatlantic lanes is kept up, it stands to reason that buyers from those countries will leave the European centers as fast as the storks left Rome. The exodus began quite some time ago. They all arrive in New York with the same story: they cannot afford to buy in Europe on account of the uncertainty in deliveries; they never know when they are going to get their shipments or whether they are going to get them at all. Is it not logical, therefore, that they should locate in New York or Chicago, where they can get the same product and be sure of rapid deliveries? This train of reasoning, susceptible of general application, is absolutely self-evident in the motion picture trade. The show business, whatever its nature, is not built on very solid foundations when compared with other lines of commercial endeavor, especially in most of the countries where our friend, "the foreign buyer," hails from today. A few of the usual delays of one or two months may cause the rise of a competitor: a couple of shipments sunk may spell bankruptcy.

American manufacturers two years ago shipped their film to London and thought that they were covering the export field, blissfully ignorant of the fact that their Spanish-speaking neighbors would have had a shock if anybody had told them that we were producing here something else besides crude "cowboy stuff." Some good American pictures found their way there, but the Southerners did not know it. In nearby countries like Cuba and Mexico, even the importers were under the impression that Selig was a London firm, Vitagraph Parisian and that the studios of Thanhouser were located in the suburbs of Berlin. American producers were satisfied to handle the home market and Canada, and let London take care of the rest of world. This idea was so deep-rooted that we know of a cast in which a Chicago manufacturer referred a Porto Rico buyer to his London agent. That Porto Rico was as much American territory as Philadelphia had never entered his mind—the place had an outlandish name, the man looked like a foreigner, to—London with him.

In an article published in one of our late issues, Charles Pathe gives some interesting data on export. To illustrate the relative importance of the various markets of the world, he mentions, as a reliable example, that the rental price obtained in English-speaking countries for the serial, "The Exploits of Elaine," was $1,800,000 and in Latin countries $400,000. He further states that the returns on "The Iron Claw" were in the same proportion. Both serials were made in this country, with American actors, American viewpoint, American atmosphere. This means that the value of any meritorious picture can be increased nearly 25 per cent. if the Latin markets are properly covered. Can "The Bioscope" mention a single American producer who ever obtained similar results through London agents?

The publication of Cine-Mundial was intended to serve a two-fold purpose: to convince the Latin-American houses that good pictures were made in the United States; to persuade the producers here that Latin-America and other Spanish and Portuguese-speaking countries formed a worth-while export market. And our British friends should not be offended if we remind them of the fact that this missionary work was necessary and that it has taken us nearly two years to put both elements in a receptive frame of mind, which goes to prove that fifty odd exchanges supplying the needs of nearly a hundred million people did not recognize London as the "throbbing hub" of the film trade, and that the London agents were punishing this discourtesy by ignoring their existence altogether.

GEORGE MIDDLETON CONTRIBUTING TO FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY.

Well-known Playwright and Author Devoting Much of His Time to the Writing of Original Material for the Screen.

GEORGE MIDDLETON, the well-known playwright and author, is devoting a large portion of his time to the creation of original screen ideas and has already written seven photoplays for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. "Sleeping Fires" has already been produced by Famous Players with Pauline Frederick in the stellar role. "The Girl at Home" has been screened by Lasky with Vivian Martin and Jack Pickford as co-stars, and there are now in the course of production at the various studios of the company three other stories from the pen of Mr. Middleton.

Mae Murray is at work on "At First Sight" at the Famous Players studio; Fannie Ward is completing "Her Strange Wedding" at Hollywood and House Peters and Kathlyn Williams are finishing "The World Apart" at the Morosco studio. Pauline Frederick is beginning work upon "A Wife's Strategy," which was originally presented on the stage with Margaret Anglin in the stellar role. "The Power of Pity" has been purchased by Famous Players-Lasky and the production of this story will begin in the near future.

George Middleton has won an enviable reputation as a playwright and is co-author of such stage successes as "The House of a Thousand Candles," "The Cavalier," "Hit the Trail Holliday," "The Sinner" and "A Wife's Strategy." He has just completed a new comedy in collaboration with Guy Bolton, which is now in the course of rehearsal and will be produced by David Belasco. Mr. Middleton is also the author of six volumes of plays, the best known of which are "Nowadays" and "The Road Together."

EXHIBITOR BUILDS GOOD WILL THROUGH BENEFITS.

W. R. Howat, manager Airdrome theater, Plainville, Kan., has arranged to give a series of benefits for the Boy Scouts. These are given every Thursday night, at which time the Paramount pictures are shown. Mr. Howat also has two other Paramount pictures during the week, one on Friday night, at which time he shows a Paramount feature production and Burton Holmes travels. The other, on Saturday night, with a Paramount-Bray cartoon.

HOBART HENLEY.

ONE of the most interesting young directors who is commanding the attention of the trade at present is Hobart Henley, whose super-feature, "Parentage," will shortly be introduced to the public by Frank J. Seng, who declares it is one of the best productions of the current screen season.

Henley's long sojourn with the Universal has made him a popular actor with the movie fans, and he has created a following for himself which has been envied by many others in the field. He started in pictures with the Universal about four years ago, and was discovered by Julius Stern, who gave him his first opportunity when he made him a member of the old Imp Company. For some time Henley appeared with Violet Mersereau and later with Frances Nelson, after which he went to Universal City, where he had his first big opportunity to show his talent in the popular serial "Graft," in which he played the leading role.

Hobart Henley.

After he finished his work in "Graft" Henley appeared in several Bluebird productions, one of which, "The Sign of the Poppy," won him a great deal of praise,and which was instrumental in gaining a directorship for him.

A few months ago Henley left the Western Studios of the Universal and came East, where he located at the big studio at Fort Lee, at which place he continued his work as a director. For some time Henley's mind has been centered on the big thought picture which he has just completed. It has been the one big ambition of his career to make a picture that would stand out as a great production. In "Parentage" he has seen his ambitions realized, and there is little doubt but that this picture is going to establish his reputaion as a producer of the first rank, for it gets away from the old-fashioned drama and gives the public something to make it think and think hard. Even though it were not a huge success, Henley deserves praise for his attempt to present a production which will furnish food for thought for the clear-minded millions, who, despite the fact they like to be amused, are equally fond of being educated and uplifted.

LORIMORE VISITS NEW ZEALAND.

Alec Lorimore, general manager of the Paramount Service of Australia, which is controlled by Australian Feature Films, Ltd., was given a rousing reception early last month on the occasion of a business trip to New Zealand. He was the guest of honor at a dinner given at the Grand Hotel, Wellington, New Zealand, at which many independent film men gathered and spoke of pictures, present and future.

Mr. Lorimore was heralded in a column story in the Wellington Truth as a real "movie magnate." Mr. Lorimore went to New Zealand from Sydney for the purpose of going over the field preparatory to a big campaign in the interests of Paramount pictures. That he was welcome with his errand was attested in material ways.

Australian Feature Films, Ltd., are now established in pretentious offices at Harvard House, Castlereagh street, Sydney, Australia.

MAX LINDER REPORTED IMPROVED.

Max Linder, Essanay's famous comedian, who was reported to have been stricken with a touch of tuberculosis as a result of an inflammation of a lung wounded during his services in the European war, is vastly improved, according to advices which have just been received from Los Angeles. Mr. Linder has not been in his studio for several weeks. A bulletin issued by his medical advisers indicates that he may soon take up his work again.

The scenario for the fourth Essanay production already has been written by Linder, and should his health permit he will launch into its production within a short time.

Observations

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

I WAS amused recently by reading of the determined attitude taken by several prominent producers and exhibitors of motion pictures with regard to a reduction in the cost of same. They were combined in a determination to cut down the salaries of the stars. The very people who entered into this combination were responsible for the rate paid. They wanted people of theatrical class. They could not see the people who really gave the pictures the start.

Eight years ago Charley Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Maxine Elliott, Mary Garden, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, Ethel Barrymore, Sarah Bernhardt, Geraldine Farrar, Lionel Barrymore, William Farnum, Mrs. Vernon Castle and others (irrespective of rotation as to popularity, or value) were not known to the moving picture world. None of them would have accepted an offer even five years ago to appear before the motion picture screen, because their professional pride was paramount. But they did, and the very people who induced them to enter the arena are the first to kick.

The only incentive for those of the few above mentioned to become "movie stars" was money. "Get them into the pictures and there will be a barrel of money" was the cry. Now they ask that the cost of production be reduced, so that the exhibitor may have a chance to live.

What a change! After getting the producers to comply with their request they kick about paying their proportionate part of the expense.

One of the kickers is one of the oldest exhibitors in the business, B. L. Talley, of Los Angeles. He is a good soul. He is one of the champions of the motion picture business on the Western coast, and many a time he found Maurice Costello, Julia Swayne Gordon, Billy Shay and others of that type or original bread winners a valuable asset. Lured by attractive advertisements and press notices he leaned toward the name, and not the work. He gradually forgot what lead to the foundation of his house and fortune and, like many others, encouraged the leading people of the stage to the screen.

It is what the writer said volumes ago. As screen artists those trained before the camera are superior to the stage people. The real screen ability was gradually subordinated to the stage popularity.

I will say here that I can pick a cast of screen trained people and make a better production of a script than anyone else can produce with a cast of stage people.

Take Mary Pickford, for instance. Who would you take from the stage to take her place in pictures?

Then, again, take Norma Talmadge. What girl would you select from the stage to take her place in a moving picture script?

Take dear old Flora Finch Where can you find a nice, lean lady on the stage to make the success she did in the movies?

Dear Mother Maurice is another classic. Have you seen her equal in any moving picture. The nearest to her is Mrs. Whiffen, and she would be a failure before the camera.

We have many fat men on the screen today, and they make good, but none of them have "got the laugh" that John Bunny did in his sleepiest of days.

I have seen many men of old, dignified character on the screen, but have you seen one to equal the venerable Charles Kent?

Charley Chaplin is one of the comedians of comparatively recent type and his eccentric work has won much popularity, but as one who started early and one who will last as a real comedian of the eccentric type none surpasses old Billy Shay.

Mr. Rothapfel, of the Rialto theater, is supposed to be a judge of what constitutes a real motion picture, but he isn't. Unfortunately he sacrifices many good elements of a picture to make it fit the length of his programme. He is of an artistic mind and that sometimes leads him into the mistake of cutting out what is good in a picture for the benefit of what he thinks is better in a quartet. I once appeared as a waiter in a picture. A sample print was shown at the Rialto, and when I saw the picture I hadn't time to get a glance at the tip.

Actors were paid high once—that is movie actors. And I say this with all reserve. When they were paid high they were doing good work and Messrs. Tally, Rothapfel, Johnston, Kunsky and others knew little of the producing end of the motion picture business. They wanted to see the stars of the stage in pictures, because they thought if their work before the camera failed of the mark their names would fill in. To get these stars has cost the exhibitor more, and the exhibitors are now kicking on the rental.

If you must have perfection why kick on the price?

The fact of the matter is that the exhibitors have, or are gradually becoming, the dominating power in the sphere of production. There must be a re-adjustment of conditions, or the business must eventually go to the dogs.

It is a sad mistake to put an eight reeler into a prominent house as a disconnected and unintelligible five reeler.

It is a fact proved by popularity that where a cut-down subject has met with passable recognition the same subject has received general approbation in its original length.

It is true that many good subjects have been ruined by "padding," and it is equally true that as many have been seriously injured by squeezing to get it within a time allotted program. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and it is time that some producers awoke to the fact that it is the picture the public go to see as much as the intervening acts.

Producers and renters must realize that their products are as important to the success of a show as the singers and dancers, if not more so. The former are billed as the attractions, and therefore should be considered so by the managements when the show is on. If not, it were better that the producers and their agents let the pictures go to houses that will treat them as they are booked. A feature house cannot help a good feature picture by squeezing it to fit the program.

In writing as I do I speak with no interest in behalf of the producer or the exchanges who release the films, but more in the interest of the house showing them. The public is more alert than many people engaged in the motion picture business suspect. For instance, a certain feature play, after being seen at a Broadway house, was shown at a less pretentious house (and at much less money) and several people stated within the hearing of the writer, "why that picture tells the story much better than when I saw it at the ———— theater on Broadway. They must have cut it down awfully."

So we come down to the real fact: A house manager is not always a good film cutter. If a picture is a bad one the house has its remedy against the producer. If it is a good one it should be given its full run. At all events a good picture should not be injured by cutting. The same principle that applies to vaudeville acts applies to the motion picture. If it is not good cut it out altogether, but don't disappoint an audience by cutting a good thing in half. The expunged half may reflect seriously upon the house that has become its stepfather.

"THE CRIMSON DOVE."

Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge and Dion Titheradge, in "The Crimson Dove," will be next week's release by World Pictures Brady-Made. A lumber camp, a church, the gold room at Rector's and a backwoods faro bank with a woman dealer are some of the backgrounds against which the vivid love story of this play is laid.

"Central Arizona." (Pathe-Combitone)

IN Central Arizona wonderful facilities are afforded for the study of geology as is demonstrated in No. 8 of the Combitone series, and in the picture attention is drawn to the formation of the strata through various closeups. In this part of Arizona deep gulches and crevices abound, and mountain lions are frequently met with. Cliffs of a thousand hues and strangely carved meet the eye; and in the neighborhood of Fish Creek we are shown the road called Fish Creek grade over which the material for the construction of the Roosevelt dam was hauled. The vegetation about Fish Creek shows an abundance of cacti. Other scenes of interest are Eagle Head Rock, Arrowhead Mountain, and Geronimo cave where a bandit of that name is said to have lived. The picture closes with a beautiful view of the sky line at Fish Creek, with a remarkably realistic sky flecked with white clouds.

"The Queer Tribe of Issa." (Mutual-Gaumont)

An illustration of the religious rites of the tribe of Issa in British Somaliland is contained in "Reel Life No. 53." These scenes are in part gruesome but give an excellent idea of the frenzied delirium into which these people work themselves in the carrying out of these religious rites. They even torture themselves with sharp sticks with which they pierce their flesh. The subject is not a pleasant one but is of course informational.

"The Heart of Vesuvius." (Coronet)

An exceptional series of views taken in the crater of Vesuvius are in the hands of the Coronet Film Corporation, 729 7th Avenue, New York. These pictures comprise several hundred feet of film and open with a view of the volcano from across the Bay of Naples. They also include some interesting scenes at the ruins of Pompeii. The picture is subtitled with care and explains thoroughly each step of the way taken by the adventurous explorers in reaching the very heart of the huge crater. We are shown among other things the new point at which an outburst has been threatening since the cave-in of the original point of eruption. The scenes exhibited in this film are of startling interest.

"Restoring a California Mission" (Mutual-Gaumont)

The mission of San Fernando Rey de Espana in the old Californian mission which we see being remodeled in "Reel Life No. 53." One hundred and twenty thousand adobe bricks are being used in renovating the building, and it is interesting to watch the workmen making the bricks in crude wooden molds from which they are separated while soft and left to dry in the sun. The bricks are laid with a mud mixture. This is an interesting and fairly well illustrated subject.

"Life's Simplest Children." (Universal)

A microscopic study of a drop of water is contained in the Universal Screen Magazine No. 19. The tiny beings which become visible in a drop of pond water magnified about 60,000 times are called Paramoecia Caudata, and belong to the first and simplest forms of animal life. They are seen to propel themselves through the water by means of tiny hairs which even through the powerful eye of the microscope are scarcely visible. These tiny hairs are called "Cilia" and with them the little creatures lash the water as they move about. They are visible scavengers of our ponds and rivers, so we learn from the picture, devouring the dead carcasses of other small creatures. Another little water creature no bigger than a pin head, called the cypris, is also shown.

"Some Unusual Birds." (Pathe)

This bird study is colored sometimes too brilliantly but is intensely interesting and well-photographed. In it are shown the Salanganed or Chinese swift which builds its nest of seaweed, the Japanese sparrow, the Cape cardinel, and the Japanese nightingale. These birds are perfectly unconscious of their audience.

"Royal Game." (Educational Films Corporation of America)

The Nubian giraffe and the Indian and African species of rhinoceros are exhibited in this picture. Here we learn that the giraffe will live on an average to nineteen years of age in captivity, while the rhinoceros will attain the age of forty years. The giraffe standing erect can still arch his neck to reach a feed measure in the hand of a man perched on a fence eight feet above the ground. For the reason that the giraffe in his native haunts browses from trees it is necessary to set his feed trough and also his water bucket aloft for convenience sake. An amusing and also successful attempt to eat and drink from the ground is made by the giraffe for the benefit of the audience, at which time he is obliged to spread his fore feet wide apart to accomplish the feat. The rhinoceros is made to exhibit playful and vicious traits. Attention is also drawn to the fact that the Nubian rhinoceros has but one horn, while the African rhino has two.

"The Animal World." (Coronet)

The Coronet Film Corporation of 729 7th Avenue, New York City, are about to release an animal picture which was photographed at the Hamburg zoological gardens. In it will be found interesting studies of the musk ox, the eland, the zebra, the single-horned rhinoceros, the pigmy hippopotamus of Nigeria, the ordinary hippopotamus in its wild state, a group of four giraffes, and a hippopotamus family. This film also contains unusually attractive views in which the sea lion and walrus holds sway. Some views of the sea lions swimming under the water are also shown.

"The Submarine Mine-Layer." (Paramount-Bray)

The Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 67 contains an interesting illustration of the German method of laying submarine mines. This illustration consists of a series of animated drawings showing how the mine carried by submarine to a point of deposit is moored securely to the ocean's bottom and is then left to float at a sufficient distance from the surface of the water to assure its explosion by coming in contact with the hull of a passing ship. This is the first of a series of animated drawings by J. R. Leventhal showing the remarkable engines of warfare perfected by the warring nations in the past few years.

"Modern Farming." (Paramount-Bray)

The manner in which back-yard farms are being cultivated in response to the request of the government of the United States, as well as the estate of the millionaire, is shown in the Paramount-Bray-Pictograph No. 67. Here we see the little back-yard farmer busily engaged at trying to produce at least enough garden truck to supply his own immediate family. And from here we go to take a look at the more pretentious farm where the work of tilling the soil is being pursued with all sorts of modern implements including the gasoline-propelled machine, known as the "farm flivver." An interesting release and one which is an inspiration to the Americans to roll up their sleeves and get to work for the good of the country.

"Making Cut Glass." (Universal)

In the Universal Screen Magazine No. 19 we learn how cut glass is made, and with what infinite care and skill it must be handled in order that the product be placed before admiring eyes in flawless shape. We watch them on the screen removing the rough edges from the article, after which the design is marked on and cut into the glass with steel grinders. After the design has been cut in the glass it is put through a process of buffing to remove the raw edges, and is coated with wax to enable it to resist the acid in which it is then dipped for the purpose of removing the impurities. The process of polishing is the last step to the finished product.

"U. S. Aviators at School." (Universal)

We learn from Universal Screen Magazine No. 19 that army birdmen are now being trained by the hundreds in an effort to establish a formidable flying corps, and that compared to European armies our aviation corps in its present state appears to a disadvantage. The students study under the skeleton frame of an aeroplane how to control the intricate mechanism which guides the machine up and down and on its sharp turns. Closeup views of the tail skid, shock absorber, and the strong rigid wings are shown. We are shown also a modern six-cylinder, 125 horsepower engine which yields a speed of 120 miles an hour, and see the students studying a sectional cylinder. The picture shows the crank shaft and casing, and explains how the shaft revolves the propeller, and how the casing which is the base of the engine holds the oil. We see the students studying the manufacture of an aeroplane. The gasoline station is also shown and we learn that each gallon of gasoline carries the aeroplane eight miles.

"Getting Rid of the Snow." (Mutual-Gaumont)

In "Reel Life No. 53" we learn something of how the snow deposits of winter storms is gotten rid of in large cities. A scene at Herald Square, New York City, gives a good idea of how the problem is handled in the big metropolis. Here we see the men shoveling the snow into wagons which later dump their burdens into the sewers. The devices for keeping the trolley tracks clear are shown in scenes in New York and in Montreal, Canada.

"The Land of the Rising Sun"

In Which We Gain a Familiar Knowledge of the Domestic Life of Japan and Something of Her Industries and Superstitions.

IN THE review department of our last issue it was noted that a private showing of a series of pictures entitled "The Land of the Rising Sun" had been exhibited before the Japanese Ambassador and a select audience in Aeolian Hall, New York City. These pictures are remarkable in that they cover more fully than any other series of Japanese pictures that we know of the domestic and industrial life of Japan.

At the opening of the picture we enter the harbor of Yokohama greeted as at home by waving of handkerchiefs from friends of the passengers of the Empress of India. The screen does not forget to remind us that we are entering a land about the size of the state of Montana, and which has a population of no less than 50,000,000 people. The "Impressions of Japan" which are first thrown on the screen are calculated to fix in the mind of the spectator an idea of the fascinating beauty of this little country where thrift, health, correct sanitation and beauty are the chief characteristics. Here we see Count Okuma strolling in his garden with his grandchildren, a street scene in Tokyo showing how disastrous fires are prevented through the vigilance of officers stationed in watch towers, and an iris garden at Kamata in full bloom. Then there is the theater street at Kyoto, and there is the main street at Ikaio where there is a quarter of a mile of stone steps down which we watch the pretty Japanese maids with their elaborate kimonas and parasols tripping up and down on their way too and from market or other business.

"Child Life," a reel by itself, is particularly charming, showing how the child life of Japan is taken care of.

Scene from "The Land of the Rising Sun" (American-Japan).

According to these pictures there is much of joy in the life of the child of Japan. We have only to watch the boys playing on the swinging log, the little girls playing among the flowers, imbibing grace from a dancing instructress, or being entertained by a professional story teller, to realize that in Japan as in America efforts are being put forth on behalf of the child.

"The Industries of Japan" are illustrated in another reel, and we learn with what care and skill the ground of Japan is tilled. We see the low land flooded with water being prepared for the planting of rice, and on the high land the cultivation of the tea plant under progress. We see the laborers plucking the leaves from the tea plant, drying them on screens made for the purpose, and later packing them for shipping. A close-up view of silk worms which are carefully looked after in Japan, is followed by a view showing the feeding of the worms, and the actual spinning of the silk cocoon which is afterward taken from the worm and spun into the silk thread of which Japanese silk fabrics are made. All of this is shown in the picture. Splendid illustrations of how the fishing industry is carried on in Japan are also given showing fishing with cormorants as well as with nets.

"A Wedding Ceremony" shows us the bride preparing her trousseau with the aid of her people, the trip to the bridegroom's in procession, when the bride steps from a peculiar covered vehicle and is escorted into the house. There is an exchange of presents between the two families, a beverage is partaken of by bride and bridegroom and after little ceremony such as we know the wedding is over, and the pair are pronounced man and wife.

"Urashima, the Fisher Boy" is a pretty fairy tale nicely played by Japanese players. The "Temples and Religious Processions" of course present the most famous temples of Japan as well as the most important religious festivals and ceremonies. "Artificial Pearl Culture" gives an insight into an important industry of Japan not included in the first group, that of cultivating pearls. This is done by inserting in the oyster what is known as nacre, a gritty substance which is the neucleus of the pearl, and which the oyster to defend itself against irritation covers with the substance which after three or four years comes to us in the shape of a small pearl.

"An Englishman's First Night in a Japanese Inn" is an amusing bit of comedy which shows how we would be treated in one of these inns where the customs are the same as generations ago. The Englishman in question is met at the door of the inn by a bevy of pretty maidens who bow him welcome, escort him to his room, see that he gets into a neglige of some sort, and also that he eats his supper served by them. According to the comedy they also deem it their duty to see that he is properly put to bed on a mattress laid on a hard floor and a typical Japanese pillow.

We stay with the Englishman until finally he escapes next day from the inn vowing vociferously "Never again!"

These pictures are being distributed by the America-Japan Pictures Company, 15 William Street, New York City.

"Christus"

Story of the Life of Christ Given Splendid Presentation by Cines of Rome.

IT IS not the intention at the present writing to dwell analytically on this excellent production which covers several thousand feet of film and is being handled by the Historic Features Corporation, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City, a review of it having been printed in our last issue. We merely wish to emphasize to our readers the fact that this screen presentation of the life of Christ founded on the poem of the Italian poet Fausto Salvatori is one of the best if not the best that has ever been made. It has been handled with artistry and a reverence that is akin to love; it is tragic and compelling and will surely be appreciated by religious workers and others who recognize the far-reaching influence of the character and teachings of Jesus.

The production was made in Palestine and Egypt on the identical ground traversed by Jesus of Nazareth during his lifetime.

Something New for the Children

The Peter Pan Film Corporation Presents the Mo-Toy Comedies in Which Animated Toys Are the Stars.

IT is only necessary to send imagination on a trip to our own childhood days to gain some idea of what the Mo-Toy comedies in which dolls, teddy bears and other toy animals assume the animation and responsibilities of real people, will mean to the little ones. These comedies are now being released by the Peter Pan Film Corporation 729 7th Avenue, New York City.

The first two releases are entitled respectively "Jimmy Gets the Pennant," and "A Midnight Frolic." In both of these films Jimmy seems to be the central figure. He is a handsome doll and succeeds with his associates to keep things moving along at a lively pace.

"Jimmy Gets the Pennant" consists of a baseball game played by dolls, and right merry dolls they are. The pitcher is a funny little body who goes through all the manoeuvres of the professional pitcher, and is not above winking a naughty suggestion or two from a saucy left eye. When it comes Jimmy's turn at the bat he strikes the ball such a blow that he is able to make all the bases and back home again before it is found. Little boys will particularly enjoy this picture.

"A Midnight Frolic" shows two little girls going to bed with their dolls at their sides, and Jimmy is one of them. The children are no sooner asleep than all the toys come to life and commence to frolic. Jimmy slips easily from the bed, and has a bout with a doll actor of a moving picture company with whose leading lady he has fallen in love. Jimmy evidently is a Charlie Chaplin fan, for he imitates his every move and becomes a perfect fac-simile of the favorite comedian. This film will surely delight the children, and we are glad to know that something has at last been thought of which will add to the pleasure of the younger children of the moving picture audience.

Encouraging Progress

The Moving Picture is the Social Leader, Entertainer and Educator of the Masses.

ANY one who is abroad amid the activities of the moving pictures and sees their relation to the public at large cannot fail to notice that there is a manifest spirit of progress and development not only acceptable to the public mind, but advantageous to the moving picture interests. There is also every evidence that the quality of the picture exhibitions are so improved that they are becoming more and more pleasing to the honest "picture fans," more acceptable to the picture judges and more interesting to the ultra-intelligent.

It is impossible to ascribe this progress to any one particular cause or even several causes; it is the growth of an intelligent appreciation of the situation by all parties interested in the making and exhibiting of the pictures as they come in touch with the minds of those who have to receive and profit by seeing them. One of the most interesting studies of the public value of the pictures is found in the legislative councils of the states. Whenever there appears in any legislative body a bill dealing with either censorship or the use of pictures on the Sunday, these worthy lawmakers do not hesitate to acknowledge their lack of sufficient knowledge of the moving pictures to form a proper judgment upon the issues before them; they listen readily to the representatives of the moving picture advocates and invariably decide in favor of the best interests of the pictures; always acknowledging the value of the information they have received. This progress of the interests of the pictures in high places is one of the best tributes to their every value.

Great Changes Wrought By a Failing Industry.

There can be no doubt that we are passing through a time of great changes chiefly on account of the fact that the great liquor interests are so rapidly failing, while full credit must be given to an intelligent public discrimination against the evils of the saloon and its attendant dangers to the public morals. Full credit must also be given to the moving picture for its reformatory powers and its better counter-attracting influences. That the moving pictures have aroused the bitter opposition of the great brewing interests is well and widely known. It may not be so widely known, however, that much of the legislation sought to curtail the powers of the pictures is prompted by the brewing interests.

To the wideawake moving picture powers the failing of the liquor interests can be made of tremendous advantage to the best interests of the picture trade. The saloon has always exercised a great social power over the workers. The picture trade is the only heir to this social leadership and has the power to cultivate it to an unlimited degree. Let it be well known, therefore, that to the moving picture belongs the right to become the social leader, entertainer and educator of the masses of the people.

On the Waves of Patriotism.

Higher and higher rises the occasion for usefulness of the moving picture. Riding upon the crest of popular utilitarianism it has met every advance of national importance. Its last great opportunity was as a aid to the instruction of the voters in the national election. Now again it becomes the greatest agent in the hands of the Government to lead the patriotism of this grat nation in a propaganda which is intended to inspire the world to a standard of true democracy—the democracy of liberty and freedom. The high minded exhibitor is now a leader of the people. From his screen goes out a power that is destined to mold mankind. The power of the press was considered supreme; it is now conceded that the picture is a most necessary supplement. In New York city the patriotic pictures are crowding the houses, an educated enthusiasm is running high. Compared with fifty years ago the pictures are shortening by years the requirements of the government, and, perhaps saving hundreds of lives. Push the patriotic pictures. W. H. J.

Patriotism and Punk.

BECAUSE these are stirring times, do not get the idea that you are "patriotic" or are spreading patriotism because you cause or permit "The Star Spangled Banner" to be played half a dozen times during your program. Have a talk with your pianist and persuade him that it is no great victory for him to lift the people out of their seats with the national anthem. Only the other day we attended a performance in the course of which the audience had to get up four times. The people rose to their feet out of respect to the air, but they were laughing at the over-zealous efforts of the cheap little orchestra conductor to take them over the jumps. Have the national air played either at the opening or the closing of the performance and persuade your pianist or leader that you'll slaughter him if he abuses patrons and patriotism alike at other times. Patriotism is one thing and what the actors call "kind applause" is another. Be patriotic, but properly so. During the Spanish-American war we hated to have to go to the theater, because every cheap musical and singing turn played the national air for "a hand." We were in England for six weeks during the Boer troubles and we do not recall having had to rise a dozen times in that period. There "God Save the Queen" was played as the final curtain fell, but it was not used as an applause getter for inferior acts. Play the national air but once during each performance and tell why it is played but once.

With a Pretty Cover.

Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., uses an odd form of program with a decidedly tasteful cover. The pages are 4½x6 inches, and it would seem that the cut for the front is changed for each issue, at least the cut in the cover shown is for one of the current attractions. Inside the pages carry framed program boxes on the right-hand sheets and advertising and talk of the films on the left, with auvertising above and below each section of the program. This makes a lot of "next to program" spaces, but it spreads the program ever several pages and you do not get a complete idea of the offering. It would be better first to run the full program for the half week on one page and then run on with details in the pages following, with the second half program in full and again the details. Nowhere does the program give the reader the entire offering at a glance, and this should be the first requisite in any program, no matter what follows. There is plenty of house information of the right sort, details of when to come, when the full orchestra plays, directions to the conveniences and a well-founded brag about the orchestra, but there is a certain lack of order in the arrangement of material. It is evidently a first issue, and probably with a little more time this will be remedied; at least they give plenty of information and make the booklet valuable in other ways than as a program announcement. It tells all about the house. And it is large for its age, running thirty-two pages in order to carry all the advertising offered. In following issues no advertiser should be permitted to run an advertisement in the same style as the house readers. There is one in the first issue and it hurts the chances of house talk further along because the reader has been stung once. It would be a good plan to run the house talk without frames, and to fill these pages solid, using a few notes of the players, and condensing the house information to make room for the notes.

Improving the Forecast.

Film Forecast, the organ of the Rowland and Clark houses, Pittsburgh, comes out with a new cover design and a slightly larger sheet. The cover shows half-tones of the six houses of the string and is very nicely done, but no improvement has been made within the covers. It doesn't go together right. It looks sloppy and unfinished through lack of orderly make-up. The type looks as though it had been thrown at the forms, and somehow managed to get in right side up, but it is not a sheet that any intelligent patron can pick up and read with interest largely because there is nothing he can pick out to be read with interest. It is almost all stuff about the current films and some little chat about the various managers, but there is no intimacy of touch in the text and the make-up is such that the average reader is discouraged. We reproduce a typical page. This and the facing page

Irish Hero and American Heroine Chief Characters in Play "Castles for Two"

Marie Doro Looks Excessively Pretty Both In Costume of Heiress and The Tatters of The Peasant Girl—Will Appeal To All Lovers Of Delightful Romance.

"Castles for Two" is as charming and colorful as an Irish hero an American heroine and a delightful little romance can make it. We first see the young heroine as an American heiress bored to distraction by the oppression of her wealth She persuades an old nurse to take her to a castle in Ireland where she insists on her secretary posing as the heiress while she disguises herself as a servant in her own house Meanwhile the moneyless family of a young Irish peer are making his life miserable because he refuses to marry the supposed "heiress" whom he declares is "too old, and anyway, I don't like her." A sudden love affair has sprung up between the impoverished peer and the real heiress whom he believes to be a servant, and this comedy of errors is cleared up by an amusing and dramatic climax.

Marie Doro looks excessively pretty both in the exquisite costumes of the heiress and the rags and tatters of the peasant girl and plays both roles with her usual piquant loveliness. Elliot Dexter makes a sturdy and handsome Irish peer and the remainder of the cast is satisfactory

This Irish American love story will appeal to all the lovers of delightful romance, which is not merely sugar and sentimental, but has dash and spirit.

"Castles For Two" will be shown at the Arsenal, Wednesday April 11; Strand Thursday, April 12, Belmar, Friday April 13, Bellevue, Saturday, April 14

Mary Pickford's next production will probably be "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

are given over to the Bellevue, just as each house gets two pages. The program is repeated in chart form in the shape of a double middle page, showing all the houses. Here it helps to crowd the page. The cut shows fairly well, but a muddy advertising cut takes from the effect. It is put together badly. The program is in type too large and might better be replaced by a running story on the week's bill. An effort should be made to give a lighter effect to the pages—all of them, for they are uniformly black and forbidding to the eye. Enough money is being spent on the sheet, but not enough care.

Seventeens.

Ralph Ruffner, of the Liberty, Spokane, admits that the all-black picture of Bill Hart was a bit too all-black, but explains that he was praising the artist and not the reproduction in the letter he sent with the example. But it is not the original but the reproduction that counts, and the reproduction was entirely too maduro. But Ruff says that it drew the money, and he says it with an air of "now will you be good?" We will, but we opine that he, too, has had a great light.

Witness these two four seventeens. We particularly like the one with the cut, but both are good and both stand out. And we like, too, that "Now, right now." Much more emphatic than a plain "Now." Ruff says he is sending some photographs of small wall stands, but they are not here yet. And apparently he has not yet seen that Fullertan challenge.

Going Strong.

The Shamrock, Atlanta, Ga., did not shoot its bolt on the first issue. It is going better each week and Lambdin Kay seems to have hit his stride. He gets down to his work with the ease of a veteran, though he admits that his only previous experience was a brief time with a local picture paper of a general nature that the local houses did not take to as kindly as did the readers. He is arranging for a Kid matinee, working with the schools, and the last issue to hand puts the entire militia in uniform on the free list and hopes they will use their khaki pass often. It's no easy job to fill four pages with joy, yet he is doing it without the aid of too many cuts. Compare this with some of the Peggy advertising you see—and this is just the opening paragraphs:

> In "Picture Talk" last week we asked West End if it wanted Billie Burke in "Peggy."
> And without waiting for any formalities at all West End immediately rose right up and allowed as how it wanted Billie Burke in "Peggy," always had wanted her, absolutely must have her, and that we'd better be quick about bringing her out.
> West End signed flocks of the Request Cards we printed in "Picture Talk," and West End signed flocks more of the "Peggy" cards we handed out, and West End telephoned us and West End spoke to us personally about it.
> In fact, West End conducted itself generally as though Billie Burke in "Peggy" was the one superlatively desirable dispensation West End had always been cruelly deprived of—the one gracious blessing needed to make life in West End a blissful, harmonious whole.

You'll stick to a story like that to the finish where you might pass over a more formal talk, and this is by no means the best story in the issue. The palm goes to a story of a street parade that makes you fairly feel that you took part. This sort of stuff is not easy to write, and it is almost shockingly easy to be impertinent instead of chatty, but if you can learn to write in Mr. Kay's vein it is worth while studying, for then you'll get every line of your stuff read. And here is part of an announcement that the house telephone is very much at your service:

> So, now, if supper-time ever rolls 'round and you want to tell mother that you've simly GOT to see the finish of this Fairbanks picture—or if you think you'd better call up Annie Mae and find out what time tomorrow she's coming down to see Marguerite Clark so's you can meet her—or if you've forgotten whether it was a can of peaches or a package of Jell-O you were supposed to bring home from Chapman's for dessert—why, then, the old 'phone's liable to come in handy.

Mr. Kay says he is only an amateur, but he writes like a professional copy man.

Backing up the Peggy notice is a pseudo invitation to the theater. Apart from a coarse screen cut on good paper, the printer made a fairly good job, using a clean looking Gothic instead of fussy stuff.

It's Free for All.

While Gordon M. Fullerton primarily was gunning for Ralph Ruffner when he contended that the Liberty, Seattle, uses the greatest number of lines per year, the statement is made to admit all, so come on in. H. A. Gillespie, of the Mercy theatrical enterprises, North Yakima, Wash., is the latest to enter a claim. He writes:

> Having noticed in recent issues of the World, statements from advertising managers of different Seattle theaters, each claiming to use the most newspaper space in their advertising campaign, I am herewith inclosing clippings of a campaign we recently ran on "War Brides."
> The clippings were taken from one paper only and total 218 inches, whereas the same ads were run in both the morning and the evening papers. This would make a total of 416 inches of newspaper advertising used in putting across this one picture. This newspaper advertising is, of course, in addition to the regular house program and the billboard campaign. The clippings do not show a special "splugh" but are about the usual number of inches used on all features.
> Also, bear in mind that North Yakima is a city of only 20,000 people, while Seattle has considerable over 200,000.
> If over twenty-one columns of advertising space used on one feature, and practically the same amount used on every feature, in a town of 20,000 people, is not sufficient to secure a listing among those who believe in advertising, then I'll pass.

Mr. Gillespie is a trifle too vague in his statements. He is definite as to this particular release, but "about the same space" for other attractions will scarcely qualify. During 1916 Mr. Fullerton used 153,818 column inches. It will take a definite quotation for the entire year of 1916 to come into the argument and stick in. And the comparative size of the towns is less important than would appear at first glance, for we take it that the North Yakima rates are proportioned to the circulation. We shall be glad to have Mr. Gillespie's 1916 figures.

The set of stuff Mr. Gillespie sends in is decidedly well done. The stuff is not dated, so that the exact order in which it runs does not appear, but evidently the first advertisement was a teaser, reading merely:

WAR ERIDES
A PROTEST.

The top line was in 60-point and the lower in 18; four twos. From there the space runs up to six fifteens in a clean and well-laid advertisement. About the only comment is that the name of the house is slightly obscured and the type should have been pulled away slightly from the names of play and player, though the heavy underscoring helps considerably. Had we been laying the copy we should have made "The Immortal" above Nazimova's name smaller, and should have used an eighteen between that and the title, with the name of the author much smaller and the rest as it stands. The "Manager's note" has reference to the advance in prices. One good point in Mr.

Gillespie's work is a calendar appearing daily in both papers always in the same form and the same position in the sheet, covering all the houses. No matter what other work is done, the theatergoer knows he will find the announcement in that particular position. The regularity makes it valuable.

Closing Down.

The Majestic Monthly, Columbus, Ohio, has closed down for the summer with the April number. This is an annual practice, but we are sorry to lose it through the war weather period, for it is about the best-edited house organ coming to our desk. Here's hoping that publication will be resumed early in the fall. Here is a line from the last issue that is worth copying and living up to:

> Speaking of Majestic creed and Majestic service, we want to impress our readers with the fact that regardless of the size of the crowds nothing is ever taken out to shorten the show and the pictures are always run at the regulation speed. System and order prevail under any and all circumstances.

Rushing the show to let in the new crowd is one certain way of getting rid of the extra attendance. The Office Boy spends most of his time talking about the house staff, a group picture fronting his page, but he winds up with the remark that presently we shall get a lot of hot air about cool houses, but that the hot air used in the Majestic is first run through iced water, which is an excellent scheme for hot air of any kind. There is no hot air in the Monthly, but plenty of the sort of talk that makes for business, and above all, the spirit of "us" that makes more friends than the editorial "we" or the managerial "me."

Springing Up.

The spring issue of the Motion Picture Bulletin, the Canadian Universal house organ, is called the manufacturers' number and carries an unusual number of supply house ads. It is twenty-four pages with an insert, and looks more like a small trade paper than a house organ. It is a credit to the staff.

With a Map.

Oklahoma City now has a general picture paper covering the shows at six of the theaters. A novel feature of the cover page is a design which includes a map of the theater district, showing the six houses covered. As the theater district is only two blocks square, this is a simple matter, but the idea is good and might be adapted by other general organs and even circuit houses where the different theaters are not too far apart. The cut shows a part of the page with this detail. The sheet is well framed with plenty of general reading matter to carry the program pages. There is not much space for any one house, which is the drawback of all these general sheets, but it is a cheap and fairly efficient medium.

Here's a Hint.

L. W. McCuan, of the Kozy, Dresden, Tenn., sends in an extra, gotten out the morning after Congress met in special session. It is about one part "Pearl of the Army" and three parts real news, with a cut of the President, stories of the war with a press story for the film balancing a news story with a matched head. One head reads: "A War to Set the World Free," and the other runs "100,000 Foreign Spies in the U. S." The latter is the film story, but it matches the general tone of the rest so well that readers will not only start the story, but will read all the way down. The sheet is printed on one side only, 12x19 inches. Mr. McCuan writes that he used the well-planned teaser campaign several weeks in advance of the first part with plenty of paper and Kleine colored panels of Miss White mailed to the homes. Before the first part he banked the lobby with stars and stripes and red, white and blue incandescents, and a small American flag as souvenirs. And in a P. S. he adds: "The biggest flash I had was four large recruiting posters in the lobby, loaned me by the postmaster." That is something to remember. Those four posters did more than all of the regulation advertising, because they were out of the ordinary, and it is always the unusual that appeals. If you cannot obtain recruiting posters in town, write the nearest recruiting stations or the War and Navy Departments direct, but be careful not to directly book these up with the film advertising. Give them special boards and let them stand apart. Do not strip them with house announcement.

Changed for Better.

The Opera House, Leighton, Pa., has changed over to a bi-weekly program with boxed dates. It is a six by nine page, giving plenty of room for a brief announcement of the play, and the printer has been induced to do his share and leave a good-looking sheet. We reproduce the arrangement, but would suggest that where there is so much space in the boxes it might be a good plan to pull the date together and move it up a little and then, in the lower half of the box, set the names of the stars in six-point italic. The names do not have to be larger than six-point and must not be larger if the name is to go in one line. Take that top box, for example. Miss Stedman is announced in twelve-point, but in the margin there could be announced both Miss Stedman and the stars of "In the Grip of Evil." The back page is divided between a running story of the coming films and the announcement of "The Battle Cry of Peace." The front page should carry full data as to opening hours, the time-table of features and small subjects, the location of house conveniences and the like. This would work better than the list of stars now run there. And here is a little point. The stars for the two-week period are listed and run under the line "Stars, Stars, and then Some Stars." But there is nothing to point up the fact that all of these stars are to be seen within a two-week period. It doesn't pay to write grandly general flash lines. Tie the punch to the announcement. "These are just the stars for the next two weeks" will mean more than the less definite line and hammer home the announcement.

Superlatives.

It is customary to regard Boston as the birthplace, home and last resting place of pure speech, and yet Louis B. Mayer, in advertising "The Alien," chastely remarks:

> If there is a dry eye in your theater while showing this picture, it will be a glass one.

Surely argument can go no further. Cut out the line and try it yourself some time. It's worth while. It happens on a useful form of return advertisement; a post card in three sections, one being the self-addressed return portion, folded inside to protect it until use. This is a good idea for a return to employ in checking up your mailing list.

Half Right.

The Victoria, Buffalo, in announcing Chaplin in the Rink, bills him as "The Millionaire Comedian."

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing adressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses by critized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Getting it Wrong.

HAMPTON DEL RUTH sends in a long letter in reply to some stuff in this department recently. We don't think that Mr. Del Ruth really is greatly concerned over the author in general, for he has his own staff of gag men and buys no outside stuff. He writes:

> I have followed your department, "The Photoplaywright," for some time with great pleasure and profit. Your recent comment upon the somewhat deplorable relations existing between prominent authors and producers is of vital interest to me, as I have always maintained that the author should be given credit and full publicity, as well as financial consideration equal to the director. It may be permissible at this juncture to say that the writers in the department over which I have the honor to preside are, on the average, better paid than the average director on our lot. Producers cannot expect creative writers to consent to being overshadowed by directors. The truly creative writer is the man who furnishes the central idea or original theme that contains all the potentials of the finished picture that the director, continuity writer and cutter finally releases.
> Of course, comedy is a difficult matter to handle with exact credit to all concerned. One man may furnish the original idea and six men may build it up, adding to it situations and pieces of business that may be, in many cases, superior to the original idea. Yet I am inclined to favor giving the sole credit to the man who furnishes the original comedy idea, regardless of how much the scenario staff members may have improved it. Had not some one man furnished the original idea, there would be nothing to build on. It is very easy to construct a story on a good idea, very easy, indeed, to amplify it.
> The man who builds on an idea furnished by a creative man must not forget that he is practically doing mechanical work. Where one builds on an idea furnished by a creative mind, he may not expect legitimate standing as an author. He is a mechanic and not a creator, and as such is fully paid when he receives his pay check. Failure on the part of the producer to understand the distinction between mechanical and creative minds is responsible, I am inclined to believe, for the disheartened attitude of many celebrated writers toward motion picture producers.
> All this talk about many celebrated writers knowing nothing of pictures is a waste of good time. It is not the producer's business to tell a writer, who has appealed to millions, that he knows nothing of pictures. It is the producer's business to see that his continuity writer, director and cutter properly interpret the central idea of the author. The writer who has appealed to millions of readers should appeal to millions of picture spectators, if the continuity writer, director and cutter have sufficient intelligence and appreciation, coupled with an absence of exaggerated ego, to properly interpret it instead of expending their time and energy talking mchanical lingo.
> The man with the idea is a condition and not a theory, and he must be considered on the basis of complete equality with the director. Next to the man who pays to see the picture, the man with the idea is the one who must receive full consideration. If the creative man does not receive full credit and suitable reward no producer can expect him to remain in the motion picture field.

Keystone stories are compiled rather than written. Mr. Del Ruth, whose official title is "editor and production manager," blends the work of his staff men and there is not enough original story to claim an author.

We do not agree with Mr. Del Ruth's contentions in any point. In the first place the man who builds unon an idea "furnished by a creative mind" must himself have invention or his work will be too purely mechanical. He must be able to take the idea and continue it into a photoplay if the author cannot do this himself, but the author should and eventually will have to study his medium to the point where he himself can supply a practical cutting script. Until then he is not an author at all but merely a literary tipster (of a high grade, perhaps), giving merely the suggestion upon which another creator with a more practical knowledge of photoplay can build. The author who can create photoplay ideas must be able to work out his own continuity. Until he can do that he is not entitled to even talk to a director, for the director knows his business and the tipster, either through laziness or incompetence, does not. We do not, for example, regard George Randolph Chester as a photoplay writer. As a writer of fiction he occupies a deservedly high place, but as a suggester of photoplays he is in precisely the same class as Jim Jones and John Smith, who write a thousand-word synopsis and leave it to some better qualified man to work into a continuity. Mr. Chester gets more money than Smith or Jones, but he is no more a photoplay author, no matter what his merits may be in another field. The writing of photoplays is a business in itself and no author is entitled to climb upon the pedestal until he can write plays and not tips.

Suitability.

The play assuredly is the thing, but remember that a photoplay is told in pictured action, and in planning your story provide for the pictures and the action. Merely because the plot is interesting, it does not follow that the plot is suitable for photoplay. It must be a plot capable of being told in pictured action and not in leaders supported more or less by unmeaning action. At least 75 per cent. of the story should be told in action and not in the leaders, and the better the action and the more picturesque the locales, the more suitable is the plot for filming. But understand that this does not mean spoiling your story for the sake of locations, and it does not mean writing only in picturesque locations, for life is not passed amid sunken gardens and marble halls. That is as bad as the plot with no locale. Temper enthusiasm with judgment. First get your plot. Then see how much of the action you can place in pretty surroundings, then call attention to the scene possibilities in your synopsis. Look for what the stage dramatist calls "pictures," which are no more than brief tableau occurring in the course of the action. Probably most of you remember Blue Jeans, where the cherry tree is shaken upon the heroine. It has nothing in particular to do with the action, but it helps the picture and gives a certain grace to the scene. Watch for the pictures.

Lost Nerves.

Many writers lose their nerve when things go wrong, and after that they are unable to do anything. They are in much the same position as a structural iron worker who ambles along a girder six inches wide and perhaps a hundred feet or so above the street without a thought of his danger. Some day he slips or something happens, and after that he could not walk across a six-foot bridge without railings. Most writers feel that if they could have only one good sale they could get their nerve back. Perhaps so, but they will not have one good sale until they write one good story, and they will not write that single good story until they have their nerve again. It does no good to get desperate. That only makes for still greater loss of nerve. The only thing to do is to take it quietly, work slowly instead of desperately, and wait. That's the hard part, the waiting, for often a loss of sales is due to the market rather than to lack of merit in the story. Right now, for example, the fiction market is poor. The high cost of paper has hit the publishers a body blow. They must reduce expenses. They steal stories from the safe instead of buying, and buy only enough new stuff to carry the stories they bought for one reason or another and then set aside as being not quite good enough. And most of the new sales are made by the regular writers who must be nursed over the hard times. The wise, free lance is writing as usual, but he is saving his postage and looking to other sources of income meantime. If he does not, he loses his nerve and can neither write nor sell. But if the market is all right, the fault must lie with the material, and the way to win back is to write slowly and carefully rather than with the haste of desperation. It is the man who gets rattled who loses out. Force yourself to quiet down and presently you will be doing as well as ever if you have the power of will.

Vacation Time.

Vacation time is coming. Plan to make good use of it. Presumably you will have at least a couple of weeks in a new environment. See if you cannot make the change of scene give you a new trend of thought. If you have always gone to the same place to spend your loafing time, plan this year to go somewhere else. See new things. Broaden your viewpoint and store your brain with fresh facts. Make your vacation the busiest and most profitable period of the whole year.

Studying.

Do not look for the faults in produced plays. Look rather for ways in which you could have bettered the handling. Then apply these discoveries to your own stories.

The THIRD Edition of Technique of the Photoplay

IS NOW READY

This is virtually a new book under the old title. More than double the text and with an arrangement especially adapting it for the student. The most complete book ever written on the subject of scenario or photoplay construction.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Some Fine Advice.

G. D. Bullock, Pedro Miguel, Canal Zone, says:

> Am enclosing a letter I received from Indiana; also a copy of my reply. If I have not fixed him up it is up to you to straighten the matter out. You have brought up a boy while I am an old batch.

The letter referred to comes from a certain individual in a certain town in the Grand Old State of Indiana. It reads:

> Friend Bullock—I have finished my course as an apprentice under both ———. (Two operators well known to the department are named.—Ed.) Now I don't know what to do. One says if I go operating all I will ever be is a bum, while the other says I should go to operating. Which advice is best?

To which Brother Bullock replies as follows, and let me tell you the reply is quite some considerable answer:

> The first thing you must do, if you desire success, is to make up your mind what you are going to do. Don't leave that particular thing to anybody else. You will do well to listen to OUR advice, because we have had more experience than you have, but you must make up your own mind in the end. If you decide to become an operator say to yourself: "I am going to be an operator," and then add: "I am going to be the best operator in the world. I am going to find out everything everybody else knows about operating, and after I have found out everything everybody else knows, I am going to find out some of the things they don't know. And in order to do this I must always study, and must always do the best work of which I am capable, first: because that is the only way to become the best operator in the world, and, second, because my manager pays me to do the best I can, and I am unfair to him if I don't do the best I can; I am in fact a thief, stealing wages which I do not entirely earn. I will be glad of any suggestions which will improve my work, no matter where the suggestions may come from. I will always be glad to help the other fellow over a difficulty, for in teaching him I myself learn, and thus will I raise the standard of the profession I have adopted, causing people to recognize it as a service requiring skill and training; giving to it a dignity which will command decent salary and working conditions, or at least materially help in obtaining those highly desirable things.
> "My work will be, at least to some extent, a labor of love. I shall toil as the artist and musician toil, that my work shall express myself, and my individuality. And when I have become a master my work will be sought in the same way that the work of other masters is sought, and I shall never feel my work is finished but shall strive to improve upon it until the Master calls me Home, and when that time shall come I shall leave a record which will cause men to say HE WAS A SUCCESS.
> "Make yourself these promises and then keep your word. Decide what you want to do, and, having decided, do it thoroughly. That is all there is to success in any line of human endeavor. And whatever you do, don't ever again say: "I don't know what to do."

It would be presumption on my part to attempt to improve upon Brother Bullock's reply, which I most heartily recommend to the careful consideration of all operators everywhere. The failure is usually a failure because he does not follow the line set forth in Brother Bullock's letter, and for no other reason under heaven. But let me tell you, my brothers, that, boiled down to a few words, Friend Bullock's reply, after all, simply reads, use your brains. The man who really uses his brains (always provided he has any to use) will do exactly what Bullock has advised, and he will do it completely or incompletely exactly in proportion to the mentality he possesses. If his mentality is of low order he will sneer at Bullock's advice, but if it is of high order he will like it, because in large degree he will be following along those lines. As to you being a "bum" because you become an operator, why that is pure, unadulterated piffle and nonsense. Just why the man who reproduces the art of Bernhardt, Pickford and Anita Stewart before thousands of people should be classed as a bum would need some explaining, methinks.

Re-Reason.

J. A. Merklein, Jersey City, N. J., writes:

> With regard to Brother Merriman's request, February 3 issue, I think I might be able to assist him, as I have experienced the same difficulty on my own machines. There are three possible reasons. First: I was a true believer in the oils put out especially for motion picture machines, until I found them to be either too heavy or too thin. Using an oil which is too heavy causes an unnecessary strain on the mechanism, as well as on the motor. I discovered that the oil I was using was too heavy by diluting it with a little kerosene, washing the machines thoroughly in kerosene, giving them a thorough drying and then applying the thinned oil drop by drop. Remember and don't flood your machine, as this in time collects dust, which mixes with the oil and creates a sort of grinding paste. My machine itself ran easier, and my troubles in this respect were over. When heavy oil is used there is a tendency to combine with the dust and dirt of the atmosphere into a paste, and that helps to make the machine run heavy. I use a light dynamo oil, and would suggest to Brother Merriman that he give it a trial. A quart of this only costs 35 cents (now) and lasts for a year, so you can imagine I use the oil in the right way. I don't believe in oiling the machine more than is really necessary. Our friend, the German, says too much is plenty, but in this case I think it should be plenty is too much. Second: Do not use oil on pedestal pulley, as the same runs off and leaves the shaft dry. Use vaseline, or, better still, cut a small groove in center of shaft, lengthwise, which acts as a feed for the pulley and keeps it well greased. I prefer using Leonard's Motor Grease, which I have found to be very satisfactory. Above all, however, remember to keep this shaft well greased, as it is an important part and travels fast. Third: Don't use anything but oil in the intermittent oil well, and keep it always one-fourth full of oil, which is sufficient to reach the geneva.
> And now about the slides Friend Merriman wants. I would suggest that he communicate with the Eastman Kodak Company, either at Rochester, N. Y., or 235 West 23d street, New York City. I make my own stock slides, and the Eastman people seem to be the only ones who can supply me with same.

All of which is duly passed along for the benefit of Brother Merriman and others, with the remark that, as this department has pointed out literally hundreds of times, the proper lubrication of the projector is an extremely important matter. It not only has to do with the ease of running, but with the life of a machine which costs several hundred dollars, and there is perhaps as much crass stupidity shown with regard to oiling projection machines as with any other one thing I know of.

Can't Do Without It.

T. S. Laidman, Birtle, Canada, encloses check for renewal of his subscription to the Moving Picture World, and says:

> Can't do without it, even though it is hard times. Would be greatly pleased if you would answer a few questions through the projection department. We have a 1911 Motiograph, and I cannot set the shutter so as to stop the flicker. Think the trouble is due to the gears being slightly worn. Do you think an outside shutter would help? Can flashers for sign lamps be home-made? Also, if so, can you give me the working principles? Have had to dig out for myself all I know about electricity, and what I do know is from experience and study of the department and the Handbook, which no real operator can do without. But you know there are real and "reel" operators, and I am afraid I am one of the latter, for I am by no means satisfied with my own work, though visitors from the city very kindly tell me that my picture is better than the average in the big towns. That, however, is because we have our own light plant and put on a bright picture. I have seen some work in Winnipeg houses which I considered as being far from good, and the worst of it is it is due to nothing in the world but carelessness, for the men certainly must know better.

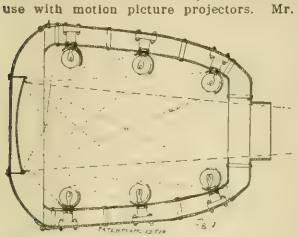
Well, Winnipeg, how about it? If the charge is true it seems to me the Winnipeg local ought to check up the work of its members, because careless work is not to the credit of the organization. Perhaps, however, Winnipeg managers don't supply their men with the necessary current and appliances to put on high class work, or maybe they force the operator to run to schedule, which means racing, or the opposite. Let that fair city stand forth and defend its good name. The fact that Brother Laidman is not satisfied with his own work speaks well for him. It is the self-satisfied bonehead who never gets anywhere.

Worn gears, Friend Laidman, would have nothing to do with flicker, but it could very easily set up travel ghost—white streaks up and down from white objects in the picture. This can be remedied in two ways. First: Have the worn gears replaced. Second: Add a little to the width of the shutter blade, but the latter process would set up additional tendency to flicker. A properly proportioned three-wing outside shutter would produce less flicker than the old inside shutter, but if you are using 60 cycle alternating current, you might run into other trouble by using the three-winger. The two-wing outside shutter is some better than the insider, but not much.

Yes, you can make a flasher for sign lamps, always provided you possess sufficient electrical knowledge and mechanical ingenuity. I am not so well posted on flasher work myself, and I don't know the modern way of doing it. It depends on a series of make and break contacts, usually supplied by a series of copper rings upon which brushes rest in such way that at certain points of the revolution of the "commutator" thus constructed the contact is broken and at other points it is remade. I would suggest that you write to one of the standard electrical journals asking for the name of a work giving details and diagrams of electric flashers. I am also writing a publisher asking him to send you the name of such a work if he knows of one.

New Illuminant.

Nicholas Sabo, of the Sabo Manufacturing Company, New York City, is the inventor and patentee of a new illuminant designed for use with motion picture projectors. Mr. Sabo is the designer of the Sabo projection lens, which was described in the department a short time ago. He is a young gentleman of more than ordinary ability, and, taking that fact into consideration, plus a "once-over" of the proposed lamp, which I have only seen in drawings and in a dismembered condition in Mr. Sabo's office, I believe it is at least of sufficient interest to justify a description in the department.



The lamphouse consists of two copper shells, which are riveted together as shown. Between the two shells are arranged, in three rows, the lamp sockets. Twenty small bulbs are used, each lamp being provided with reflectors designed to reflect the rays toward a big concave mirror, from which the light will be again reflected this time toward the projection machine aperture. Figure 1 is a longitudinal medial section of the lamphouse. The lamps are connected in series; don't overlook that important point, which, however, has the disadvantage that if one lamp is out of order none will burn. For this reason the lamphouse is provided with a testing device. Each lamp socket is provided, besides the usual contacts, with a pair of contacts, which, through insulating material extends outside the outside shell. The testing device consists of a handle of insulating material and a plate of conducting material. A circularly arranged rail is used, which is fastened to the outer shell, upon which the tester is mounted on a block.

Now, if the handle be turned around the rail, it will touch the outside of every lamp in turn.

When the testing device touches the broken lamp, all the lamps (except the broken one), will light up, and then the burned-out lamp is located.

Although this testing device detects the broken lamp in less time than is required to describe it, no house could afford to stop the performance for even that short space, therefore three complete lamphouses are mounted on a stand (see Figure 4 and Figure 5, which are respectively side and end views).

In case one bank of lamps gets out of order, by pressing a handle another lamphouse is instantly brought into place of the defective one. The lamphouses are mounted around a slate base, on which two switches are placed, one on the top for the lamphouse which illuminates the aperture, the other (double throw) for the testing purpose only, to detect the broken lamps. The whole lamphouse is cooled by a device giving 20 pounds air pressure. The lamphouse will be placed on the market in the very near future. It is intended to manufacture only one size, but with different capacity for different conditions.

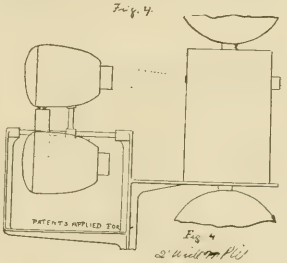
Type A. 20 lamps, 2 amperes, equal to 40 amperes. Consumption and cost of electric current, including change of broken lamps, about 35 cents per day of 10 hours.

Type B. 20 lamps, 3 amperes, equal to 60 amperes. Consumption and cost of electric current, including change of broken lamps, about 35 cents per day of 10 hours.

Type C. 20 lamps, 4 amperes, equal to 80 amperes. Consumption and cost of electric current, including change of broken lamps, about 50 cents per day of 10 hours.

Type D. 20 lamps, 5 amperes, equal to 100 amperes. Consumption and cost of electric current, including change of broken lamps, about 60 cents per day of 10 hours. Average life of lamps 300 to 350 hours.



The First Time.

H. H. Cole, Johnson City, N. Y., says:

> This is the first time I have written the department. The other day I went down to Binghamton, N. Y., to look things over and examine into the merits of projection in that city. Binghamton has an operators' union, but from what I saw the organization is not doing its duty in checking up the work of its members. At the Court theater I found the operator outside, and was by that gentleman treated with decidedly scant courtesy. At the Peoples theater the light was off the screen twice in a period of five minutes; also there was a blue ghost in the center of the screen. At the Star and Symphony I found the best projection.

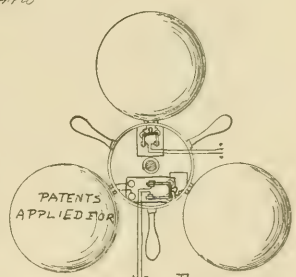


Fig. 5.

Well, this is a rather meager report, but I am printing it because it does not contain anything very radical, and if Binghamton operators are not performing their duty to the managers and the moving picture industry, perhaps a little jolting will help to wake them up. If they are, and this report is wrong, they are welcome to space to disprove its correctness. The picture shows Mr. Cole standing, presumably, in front of the Johnson City theater.

Transformer Dope.

New York City makes some very caustic, and I am sorry to say largely deserved, remarks about the conduct of the meetings of Local 306, of which he has been a member during the past six years, and says:

> Here is something I don't understand, and that is the relation between the turns of the primary and the turns of the secondary of an operating room transformer (economizer). For all my study, and I do study hard, too, I am stuck on that proposition. I utterly fail to understand it. I have always understood the difference in construction between a step-up and step-down transformer consisted in the secondary of the step-up having more turns than the primary, according to how high a voltage on the secondary line is desired, and with the step-down the opposite (correct.—Ed.). As I understand it, if by mistake the operator should connect the lamp terminals to the line and the line terminals to the lamp of a 110 volt economizer, he would have a step-up transformer instead of a step-down. I have studied the reply to Question 163 but fail to see any solution. I also studied your reply to the question in April 10, 1916, issue, but it don't go far enough and I cannot seem to get the idea. My opponent claims that adding more turns to the primary only will increase the resistance, as in the case of a rheostat, and so decrease the amperage and voltage at the arc. The Handbook seems to back me up on the description of the principle of the transformer, and back up my opponent on the description of each transformer, as per pages 350 and 351. (The Handbook is right. You have not yet quite grasped the idea.—Ed.) Now please answer the following questions: If the primary of the transformer has 90 turns, 110 volt supply, drawing 25 amperes, and the secondary of the same transformer has 30 turns, how many amperes will we get at the arc? If the primary has 100 turns and the secondary 30 turns, how many amperes at the arc? If the primary has 110 turns, the secondary 30 turns, how many amperes at the arc, each time taking 25 amperes, at 110 volts?

If a transformer primary has 90 turns and the secondary of the same transformer has 30 turns, then the ratio of transformation would be 30 ÷ 90 = .333, which means that the secondary voltage would be approximately one-third that of the primary, whereas the amperage would be three times as much. In this particular instance it figures out about 37 volts and 75 amperes for the secondary. This is, of course, neglecting the loss in the transformer itself. You can figure any step-down transformer in exactly the same way, whereas a step-up transformer would figure precisely the opposite.

Examples 1 and 2 are so nearly alike that it is hardly worth while going through the motion of figuring No. 2 out.

However, in example No. 3, we have a ratio of transformation equal to 30 ÷ 110, or, .272, so that the secondary voltage would be equal to 110 x .272, or practically 30 volts, whereas the secondary amperage would be, neglecting the loss in the transformer itself, 25 x 110 = 2,750 ÷ 30 equal approximately 92.

An Explanation.

C. May, Jersey City, N. J., says:

This is the first time I have tried to answer one of the department conundrums. I recently picked up an old Moving Picture World, July 15, 1916, issue, and noted that J. H. Pooley, Toledo, Ohio, had some trouble with his arc, the trouble being in the nature of explosions. This is parallel to a recent experience of mine when I was out in Jamaica, L. I. In my case it was a matter of the spotlight and the moving picture arc both being connected in the same economizer. In my opinion the cause of these explosions, which would begin every time I struck my arc, and last about a minute, was nothing in the world but rank carelessness. It consisted in having the carbons on machine No. 1 close together, though not frozen, and the switch was closed. In attempting to strike an arc at machine No. 2, if the switch on machine No. 1 was open, there was absolutely no trouble at all. These explosions were like a bunch of Chinese firecrackers. The accompanying sketch explains itself. Brother Pooley probably did not mention the fact that he had a spotlight working in conjunction with his moving picture arc.

In this connection note that you only need about 15 to 25 amperes on the spotlight, whereas you need 40 or 50 on the moving picture arc. According to my observation two arcs will not work in harmony—anyway not on a Hallberg economizer. I hope this solves Friend Pooley's problem; also that you find no difficulty in deciphering this sketch.

Your sketch is not very plain, but I believe you have lamp H wired to the permanent tap and the high amperage tap, whereas lamp J is wired to the permanent tap and the low amperage tap. Now just exactly what would happen if the switch of lamp H were closed and the carbons making imperfect electric contact when the arc of lamp J is struck, I am free to say I don't know, but I cannot see why there should be anything in the nature of an explosion. I pass this along to our correspondents, and, also would like to hear from Friend Hallberg as to his opinion as to how this particular thing would work under the conditions named.

Leo Peterson, of Peterson & Conch, lessees of the Isis and Dreamland theaters, Belle Fourche, S. D., asks certain questions which must be answered by mail, and says:

Our conditions here are as good as we can make them, and we are trying every day to improve. We have been recovering from a hard competition fight, and can now afford a D. C. generator. We have two machines, one a Rower's Six B, and one an American Standard. After seeing the Simplex I am to a certain extent favorable to it, one reason being its silent running. Which machine do you think is best? (Brother Peterson, do you want me to get wiped off the map entirely? Having due regard for my personal safety, I refuse to be interviewed.—Ed.) If you purchased a Simplex would you get the S lamp? Our service is the best we can buy. Paramount, Triangle, Metro, Greater Vitagraph, with "Gloria's Romance" as a serial. We use a five piece orchestra, except with special features, at which time it is increased. We have two young fellows doing the operating, both of whom have the Handbook, Hawkins' Electrical Guide, and take the World. They are real students, always trying to get higher and increase their knowledge. I do not think, outside the professional union man, they could be beat. Our projection is good, though not the best, and we spare no expense in the endeavor to improve it. Recently we had a compliment from a party who had seen "Bugle Call" in Buffalo, N. Y. He said our light and projection was much better and that he could hardly realize there could be such a difference.

As secretary of the Black Hills Exhibitors' League, I wrote the World to have you come this way on your trip. There are seven towns in this section, with ten shows all up to date, and the League would very much like to have you come. Do your best for us.

It had been first arranged to have me go from Denver to Deadwood, but the trip was so long, considering the comparative small number of shows in that section, that we were compelled to give it up.

I like your letter, Friend Peterson, very much, indeed. It bears the hallmarks of progress. It is to your credit that you are putting on better projection, according to an unbiased witness, than the large eastern city of Buffalo could show. That does not sound overly good for the Buffalo exhibitors and operators. I wish I would meet you boys personally, but I fear it is out of the question this time. My compliments to your operators. They are the kind who will succeed, and, incidentally, help you succeed.

Handling Film.

J. C. Bubb, New York City, says:

Please send me all available information concerning the care of film. I desire to know about the best cleaning solutions and mechanical devices used in handling film.

First, if you have a copy of the Handbook, I would refer you to page 192 to 208 inclusive, particularly to "Where to Keep the Films," page 203, "Moistening Dry Film," page 204, and "Cleaning the Film," pages 206 and 208. I could not undertake to give you the information you seek with regard to "all the mechanical devices used in handling film," because there are a great many of them, two cleaners being described and illustrated on pages 206 and 207 of the Handbook. The Mortimer is one of the oldest mechanical cleaners, and is really a well-made and efficient little device. Also there is the Leland Film Cleaner, which is very similar in its action to the Mortimer. There are perhaps half a dozen cleaners on the market operating, all operating on a very similar principle.

Film should always, if possible, be kept in a cool, fairly moist place, or if kept in a metal container there should be a compartment therein in which to keep a sponge moist and with water. Any oil on the surface of the film should be promptly cleaned off, using a soft, dry cloth. Broken sprocket holes should be carefully notched out, splices should be examined every day the film is used, and all loose ones carefully remade.

As to liquids for cleaning film, why I am not sure whether or not there are any now being sold. There was a very good cleaner made by the Githical Chemical Company, New York City, which may or may not still be on the market. I don't know.

WHATEVER system is used, great care should be taken to protect all pipes by insulating material and radiators by means of wire mesh screens so that it is impossible for film to come in contact with the hot surface. Heating by open fires, stoves or furnaces should never be permitted in the film industry. Torches used by plumbers, electricians or others should never be allowed in a room with exposed film.

Smoking where motion picture film is used is criminal. Whatever film is handled or in any of the scenic parts of business, smoking should be prohibited. If necessary, a separate smoking room should be provided in the large establishments. Smoking in offices separated by fireproof partitions from manufacturing or exchange rooms is permissible. It should be cause for instant dismissal for any employee to be found smoking where film is handled. Superiors should not set a bad example. "No Smoking" signs should be liberally posted in conspicuous places. The following sign is recommended by the National Fire Protection Association:

THIS COMPANY POSITIVELY PROHIBITS SMOKING.

Why? Should this plant burn, employees as well as the company would be the losers. Employment here would cease.

NO SMOKING!

Should you see anyone smoking on these premises, you are authorized to notify him that it is against this company's rules. It is to your interest to help us enforce this rule.

State and municipal laws often require a particular wording of such signs.

The ordinary parlor match is one of the most treacherous and dangerous causes of fire. Matches which are pulled out of a workman's pocket along with a handkerchief, keys, or other objects may fall unobserved upon the floor and be trod upon by the next passerby. The only remedy is to use safety matches. Matches should not be carried in any of the workrooms where film is exposed.

In many of his visits to motion picture plants the writer has observed matches upon the floor and in corners. Many of these matches were burned and were probably thrown away lighted. The danger of matches is not generally recognized in studios, which contain very inflammable materials such as costumes and scenery.

Chemicals such as cements, gasoline, oils, etc., should be stored only in safety storage cans. Collodion, amyl acetate and other similar inflammable cement or liquid should not be kept in rooms in which film is being handled, in greater quantities than the quantity required for each day. Experimental chemical work, owing to the danger of explosion, acid leaks, etc., should not be performed except in isolated rooms. Lockers, film cabinets, and vaults should never have the above chemicals stored in them, and further, oil paints and turpentine have no place under a bench or table in property storages or studios.

The attainment of good housekeeping conditions rests largely with the executive. His first duty is to properly instruct employees as to what is expected. The employees having been instructed as to the various proper and improper practices must next be required to live up to the rules and regulations.

Inspections by the management, a foreman, or a committee of employees should follow from this time on at frequent and preferably irregular intervals. Such inspections, which need take but little time, will be found to give extremely beneficial results, these inspections will serve to check bad practices that creep in and to maintain the standard required.

It is suggested that each room have a foreman or person in charge who will be held strictly responsible for the housekeeping in that room. It will then devolve upon that person to see that the workmen are instructed as to their duties in housekeeping practices and constantly supervise and see that orders are obeyed.

Keep Your Lens Clean.

It is a most important thing in motion picture photography to have a perfectly dust-free lens. Any particles of dust on the surface mean that the rays of light passing through the lens are interfered with. Many an amateur, who reads the injunction to keep his lens perfectly clean, attempts to do so without due care, and scratches the highly-polished surface. To prevent this, the following rules should be observed: Take a clean sheet of white drawing-paper, and lay it on the table. Take the lens carefully apart and dust each component on each side with a fine camel-hair brush. Now pour into a clean graduating-dish the following:

Distilled water	2 ounces
Alcohol	1 ounce
Nitric acid	3 drops

Mix this solution well, and dip a tuft of filtering-cotton in it. Rub this on both sides of the lens. Dry with a piece of soft linen, and then wash over the sides with a tuft of filtering-cotton dipped in water to which a few drops of ammonia has been added.

Now polish with a clean and very soft chamois cloth, kept only for this purpose. (When this cloth is not in use, keep in a clean paper or cloth bag.) After polishing, dust once more with the camel-hair brush, and carefully replace. This is far more satisfactory than the usual wiping with a silk handkerchief.

Focusing With Color Filters.

In using color filters with the motion picture camera it should be borne in mind that the use of a filter before the lens, changes the focus slightly.

When using a color filter, therefore, the camera should be focused with the filter in place. If the filter interferes with focusing a dummy filter of clear glass of the same thickness as the color filter may be substituted.

In the ordinary use of color filters this dodge may not be necessary, as the strength of light required for photographing on ordinary stock when using a correcting filter must be very great or there will not be enough light transmitted to give a properly timed negative. There are cases, however, when using panchromatic stock, that the filters used are so dense that it is difficult to descern the sharpness of the image with the filter in place.

In such cases unless the exact allowance to be made for the thickness of the filter is accurately known, it is of great convenience in obtaining a sharp focus to have a dummy to use, after which the filter can be placed in the position occupied by the dummy.

Motion Picture Patents.

B1385-1915. A. W. Kingston.

Cinematograph View-Finder. The invention consists of a miniature camera, to be fixed to the side of the cinematograph camera, and provided with a lens in a helical mount. In fusing an object with this finder-camera the position of the lever operating the lens shows on a scale the distance of the camera, and the focus of the main camera can be set accordingly. Moreover, the focusing screen of the finder-camera is caused to slide across the axis of the lens as the lens is moved, and the finder-camera thus caused to show the same view as the main camera.

At Hiram's Home Town

Moving Picture Men Help Paramount's President Open Portland's Baseball Season—Receive Royal Welcome.

SOMETIME ago Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, thought it would be a good idea to own a baseball club. What gave him that idea was the fact that interest in the game in his home town, Portland, Me., had lagged during the previous season and the Portland franchise of the Eastern League was in danger of being lost to that town. Naturally, Hiram came to the rescue, being a baseball fan himself, and took up that white man's burden, for a burden it usually is in the minor league cities. He bought the club and the date for the opening game was set for Friday, May 11.

Of course, Hiram might have slipped up to Portland for that event, witnessed the getaway and hustled back to New York to absorb a few film companies and no one would have given the Portland ball team or Hi's home town a thought; but it happened that he did not do it just that way. This is what Hi did. He hired a New Haven and Hartford train, rounded up a lot of his moving picture associates and friends and took them along with him for a good time at his expense.

If a bunch of busy men ever had a better time than did Hi Abram's baseball party we haven't heard of it. You can well understand that in these days of fighting legislation and other adverse conditions that motion picture men are busy, but, for all that, about seventy-five of them were persuaded to help start that Portland team on the way to a successful season. Leaving New York at 12 o'clock Thursday noon, they reached Portland at 11 o'clock that evening, after a pleasant run, and were escorted to the Congress Square Hotel, which house Hiram Abrams seemed to own, for the occasion at least.

The festivities commenced on Friday, and after what happened we venture to say that Portland would not be a healthy place for any one inclined to say unkind things about Hiram Abrams. No; he didn't swell around the town distributing largess to the populace; nothing like that. You see, he had grown up in that town—a "blue nose" among the blue noses—most of those old boys remembered him as a school boy and many of them had gone to school with him; thus it happened, when they heard that Hiram was going to bring a lot of picture men with him for the opening, they got together and showed the visitors what they thought of him.

It was Portland's Rotary Club, which means the leading business men of the town, that took matters in it's own hands. The members, with automobiles, met the visitors at the station when the train arrived; again in the morning of the following day the Rotary Club conducted a sightseeing trip about the town and vicinity, which ended in a luncheon at the Falmouth Hotel, tendered by the Rotarians and attended by their wives and daughters as well. DeForest H. Perkins, president of the club, Superintendent of the Public Schools of Portland, presided on this occasion. There was no time for elaborate ceremonies, but the reception given to Hiram Abrams was the heartiest and the most sincere we have heard in many days. It was worth going far to witness.

There was a parade headed by a detachment of police, the local band, Mayor Chapman of Portland, and the players, followed by the visitors and citizens. Fully three hundred automobiles were in line and 20,000 people lined the streets. At the ball ground it was said that 8,000 persons passed the gates. The opening ceremonies consisted of raising the Stars and Stripes by Roscoe Arbuckle and Norma Talmadge, and Mayor Chapman presented Mr. Abrams with a gold-headed cane.

The game was won by the visiting club from Lawrence, Mass., by a score of 6 to 2; but this must be the proper form, since Portland won at Lawrence the day before.

As a fitting finish to the day's festivities Manager Garaty, of the Portland Club, gave a dinner to Mr. Abrams and his guests at the Elks' Club. The dinner was splendidly served and the diners did full justice to it. Judge Joseph E. F. Conolly, of Maine's Superior Court, presided at a brief gabfest that followed, at which Mayor Chapman paid an unusual tribute to Mr. Abrams. Jesse Lasky and Roscoe Arbuckle were the other speakers.

From the Elks' Club the party hurried to the waiting train, which landed them in New York Saturday morning, happy and pleased over their trip to Hiram's home town.

Among those who accompanied Mr. Abrams were Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Walter E. Greene, William L. Sherry, Walter Mooré, Eugene Zukor, Ralph Kohn, Marcus Loew, E. M. Gattle, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schenck (Norma Talmadge), Miss Constance Talmadge, Miss Sophie Bernard, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. von Herberg and infant daughter, of Portland, Ore.; Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle, Marshall Neilan, B. S. Moss, Paul M. Herzog, Edward A. McManus, Joe Finn, of Nicholas-Finn Agency, Chicago; John Considine, John C. Flinn, Lyman O. Fiske, Charles Condon, C. F. Zittel, Jack Horan, T. O. Eltonhead, James L. Hoff and others in and out of the picture business.

The managing director of the occasion was Charles E. Moyer, of Paramount, and a better conducted excursion we have seldom attended. Everything needed was in the right place when it was wanted and the program was carried out without a hitch, for Moyer seemed to know what to do and he "done" it.

COLONEL BRADY, UNIVERSAL'S SCENARIO CHIEF

Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, soldier, playwright and author of several successful novels, has left for Universal City, Cal., to take charge of the Universal scenario department. Col. Brady has had a distinguished career, both as a soldier and a writer. He served in the United States Army for fourteen years, and during the Spanish-American War he had charge of the Bureau of Information, and was chief signal officer attached to the staff of General Wood. He enlisted as a private and rose from the ranks by sheer ability. He was in command of the force of men who rebuilt the telegraph and telephone lines in Cuba. He resigned from the regular army in 1899, but, still anxious to keep in touch with military affairs, accepted a commission with the Twenty-third Regiment, National Guard of New York. He devoted himself to literary pursuits following his retirement from the service, and is the author of many magazine articles. His work on the Secret Service in two volumes, entitled "Tales of the Telegraph," has had wide circulation. His latest novel, "The Strange Case of Mary Sherman," will be published in the fall.

FAIRBANKS USING STAGE METHODS.

Contrary to the general rule of mumbling words that have no immediate bearing on the action of the scene, Douglas Fairbanks has instituted in his company the idea of rehearsing the scenario just as though it was being prepared for the speaking stage. The various members of the cast, in their assigned costumes, speak the lines of the scenes with the same dramatic endeavor in the way of articulation as they would for a stage producer.

It is "Doug's" contention that in this way an actor, fully realizing the relationship of his part to the development of the story, can do his work with a great deal more feeling and appreciation than if he were merely told what was expected of him from scene to scene.

FRANK E. WOODS ON WAY EAST.

Accompanied by his wife, Frank E. Woods, who has been responsible in a large measure for the high grade of Triangle-Fine-Arts pictures, left Los Angeles on Saturday, May 5, on an automobile-railroad tour that will bring him to New York within a short time. The immediate destination of Mr. Woods and his wife was San Francisco. From that point Mr. Woods intended going by rail to Portland, Seattle, Minneapolis, and Chicago, at which latter point he will make a two-day stop. Mr. Woods' future plans are indefinite. He has received several propositions, and on reaching New York will sift these. It is several years since he has been in the East.

Raymond Hitchcock, the well known musical comedy star, has been hard at work the last week or more in the studio of the Emerald Motion Picture Company in "The High Cost of Living," which the Emerald company is producing for the Follies of the Week company. The Emerald studios have become exceedingly busy the last few weeks, the huge studio floor being a scene of intense activity.

EMERALD MAKING A RECRUITING PICTURE.

Cameramen from the Emerald Motion Picture Company, Chicago, under the direction of Frederick Ireland, were in Milwaukee May 6 shooting Troop A of the Wisconsin National Guard. According to Director Ireland, they secured a very fine charge of the troop which they will use in "The Slacker," the big recruiting picture which this company is making under the auspices of the Wisconsin Defense League.

Richardson Crosses Lone Star State

Drops Off at Austin, Houston, Galveston, San Antonio and El Paso—Also Makes Trip Into Mexico

AUSTIN is one of the older cities of Texas; also it is the capital of the Lone Star State. The red pile of granite which houses its seat of government forms an impressive spectacle at the head of its main street. At the station, Brother John O'Brien, president of Local Union 205; George Rowley, secretary of 205; John Carpenter, member of 205, the manager of the Majestic Theater, and R. W. McEwan, who had come down from Taylor to hear the lecture, awaited the writer. They put him up at the Elks' Club, evidence, I suppose, of the fact that they think Richardson has horns.

Conditions in Austin, from the projection point of view, are none the best. The operating rooms, or such of them as I saw, leave considerable to be desired. In one I entered by way of what seemed to be a square knothole in the floor. It might pass muster for a slim man, but the writer came very near getting stuck—and that's no idle dream. In one operating room I found two Power's Six machines in such utterly wretched condition that I could pull the flywheel endwise more than one-sixteenth of an inch. Also the bearings were so badly worn that I could raise the flywheel up vertically by as much as one-thirty-second of an inch.

Such a condition is something more than outrageous. Films having a physical value of $125 a reel are projected by those almost total wrecks of machines. It is not to be expected that the screen result is going to be anything to brag about, and thus the work of the producer is rendered of far less value and the art of the artist is shamefully abused. Of what use to pay a player $50,000 a year if the reproduction of her art upon the screen is not going to be accomplished by means which will allow that art to be reproduced at its full value? And it is all so utterly foolish.

Given an operator of even ordinary ability, and two new machines, I make the absolutely unqualified assertion that those machines can be kept in perfect mechanical condition for considerably less than 20 cents a day. Yet we find managers so utterly unbusinesslike that they try to save this trifling sum, and do it not only at the expense of their own box office, through the deterioration of the excellence of results on their own screen, but also at the expense of unnecessary injury to highly valuable property belonging to another man. Is this good business? Is it ordinary common sense? Isn't it, as a mater of fact, rather stupid? In this house, too, the picture was altogether too large—entirely out of proportion to the size of the house.

In the Crescent Theater the operating room was very good, but there should be hoods installed over those openings in the top of the front wall in such manner that they will, while allowing the free circulation of air, exclude the daylight which now floods the room during the afternoon. The clock in this theater is very bad, and there is an altogether brilliant exit light both at the right and the left of the screen.

In the Texas Theater there is an excellent operating room, except for an alarm clock floor of iron which snaps and cracks as the operator walks across it, with a sound something like an overworked Gatling gun. It's a cinch no one will sneak into that room at night with burglarous intent. The picture in this theater is too large. The front wall of the operating room is not black, as it should be. When I entered the theater the operator was projecting slides, some of which were highly "decorated" with impressions of his greasy fingers—crude work, very crude. Also, at the end of the reel he ran the film clear through, and flashed the white light on the screen. I would humbly suggest that we don't expect any such stunts as that in this advanced and enlightened day, even from the operator in Squeedunk Center. Such work is not a credit to Local Union 205.

In the Queen Theater the operating room is small, the walls light in color, and the lights were burning; also the observation ports were about 4 by 5 inches in size. There was a discoloration of the light on the screen. Why wouldn't there be, under such conditions as this. Yes, taken by and large, there very decidedly is room for improvement in matters projectional in the beautiful city of Austin. The improvement will, however, at least so far as the operator be concerned, be made. Of that I am reasonably certain, because whatever else may be their shortcomings, Local Union

Banquet Tendered F. H. Richardson by Austin, Tex., Managers and Operators.

205, as a body, is progressive. This is proven by the fact that just as soon as the organization heard I was contemplating this trip, it wrote demanding that I include Austin, offering to pay any expense which might be necessary in order to have me do so. This proves that the union wants to learn and to improve the knowledge of its members. I therefore repeat, the Austin men are live wires, who will improve, and in due course of time give good account of their stewardship.

At 11.00, a surprisingly large meeting forgathered around a banquet table in one of Austin's leading restaurants, and listened with close attention, until 2.30 a. m., to the matters we had to lay before them. In addition to the theatrical people, there were present Oscar Kunz, fire marshal, and C. L. Woodward, chief of the Austin Fire Department, both of whom remained for the entire lecture. After the lecture was over the writer was kept busy for some time shaking hands with the operators and managers and answering questions relating to projection.

I almost forgot one important thing, namely, the dinner I had out at the home of Secretary Rowley. Friend Rowley is owner or possessor of the following property: (a) one really beautiful home; (b) one wife, who, aside from being some considerable wife, is a cook who would make the chef of the Waldorf Astoria hustle to catch; (c) one kid, of male persuasion, who is the real goods, and (d) one Henry Ford drinker of gasoline. Next morning I went over to the capital building, climbed up 280 steps into the capital dome, where I looked literally all over kingdom come. There were two colored gemmen up there at the same time, and one remarked to the other: "Mah Gawd, Sam, if you ever fell out of here, they wouldn't even find the grease spot where you lit."

The Chicago of the Southwest.

Houston, Texas, claims to be, and I think is, the "Chicago of the Southwest." Draped on over and around the choo choo wagon the welcoming committee had fetched to the depot, were L. W. Andler, president; R. L. Vander, business agent, and Tom Clemmens and Leslie Yates, members Local Union 273, and Mr. Becker, a friend of "the boys." The Houston men are of the kind we dub jolly good fellows. They impart to the visitor the idea: The city is yours, old man; go to it! If there's anything you want other than what you see, just ask for it.

I saw but little of the Houston theaters, but what I did see impressed me, by comparison, favorably. I am told, however, Houston's greatest sin lies in racing the films, and if that is true it more than offsets excellence in other things, because no matter how excellent other conditions may be, if you are going to "shoot 'em through," the screen results will be worse than bad, and the damage to films will be very serious. It is possibly strange that otherwise intelligent theater managers will commit such an obviously stupid blunder; that they will render of no avail the art of the artist, and nullify all the efforts of the producer by running to an utterly impossible schedule; running seven reels, or even eight in the time necessary to run six, if we are to get the full value of the work of the artists.

Those Houston operating rooms I saw were very good as to size and had plenty of ventilation of a kind, but conditions could be improved by the addition of a coat of black paint to the walls. The auditorium lighting was in all cases susceptible of more or less improvement. In the Liberty, for instance, the two front panels should not be illuminated, and the clock, while not so bad as most, should have a black dial with white figures and hands. In the other houses I saw, auditorium lighting needs a lot of intelligent attention.

The lecture was in the T. M. A. rooms. There was a good attendance of operators and a rather poor attendance of managers. After the lecture a bountiful Dutch lunch was served, but the writer was kept so busy shaking hands and saying "Glad you liked it," that his eating operations were seriously hampered.

Good luck to the Houston men! Like all too many others, they need to study their business much more closely, but they mean well, and will, I am sure, render a good account of themselves before the story is all told. I will remember the auto ride quite a while, but the picture of the yellow car was a double exposure and a faulty film to boot. Guess a kind Providence watched over us after all!

Two Port Arthur operators, W. A. Barth, Pearce's Theater (not now owned by Pearce), and L. Stagg, People's Theater, Port Arthur, had all the expense of the trip paid that they might hear the lecture, and it is more than 200 miles from Port Arthur to Houston and return, too. The Pearce and People's theaters of Port Arthur must have live, wide-awake managers. I venture the assertion they will get value received for their investment.

While in Houston I inspected the as yet rather embryonic plant of the Master Motion Picture Company, the president and director-general of which is Harold J. Binney, who was with the Keystone for three years as director. Also he was at the head of the Pacific Producing Company, Los Angeles, which released the Sunshine films.

The new company will release through the Mutual, and expects to begin production by or before June first.

En route Houston to Austin, at Giddings, a hand was thrust through the car window and a voice inquired: "Is this Mr. Richardson?" Having admitted the crime and shook the hand, I found it belonged to Mr. Howard, owner and manager of the Giddings photoplay theater, who, studying my route as published, presumed that I would be on that train and came down to say hello, good luck, good bye.

Galveston, Texas.

The City of the Sea Wall is not, most emphatically, not draped around over a lot of hills. It does not "nestle like a jewel at the foot of," etc., etc. Nay, Elizabeth, it lies so flat that the surface of a buckwheat pancake is rough and uneven by comparison. The only things having altitude are the buildings and the ideas of its citizens—h'm, yes, pardon me, and the prices of those things necessary to living. Your train reaches Galveston via a long viaduct across an arm of the sea—always provided a storm has not temporarily removed the said causeway, or section thereof, and having passed this, Galveston just sort of absorbs the train, as it were.

The boys—boys is good, the lowest about 5 foot—were at the station, and soon our six pairs of limbs were thrust under a table and I was listening to the joys and griefs of Galveston operators, as set forth by J. C. Worsham, president; A. P. Talbott, vice-president, and J. E. Hogue, secretary, and J. J. Fraude and H. T. Eaves, members Local Union 305.

From what I observed projection affairs in the Gulf City stand in urgent need of considerable fixing. Some of the operating rooms I visited could only be called such by courtesy. Hole-in-the-wall, or gopher burrow would really fit better. One, the Crystal, vaudeville, is eight feet front to back by six feet wide (two machines), with a six-foot ceiling, in the center of which a ten-inch beam drops down, so that it is "low bridge" every time the operator goes from one machine to the other—or run imminent risk of braining himself. The machines (two Power Sixes with the dinkey little lamphouses and old style lamp lacking proper adjustments) have the front end of their wooden tables resting on a shelf, and their rear ends perched precariously on an up-ended board, evidently taken from the lid of a packing box. This "operating room" (God save the mark), besides containing two machines, has a G. E. mercury rectifier, in the left far corner. Fine!

In justice let it be said the house has just lately changed hands. But this does not wholly excuse, for it is a rank injustice to the motion picture industry to project high class modern photoplays under such outrageous conditions for even one day. What should be done, do you ask? Well I would suggest the management follow Charlie Umphrey's plan. Umphrey was a locomotive engineer on the H. & St. Joe Railway many years ago. One engine, the 85, persistently gave trouble, so Umphrey was finally sent out on her with orders to report everything necessary to put the engine in first class condition. At the end of the run he wrote in the roundhouse repair book this cryptic order: "Jack up the whistle and run a new engine under—quick!" In this case I would substitute "exhaust fan" for whistle.

In the Queen Theater I saw something which impressed me favorably. The keyboard of the pipe organ was in the upper left box, the back three-fourths of the front of which is draped with a heavy curtain. Fine! Friend organist has excellent view of the screen, and can have all the light his soul desires, without doing either the picture or the eyes of the audience the slightest harm. The Queen has a good operating room, but it was flooded with light. This was surprising, because operator H. T. Eaves seems to be a man of brains, who studies his business. Equipment: two Powers Six B and G. E. Rectifier. S. T. McDonald manages the Queen. The clock and exit lights of this house are bad. M. H. Snow, operator, Chrystal No. 1, has invented a very clever first-run film lubricator, which I may describe later on in the department

The lecture was well attended, and was followed by a Dutch (not German) lunch, both the lecture and the lunch being pronounced satisfactory by and to those present. At Galveston I received a letter from Friend Wife saying it was cold and snowing in New York, and here I was parading around without a vest, fanning my heated brow and rubbering at palms and blooming flowers. Cold? Huh. Waiter, bring an iced tea, two ice cream sodas and a tall glass of ice water. And waiter, hurry!

City of the Alamo.

It is decidedly disagreeable to be compelled to say other than kind words concerning a city as beautiful as San Antonio, particularly with a handsome eighteen-year-old stenographer threatening to bite me if I even so much as hint that San Antonio lies more than seven feet from the portals of Heaven. The truth is the truth, however, even though it may hurt, and in this fair city matters projection are, by comparison, very bad indeed. I am informed by several who are in position to know that there are "operators" receiving as little as $6 and $7 a week. Imagine, if you can, placing the reproduction of the art of great players in the hands of a $7 a week man for reproduction on the screen. It is absurd. But this is not all, for it remained to San Antonio to show me absolutely the worst projection installation I have ever looked at, and let me tell you, gentlemen, that is going some, for I have looked at literally thousands.

Here is what I found in the Empire Theater, San Antonio, to which I paid 20 cents admission. Remember, the Empire is an 1,800-seat house, and a very good one, too, insofar as its auditorium be concerned. Its auditorium lighting is not at all bad, and its admission prices are 20 cents for the entire lower floor and, if I remember rightly, 10c. and 15c. for the balconies. And here is what all this depends upon for its box office income. The operating room is at the very top of the second balcony, not less, I think, than forty feet above the screen. The interior walls of the operating room are almost white. Ventilation is by means of an open window at the top of the rear wall, and in the left hand front corner sets a G. E. mercury arc rectifier, practically its unprotected tube flooding the room with a glare of green light. The observation ports are too narrow, and in front of the left hand port is a ceiling fan located so that the operator must actually look at his picture through the whirling blades of the fan.

There is no vent flue—merely the window before named. This means that should there be a fire, and the wind happened to be in the wrong direction, the smoke would most likely be blown down and directly into the auditorium. And now here is something that should receive the attention of the San Antonio Health Department. The operator is confined to the operating room, so I am informed, from 6 to 11 p. m., without relief, or even a chance to quit the room for even a moment, and there are no toilet conveniences, except an open metal receptacle, presumably provided by the kind-hearted management. And all this, mind you, is in an 1,800-seat house, charging 20 cents for its lower floor. The only one single decent thing about the whole installation is the size of the operating room, which is ample, though none too large.

One of the proprietors of this house was interviewed by me, gave me his word and shook hands on it, that he would be present at the lecture. He was not there. If any city in this land of the supposed to be free needed a lecture on projection, it was San Antonio, but, as is usual where such utterly impossible conditions prevail, the San Antonio exhibitor and manager was conspicuous by his absence in the Pearl Theater at 11 p. m. Most of the operators were there, but there were only a very few managers.

Charles Bremming, Treasurer San Antonio Local Union 407.

I have used some pretty plain language in describing conditions in San Antonio, but it is time for plain language. The San Antonio manager has no moral right to outrage the art of the artist, and lessen the value of the work of the producer, to say nothing of the damage done to the property owned by the film exchange by setting up such utterly impossible projection conditions as I saw in that city. The idea that the theater manager is privileged to run things at his own sweet will, and according to his own individual whim, is just a little bit out of date. There are too many other interests directly involved in the method used in reproduction of the photoplay upon the screen.

The theater manager cannot injure the result upon his own screen without directly injuring the moving picture industry itself, the producer, the artist and the public, and I make the unqualified assertion that he is doing each and every one of these several things when he employs anything less than a thoroughly competent operator, and I think the proposition that an operator who can, in a city like San Antonio, be employed at $7 a week, or even at $15 a week, is not a competent operator is not open to question, or even to argument. I believe also that the setting up of operators' room conditions which make high class work on the screen an utter impossibility is a thing the theater management has absolutely no moral right to do.

It is not pleasant to be compelled to talk thus, but the interests involved are too weighty. Millions upon millions of dollars of capital is invested in productions, the value of which will be seriously reduced if they be not properly and artistically reproduced upon the screen of the theater. Under these conditions who shall dispute the fact that the theater manager owes a moral right, if not a legal one, to reproduce those works of art upon his screen under the best possible conditions. With regard to the operating room location, I found a very decided disposition on the part of managers to sidestep—to "pass the buck."

In the case of the Queen Theater, where the operating room is located literally on the roof and in fact above the roof, a suggestion on my part, in response to a request for suggestions from the managers, that it be located on the main auditorium floor, was met by the statement that the law did not allow of the operating room being located within the building, unless it be on the top floor. After some inquiry with regard to this alleged law, without any definite result, I went down to the fire headquarters and interviewed Mr. Wright, who promptly referred me to Mr. Converse, city electrician. Mr. Converse told me that the new law provides that the operating room door must not open into the auditorium, and that that was all the law there was covering this particular proposition.

I had a long and interesting conversation with Mr. Converse, who very evidently desires all the information he can get, and I believe has no other desire than to do the right thing. He told me that it was the intention of himself and, as I remember it, the head of the building department (I may be in error about these titles, I am only quoting them from memory) in the very near future, to draft an ordinance covering moving picture theaters. I showed Mr. Converse how it was entirely possible to locate the operating room anywhere in the theater, and still not have its door open into the auditorium. I also took up with him the matter of ventilation from the health and from the fire risk point of view, and sought to impress upon the official mind the absolute necessity for a forced draft ventilation of the operating room, so that in case of fire the smoke and gases will be pumped out, instead of running the risk of their being blown back down into the auditorium, as is the case where an open vent flue without forced draught is used.

Perry J. Sherman, operator, came up from Corpus Christi to hear the lecture.

El Paso, Texas.

From San Antonio to El Paso is a long, dusty, hot run of 620 miles, occupying all day and night, mostly through the semi-desert of Western Texas. On the train was A. C. Easterling, owner of the Martha Opera House, Martha, Texas, with whom I held extended converse. Friend Easterling says, asserts and avers that his projection (population of Martha 2,000) is better than that of the City of San Antonio. He was mainly concerned as to whether he ought to run a mixed program or features. I suggested a feature, at advanced price, once a week and referred him to Brother Sargent, as that is legitimately one of friend Sargent's troubles. I have plenty of my own, thanks.

El Paso, Texas, is one of the wonder cities of the southwest. Planked down in the desert among the mountains, beside a little thread of water known as the Rio Grande, with the borderline of our troubled sister republic in its center and the hot sun of the desert over all, El Paso is a thoroughly modern, up-to-date city, with asphalt streets, skyscrapers and all that goes to make up a modern metropolis. And right here let me pay a tribute to the theater managers of El Paso. They are wide awake, progressive; also they are good fellows in the very best sense of that term. They make the stranger feel that he is entirely welcome, not only when he step off the train, but for every moment of the time until he climbs back on again, after a final handshake and goodby.

At the head of the list I must place Will R. Winch, owner and manager of the Wigwam Theater, closely seconded by S. V. Fulkerson, manager of the Alhambra, and J. P. McCue, manager of the Bijou, though we must not overlook Ben Lewis of Grecian, T. M. Hervey of the Unique, E. F. Maxwell of the Texas, J. Munoz Fernandez of the Rex, S. Turk of the Hildalgo, Manuel M. Borgh of the Eureka and—all the rest of them.

Now, I wanted it to be distinctly understood that this is not a "puff" for El Paso managers, but simply and wholly and entirely a statement of fact. I have been treated well practically everywhere, and very well indeed in many places, but in El Paso there was a whole-souled cordiality seldom equaled.

In the evening the managers of the city tendered to the writer a banquet which was not only complete from the gastronomical point of view but also from the standpoint of good fellowship, following which the entire assemblage was guest of Mr. Maxwell of the Texas theater, who informed us by way of inducement (the Texas is vaudeville) that he had on a most excellent "show." I might remark in passing that his guests agreed with him heartily and enthusiastically; also, none was absent. At 11:30 the lecture was held in the Alhambra theater, and aside from a full attendance of managers and operators of El Paso, George J. Dingwall, manager of Crystal theater, Carrizozo, N. M., was present, having traveled from that city in order to listen to "words of wisdom" on projection.

From the projection point of view matters in El Paso are just "so-so." Operating rooms are of ample size and the equipment is, for the most part, modern and in very good condition. In all instances, however, except one, the Wigwam, Will R. Finch, manager, the operating room is flooded with daylight at matinees; also the walls are of light color and the observation ports too small. At the Wigwam the walls are black and the daylight proposition is not so bad, but in one corner sets a G. E. rectifier, which floods the room with light and renders it extremely difficult to produce high-class work on the screen.

In many instances, too, auditorium lighting could be improved, though in none of the theaters I visited were the conditions in this respect very bad, except where the screen is at the street end of the house. Under this condition, as a rule, light coming in the entrance operates very greatly to reduce the value of the screen result. At the Rex, Chief Operator Francisco Norte, Jr., showed me a Spanish title translator of which he is the inventor, and which is being used in several of the El Paso theaters. The devise is very clever and entirely practical. It consists of a stereopticon in charge of an operator. Instead of the slide the machine has two spools, one above and one below the condenser, operated by a suitable crank. On a long strip of clear gelatine about 4 inches wide a succession of Spanish translations of the English titles in the film is written in their proper order with the typewriter. When a title comes on the screen in English the operator of the machine in questtion uncovers his lens, whereupon at the extreme lower edge of the picture appears two lines of Spanish writing.

If the title is a short one it may all be contained in these two lines. If it is a long one then the operator, having allowed time to read the two lines, moves the next two down into place. The white light, of course, kills the picture in the space it occupies or kills the black at the bottom of the title, as the case may be, so that the writing appears very clearly. The device, is, as I said, both clever and entirely practical.

In the evening of the day of my departure I had dinner with friends Winch and McCue, and during the repast we were joined by a man of world-wide reputation, James Hare, who may possibly be termed the world's leading photographer, at least as applied to war views. Friend Hare has for years been, and is now, connected with Collier's publications. He has seen active service at the business end of a camera on most of the famous battlefields of the last quarter of a century. Mr. Hare is an entertaining talker and an unassuming gentleman, whom it is botn an honor and a pleasure to know.

In the afternoon of the last day Winch took a party of us for an automobile ride up around through the hills, where we had a most excellent birdseye view of the "Gateway to Mexico." I asked if it would be safe to go over into Jaurez (pronounced Warez), Mexico, and was informed, with dubious shaking of the head, that "it might be," but that most emphatically I couldn't take my camera along. Well, your Uncle William doesn't like to be told he can't do a thing, so, with his camera swinging gracefully in the wind where all might see, he marched over the bridge which spans the Rio Grande, passed a couple of ferocious looking soldiers loaded down with bullet belts, revolvers and a young cannon until they closely resembled a walking arsenal, and pushed right ahead into the business section of Jaurez, about one mile from the border.

I suppose I was double-dyed chump, but I got right out in the middle of the street and snapped photographs, with Mexicans peering at me from windows, and actually had the cast-iron nerve (I am wondering at it myself yet) to yell across the street at a soldier hombre, who really was the most ferocious specimen it has ever been my fortune to gaze on. He didn't stop or even look around, so I yelled again, a little louder, whereupon he paused, look around with a scowl that made me wonder if I would land in a Mexican hoose gow or be shot on the spot, as I went up and said: "Say, neighbor, will you let me take your photograph?"

It would have done your heart good to have looked at this senor. He had a big, black, ferocious-looking mustache, a face that would have stopped half a dozen eight-day clocks, and upon his person were the following: (a) One uniform, which I won't undertake to describe—couldn't do it justice; (b) one rifle, or maybe it was a musket, about six feet long; (c) one cartridge belt running from left shoulder to right side; (d) another cartridge belt running from right shoulder to left side; (e) one cartridge belt around his waist, all three full of long, wicked-looking cartridges; (f) two automatic revolvers in a belt. And I had stopped that aggregation in a land where I was not supposed to even carry a camera with a request to photograph it.

Kindly admire my nerve. I am rather proud of it myself. Well, I didn't get the photograph. He didn't exactly shake his fist at me, but took considerable tighter hold on that six-foot cannon, scowled fiercely and said "Na," which brought from me an instant, "Oh, all right, old man," and a double quick retreat. If I had sprung a good U. S. dollar on him I guess I would have got the photograph, and it would have been worth ten. I didn't think of it then, and now it's too late. It was a very windy day, and by and large I think Jaurez was absolutely the dustiest and dirtiest place I ever in all my life saw. Take it from me, brother, I was glad to get back across the border.

The thing really wasn't worth seeing, except that soldier, but the point is I showed them I could do it and get away with it, even to bearding the artillery bearer with my camera.

Griffith's Return Expected

Finishes Work in Connection With British War Office—"Intolerance" Scores Big London Success.

D. W. GRIFFITH, who left the United States for England several months ago to secure motion picture records on the western battle front in France by courtesy of the English War Office, has concluded his work in this connection and is expected back in this country in the immediate future. Upon his return Mr. Griffith will commence activities on his initial production, which he will later release through the Artcraft Pictures Corporation. A cable from Mr. Griffith was received at the Atrcraft headquaters in New York Wednesday reading as follows: "Have finished all scenes taken in connection with the War Office. Beautiful occupation. Returning soon as possible."

Although the nature of Mr. Griffith's first subject has not as yet been disclosed, it is understood that preparations are now under way for its production on the west coast.

Mr. Griffith intends to concentrate his time and energy in such a manner as to create a number of subjects of wide dramatic and scenic scope, and it is understood that his producing force will operate wherever necessary to obtain the scenic investitures of the stories which he selects for production.

While in London Mr. Griffith supervised the premier of "Intolerance" at the Drury Lane theater, and judging from the manner in which the spectacle was received, it will enjoy a long run at this theater. Many compliments were paid Mr. Griffith after the opening, including an enthusiastic message from Dr. Archibald Henry Sayce, the eminent Assyriologist and authority on Babylonian history.

"FILMS OWE NEWSPAPERS DEBT."—McCHESNEY.

In the course of a conversation bearing on the difficulty of securing capable scenario writers, directors and other people who make up the personnel of motion picture studios, L. W. McChesney, manager of the Motion Picture Division of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., emphasized the debt that the motion picture industry owes to the newspapers for much of its best talent. Mr. McChesney estimates that at least nine-tenths of the writers connected with the motion picture industry have had the advantage of newspaper training and that the great majority of the best directors have secured the most valuable part of their education through the intimate contact with life that the newspaper reporters alone is afforded. He goes so far as to assert that the present prosperity of the motion picture is largely dependent on the talent that is being trained in the newspaper profession.

EVERITT SHINN WITH GOLDWYN STAFF.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has engaged Everitt Shinn, the famous American illustrator and one of the world's highest paid artists, to become a member of its production staff in association with Arthur Hopkins, chief of Goldwyn productions; Hugo Ballin, the noted mural painter, and other technical experts of high rank in pictures.

Everitt Shinn is known by his work to millions of Americans, having long been an illustrator of the better type of American magazines, and his advent into the Goldwyn organization means that the services of a great artist are placed at the disposal of this new motion picture organization.

Mr. Shinn already has occupied his offices in the Goldwyn studios in Fort Lee and has worked on the Maxine Elliott productions.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Captain Collins of the Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., has arranged to show two Paramount pictures each week (Wednesday and Saturday) at the Post Exchange Building. At present there are extra activites at the post, realizing the importance of recreation for the boys who are preparing for military service.

JOHN CUMBERLAND JOINS GOLDWYN.

John Cumberland, a popular farce comedian who played opposite Madge Kennedy in "Twin Beds" and "Fair and Warmer," has been engaged to play opposite Miss Kennedy when she makes her debut in motion pictures for Goldwyn.

This is Mr. Cumberland's first trip into filmland.

Chicago News Letter

Bomb and Blackmail Outrages

Investigation by State Attorney Reveals That Chicago Moving Picture Men Have Been Bled for $500,000.

ON WEDNESDAY, May 9, every daily in Chicago had long articles, with scareheads, on the revelations made by State Attorney Hoyne's office regarding the terrorism which has encompassed moving picture theater owners in the city for several years past. This terrorism has manifested itself by city-wide dynamiting of moving picture theaters and apartment buildings, by a ring of labor unionists, who are said to have extorted money from many of the large theater owners and building contractors in Chicago.

Assistant State's Attorney Nicholas Michels has been investigating for several months past, and the announcement was made by him in the State Attorney's office on Tuesday, May 8, where eighty-five proprietors and managers of picture theaters in Chicago and a hundred other witnesses have been questioned for the last two months. It was also estimated that Chicago theater owners have paid $500,000 in the last five years to the extortionists.

Eleven leaders are involved, and it was given out that evidence would be presented by State Attorney Hoyne to the grand jury that would involve them.

These men are Raymond Cleary, a member of the moving picture operators' union affiliated with Local 157 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and said to be the "alleged father" of the conspiracy; James Gorman, a business agent of Local 157, who has been arrested in connection with a war on the moving pictufe operators' union affiliated with Local 110 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, which has been recognized as the legitimate operators' union in Chicago by the American Federation of Labor and the Chicago Federation of Labor; Jack Miller, formerly a business agent of both Locals 157 and 110 and now owner of a picture theater on the west side; Fred Mather, business agent of Local 381, fixture hangers; Thomas Walsh and Frank Hayes, business agents of the sheet metal workers; Peter Cunniff, member of Local 110, said by the State Attorney's office to be dynamiter; a man called Galvin, a member of Local 157, an alleged dynamiter; Henry Gussenberg, alleged slugger; Paddy King, alias Kane, alias Voight, alleged safeblower and slugger, and William Finsted, indicted in the federal courts, and the first business agent of Local 157.

The most astounding evidence of extortion in the hands of the state's attorney is the case of Albert Fuchs, owner of the $250,000 Chateau theater, Broadway and Grace streets, now nearly completed, who is said to have paid $30,000 to prevent the blowing up of that structure. The terrorists demanded $3,000 more, when, it is said, Mr. Fuchs went to the state's attorney's office and made a statement. Hearing of this the blackmailers exploded a bomb in the theater which, had not a mistake been made, would have completely wrecked the structure. The names of other large theater owners who paid money to save their houses are also given.

State Attorney Hoyne has denounced as cowardly the men who submit to blackmail at the hands of alleged labor sluggers instead of reporting such instances to the prosecutor. The sluggers he had in mind, he said, were members of Local 157, Motion Picture Operators' Union, an organization which he charges was formed for the purpose of collecting tribute from theater owners and building contractors.

"It would seem that a great many business men like to be 'held up' by these sluggers," said Mr. Hoyne. "Many victims fail to tell of their experiences because they fear for their lives. In view of the prosecution of former labor cases it is my opinion that any one who will pay money to such men because of threats is cowardly. Certain men will not co-operate with this office until they are virtually ruined financially. Then we hear from them. It has been shown that a real union man will help convict men of this class who protect themselves by claiming to be identified with bona fide labor organizations.

"The men who have been using dynamite and stench bombs in theaters and committing other outrages are not truly union men. They work for one union today and another tomorrow."

The hearing before the grand jury will come up sometime near the end of the current month.

Assistant State's Attorney Michels, who is conducting the investigation, was threatened with death Wednesday night, May 9, it is said. It appears that a strange woman 'phoned Mrs. Michels and warned her to sleep in "a different bedroom," as a dynamite bomb would probably be placed in her home.

"The Crisis" Praised by Chicago Critics.

"The Crisis" is doing "big business" at the Colonial ever since it opened, and Aaron J. Jones is beaming over the great success of his "continuous performance" plan for the Selig super-photoplay. The plan prevents long waiting in line for those who attend, which so many object to, but it has the disadvantage of subjecting a spectator to a disjointed presentation, when he or she fails to arrive for the opening of the story. The Chicago critics had all words of praise for the production.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Rose Tapley, who scored remarkable popularity during her visit to the National Exposition of the M. P. E. L., at the Coliseum last summer, will visit the city Monday, May 14, and will appear at Alfred Hamburger's Ziegfeld theater, where she will deliver an address and renew the acquaintance of many of her Chicago friends. Miss Tapley has been touring the United States for six or seven months past. "The Captain of the Gray Horse Troop," featuring Antonio Moreno and Edith Story, will be the chief film attraction at the Ziegfeld on Monday.

Louis H. Frank, who served as manager of the National Exposition of the M. P. E. L. of America for 1916, filed a libel suit in the Superior Court on Saturday, May 5, against Peter J. Schaefer, Alfred Hamburger, Lee A. Ochs, Joseph Hopp, Thomas Furniss and Ludwig Schindler. The amount sued for is $50,000. The action has been brought because of a telegram alleged to have been sent by Peter J. Schaefer to Lee A. Ochs in New York, which made certain reference to the distribution of funds taken in at last year's exposition.

Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson severed their connections with the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company after finishing "The Saint's Adventure," a five-reel feature released through K-E-S-E, Inc., on May 7. I understand Mr. Walthall and Miss Charleson have already several flattering offers under consideration.

The members of the Chicago local and of the exposition and convention committee are now settled in their new and comfortable offices in Room 1416, Masonic Temple. The new quarters are bright and roomy, with a fine view of Lake Michigan. Ludwig Schindler, manager of the National Exposition, can be found there most of the time, while in Chicago.

The Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago gave a buffet lunch at an open meeting at their clubrooms, Friday evening, May 11. The occasion was the first of a series of "booster" nights. This one was held in honor of the Universal company, and celebrated the moving of the Bluebird's Chicago office force and of the Anti-Trust Film Exchange into the Consumers' Building.

Carl Laemmle made a brief stop-over in the city on his way from New York to Universal City, last week. He visited the new offices of the Universal in the Consumers' Building, and was well pleased with their appearance. Julius Bernheim, manager of the Universal Exchange and of Bluebird's in Minneapolis, and T. W. Malone, of the Bluebird office in that city, were in Chicago to meet their chief.

Stan H. Twist has been appointed western manager of the Exhibitors' Trade Review, and has moved into handsome new quarters in Suite 608-10, in the City Hall Square Building, this city.

"The Spirit of '76," which was announced to open at Orchestra Hall Monday, May 7, has been held up by the Chicago Censor Board. Major Funkhouser holds that the photoplay contains scenes that disparage England, now an American ally. The showing of the film has not been finally barred as yet, as Major Funkhouser will await the opinion of the Department of Justice in the matter. Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice in Chicago, was shown a synopsis of the photoplay, and he wired Washington for advice. The answer he received inclined to the opinion that the film should not be shown. The Department does not contemplate interfering in a local question of this kind, and if it does the action will probably be taken under the Interstate Commerce law. This being a local question it is believed the federal authorities will rely on the judgment of the city and state officials.

Robert Goldstein, the owner and producer of the film, is strong in holding that every incident in the photoplay is founded on recognized authority, and that the city might with equal justice remove text-books of history from the public schools.

A recent cablegram from London to the Chicago Journal shows that the British board of film censors during the year 1916 suppressed all incidents in moving pictures which tended to disparage England's allies or to disturb friendly relations with them.

The American Military Relief Association is having a series of pictures made under the title of "Follies of the Week," in which the prominent actors and actresses of the legitimate stage who chance to be in Chicago will contribute their services. The association has for its purpose the furnishing of candy, cigars, cigarettes, chocolates and other comforts to the soldiers and sailors of the U. S. Army and Navy in the field, these articles not being furnished by the Red Cross or any other organization. Every picture of the series will be a comedy of one reel in length. The pictures are being made by The Follies of the Week Company, Inc., of which Cullom Holme Farrell is the head, with offices at 20 East Jackson Boulevard. They are being distributed by the Titan Pictures Corporation, under the direction of Frederick Russell Clark, president. Mr. Clark will be remembered as president of the Fort Dearborn Photoplays Syndicate, which produced and owns "Modern Mother Goose," a popular picture for children. The Titan offices are in the Century Building, 202 South State street, where all information can be had concerning the releases.

Raymond Hitchcock appeared in the first reel of the series, which is entitled "Knocking the L Out of H. C. L." He was assisted by members of his "Betty" company, including Miss Brush and Miss Poir. The second picture of the series, "He Could Dance with Everybody but His Wife," is in the making at the time of writing, with Josephine Harriman, of the "Very Good Eddie" company, in the lead. The third picture will be made next week by MacIntyre and Heath, and the first of the series will be released some time near the end of May. The Follies of the Week Company intends to make one picture each week until the series is completed.

The Mutual Film Corporation's new star, Juliette Day, stopped over in the city or her way to the Coast, where she will start work at once. Miss Day will engage in playing baby vampire roles, and eagerly looks forward to her new experiences.

During Marshall Joffre's visit to Chicago the Chicago Historical Society was presented by the Tribune with several sets of pictures showing his activities while here. The films were taken by the Tribune through the courtesy of George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, whose cameramen were everywhere when Joffre was around. The pictures were cut down to 400 feet film length when they were presented to the Historical Society.

Fritzi Brunette in Lasky Pictures

FRITZI BRUNETTE, who has an important part in support of Sessue Hayakawa in "The Jaguar's Claws," which is scheduled for release by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company June 14, is one of the most popular of the screen's younger actresses. In her latest picture Miss Brunette has been given opportunities to display the talent and bring into being the personality that have resulted in winning for her a wide following.

Miss Brunette was born in Savannah, Ga., of French - American parents. Her debut before the public was made on the screen for the Ince Company in 1910. The first picture she worked in was "The Lost Handkerchief," and since that time she has been connected with various companies.

Fritzi Brunette.

In "The Jaguar's Claws" Miss Brunette is in a supporting company that includes Marjorie Daw, Mabel Van Buren, Tom Moore and Tom Forman. The story was prepared for the screen by Beatrice De Mille and Leighton Osmun from an original story by William McCoy. The picture was directed by Marshall Neilan, and in it Mr. Hayakawa is seen as a Mexican bandit. Much of the action is laid south of the border line, where the scenes were taken.

One of the most exciting incidents in the picture is a charge which is staged by cowboys when they rescue a young American manager and his wife and sister after they have fallen into the hands of the "Jaguar."

FAIRBANKS ENGAGES SAM DE GRASSE.

The latest acquisition to the Douglas Fairbanks company, now producing its second Artcraft release, "A Regular Guy," at the Lasky studios in California, is Sam De Grasse, the well-known screen actor.

Mr. De Grasse as "Bud" Fraser in Douglas Fairbanks' "The Good Bad Man," gave a remarkable performance, and it was because of this fact that he was selected by Director John Emerson for a similar part in the forthcoming Artcraft release. Previous to his Fine Arts affiliation Sam De Grasse was featured in a series of two-reel Reliance and Majestic subjects, in addition to playing a prominent part in "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

LEVI MADE MUTUAL'S LOS ANGELES MANAGER.

Newton E. Levi has been promoted to the managership of the Los Angeles Mutual Film Exchange by Dennis J. Sullivan, assistant general manager of the Mutual Film Corporation.

Mr. Levi succeeds W. J. Drummond, who resigned April 30. Mr. Levi's promotion comes after a number of years of consistent service to the Mutual Film Corporation, largely on the Pacific Coast. It will be recalled that Mr. Levi toured the United States with Samuel L. Rothapfel, for the Mutual on the occasion of Mr. Rothapfel's "Mutual Tour" of the important exchange centers.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM FLINN, JR., ARRIVES.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Flinn of Yonkers and Paramount, N. Y., announce the arrival on May 4 of John Cunningham Flinn, Jr. The young man tipped the scales at 10½ pounds and is still going strong.

COWLING IN FIJI ISLANDS.

The World has received a card from H. T. Cowling, formerly a government photographer and now associated with Burton Holmes. Mr. Cowling writes that the South Sea Islands afford many fine subjects for travel pictures.

F. H. Richardson Lectures in Los Angeles

Projection Expert Moving Picture World Is Royally Entertained, Photographed and Feted.

F. H. RICHARDSON, editor of the Projection Department of the Moving Picture World, who is touring the United States preaching the gospel of good projection to operators and theater managers, arrived in Los Angeles Wednesday, May 2. In spite of the hour—7:15 A. M.—a delegation of local operators met Mr. Richardson at the station, and conveyed him to his hotel. On hearing that Richardson was going to visit Los Angeles, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, sent D. Bershon, manager of California Film Exchanges, the headquarters for Universal, the following telegram:

"F. H. Richardson, projection expert Moving Picture World, arrives Los Angeles May second, leaving May fourth. Will deliver lecture on practical projection. It is urged we get as many exhibitors, operators, cameramen and directors as possible to attend meeting for good of industry."

Mr. Bershon and H. B. Collier, manager of the Superba theater, immediately notified members of Local 150, I. A. T. S. E., that they would be pleased to place the Superba theater at Mr. Richardson's disposal. Invitations were accordingly sent out.

At 10 o'clock, Wednesday morning, a large party of operators, exhibitors and exchangemen motored Friend Richardson out to Universal City. He was there given a royal reception, and moving and still pictures were taken. Frank was "shot" with lions, elephants, camels, monkeys, sheep, jackasses and other fancy birds and beasts under the able direction of Henry McRae and Director of Publicity M. G. Jonas.

At noon a palatable luncheon was served Mr. Richardson and his party at the Universal restaurant. Shortly after all returned to the city having enjoyed a most pleasant time.

On Thursday morning members of the local and World representatives took Mr. Richardson out to the Keystone studios. The party was personally conducted by "Pop" Kenton, who knows everybody at the Keystone plant. Frank H. was introduced to many of the directors, some of the stars, and—the truth must come forth—to a bunch of the famous Keystone bathing girls. After taking in the various stages and watching the Keystone cops getting all but killed in a comedy row, Richardson was brought in to Photograph of F. H. Richardson and Universal City Lion. The Lion Is in the Center.

Mr. Sennett, and very cordially received. They had quite a little talk, and the projection expert did his best to impress upon the great producer the vital importance of good projection.

Thursday night came the lecture at the Superba theater. A great number of operators, exhibitors and exchangemen were present; also several prominent stars and directors, including William Worthington, Franklyn Farnum, Jack Wells, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Clarance Sherwood and Billy Rowe. Also present were E. H. Patterson, secretary and treasurer of Universal City; O. L. Sellers, production manager, and John Nichlous, superintendent of laboratories of the Universal plant. Franklyn Farnum and Jack Wells entertained the large audience with several solos, accompanied on the piano by Director Worthington.

Lee Moran, Jack Wells, Clarance Sherwood and Billy Rowe sang. After the musical program the pictures taken at Universal City were flashed on the screen, and the star was given much applause. Richardson then started his lecture, which took about two hours, and was enthusiastically received. Afterward the big crowd drifted over to a downtown restaurant, where a banquet had been staged in Mr. Richardson's honor. A lively cabaret furnished entertainment until the wee-wee hours. At least 150 people were present at this banquet, which was given by members of Local 150, I. A. T. S. E. J. B. Kenton, Edmund Keller and W. A. Cook were in charge of the arrangements. On Friday afternoon the projection expert left for Stockton.

Ben Schulberg in Los Angeles.

A representative of the Moving Picture World spent an exciting afternoon on the Lasky lot last week. Bennie Zeidman piloted us around the studio. We had the pleasure to meet again our old friends Bennie Schulberg, general manager of Paramount; Al. Lichtman, Artcraft's general manager; M. H. Lewis, manager of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, the local Paramount distributers, and Arthur S. Kane, of the Artcraft's western district. Mr. Schulberg and Mr. Lichtman have been on a tour around the country in the interests of their respective companies, and report conditions excellent in every respect. They left Los Angeles on Wednesday for New York.

We also had another meeting with "Doug" Fairbanks, John Emerson, his director, and Eileen Percy, his new leading woman. For the edification of his visitors "Doug" pulled off a rescue scene, a part of his next picture, as well as some expert lariat throwing stunts. One of the most interesting sights of the day was furnished by Cecille De Mille, directing Mary Pickford in a shipwreck scene. It was a treat to see the way Mr. De Mille handled the large crowd of extras in that trying scene.

William S. Hart Goes on Vacation.

William S. Hart, for the first time in three years, will doff the costumes and accoutrements of his famous Western characterizations, will leave his cowboys and his pony Fritz, and go on vacation. He left Los Angeles on Tuesday, May 8, and will return Saturday morning, June 9. He will greet Triangle exhibitors and appear at their theaters in Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Wilmington, Philadelphia, Trenton, Newark, New York, New Haven, Boston, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Spokane, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco.

Mr. Hart will travel approximately nine thousand miles, using fourteen railroad lines. It is safe to say that, at the end of this "vacation," Bill Hart will have been greeted by over one hundred thousand fans.

At the Kalem Studios.

In producing "The Door in the Mountain," an episode of "The American Girl" series, Director James W. Horne took his players to a cave in the San Martin Canyon. The Kalem location hunter searched two months before finding this cave. The set for the interior of the cave, built at Kalem's Glendale studio, has been attracting the attention of passers-by.

Al Santell, director of Kalem's Ham comedies, drove his new high-powered car into a curb on Monday, in a heroic effort to dodge a flivver which got in his way. Lloyd Hamilton took up the work of directing the picture under production, entitled "A Jail Jam." Santell, duly plastered, expects to be on the job in a few days.

Helen Gibson, at her Glendale home, is recovering from a recent operation at Thornycroft hospital and expects soon to resume her hazards in Kalem's railroad series, "The Daughter of Daring."

An extra corps of carpenters are at work at Kalem's Glendale studio, erecting a new prop building adjoining the long outdoor stages, under the supervision of Studio Manager Boyd.

Helen Holmes Does Water Stunt.

Under direction of J. P. McGowan, the Signal players this week began production of the eleventh episode of "The Railroad Raiders." Miss Holmes has been called upon to undertake many risky pieces of work in her career, but it is doubtful if she ever attempted any more dangerous stunt than was recently made for this episode, the title of which is "A Desperate Deed."

Imprisoned in a box car that is floating in the bay, she is run down by a lumber schooner. The prow of the vessel strikes the car about the middle and plows straight through it with Miss Holmes crouching in one end of it, swimming and dodging the falling timbers and battling to keep from being swept under the boat. However, despite the chances against her, Miss Holmes escaped without injury and quite ready to undertake the next stunt on the program.

O'Hara Goes with Paralto Companies.

Kenneth A. O'Hara, who several weeks ago severed his three years' association with Thomas H. Ince, has been engaged to assume charge of the publicity department of the Bessie Barriscale and J. Warren Kerrigan film companies. Mr. O'Hara has formed a partnership with Carlyle R. Robinson, the two launching a publicity and advertising bureau. When the executives of the Barriscale and Kerrigan concerns made overtures to him he dissolved the partnership and "tied up."

Geraldine Farrar Arrives on the Coast.

Geraldine Farrar has arrived in Los Angeles. Mrs. Tellegen was met by a delegation of Lasky players and other screen and stage celebrities. Accompanying Miss Farrar on her present trip are her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Farrar, who have come to spend a portion of the summer here. The diva will probably remain here until September, when she will return to New York for the grand opera season. Miss Farrar will rest for a month before beginning work on her first Artcraft feature. Cecil de Mille will personally direct this big production.

Ruth McCord Starts on Long Trip.

Arrangements have been completed for the official start of Ruth McCord, the Ince-Triangle girl, who is to motorcycle to the four corners of the United States, visiting Triangle exhibitors in all of the important cities. Miss McCord left on Sunday morning, May 6, escorted by over three hundred motorcyclists from the various clubs in and around Los Angeles. Moving pictures of the start were taken.

Davis to Be Triangle General Manager.

H. O. Davis has resigned from the Universal and assumed the general managership of the Triangle Film Corporation. It is said Mr. Davis's future activities will be centered in New York. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, arrived in Los Angeles, with the new manager of Universal, on Tuesday, May 8.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Crane Wilbur, in his latest picture, "The Heirs of Hate," now in course of production at the Horsley studios, has some novel lighting effects which he is making by means of night photography.

We understand Harry Caufield, former manager of the Chaplin studio, has resigned, and is now devoting his time to the Garrick theater and the Caulfield Photoplay Company, in both of which he is interested.

Juliette Day

JULIETTE DAY, who has just signed up with the American Film Company to star in pictures released through the Mutual, started her stage career at the age of six years, when she was engaged by Winthrop Ames to play with his Castle Square company in Boston. While under Mr. Ames' management Charles Dillingham was impressed with her acting and signed her to tour in his "Little Princess" company. Following this she appeared with the Ben Greet Players.

After these dramatic experiences Miss Day returned to school for a period and at the age of fourteen made a tour of the world. On her return to New York she again went under Mr. Ames' management and created the part of the soul of the unborn child in his production of "The Bluebird."

Following this Miss Day created the role of Plum Blossom in "The Yellow Jacket" and played leading roles in "Marrying Money," "Snow White," "Chin Chin" and "Twin Beds."

At present Miss Day is appearing in the long run of "Up Stairs and Down." Her delightful little mannerisms and cute girlish ways have been the talk of stagedom this winter and are the rage among the young people, who try to affect the charm of her personality.

Juliette Day.

Klaw & Erlanger have engaged the attractive ingenue for next season in their musical production of "Csardas," in which a special part has been created and written for Miss Day by Guy Bolton.

Jacobo Glucksmann in New York

South American Film Man Making His Headquarters with His American Representative, Frederick H. Knocke.

THE increasing number of film buyers from Latin America that visit the United States furnish proof that the demand for American films in that part of the world is steadily becoming greater. The latest arrival in New York is Jacobo Glucksmann, manager of the firm of Max Glucksmann, successor to Casa LePage, of Buenos Aires, Argentine. This firm was founded in 1890, and is one of the largest concerns in Argentine, Uruguay and Chile importing and distributing motion picture films and machines, etc.

Max Glucksmann's head office is in Buenos Aires and branch offices are located in Rosario, Cordoba, Corrientes, Tucuman, Mendoza, Bahia Blanca and Concordia, Argentine; Montevideo, Uruguay, and Santiago and Valparaiso, Chile. He owns and operates the largest theatres in Buenos Aires and Rosario and rents his films to the other theatres in his territory. For years the firm has had the exclusive rights for the distribution in its territory of the films produced by the following European concerns: Pathe Freres, Paris; Film Art, Paris; Eclaire, Paris; Eclipse, Paris; Ambrosio, Turin; Cesar Film, Turin; Itala Film, Turin. The American manufacturers whose productions Max Glucksmann handles are those contributing to the Pathe program, Thanhouser, Astra, Arrow, Rolin and Balboa; to the Mutual program, American, Signal, Pollard and Vogue, and those of Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Essanay, Kalem and the Lone Star Corporation's Chaplin films.

Jacobo Glucksmann.

Jacobo Glucksmann has come to New York to further extend his firm's business with American producers and will be pleased to receive offers. He makes his headquarters with his American representative, Frederick H. Knocke, 401-403 Longacre Building.

Frederick H. Knocke.

Frederick H. Knocke for three years was export and sales manager for Pathe Freres and Pathe Exchange, Inc., and during that time had an excellent opportunity, aided by the business connections of Pathe, which extend to every part of the globe, to watch the steady growth in the demand abroad for American made films. Toward the end of last year he decided that the time was ripe to go into business for himself as purchasing agent for foreign buyers of films. Mr. Knocke had lived for a number of years in England, France, Germany and Austria and has traveled extensively in all the other countries of Europe, as well as in Asia, Africa and Latin America. He is familiar with the market conditions, trade customs and the prevailing tastes of the various foreign countries, and speaks half a dozen foreign languages. Thus equipped, it is not surprising to learn that Mr. Knocke's enterprise has met with instantaneous success. Among his foreign customers Max Glucksmann is the most important one. It was Mr. Knocke who arranged the contracts between Max Glucksmann and the various American manufacturers and these agreements are proving satisfactory for all concerned. Mr. Knocke is enthusiastic about the export possibilities for American films and predicts that the demand for them will continue even after the world war is over and the European producers re-enter the world market on the former large scale.

Mr. Knocke owns also a part interest in the Medal Film Company, which operates exchanges in Porto Rico and the other West Indian Islands, handling films of Pathe, Thanhouser, Metro and large productions like "Civilization."

FOX OPENS EXCHANGE NO. 23.

William Fox announces the opening of a new branch office by the Fox Film Corporation. This branch, which is the twenty-third Fox exchange in the United States, is at 232 North Illinois street, Indianapolis, and will cover the state of Indiana for Fox photoplays.

Charles H. Phillips has been appointed manager of the office, which has already been organized and is now busily at work.

The other Fox exchanges in this country are situated in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dallas, Detroit, Denver, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Salt Lake City, New Orleans, Omaha, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis, Syracuse, Washington, and the New York exchange.

In addition, Fox Film Corporation has almost two score branches in Canada, Spain, Sweden, Norway, the United Kingdom, Australasia and South America.

CAMERAMAN WILLIAMS AN OLD-TIMER.

Frank Williams, whom Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle has engaged to film the Paramount-Arbuckle comedy two-reelers, launched into his screen career twelve years ago with the Martin Brothers out in Omaha, Neb. He spent his preparatory course making commercial films and travelogues in Yellowstone Park. Seeking variety and new fields for film activity, he went abroad for Pathe, remaining there four years. On his return he became identified with Essanay and remained in that connection for a year and a half. Later he worked for L-KO and Universal.

During the fall of 1915 Williams became one of the first of the Keystone cameramen. Among the films he photographed were "Hearts and Swords," "The Siege of Calia" and "The Snow Cure." He is thirty-two years old, having been born in Nashville, Mo. He was educated in Pittsburg and studied electrical engineering before he went in for motion pictures.

RALPH HERZ PLAYING WITH SELIG.

Ralph Herz, famous as a star of half a score of stage successes, has embarked in motion pictures. He is playing the leading role in Selig's "The Mystery of No. 47," scheduled for release in K-E-S-E. Mr. Herz's latest production on the speaking stage was "Ruggles of Red Cap." He has appeared in drama, musical comedy, stock companies and vaudeville, showing remarkable versatility. Mr. Herz was born in Paris, was educated in England, and is an American citizen, so his sympathies are international.

While in England he played with Cyril Maude, Mrs. Langtry, Fred Kerr, Dion Boucicault and Arthur Bourchier. He came to America with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, taking part in all the plays in her repertory.

His first musical comedy was "Miss Dolly Dollars," other musical successes being "Madame Sherry" in which he first appeared as a star; "Dr. DeLux," and "The Charity Girl."

VIRGINIA PEARSON TO DO HER "BIT."

At the special invitation of the Actors' Fund Fair Committee of Arrangements, Virginia Pearson, has agreed to make a personal appearance at the forthcoming benefit, on Saturday evening, May 19. The charming Fox star is at present spending much of her spare time in connection with the preparation of several novel surprises for her many admirers on this occasion, the details of which she is withholding from even her most intimate friends. One hundred personally autographed photos have already been donated to the fair by Miss Pearson, to be sold at auction. In addition to accepting the invitation to appear at the motion picture booth, Miss Pearson agreed to donate her services at the navy booth at the fair.

COMPILED BY THE STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT

MURDOCK, Ann. Born in New York City. American parentage. Blond complexion, golden red hair and dark hazel eyes. Miss Murdock made her stage debut in The Lion and the Mouse, but after three performances was transferred to the Robert Edeson company, under the same management, to play the lead in a new production. She created the lead in Excuse Me and later her success in A Pair of Sixes attracted the attention of the late Charles Frohman, who placed her under a starring contract. She is still under contract to the Frohman estate. Her almost startling success on the stage and her photographic qualities caused her to be sought after for pictures, and in 1915 she made her debut in the Metro production, The Royal Family. She played in Captain Jinks for Essanay; Where Love Is for Edison, and in Envy for the McClure Company. She is now with the Empire All-Star Company.

Ann Murdock.

SHERRY, J. Barney. Born in Germantown, Pa. Irish parentage. Six feet and three-fourths of an inch over and weighs 205 pounds. Ruddy complexion, gray hair and blue eyes. Mr. Sherry went upon the stage in 1884 and from then until 1908 he played a wide range of characters with many stars. His picture debut was made with the Vitagraph, playing the title role in Raffles, a part in which he scored a pronounced hit, for he realized the author's conception of the character. Later he went to Lubin, but he is best remembered as an Ince player, for he was one of the early favorites of the N. Y. M. P. and he will be remembered in many of the old Bison-101 Ranch pictures. He was the Doctor in Blood Will Tell and the Uncle in The Weaker Sex, while his work in The Back of a Man will be remembered. He likes outdoor amusements, but his hobby is raising pedigreed airedales, a profitable going to the dogs.

J. Barney Sherry

DOWLING, Joseph J. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa. Six feet, one-half inch tall and weighs 185 pounds. Dark complexion, gray hair and gray eyes. Mr. Dowling made his stage debut in 1870 and for years was a favorite star, making his own productions, such as Nobody's Claim, a melodramatic classic for years; The Red Spider, Capt. Hearne, U. S. A., The Life Guard, A Kentuckian and The Belle of Carbine River. Before attaining stellar honors he had the varied experience that went with the early days, when a player was an actor and not a specialist, and he has played the entire range from classical drama to western melodrama. In 1914 he turned his attention to pictures, making his debut with the Ammex company. Later he went to the New York Motion Picture Company and has remained under the Ince direction since then, playing characters and heavies, for which his fine physique especially fits him.

Joseph J. Dowling

HARRIS, Mildred. Born in Cheyenne, Wyoming. American parentage. Is five feet, four inches tall and weighs 107 pounds. Fair complexion, blond hair and blue eyes. She has had no stage experience and her picture debut was in the child part in Ince's On the Firing Line. She has divided her time between the Griffith and Ince companies, playing for about three years under Griffith and for two years under Ince. She is at present a member of the Ince forces at Culver City. She played the child parts in The Pride of the South, When America Was Young, the Old Folks at Home and The Bad Boy, but now is an ingenue rather than a child player and is headed toward stardom in leading roles. In her amusements she is divided in her loyalty, for she is an expert horsewoman and yet she likes a motor car as well and can handle it as cleverly. And if the roads fail she swims.

Mildred Harris

WARDE, Frederick. Born in England, of English parentage. Five feet, ten inches tall and weighs 176 pounds. White hair and brown eyes. Mr. Warde made his stage debut September 4, 1867, and for fifty years he made theatrical history, for he was one of the really great stars of the speaking stage. He has played the greater portion of the Shakespearian repertoire, and on his retirement from the stage he devoted his time to lectures on the plays of Shakespeare, having appeared before all the leading colleges. He has written a book, The Fools of Shakespeare, that is regarded as an authority. October 27, 1915, Mr. Warde made his debut in the studio in Thanhouser's production of Silas Marner, and has played The Vicar of Wakefield, King Lear, Hinton's Double and Iron-Hearted Pemberton, a series of notable screen accomplishments, particularly his Vicar. His hobbies are fishing and Shakespeareana.

"Star System Right"---Balshofer

Producing Director of Harold Lockwood Pictures Takes Issue With "Story Only" Adherents.

THAT the efforts of certain motion picture producers to abolish entirely the use of big stars in their plays is going too far is the belief of Fred J. Balshofer, who is producing the Harold Lockwood features for the Metro program. The producing director of the Lockwood pictures, in an interview, pointed out the fallacies in the arguments of producers who have recently written articles setting forth the advantages of doing away with all the big names in their pictures.

"When they say that it is wrong to present a big star and a poor story, these men are absolutely right," declared Balshofer, "but the fact that big stars are sometimes presented without adequate vehicles should not lead us to do away with the stars merely for the sake of puttting over good stories. It should not be necessary to abolish the stars and make the story the only consideration. More successful than this course is to keep the big stars and at the same time furnish them with good stories.

"In my own case for example," continued the Metro producer, "I am willing to pay, not only a big salary to Harold Lockwood, but also large sums for the purchase of stories which will be adequate for his work. The statement that audiences go to theatres not to see big stars, but to watch good plays, is partially fallacious, as evidenced no better than in the presentation of such names as Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark and others. The audience does go to see the star as well as the play. If they can see their favorites in pleasing and well-produced roles, so much the better.

"The writer of a recent article was right when he said that producers should not think they can sell their pictures simply because there is a well-known name on the screen. If we are to make successful and lasting pictures, we must have a good star, good stories and well-chosen supporting casts. But to get big stories and use casts which are mediocre throughout would be overlooking a great opportunity for putting over all-round successful pictures.

"The article to which I have reference further laid down the declaration that if pictures are to last three hundred years, it will not be the 'star pictures' which last. We may on the contrary look back to the stage successes of the past generation and see who we remember—Sir Henry Irving, Edwin Booth, Joseph Jefferson and others, or the plays in which they appeared. If we consider the matter seriously, we will discover that the star and the roles were almost equally important, with the star receiving the benefit of the argument.

"Let us not do away with our stars, but go about the making of pictures sanely and wisely, choosing for our leading actors the most fitting roles we can find, giving the stars the opportunity to display their ability in different kinds of stories, securing the best of books and original plays, and looking also to the details of the supporting cast. Our well-rounded photoplays will then have a good star, good stories and good support—and they will continue to be eminently successful.

MANAGER BARBASH NOW RUNNING THE TIP TOP.

By John L. Johnston.

In an article in this paper, "Troubles of a Film Distributor," we mentioned that film had come back to the Universal Film Exchange in bad condition from the Paradise theater, Brooklyn, while Manager Barbash was in charge there weeks ago. We now learn from S. Rubinstein, assistant manager of the Twenty-third street branch of the Universal exchange, that the mention of his name at the time of the interview was inadvertent and that they are having no trouble with him in connection with the return of film as manager of the Tip Top theater. He is, we are told, a careful and conscientious man, and that the mention of his name in connection with the matter was not just to him.

WILKERSON GOES TO SYRACUSE FOR FOX.

W. R. Wilkerson, who until recently had the distribution of the McClure Pictures for the States of Texas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma, has been sent to Syracuse by General Manager W. R. Sheehan of the Fox Company to do some special work throughout New York State.

KANSAS CITY THEATER CHANGES HANDS.

Dr. C. W. Wyman has purchased the Mozart theater, from B. W. Blewitt. The Wymans have recently moved to Kansas City from Kirksville, and the doctor is ably assisted in the management of the Mozart by his wife.

Frances Marion Engaged by Players-Lasky

Will Prepare Special Features for Stars—"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" for Mary Pickford, Her First.

FRANCES MARION, author of some of the most successful original and adapted photodramas which have been produced since the great popularity of the origin of the five-part feature picture, and formerly head of the scenario department of the World Film Corporation, has been engaged by Jesse L. Lasky as a writer of special features for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. She will divide her time equally between the eastern and western studios. Her first work under the new arrangements will be the adaptation for the screen of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," in which Miss Mary Pickford will appear as the star.

Miss Marion, in an experience as a scenario writer extending over several years, has written photodramas or made adaptations for such widely known stars as Miss Pickford, Dustin and William Farnum, Robert Warwick, Miss Alice Brady, Miss Marguerite Clark, Miss Clara Kimball Young, Miss Ethel Clayton and others. It was she who prepared "The Poor Little Rich Girl" for the screen.

She has taken an active part in several branches of the motion picture industry before settling down, so to speak, as one of the principal writers for the screen. More than three years ago, in San Francisco, following a brilliant magazine and newspaper career, she went to the studios of Bosworth, Inc., in the capacity of publicity representative, determined eventually to "break" into the writing end of pictures, having once mastered the necessary technical knowledge. Of unusually attractive appearance, it was not long before she also played in productions, and with more than ordinary success, as she supported Miss Pickford in "A Girl of Yesterday" and played parts with other stars.

Her duties with the World Film included much supervision of production as well as scenarios. She has also directed pictures.

Mr. Lasky said he looked upon the engagement of Miss Marion as a special writer as one of the important acquisitions to the Famous Players-Lasky organization, since her opportunities for original work would not be bounded in any sense. She will leave for California soon to confer with Miss Pickford and Marshall Neilan, who will direct "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Throughout the course of production Miss Marion will continue by the side of the star and director.

Strand to Show Goldwyn Pictures

Owners of Big New York House Make Contract with Producers for Display of First Year's Output.

GOLDWYN PICTURES will be shown first in New York City at the Strand Theater. Mitchel H. Mark and his associates, owners of the Strand, and Harold Edel, managing director, signed a contract this week with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for the entire first year's output of twenty-six Goldwyn productions.

This means that every second week in the year, beginning in September, the Strand will present to metropolitan audiences the stars of Goldwyn in pictures upholding the screen ideals of Samuel Goldfish, Edgar and Archibald Selwyn, Arthur Hopkins, Margaret Mayo and the remarkable group of screen and stage specialists with which they have surrounded themselves.

Mitchel H. Mark in a letter to Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, says in part:

"From the day of the first Goldwyn announcement we have expected much from your organization. The personnel of ownership places the stamp of expertness and thoroughness upon your company. As you know, we have seen but portions of your four completed pictures—untitled and still unassembled—but on the basis of what these revealed to us we have been willing to close an annual contract for what we consider to be truly remarkable pictures."

Mr. Mark and his associates are not merely owners of the Strand. They operate a chain of important theaters in New York State and New England. Their entry into New York City was made at a time when motion pictures were regarded as but a cheap form of amusement. Immediately the Strand challenged the best elements of New York's amusement-loving public.

The Goldwyn organization, beginning in September, will take an active part with the management of the Strand in devising an individualized type of showmanship to accompany the presentation of Goldwyn pictures.

"The Saint's Adventure"

In James Campbell's Touching Story, Filmed by Essanay, Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson Appear in Characters That Make a Powerful Appeal.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

I HAVE had the privilege of seeing Henry B. Walthall in numerous roles on the screen, but there is a question in my mind if I have ever seen him in a character that so enthralled me as that of the Rev. Paul Manson, who, for a time, wills that he shall pass as Joe Farley, the terror of the tenement district in which the latter lived. The minister has never met Farley nor has the latter met or known him, yet both men are so alike physically that Farley's own wife and her little boy Sid believe the Rev. Mr. Manson to be the tough, Joe Farley, who, in the role of husband and father, has beaten them up on more than one occasion.

The story is told so clearly on the screen that I shall not spoil its freshness for the spectator by furnishing even a synopsis.

Mr. Walthall appears first in the guise of a young college student who has just been graduated and who delights in writing his old dad—the Rev. Timothy Manson—that he is lightweight champion of the school. We next see him as the pastor of the richest church in his home city, having succeeded his father who had died; and soon after we see him in the rough garb and aspect of a woodsman, as his physician had prescribed strenuous outdoor life to restore his shattered nerves and health, the result of disappointment and worry over the sham Christianity of the members of his wealthy congregation. And finally he appears as Joe Farley, the tough and outlaw.

We have here a list of roles that test both versatility in impersonation and in the art of make-up, and Mr. Walthall undergoes the test admirably. The care-free student, brimming with affection for his venerable father, radiates a personality that brings a sense of happiness to the spectator. The earnest young minister who vainly pleads with the rich trustees and members of his church to devote a small portion of their half-million fund to the making of a playground for poor children, enthuses us by his fervid earnestness and communicates the fine scorn he feels when refused. The restored health of the reformer, as revealed in the husky, bewhiskered hunter and woodsman, and in the burly form of Joe Farley, carry conviction.

It is as Joe Farley that Mr. Walthall is given his first opportunity and appears at his best. Here Manson necessarily refuses to live with his supposed wife and son, preferring to board elsewhere, and while adding to the wonderment of Mrs. Farley by giving her the lion's share of his earnings, it is evident that he acts so as to place himself in still greater disfavor.

In the fine scene where Manson triumphs over the trustees of his old church and exposes the rottenness of the politicians, Mr. Walthall influences the spectator just as greatly as he does the crowd of tenement dwellers on the screen. You are seized by his earnestness and fearlessness, while by his eye and gesture you seem to hear the impassioned ring of his voice and to feel the conviction wrought by his words.

In this scene Mary Charleson is the crowning feature. When a man in the audience recognizes in the pseudo Joe Farley the Rev. Paul Manson—supposedly dead and buried—and denounces him as a crooked reformer, who has been calling Mary Farley his wife, the little woman walks bravely up to the platform accompanied by her son and brands the statement as a lie. "This man has never claimed me," she shouts, and walks back to her place with her arm protectingly around the shoulders of her boy.

Miss Charleson's Mrs. Farley, all the way through, cannot be overpraised. We watch the eagerness of the woman to hide the supposed slight put upon her by the man who is providing for the household and yet refuses to be one of it. And we notice with great sympathy, too, her efforts to make her home more attractive, so that her supposed husband may come back.

In the closing scene where she says to her boy—then knowing the truth and her mistake, "He's gone, Sid, and he'll never know how much we loved him," the tears come whether we will or not. Then the words, "I know now," fall on her ears, and the man who had learned to love her comes out of the shadows and says further; "Last night I buried Paul Manson in the grave of Joe Farley. Now I come to offer myself to you. Will you take me?"

It would indeed be an oversight to omit mention of little Ellis Paul's Sid Farley. The impersonation is a model for boy actors.

The direction has been ably done by Arthur Berthelet.

The release was made Monday, May 7, through K-E-S-E, Inc.

"Yankee Pluck"

Five-Reel World Picture Written by Willard Mack and Featuring Ethel Clayton and Montagu Love.

Review by Edward Weitzel.

THE story of "Yankee Pluck," a five-reel Brady-made World picture, is strictly up-to-date. The hero has invented a method to deprive the U-boats of their usefulness, and a Japanese diplomat, in Washington, is anxious to secure the inventor's plans. He bribes the father of the inventor's sweetheart to steal the plans, but the young lady gives the Jap an exhibition of Yankee pluck by shooting the foregn gentleman and getting the papers back. There are other complication of a melodramatic nature, running through the story, which is well put together and moves along at a good rate of speed.

As a production it ranks well up in front. The Washington scenes were all made at the capital, and there are many striking views of the buildings and handsome thoroughfares of the city. The interior scenes are also correct in detail and show a number of spacious and richly furnished rooms.

The cast is excellently balanced. Ethel Clayton has the part of the heroine and plays her part with the spirit and personal charm required. Montagu Love as Baron Wootchi makes up the part in a realistic manner, and acts with equal skill. Edward Langsford is a worthy representative of the hero, Lieut. Richard Travers, and Charles Bowser does a fine bit of character work as John Pollard. Johnny Hines, Eric Wayne, and Isette Monroe have other important roles, to which they do full justice. George Archainbaud directed the picture and kept his forces well in hand.

actors will recognize that it would be an extremely difficult matter to better the cast.

The story of "The Iron Heart" is not startlingly new, but the material is of the kind that makes real drama, and the author has known how to shape it in the right form for use on the screen. Stephen Martin, the part played by Edwin Arden, is a man whose career is very similar to that of a well known Pittsburgh millionaire. He becomes rich and powerful and finds that his wife is not suited to the change in her husband's fortunes. A separation is arranged and Martin determines to marry a young and beautiful woman, but the collapse of his riches brings him back to his faithful wife's side. There is an interesting love story connected with Martin's son and a girl to whom his father objects, on account of her poverty. These two parts are played by Forrest Winant and Helen Chadwick and they leave nothing to be desired. This applies to all the other members of the cast. George Fitzmaurice has directed the picture expertly, and the settings are in keeping with the demands of the photoplay. Several of the interiors are very elaborate.

"In the Crucible."

Events in the third installment of "The Neglected Wife" gather speed when Margaret, after being locked in by her landlady for non-payment of her board, escapes by the window and secures a position in a department store. Her enemy, the shipping clerk, is employed in the same store and makes trouble for the girl from the start. He gets into a fight over her with the manager, pulls a revolver and shoots him and throws the blame on Margaret. While she is taken to the station house, the shipping clerk has his own troubles. Some one explains that he is the guilty party and, in trying to escape in an automobile, he drives the machine off a railroad trestle into the river.

"Love's Sacrifice."

The big sensation in number eleven of "Mystery of the Double Cross" is when Bentley, who has been hidden in the house by Philippa, leaps from the top of the porch into a tree. He is being pursued by Peter and Dick Annessley, who saw him go into the house. The two reels contains other incidents of an exciting nature, not forgetting the appearance of The Masked Stranger.

Pathe War Pictures.

The fifth, sixth and seventh releases of the Pathe war pictures contain more exclusive views of the Great Conflict. The fifth number is devoted largely to intimate scenes among the airmen in France, and the hazardous duty they are obliged to perform. Numbers six and seven show the British North Sea Fleet and the life on board the different craft that are now engaged in bottling up the enemy at Kiel. These pictures were taken by the French and British governments. The interesting features connected with them crowd one another continuously and show the war as it is now actually being fought.

"The Sixteenth Wife"

Vitagraph Five-Reel Blue Ribbon Feature Starring Peggy Hyland and Marc MacDermott Excellent from Every Angle.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE attempt to make "The Sixteenth Wife" a photoplay of uncommon merit has been fully realized. This five-reel Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, from a story by Molly Elliott Seawell, shows author, actors and every one concerned in holiday humor. The characters and incidents all belong to the world of make-believe, a humorously entertaining world, peopled with a captivating heroine, a turbaned Turk who is determined to make the lady his sixteenth wife, an American reporter, a blandly shrewd Hebrew theatrical manager, and a colored mammy of many pounds weight.

Olette, the character played by Peggy Hyland, is an American dancer, who becomes a star of the Russian Ballet in its home town, and attracts the experienced matrimonial eye of Kadir El Raschid. Having engaged the dancer for an appearance in Turkey, the gentleman with the cigarette name tries to keep her a prisoner in his harem, where her coming has started a feminine mutiny which, to quell, requires the combined efforts of the Nubian slaves, the rotund eunuchs and the lord and master of the fifteen wives. Olette escapes by jumping from a lofty window, and returns to her native land. Hither the Turkish gentleman follows her, but gives up the pursuit when he finds that he has been cleverly tricked and Olette has the bad taste to prefer the love and devotion of a whole-hearted American to one-sixteenth share in his shopworn affections.

All of this is set forth in a spirit of playfulness that just escapes burlesque, in spite of the real danger to the heroine and the physical discomfort of one of the harem beauties, who is stretched face downward upon the ground and bastinadoed upon a broad and comprehensive plan.

The production offers a fine opportunity for the artistic and picturesque, and director Charles Babin exhibits notable skill and care in his department.

Peggy Hyland does the best work of her American career as Olette, and displays a number of fetching frocks. She also does her dancing steps after the fashion of one trained in the art. Marc MacDermott as Kadir El Raschid is fitted by manner and method to give a high grade performance of the part. George J. Forth is a breezy, ingratiating American newspaperman, and Templer Saxe's impersonation of Hackel is a composite of several famous managers of the old school.

"Annie-for-Spite"

Mary Miles Minter Featured in Adaptation of Fred Jackson Story for Mutual Program.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE story of "Annie-For-Spite," written by Fred Jackson, is an interesting one, and but for a badly constructed scenario would have covered legitimately five reels of film. The consequence is that at least the last reel and a half of the picture are burdened with meaningless incident, in spite of the fact that its earlier portion leads us to hope for better things. Mary Miles Minter is always charming; but it is rather too much to expect her to carry the responsibility of a five-reel photoplay on her young shoulders. The cast chosen to support Miss Minter is a good one, and the members of it without an exception have done well. Special mention should be made of Gertrude Le Brandt, whose work in the character role of the elder Mrs. Nottingham is more than ordinarily clever.

As the story runs an orphan girl who works in a department store for a small pittance is by chance adopted by a rich old woman, not out of the kindness of the woman's heart, but to spite her son's widow. The old woman immediately remakes her will, leaving all to Annie. The transformations worked by Annie in the heart and home of Mrs. Nottingham are pleasing, and the first bit of real tragedy which the story offers occurs when Mrs. Nottingham dies seated at the window of the room which has been redecorated and brightened by the orphan girl.

Up to this point the picture is interesting; but from here on through the period where Mrs. Nottingham's grandson, who is unknown to Annie, comes to take a position as secretary with her, and a suit filed by the younger Mrs. Nottingham is tried and decided against Annie, is somewhat tiresome for the reason that too much of an effort is made to keep the star in the limelight, rather than working out the natural detail of story. The story closes with a recognition of mutual love on the part of the young people. The picture was released May 14.

Paramount Shows Two Good Subjects

Morosco's "The Highway of Hope" Is Picturesque Drama and "Her Better Self" a Tragedy of Strength.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THERE is an abundance of the big outdoors in "The Highway of Hope," the Morosco release of May 17. The major part of the story is laid in a mountainous desert, with all its picturesqueness, its unaccountable lure, its grip on the mind. There is good measure of interest, too, in the tale itself. Harvey Gates, himself a Far Westerner, has adapted the story of Willard Mack, and in his titles and general treatment there is a reflection of the western spirit. The director has done much to complete the illusion of the real West.

Kathlyn Williams and House Peters are the featured actors. These two skilled players have put their best into their respective roles, neither of which may be considered as among those which a player would put in the category of "desirable." Miss Williams in the greater part of her interpretation is seen as a slattern, first as a slavey in a frontier hotel and later as the wife of a shiftless and drunken prospector. Mr. Peters is that prospector. He throws himself into the part with the same merciless abandon as he displayed in "The Great Divide." Jim Farley is a convincing Missouri Joe, the keeper of a public house, who insisted his slavey must either marry him or put on the tinsel of the dance hall. Harry Devere is Garst, the promoter, who in a mining deal plays fair with an unsophisticated woman, and years later, when contact with the "big town" has worn the rough edges from her, falls in love with his business associate.

"The Highway of Hope" is a likable western picture. It has atmosphere and it has drama.

"Her Better Self."

In "Her Better Self," the Famous Players release for May 21, we have the antithesis of the preceding Paramount release. This story is of the East, of New York; of surroundings as comfortable as money can procure, of men and women in conventional garb. It is a striking contrast to its predecessor. What is of more importance, it is a strong story and also it is finely staged. Robert Vignola has produced the script from the pen of Margaret Turnbull.

Pauline Frederick is seen in the role of a well-to-do young woman who, following her engagement to a count, becomes interested in the charity work of a doctor or in him personay—each may make his own guess as to that. With him she goes to a hospital to learn of nursing, she visits the Night Court, and for him, to save his life, she enters a court of higher jurisdiction. It is a straight characterization of a very straight young woman of the social world. It is a strong characterization, too, of a quality for which Miss Frederick is notable.

Opposite Miss Frederick is Thomas Meighan in the role of the doctor. The work of this player grows in strength. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that as one becomes better acquainted with his work there is a corresponding increase of the regard in which it is held. Mr. Meighan has a wholesomeness, a naturalness, about him that is refreshing.

The Aggie May of Alice Hollister furnishes the drab side of this story of metropolitan life. The portrayal of the woman of the street by this veteran screen player is finely done.

Scene from "Her Better Self" (Famous Players).

Charles Wellesley and Maud Turner Gordon as the Tylers are competent representatives of the urban family.

"Her Better Self" is a good picture of New York life. One of the notable factors is the fidelity with which Director Vignola adheres to life in his staging of the two courtrooms. We are told the setting of the higher court was a faithful reproduction of one of the rooms in the Criminal Courts Building. It well may be. The interiors of the Tyler home, too, are striking. Ned Van Buren, the photographer, has secured many fine lighting effects. His work stands out all through the picture.

FOLLOWERS of Kalem's "The American Girl" series will be especially pleased with the two-reel release titled "The Man Hunt at San Remo." In this number all of the melodrama and action has been retained, but the story strikes a more human note than hithertofore. The denouement is a delightful surprise. The manner of production is fully up to the standard set by Director James W. Horne.

Scene from "The Man Hunt at San Remo" (Kalem).

In this number a cowboy on the King ranch, unable to borrow a hundred dollars, steals a sum of money. It is then that the man hunt begins. The hunt entails much hard and exciting riding. After a gun battle the cow puncher is caught, and it develops that he stole the money so that a crooked mining promoter wouldn't get it.

Marin Sais heads the cast. She is supported by Frank Jonasson, R. E. Bradbury, Edward Clisbee and Paul C. Hurst. The story was written by Frederick R. Bechdolt.

"The Sign of the Scarf."

This one-reel episode of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series upholds the reputation for thrills made by previous releases. George Larkin as the reporter, in succor of a kidnapped heiress, climbs a tree, jumps from the tree to the roof of a house, and then clambers in through a window to the room in which the girl is held. He rescues her. The girl has been kidnapped by the "Spider" and his gang, who, with the aid of a woman accomplice, hopes to obtain a fortune. The reel is up to standard.

"A Romance of the Redwoods"

The Latest Mary Pickford Artcraft Picture, a Story of the California Gold Rush of '49, Has Controversial Finish.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE Cecil B. DeMille and Jeanie MacPherson eight-reel photoplay, "A Romance of the Redwoods," written for Mary Pickford and produced by the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, is bound to stir up controversy regarding its closing episodes. A story of the rush to California for gold in '49, it moves along conventional but well defined lines that give the star many effective moments in a character skillfully adapted to her personality. At the finish it introduces a situation that will please many of Miss Pickford's admirers immensely; others will regret its use in a picture with which she is connected.

The DeMille-MacPherson tale has for its heroine a young girl from New England, who goes to California in search of her uncle after the death of her parents. When she arrives at "Strawberry Flats" she discovers that her uncle has been killed by Indians, and that a handsome but unkempt road agent has assumed his name, for purposes of personal safety. Circumstances force the girl to accept the road agent's protection, and she takes up her abode in his cabin. Her innocence awakens the spark of good that is still alight within him, leads to his promise to abandon his unlawful occupation, and the two fall in love. Failure to keep his word causes him to be captured by a vigilance committee and, as a last desperate means of saving his life, the girl indicates, by means of some clothes hastily stripped from a large doll, that he is the father of her unborn child. The trick succeeds and the pair are married on the spot by the sheriff. After they have departed, the committee learn of the trick that has been played upon them, and accept their defeat at the hands of "one small woman." It is hardly necessary to add that the acting and the personality of Mary Pickford make the situation without actual offense. The exceedingly romantic nature of the entire plot removes most of the objection to it, on the ground of its improbability; but all of the Pickford following will not find it an unqualified delight.

The list of the drama's indisputable points of merits is a long one. To begin with, scene after scene is a revelation of the grandeur and beauty of the California redwoods. Other views have been snapped with a keen eye to their pictorial effectiveness, and the humorous touches, cast, attention to detail and general direction by Cecil DeMille, are worthy the Artcraft reputation.

Scene from "A Romance of the Redwoods" (Artcraft).

As intimated in the preceding paragraph, Mary Pickford as Jenny Lawrence gives the part the benefit of all her personal charm and her ready command of the screen actor's art, but her feet tread the surest along the pleasant paths of life.

Elliott Dexter plays "Black" Brown, the road agent, with the dash expected from such picturesque rogues, the favorite sons of romance. It is a comforting thought, nevertheless, to remember that in real life we are seldom called upon to accept them as one of the family. Tully Marshall, Charles Ogle, Raymond Hatton, Walter Long, and Winter Hall, are other names that guarantee the quality of the cast.

NOT wild is "Wild Winship's Widow," nor has it anything in it picturing the wildness of Winship. It is very tame, one of the kind of stories mother used to get at the public library of purely artificial characters in situations devised by the brain of some lady novelist in reflection of something she has read, rather than from the fulness of experience. Then there is a most ingenuous absence of suspense. We are told in the first few scenes that the young widow is idealizing her dead husband because she never knew how "wild" he really was, and that she refuses a worthy young man who has loved her "all these years." After that we have only to sit through four and one half reels for the widow to be undeceived about her husband and accept the worthy young man.

Some of the scenes in the four and one half reels are very pretty, an ensemble of a hunt ball being one of the most attractive, and the interiors are arranged with Ince good taste. It is not unpleasant to see some well-dressed ladies and gentlemen riding around the country on horses and tally-hos, and such mechanical accessories as rain and lightning after the picnic are good enough for a strong story, but there is no strength in any of the characters. The widow takes shelter from the rain in a hunting lodge with a man she does not love and releases a horse the hero gave her, so that the hero may know where she is, as though she could not have been thrown from the animal in attempting to get home, and as though the horse would find the hero waiting for him. That sort of stuff is of trashy novels printed a half century ago. The hero a man without initiative, the heroine merely a selfish lightweight, there is little interest in what becomes of them, more is the pity, for all members of the company have done their best with scant opportunity.

"Madame Bo-Peep."

"Madame Bo-Peep" is the story of a young woman who acts with so little intelligence that she might be suspected of feeble-mindedness when she is persuaded to marry a distasteful old man for the money she might get by taking a life partner from among men whom she could tolerate with a semblance of self-respect. She lacks sufficient strength of mind to do anything on her own account, is pushed into an undesirable alliance by the recommendation of acquaintances. The only property the supposed wealthy husband leaves is a sheep ranch in charge of young suitor. When she goes there all interest in her career, if any has been aroused, comes to an end. It is easily forseen that she will wed the young man, and the rest is mere padding with only one bright spot, where the heroine does some good riding, but the entire composition is lacking in the main and guiding principles of a five-reel screen story, cuff-made and unworthy of being classed with other Ince productions.

"Chris and the Wonderful Lamp."

THE third program of "Conquest Pictures to be released by the Forum Films, Inc., is made up of interesting material and will be especially pleasing to children. "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp" is the four-part feature presented on this program and has comedy in abundance in its makeup. Thomas Carnahan, a clever young actor, plays the role of Chris, the boy who found in the Oriental lamp purchased at an auction sale relief from most of his troubles by being able to call to service at any moment by merely rubbing the lamp a slave of no mean order. This slave could change into any shape which Chris desired he should, and found him most useful as his own double, when he could send him to school, make him take thrashings intended for himself, and fit into all sorts of unpleasant niches which Chris wished to avoid. The participation of Chris and his genie in a football game will please the boys. This is an excellent comedy.

"Legend of the Willow Plate."

The legend of the willow plate is prettily presented in the center of a willow platter which edges the picture on the screen. The story is told of how the Chinese lovers eloped to the beautiful island where for a short time they lived happily before being followed by an irate father, who burns their house from which they escape as white doves. This is a pleasing number for the family group program.

"G. F. D., 10,000 Years B. C."

A unique comedy-drama of prehistoric ages played by manikins. This is perhaps the least interesting number of the program, but is acceptable because of its grotesque and unusual character. The story follows the fortunes of rival lovers in the days of the caveman.

"Birds of Far Off Seas."

The educational feature of the program is unusually interesting, giving some fine views of the birds as they congregate on the island of Malagra off the cost of South Africa. It seems as if thousands of birds of various kinds, including penguins and solan geese, swarmed about the island when these scenes were photographed. It is interesting to watch the gathering of penguin eggs to be sent to London, where they are sold as a delicacy. The closing of the picture is a beautifully tinted sunset scene.

"The Bakery," King-Bee's Third Comedy.

Fun and frolic in a bakery is the theme of the third King-Bee Comedy, in which Billy West, Ethel Burton, Babe Hardy and Leo White are seen in their most hilarious moods. The comedy well sustains the humor of the King-Bee series.

"Sowers and Reapers"

SCREEN fiction in the purest sense of the word is seen in "Sowers and Reapers," a five-reel melodrama produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., and released by Metro on May 7. The best thing in the picture is Emmy Wehlen, the featured player, whose beauty and ability count for more than any other feature. The story, which was written by George D. Baker, who also directed, is of the sort that will bring joy to the hearts of those who revel in the writings of Laura Jean Libby, and of the sort that is apt to bring laughs to the lips of those who demand at least one ounce of plausibility to every pound of story.

Considered technically the story is one of convenience. It is obvious at almost all times. Impossibilities are many, especially so where one is asked to believe that, although a girl's body has been charred beyond recognition in a factory fire, the dress she wore and a letter she carried are left almost intact. But if one can put oneself in a frame of mind in which a story will be welcome for no other reason than that it is a story, a certain amount of entertainment will be gotten out of "Sowers and Reapers."

The plot starts out with that well-known trio—wealthy father and son and poor factory girl. The youth marries the girl, but his father, by trickery, separates them. Every proof of the marriage is destroyed. A child is born. The youth is led to believe that the girl perishes in a fire. He marries the girl of his father's choice. From poverty the first girl reaches dizzy heights of fame as a screen star. The youth and his father go broke. The girl buys up the mortgages on their property. The father and son see a motion picture written by the girl. It is the girl's story of what she believes to have been her husband's faithlessness. The picture finally brings the entire group together.

Some very good super-imposure photography was done by Joseph Shelderfer in the scenes in which we see a picture within a picture.

Supporting Miss Wehlen is a cast including George Stuart Christie, Frank Currier, Peggy Parr, Harry Davenport, Walter Horton, Kate Blancke, David Thompson, Grace Saums, Claire McCormack and Emanuel Turner.

New Thanhouser Seven-Reel Ready.

Hard upon the heels of "The Vicar of Wakefield" and Edwin Thanhouser's prediction of further seven reel special productions comes the news from New Rochelle of the completion this week of a seven-reel "special" that has been in work three months. The working title is "The Heiress," but it is said to carry no indication of the true import of the subject.

It has been produced by Ernest C. Warde, director of "The Vicar of Wakefield," but the theme is thoroughly and startlingly modern. The cast contains Florence La Badie, J. H. Gilmour, Gertrude Dallas, Wayne Arey, Richard R. Neil, Arthur Bower and Claude Cooper.

"Broncho Billy" Again in the Saddle.

Following a year of inactivity in the motion picture industry G. M. ("Broncho Billy") Anderson will emerge from retirement, it is announced, by presenting himself in a new six-reel feature photoplay called "Humanity." Apart from the statement that a powerful story is developed by an unusually novel method it is announced that "Broncho Billy" is again the central figure in a story wherein he portrays the cowboy, the character for which he is famed throughout the world.

Joffre and Viviani in Mutual Weekly.

Thanks to the enterprise of Gaumont cameramen, Mutual Weekly No. 124 has a remarkable series of pictures of Joseph Joffre, Marshal of France, and Rene Viviani, vice-president of the Council of Ministers of France. A number of exclusive pictures were secured.

Those who have never seen New York on a gala occasion will be surprised at the dense crowds which congregated to welcome the hero of the Marne and his distinguished compatriot. Editor Pell Mitchell had a cameraman stationed upon a skyscraper to get pictures that would give some idea of the mighty tides of humanity that surged through New York's City Hall Park. These were highly successful. There is also a close-up of General Joffre which is particularly effective.

"Trip Through China" at Eltinge.

"A Trip Through China," a ten-reel educational travelogue, will open at the Eltinge theater Monday, May 21. The picture was taken by Benjamin Brodsky, who spent ten years in China with his camera and took fully 100,000 feet of film, from which the best 10,000 feet has been selected to show the outside world the beauties, customs, industries, games, sports and amusements of the most wonderful and the least known country of the world.

The picture contains many interesting industrial and labor scenes in the country where wages are 12 cents a day.

A complete trip is provided from San Francisco to Peking, Hongkong, Shanghai, Canton, Tientsin, Soochow, Macao, Hangchow, Kowloon, Aberdeen and New-Chwang.

Boy Scouts in Forum Film.

About fifty boys from various Boy Scout units throughout the Bronx were used in the Edison Conquest production just completed, of "The Boy Who Cried Wolf," which will be released through Forum Films, Inc.

The story—which would be notable if only for the fact that it was the last piece of fiction to come from the pen of the late Richard Harding Davis—has to do with a Boy Scout's adventure in running down a German spy.

Franklin K. Mathiews, Chief Scout Librarian of the Boy Scouts of America, witnessed an advance screening of this production recently and he expressed himself as highly pleased with the film interpretation of Davis' idea.

As previously stated by Tringle officials, a number of unusual productions starring Miss Barriscale are being completed at the Kay Bee studios in Culver City. "The Snarl," released May 6, is the most recent of these to be shown. "Bawbs o' Blue Ridge" follows, June 3, and every month thereafter until the end of the year, a Bessie Barriscale feature will be available to Triangle exhibitors.

Selig Issues an Enlistment Subject.

"Uncle Sam Afloat and Ashore" is the title of a Selig multiple reel special feature released in General Film Service on Monday, May 28. Th production is particularly timely at present. It presents the activities of Uncle Sam's army and navy, and the Selig Company claims the film will prove a tremendous incentive to enlistment.

The soldier boys are shown at drill, in line of battle, and in camp. The cavalry is shown in activity and the artillery is also presented in action.

Details of life in the navy are also interestingly shown.

THE SIGN OF THE SCARF (Kalem). A number of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series. The virtue of the reel lies in its thrill, which is performed by George Larkin. Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE MILLIONAIRE'S DOUBLE (Rolfe-Metro), April 30.—Lionel Barrymore is the star of this five-reel photoplay. It is a modern romantic drama and excellently played and produced. A longer review was printed in the issue of May 12.

SAFETY FIRST (Metro-Drew), April 30.—This one-reel comedy is not in the front rank of Drew productions. It promises plenty of fun at the start but fails to make good to the extent expected from the Drew standard. The "Safety First" idea applies to a nervous married man who is at great pains to train his family how to act when aroused in the middle of the night by the cry of "Fire!" His wife puts him to the test and his system fails to work.

Mutual Film Corporation.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 123 (Gaumont), May 9.—Interesting items of this issue are the shearing of a Merino ram which yields 48 pounds of fleece, the French fleet in the North Sea, a sham battle at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and the opening of the yachting season at San Francisco.

REEL LIFE, NO. 54 (Gaumont), May 10.—This number of the series contains as its principal subjects "Proteges of a Big City," which shows how the feeble-minded children of New York are cared for at the hospital on Randall's Island; "A Submarine Oil Field," showing how California is now obtaining oil through the bottom of the sea, and "Making Grape Juice."

JERRY'S PICNIC (Cub), May 10.—This is a moderately entertaining farce comedy in which Jerry and his sweetheart go to a picnic at a certain park with a newly-wed pair and a fuss occurs over Jerry's attentions to the bride. Jerry takes revenge on the young woman's husband by filling up his drinking glass with tabasco sauce. The picnic ends abruptly, and believing that his sweetheart has gone home with the other man he breaks into his home. The affair is settled peaceably after an understanding is arrived at.

MISS TRIXIE OF THE FOLLIES (Strand), May 17.—Rather an amusing comedy of the lighter sort in which a young wife plays a practical joke on her husband, who is too fond of flirting. She disguises herself as a chorus girl and meets him in the park on several occasions, after which she invites herself to the house, bringing about the climax of the story.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

THE VANQUISHED FLIRT (Vogue), May 12.—A two-part slapstick comedy in which a great deal of the action takes place between a window and a plasterer's scaffold. There is no plot of any account to the picture, which might be found amusing by some audiences. At least it contains nothing objectionable.

ANNIE-FOR-SPITE (American), May 14.—A five-part production featuring Mary Miles Minter. The picture is an adaptation of a story by Fred Jackson and is a pleasing one. It was not, however, calculated to cover five reels of film. The result is that the last two reels contain considerable unnecessary incident. Mary Miles Minter is attractive as usual and plays her part well. Others of the cast are George Periolat, Lucile Ward, Gertrude Le Brandt, Eugene Ford, George Fisher and Robert Klein.

THE RAILROAD RAIDERS, NO. 6 (Signal), May 14.—"The Overland Disaster" is the title of this number of the serial and deals with an attempt to disgust the stockholders of the railroad so that they will sell out and leave certain plotting individuals in control. The car in which the president is traveling is derailed. A good fight also takes place between two of the men, providing a spectacle for those who are looking for it.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

COPPER INDUSTRY, ARIZONA (Pathe), May 20.—Number 9 of the Combitone pictures is devoted to copper industry in Arizona. The method of handling the ore in the large mills of the state is shown in all its phases.

SEOUL, KOREA (International), May 20.—The half reel of street scenes in the capital of Korea are a surprising mixture of ancient customs and modern improvements. A "Jerry on the Job" cartoon entitled "Quinine" completes the reel. It is one of Hoban's funniest pictures.

RUSTICATING (Pathe), May 27.—Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby take to the country in this one-reel farce, and have a series of comic mishaps that send them back home swathed in bandages. An amusing reel.

LOVE'S SACRIFICE (Astra), May 27.—A thrilling leap into a tree is the big sensation of this number of "Mystery of the Double Cross" serial. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

IN THE CRUCIBLE (Astra), May 27.—The third number of "The Neglected Wife" shows a decided advance in the action and finishes with a startling auto accident. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

THE IRON HEART (Astra), May 27.—A notable cast, headed by Edwin Arden, makes this five-reel screen drama by Ouida Bergere first quality entertainment. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Paramount Pictures Corporation.

THE HIGHWAY OF HOPE (Morosco), May 17.—A story of mountain and desert, in which the featured players are Kathlyn Williams and House Peters. It is a good western picture. It is reviewed in another column.

HER BETTER SELF (Famous Players), May 21.—A dramatic story of New York life, featuring Pauline Frederick and Thomas Meighan. It is reviewed in another column.

Universal Film Mfg. Company.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 70 (Universal), May 2.—All sorts of war preparations, particularly in America, are shown in this number. Also a number of views taken on the western front in Europe.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 71 (Universal), May 7.—Patriotic subjects are uppermost in this entertaining number, which urges young men to enlist. The visit of the French and British commissioners is also featured.

THE PHANTOM'S SECRET (Butterfly), May 14.—A good five-reel offering, written by J. Grubb Alexander and directed by Charles Swickard. Mignon Anderson appears in the part of a French girl whose father is the notorious thief known as "The Phantom." She enters into a forced marriage with Franz, the villain of the piece, capably portrayed by Hayward Mack. The scenes in France and later in America are handled with careful continuity and the story is interesting throughout. The girl heroine finds happiness after many troubles, some of the action being quite dramatic. Others in the cast are L. C. Shumway, Marc Fenton, Molly Malone and Fred Church.

BREAKING THE FAMILY STRIKE (Victor), May 17.—A domestic comedy by H. J. Shepard featuring Jane Gail and Matt Moore. The wife goes on a strike and the young husband hires a pretty cook as strikebreaker. The indignant wife returns and makes a "cleanup." A breezy number, with an amusing idea in it.

DROPPED FROM THE CLOUDS (Bison), week of May 21.—A two-reel number by W. B. Peason picturing the experiences of some cowboys who are transported in a dream to Turkey. Their experiences are fantastic and humorous throughout. Some good trick photography is demonstrated and some wild animals play an important part. Children will be particularly attracted by this number.

MARY ANN IN SOCIETY (Victor), week of May 21.—A clever story for children by Ruth Stonehouse, who also plays the leading role. The washerwoman's daughter visits for a day with her rich girl friend, dresses in her finery and goes horseback riding. She returns home ill from her exertions. A nice little story of the kind.

WHO SAID CHICKEN? (Victor), week of May 21.—A comedy number by Walter Newman, featuring Ernie Shield, Marcia Moore and others. The story concerns two married couples at a hunting lodge. One wife suspects her husband of flirtations and thinks his reference to a "chicken" dinner has a meaning he did not intend. The action is farcical, but only fairly strong in humor.

MOVING DAY (Nestor), week of May 21.—A comedy number concocted by Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, who play the leading parts, assisted by Edith Roberts and Harry Nolan. Some amusing incidents connected with moving household effects are pictured in burlesque form. A stronger climax would have given this first rank, but it is enjoyable as far as it goes.

BEACH NUTS (L-KO), week of May 21.—A two-reel comic featuring Daniel Russell, Gladys Varden, Bert Roach and Walter Stephens. Many aquatic stunts are shown in this in a tank and in the ocean by girls and men attired in bathing suits. Certain humorous effects are attained, some of them a little coarse, but not in any way offensive. There is hardly enough plot to hold the action together, but it makes a fairly strong nonsensical number. A motor chase is the closing feature.

A 44-CALIBER MYSTERY (Gold Seal), May 22.—A three-reel subject by T. Shelley Sutton, featuring Harry Carey, Claire Du Bray, William Gettinger and Vester Pegg. "Cheyenne Harry" appears in this as sheriff of a Western town. He falls in love with a girl whose father is working a mining claim. A young bandit, known as Lone Jack, complicates matters by a series of troublous deeds, culminating in a shooting for which the girl's father is falsely blamed. This is picturesque in presentation and leads up to some exciting incidents of a melodramatic sort at the close. It is stronger than the average Western number.

MONEY'S MOCKERY (Laemmle), May 25.—A two-reel number by E. M. Ingleton, featuring Douglas Gerrard as an aged widower who has cast off his son because the latter married without his consent. The old butler reminds him of his son's birthday, and while angry at first the old man decides to find the boy if possible. The way in which he invades Billy's home and becomes acquainted with the pretty young wife makes an appealing situation of the quietly sentimental type. Later he returns home and arranges a big birthday dinner and the reconciliation follows. The offering as a whole is quite pleasing.

THE BOSS OF THE FAMILY (Joker), May 20.—A comedy subject by C. B. Hoadley, featuring Gale Henry, William Franey, Lillian Peacock and Milburne Moranti. The widow refuses the boss plumber until he falls into an inheritance. Then all hands make a break for high society. This is not extremely laughable at any time, but proves quite amusing.

THE THOUGHT MACHINE (Universal Special), May 27.—No. 11 of "The Voice On the Wire" series. This is one of the most dramatic of the series. Welsh and Polly go to the cafe, where most of the principals in the story gather. The lights are put out and the mysterious hand attacks Welsh. Shirley saves him from death, but Cronin intervenes and upsets things. Polly is then induced to make an attack on Shirley, while under the influence of hypnotism. The installment closes with Polly holding a gun to Shirley's breast.

NO. 10, WEST BOUND (Bison), week of May 28.—A strong two-reel number, featuring Kingsley Benedict as a railroad detective. He dresses as a hobo and enters a Western town, where a plot is on foot to hold up the express train. He joins in with the gang. The train robbery is put on in dramatic and exciting fashion. There is a girl in the case, who is kidnapped by one of the gang leaders. The number is a good one of the type. Others in the cast are Fred Church, Eileen Sedgwick, L. W. Lawrence and T. D. Crittenden.

Triangle Film Corporation.

WILD WINSHIP'S WIDOW (Triangle), May 20.—A story without suspense or fine characterization, dragging through most of the scenes, though many of the latter are very pretty. Neither Miss Dalton nor her support have any large dramatic opportunity.

MADAME BO-PEEP (Triangle), May 27.—A dull story of the selfish marriage of an insane woman, her disappointment on not inheriting money from her first husband, and her marriage to a second, a former suitor.

World Pictures.

YANKEE PLUCK (May 21).—This up-to-date five-reel photoplay was written by Willard Mack. The scenes are laid in Washington and the production is excellent. Ethel Clayton and a competent cast make the acting effective. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue

Corona's Production Plans

Company Will Make Eight Big State Rights Picture a Year —Work on New Studios Begins Next Month.

CONVINCED that there is a tremendous demand for multiple-reel features through the medium of the open market and in the state rights field, due to the avalanche of inquiries he has received from every section of the country regarding the forth-coming presentation of the ten-part drama, "The Curse of Eve," F. E. Keeler, president of the Corona Cinema company announces the future policy of his organization.

Corona will be a permanent producing company, and plans are now being perfected which will enable the production of eight big subjects a year, measuring from seven to ten reels. Two companies will start work immediately, and their aim will be to complete four plays each in twelve months.

Negotations have already been started with several of the best known writers of fiction for the outright purchase of their efforts for screen purposes. All of the Corona productions will be picturizations of popular novels photodramatized by established and successful scenario writers.

The architect's plans for an immense motion picture plant have been accepted by Keeler, and acreage in the Hollywood section of Los Angeles, close to other studios in the vicinity of Santa Monica Boulevard, has been bought.

Bids for the construction of the various buildings which will occupy space at the Corona plant have been filed and the selection of the builder will be made shortly. The accepted plans call for four massive structures and a series of smaller buildings.

Many features will be in evidence at the new plant, among them being the dressing rooms for the players. These will consist of 24 bungalows, arranged in street form, 12 on each side, and each building will have from six to ten portable fronts. By employing this method much time will be saved in seeking exterior locations. Actual construction will start about June 15.

Enid Markey, long prominent as a member of the Thomas H. Ince forces, has the stellar role in "The Curse of Eve," playing the part of the modern Eve. Jack Standing and Ed Coxen share equally in the leading male characterizations. Others included in the cast are Elsie Creeson, Eugenie Besserer, Clarissa Selwynne, William Quinn, G. Raymond Nye and Arthur Allardt.

"The Curse of Eve" is from the story by Wycliffe A. Hill and the picture was directed by Frank Beal. William C. Thompson photographed the production.

"THE TRUFFLERS" GOING STRONG.

Samuel Merwin's story, "The Trufflers," which delighted the five million readers of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, had its premiere in theaters throughout the country on Monday, May 4. It was most cordially received everywhere.

Within the past year no part of the country has been more extensively talked about than Greenwich Village, New York, where the scenes of "The Trufflers" are laid. Since Mr. Merwin went to live among the villagers to get the local atmosphere for his stories the entire country has become interested in this quaint section where conventionality is set aside and the true bohemian spirit exists.

Mr. Merwin wrote real characters into the story as he found them—artists, novelists, playwrights, journalists, sculptors, musicians, theatrical managers and producers, people of the stage, and incidentally, too, persons who have no connection with any of these professions but who hang on to the edge for the personal glory that they get from it.

Nell Craig, one of the most prominent of motion picture stars, appears as Sue Wilde. She is ably supported by a superb cast including Sydney Ainsworth as Peter Ericson Mann; Ernest Maupain as Jacob Zanin; Richard C. Travers as Henry Bates, "The Worm"; Patrick Calhoun as Hy Lowe; Harry Lunkinson as Abe Silverstone; John Cossar as Dr. Hubbell Harkness Wilde; and Virginia Bowker as Betty Deane.

State Rights Market Sluggish

Inactivity of Buying Chiefly Due to Generally Unsettled Conditions—Slump Only Temporary Is Belief.

THE pulse of the state rights market is at present quite sluggish. Buying has not been as active within the past few weeks as it was during the late winter. Few really big sales have been reported within the week just past, although reports from all over the country indicate no let up on the amount of business done with state rights attractions. From the Middle West come especially optimistic reports on business done with open market pictures.

Various reasons for the inactivity of the present have been advanced by prominent state rights men, the consensus of opinion being that the present quiet was expected and that, further, it is only temporary. The lassitude on the part of more particularly the smaller buyers is attributed, first, to the generally unsettled conditions prevalent throughout the country at the present time. Everyone, apparently, is marking time, ready to go when the signal is given, but more or less loath to step out before they know just where they are going or what conditions they are going to meet when they get there. While President Wilson's declaration of war has in no wise affected attendance, many buyers are believed to be holding back with their plans until they know more definitely just exactly where they stand.

On several sides, too, the opinion has been advanced that smaller independent buyers are cagily standing by and watching to see on which side of the fence the new National Exhibitors' Circuit cat jumps. This factor, though, in the belief of many men, will have little to do with the army of small men who have always done their shopping by looking at the goods on the counter—the men who cannot afford to buy the really big productions, but who manage to corral comfortable sums out of the less costly features.

The approach of summer is another cause for the lack of buying just now. This is offset in a greater or less degree, however, by the fact that many theaters that housed legitimate shows during the season run motion pictures during the summer.

Summed up, the general belief is that while the pulse of the market is sluggish just now, the market is still live enough to come back with keen acceleration within the near future.

GARFIELD GETS "SUBMARINE EYE" FOR THREE STATES.

Herman J. Garfield, one of the livest state rights men in the Middle West, has just closed a deal by which he acquires "The Submarine Eye" for the states of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky from the Williamson Brothers, the originators and sole producers of submarine film attractions. Mr. Garfield has returned to Cleveland and his temporary address is the Columbia Building. He expects shortly to open larger offices in a more favorable location, which in all probability will be in Keith's Hippodrome.

Garfield has handled "Dante's Inferno," "Neptune's Daughter," "The Drug Terror" and numerous other big productions, all of which have made money for him and his exhibitors.

Garfield's final word upon leaving New York was one of optimism with regard to the success of "The Submarine Eye" as a legitimate box office attraction.

"I expect to get together a staff of men who deserve to be called showmen—hustlers who have never had a failure," he said, "and I do not see how any exhibitors who play this remarkable under-water picture can fail to do the biggest business in the history of their houses."

HIRSH TAKES "HER CONDONED SIN."

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Feature Film Corporation, reports that his company has purchased the rights for New York and state from the Biograph Company, of their six-reel feature, "Her Condoned Sin," featuring Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Robert Harron, Lillian Gish and Dorothy Gish, and directed by D. W. Griffith. This is an exceptionally good picture, and will prove a big "money-getter" for exhibitors.

Showing of "Her Fighting Chance" May 16.

Frank G. Hall, Who Has Acquired World Rights, Will Give Special Screening at Broadway Theater.

FRANK G. HALL, who has acquired the world's rights to the A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc., production, "Her Fighting Chance," will give a special screening of the new feature at the Broadway theater, New York, on Wednesday, May 16, at ten o'clock A. M. The picture is a seven-reel screen dramatization of James Oliver Curwood's "The Fiddling Man." Jane Grey is the featured player, and Thomas Holding, who has appeared in many Paramount pictures, has the principal male role.

The latest Jane Grey vehicle is the visualization of a story by an author who has won a world-wide reputation for high class fiction. His stories, too, are readily adapted to the screen. His characters are of the real red-blooded sort—real women and real men who do interesting and logical things. Mr. Curwood's works all abound in the action so necessary to successful motion pictures, and of his stories "The Fiddling Man" is a shining example. This novel has caused wide discussion, chiefly because of the unusual predicament in which the heroine is placed during her fight to save her husband from death. The popularity of the novel promises much for "Her Fighting Chance," especially with such a powerful actress as Jane Grey in the leading role.

Edwin Carewe, whose work as director of a long list of important productions is well known to both the profession and the public, staged the new Jane Grey offering. Mr. Carewe is recognized as a genius when it comes to picturizing stories of the great outdoors. His intimate knowledge of the picturesque character drawings in Mr. Curwood's novel has added much to the effectiveness of his staging of "Her Fighting Chance," whose locale is the great Northwest, and which deals with the intensely interesting activities of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

LEVY GETS "JOAN THE WOMAN" FOR KENTUCKY.

Kentucky rights to "Joan the Woman" have been secured by the Big Features Rights Corporation, of Louisville. The corporation has also obtained control of "Neptune's Daughter" for Kentucky and Tennessee; "Where Are My Children?" for Kentucky and Indiana, and "The Little Girl Next Door" for Ohio and Indiana.

Fred Levy, president of the Big Features Corporation, has returned to Louisville from New York, where he attended the meeting of the National Exhibitors' Association.

Fraternity Films

Actors Produce Their Own Special Feature—Directed by Harry McRae Webster.

NOT to be outdone by the combinations of producers, state rights buyers and exhibitors which have followed each other in quick succession, a number of well-known actors have formed a combination to produce their own features and market them through state right buyers under the brand name Fraternity Films.

The plan originated last December, Charles Abrams and Arthur Werner of Abrams and Werner worked out the details and the first picture which was started on January 1st., has just been completed. It is a modern drama of Broadway Life in nine reels entitled "The Devil's Playground," written by Dallas Tyler and Harry McRae Webster. Miss Tyler also appears in the picture while Mr. Webster was it's director.

Fraternity Films is a remarkable organization in many ways and the fact that its large membership of artists worked together in perfect harmony, spending four months on the elaborate staging of a large special production which was completed without a hitch, has caused a stir in the ranks of the film army.

The idea of actors sharing in the profits of pictures which are financed and produced by themselves is in itself, an innovation, but an added interest is being taken in "The Devil's Playground" because of the fact that four months were given to its making instead of the usual five or six weeks and its completion is followed by the anouncement that another picture will be started immediately.

Among the names prominent in Fraternity Films Inc., are Vera Michelena, William H. Tooker, Robert Cummings, Harry Spingler, George Trimble, Dallas Tyler and Abrams and Werner who are looking out for the business interest of the organization.

SPITZER EXPLAINS HIS STATE RIGHT PLAN.

Nat. H. Spitzer, vice-president and sales manager of the King-Bee Films Corporation, announces that the comedies released by his corporation are offered to the state right buyers without franchise assessments.

In outlining the improved plan of marketing the comedies Mr. Spitzer says: "Instead of assessing the state right buyer for the franchise rights of a territory, thereby compelling him to accept all pictures released whether good or poor, King-Bee asks nothing for rights and are only paid for those pictures accepted; this always gives Mr. State Right buyer value received for his cash and the privilege of discontinuing, when pictures are not up to the standard we have now established; it throws the burden where it belongs—on the producer. If we cannot keep on making comedies that will be in demand, there is no sane reason why the state right buyer should finance experiments. We stand or fall by the merit of our productions and not by he franchise money we may have collected in advance from the exchange men.

BROADWAY PREMIER OF "BAR SINISTER" MAY 27.

The first public presentation of Edgar Lewis' "The Bar Sinister," will be given on Sunday, May 27, at the Broadway theater, New York, by Frank G. Hall, who controls the world rights to the production. The picture will have an indefinite engagement at the Broadway, where Mr. Lewis' "The Barrier" also had a protracted run several weeks ago.

Extensive plans have been made by Mr. Hall for the distribution of this powerful race drama, in exploiting which he will be assisted by Hopp Hadley, formerly of the Mutual, and a large staff. A complete line of publicity matter is being prepared, including rotagravure heralds, a four-page journal written in up-to-the-minute newspaper style, press sheets and special newspaper material. Also there will be a large assortment of paper.

It is the aim of Mr. Hall to make "Bar Sinister" one of the best advertised special productions on the market, and in view of Mr. Lewis' success with "The Barrier," "The Nigger," and other pictures, his name will be featured in all advertising matter.

WILBUR HALL WRITES FOR BERNSTEIN.

The New York office of the M. H. Hoffman, Inc., in charge of W. A. Bach, Sales Manager, has just received a telegraphic announcement from Mr. Bernstein, who is producing "The Seven Cardinal Virtues," that he has engaged Wilbur Hall to write "Justice," the third Cardinal Virtue. Motion picture men will recognize Mr. Hall as the writer of "Fiddlers of Glory Hole," one of the strong stories of 1915.

Mr. Hall's first picture, "Who Knows," as well as "The Seven Cardinal Virtues," have already been disposed of in the eleven Western States, including Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Idaho and Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico.

The purchasers of this huge block of state right territory is the Supreme Photoplays Company of San Francisco.

Divorce Theme in "Should She Obey."

Arizona Film Company's Nine-Reel Drama a Powerful Treatise on Divorce Evil—State Rights Selling.

THE THEME of "Should She Obey?" the Arizona Film Company's massive nine-reel photoplay spectacle which had its premiere at the La Salle Opera House, Chicago, on May 6, goes straight to the heart of the divorce problem. The picture, which will be distributed on the state rights plan from the Arizona company's Chicago office, 1702 Tower Building, is a photoplay that reveals causes leading to the evil of divorce and the dire effects of separation. The film acts to a depth of realism seldom before reached either through the silent or spoken drama.

"Should She Obey?" follows the lives of two American couples from humble beginnings to days of affluence and external happiness. Then the vipers of the divorce evil creep in and the complications which ensue are etchings from real life.

The story was written by Walter C. Howay, Chicago newspaper editor. It was produced by the Arizona Film Company, a coterie of well-known Chicagoans. Among the popular artists seen in the production are Norberf Miles, Andrew Arbuckle, J. Webster Dill, Geane Genung, Alice Wilson, Margaret McQuarrie, Jack Lawyer, Billie West, James Harrison and George A. Siegmann. The latter also directed the picture and will be recalled in the character of Silas Lynch in "The Birth of a Nation."

HIRSH BUYS "HOW UNCLE SAM PREPARES" FOR NEW YORK.

Greater New York and New York State rights to "How Uncle Sam Prepares" have been disposed of by Captain Charles E. Kimball, of the Hanover Film Company, to the Pioneer Feature Film Corporation. The deal was consummated with Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Corporation, who has made such a success in marketing a number of big productions, including "Civilization" and Marvelous Maciste." The patriotic feature will be handled on the same elaborate scale by Mr. Hirsh.

"How Uncle Sam Prepares" will be given a trade showing at a Broadway theater by Mr. Hirsh in the near future, when it will be screened to the accompaniment of a full orchestra and effects and a specially prepared score.

"THE GREAT WHITE TRAIL" (Wharton).

"The Great White Trail," the first of the Wharton features to be released by that concern independently for the state rights market, is practically ready for showing to the trade. Doris Kenyon is starred and is ably supported by Thomas Holding, Paul Gordon, Hans Robert and Edgar L. Davenport. The story is peculiar in its simplicity and approaches the class of a book length novel. The greater part of the story is based upon the conditions that surround the rush of gold seekers to the Klondyke in '98.

The trade showing will be held in New York City within the next three weeks. The picture is in eight parts and was personally directed by Leopold D. Wharton, who so successfully directed the making of "Patria." The Whartons will release one super-feature every five or six weeks and also one two-reel comedy about every four weeks. Th first comedy, "Below Zero," featuring Eddie Vogt, is completed and two others are well under way in the making. The date of the initial showing in New York of "The Great White Trail" will be announced soon in the trade papers and invitation extended to exchange men and exhibitors.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"Carroll of the Secret Service"

Title of Subject Now Being Made by Pathe With Mrs. Castle in the Leading Part.

FOLLOWING the announcement that Mrs. Vernon Castle has been engaged on a long time contract at a very large salary to appear in Pathe Gold Rooster Plays, it is now stated that work has been begun on her first five-reel feature at the Astra-Pathe Studio under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

The title of this picture will probably be "Carroll of the Secret Service." As its name indicates, it is a detective play characterized by thrills and fast action. In it, Mrs. Castle has a part that gives her greater opportunity than she has ever had before.

Scene from "Carroll of the Secret Service" (Pathe).

She is prettier than ever, as the accompanying photograph shows, and it is said that, judging by her work in the scenes already completed, she is going to be even more successful as a feature star than she was either on the stage or as Patria Channing in the serial that has broken all records.

Mrs. Castle is characterized as the best known, best advertised woman in America. Her unprecedented success in "Patria" has established her as one of the two greatest drawing cards on the screen. She says that the work in features gives her a real chance to act and that she feels she is learning a great deal under the tutorage of George Fitzmaurice.

"Carroll of the Secret Service" has been chosen for Mrs. Castle as a story of the red-blooded, fast-moving type that is so popular. The illustration shows an advance view of some of the punch scenes already completed. These give an idea of the thrilling nature of the story and action. Other scenes yet to be filmed will show the beautiful sets and wonderful atmosphere that George Fitzmaurice always has in his pictures.

For this picture, a supporting cast of well known players has been engaged. Elliott Dexter who has been seen in many of Marie Doro's best pictures has the leading male role. Macey Harlan one of the best known actors on Broadway who made such a hit at the Longacre in the play "Inside the Lines" is the villain. Susan Willa who created the part of Aggie Lynch in the original stage production of "Kick In" and played it again in George Ftzmaurice's film production, has much the same sort of role in "Carroll of the Secret Service."

"KIDNAPPED" (Forum).

"Kidnapped," a four-reel adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal story of adventure, will be the next feature for the Forum program. This Edison Conquest Picture is scheduled for release by Forum May 7.

The producers have reached one of their aims in the production of this picture. They have sought to eliminate all objectionable handling of the sex question, and in "Kidnapped" they had not the slightest difficulty, for this production has the distinction of not having a woman in it at all.

Some of the most interesting shipboard scenes were filmed off Sandy Hook on an old-fashioned brig chartered for the purpose.

David McKee appears in the role of David Balfour, a lad who is shanghaied at the instigation of an uncle who is desirous of obtaining property that rightfully belongs to the boy. A tyrant of a captain and the two bucko mates transform the brig into a Hell-ship for David, who has been pressed into service as a cabin boy, and when he meets up with Alan Breck, a Scottish outlaw, he plans his escape. The two hold the ship's crew at bay while they make their way over the side into a small boat. They are finally picked up and landed on the Scottish coast, where they become involved in many adventures.

Robert Cain appears to advantage as "Alan." Joseph Burke does much with the characterization of Ebenezer Balfour, David's miserly and treacherous uncle. Wm. Wadsworth is also a member of the cast of this production, which was directed by Alan Crosland. The photography is unusually effective. The shorter units of the program are "The Portrait in the Attic," a romantic drama featuring Shirley Mason, and "He Couldn't Get Up in the Morning," a short comedy.

"THE DELICATESSEN MYSTERY" (Pathe).

Pathe again adopted the policy of issuing a one-reel comedy a week on May 13, when the first Myers-Theby "Laugh Festival" was released. The two-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedies of course continue at monthly intervals.

"The Delicatessen Mystery" is the title of the first Myers-Theby picture, produced in the sunshine of Florida by the Myers-Theby Comedy Corporation under the supervision of Mark M. Dintenfass. The accompanying photographs give the first glimpse of the famous fun-makers in their Pathe comedies.

Scene from "The Delicatessen Mystery" (Pathe).

In "The Delicatessen Mystery" Harry Myers is funnier than he has ever been before and Rosemary Theby prettier than she has ever been before. It tells the story of a newly wed couple who, to save expense, rent their bungalow and become boarders. They soon find that the landlady has placed an embargo on cooking in the room and the means by which they elude her vigilance elicit laugh after laugh.

DAN MASON KEPT ON JUMP.

Dan Mason, William Fox's clever character actor, who scored by his work in "The Derelict," is now working on two coming productions. He is playing roles in Stuart Holmes' new picture and in Valeska Suratt's next photodrama.

Mutual Program for May 21

Marjorie Rambeau and Jackie Saunders Head List—Helen Holmes in "Mistaken Identity."

THE two Mutual star productions for the week of May 21 are "The Mirror," starring Marjorie Rambeau, and "The Checkmate," featuring Jackie Saunders.

"The Checkmate" gives two phases of Jackie Saunders, as she plays a dual role of twin sisters. Jackie appears in one of her tomboy roles which have been so much enjoyed by the public and also a more serious characterization. There are farm scenes similar to those which caused so much favorable comment in "Sunny Jane."

"Mistaken Identity" is the title of Chapter 7 of "The Railroad Raiders," featuring Helen Holmes. In this chapter Helen makes a daring leap from a bridge on to the top of a speeding passenger car, makes her way along its sloping roof and reaches the vestibule by one of the riskiest bits of climbing witnesed in many a day. She has a desperate struggle with Burke on the edge of an abyss. There are more than a score of Chinamen in native costume working in this picture.

"Two Crooks and a Knave" is the title of the next of the "Jimmie Dale, Alias the Grey Seal" stories released May 25, in which the Grey Seal upsets the plot of two crooks to steal the chart of a mine and $30,000 from a poor charwoman.

On May 21 will come to the screen the second of the La Salle comedies, "Chubby Inherits a Harem," and Chubby has untold troubles trying to live in the harem and supporting the inmates in the luxurious style to which they have been accustomed.

"Two of a Kind" is the Strand Comedy in which Billie Rhodes keeps the agile Jay Belasco in a ferment of activity. This will be released on May 23.

The Cub Comedy contribution on May 24, featuring George Ovey, is "Jerry Joins the Army," a very timely topic at this period of upheaval.

"Flirting With Danger" is the Vogue laugh maker scheduled for May 26. Paddy McQuire, John Oaker, Harry Huckins, Myrtle Lind, Mary Jones and Larry Bowes appear in the cast.

"Mutual Tours," ready May 22, is an echo of the war, showing the great fortress, the British guardian of the gate between the Atlantic and the Mediterranean; river life on the Marne before the war; Cadiz, Spain; and Martinique, West Indies.

"Mutual Weekly" will come to the screen on May 23.

"Reel Life," scheduled for May 24, has five interesting sections: "The Sugar Industry of the Barbados," "Plowing With a Motor Car," showing how the motor pleasure vehicles can be converted into machines that will help avert the famine that is impending; "Caviare, the Russian delicacy that now commands such a high price, is shown in "its native haunts"; "Golfing on Wheels," shows how the autoped is being used to take players over the course, and "A $1,000 Playhouse," picturing the diminutive home of a fortunate little girl and her dolls, is also seen.

VICTOR MOORE IN "MOVING."

Victor Moore's newest laugh-getting comedy, "Moving," will be released May 21. This picture is a continuation of the "family stories" started by Mr. Moore in his picture "Flivvering."

Vic is living with his family in a city flat; it is summertime and the heat seems hotter to him than to a polar bear on the Fourth of July. He decides to move to the country to get cooled off, and he finds an agent who sells you a bungalow

Scene from "Moving" (Klever Komedies).

"while you wait," by paying a dollar down and a dollar when they catch you. The agent shows him a bungalow on a map. It is one of those that is "swept by ocean breezes," and is absolutely free from mosquitoes, and Vic jumps at it. He hurries home with the map and a photo of the bungalow, and his wife is so elated she decided they must move out to it at once.

They get a moving van and everything is loaded on it. Vic's wife, however, insists that they go along with the furniture for fear the things will be broken, so the entire family is also loaded on the van. They start, and the trip from the house to where they think the bungalow is is so full of funny incidents that it would spoil the picture to describe them further than to say that so many things do happen that have happened in real life to most anyone who has moved that it is funny enough to make even a sphinx laugh.

"WOLF LOWRY" THE NEXT HART SUBJECT.

William S. Hart will make his next regular-as-clock-work appearance in "Wolf Lowry," from the story by Charles Turner Dazey, when he is presented on the Triangle program by Thomas H. Ince. This drama, picturized by Lambert Hillyer, offers Hart in an entirely new characterization—that of a ranchman and a sort of king of the wild desert country. He portrays a strong, grim, silent man, quick on the trigger, terrible in his wrath, and a bitter and implacable enemy. The softening influence begins to effect his life upon the arrival of one Mary Davis, who has purchased a claim in the center of Hart's domain.

Margery Wilson, as Mary Davis, who is like an angel that has dropped from the sky into the hard and sombre life of Wolf Lowry, makes the most of her exceptional opportunity, presenting with Hart a performance polished in its finished artistry.

A strong supporting cast includes Aaron Edwards and Carl Ullman. The production was photographed by Joe August, and many unusual effects make this play distinctly Ince-made.

"THE NIGHT WORKERS" (K-E-S-E).

Strong pre-release bookings presage a good run for "The Night Workers," the Essanay feature which is scheduled for release through the K-E-S-E Service May 21. Trade showings of this picture, which presents the serious side to the fascinating night life of a big city, are now in progress at all K-E-S-E branch offices.

From early reports of these trade showings, Marguerite Clayton has done the best work of her picture career in the role of a girl reporter on a metropolitan newspaper. Miss Clayton won many admirers for her characterization of the princess in "The Prince of Graustark."

"The Night Workers" introduces to filmland for the first time Jack Gardner. Mr. Gardner is seen as the co-star with Miss Clayton in this production. He has achieved the fame of being one of the best known stars in musical comedy up to this time, having scored success after success in "Madame Sherry," "The Chocolate Soldier" and other big Broadway shows. His role in "The Night Workers" is that of a reporter whose heritage is a character wrecking trait common to those who live under darkness' cover.

"The Night Workers" has a screen time of 1 hour, 15 minutes.

IN THE FOX STUDIOS.

Stuart Holmes, famed as the sleek villain of the William Fox productions, will soon apepar in a new film and in a novel role. Mr. Holmes's next starring vehicle will be released under title of "The Broadway Sport." The make-up and the clothes which the star wears in this picture are such that even his most ardent admirers will hardly recognize him.

Rapid progress is being made on Valeska Suratt's next photoplay. Miss Suratt and her company, which is under the direction of William Nigh, returned last week from Lakewood, N. J., where many beautiful exteriors were incorporated into the production. In the cast are Violet Palmer, Martin Faust, Eric Mayne, Ruth Thorpe, and Dan Mason.

Edna Munsey, who has sung and danced in many Broadway musical comedy successes, has been added to the June Caprice company at work in the Fort Lee, N. J., studios.

On the Pacific Coast Marie Pavis has also joined the Fox organization. At present Miss Pavis, well known as a film player and script writer, is in the scenario department, but she will soon begin work before the camera. The next Fox actress is a native of London and had an extended career in vaudeville there before coming to the United States to do her first work in motion pictures.

TO MAKE PERSONAL APPEARANCES.

Something of a sensation was caused last week at the Rialto and other representative New York photoplay theaters by Toto, one of the most famous clowns in the world, who for two years has been featured at the Hippodrome under the management of Charles Dillingham, and who is soon to begin work on comedies produced for Pathe by the Rolin Film Company, makers of the "Lonesome Luke" Comedies.

At the Bunny, Majestic and other houses a short piece of film was run introducing Toto to the audience and showing him doing some of his amazing tricks. Then suddenly as the film faded out the famous funmaker appeared in person, where it had been. He was in the costume and makeup in which he will be seen on the screen.

At the Elsmere and Spooner, special children's matinees were given with Toto as the chief attraction. The audiences, men, women and children, went wild at the surprise of having him thus suddenly presented to them and he made many friends in the course of his brief appearance who will anxiously await the release of his first picture.

Frederick and Petrova Head Paramount

Particularly Notable Array of Pictures Issued for the Week of May 21st—Interesting Pictographs.

PAULINE FREDERICK and Mme. Petrova, two of the biggest stars in the film world, the latter making her first appearance in Paramount pictures, will have two particularly notable pictures for the week of May 21, Miss Frederick appearing in "Her Better Self," while Mme. Petrova's first picture will be "The Undying Flame."

Other short features to be released by Paramount this week, will be the second Paramount Arbuckle Comedy entitled "A Reckless Romeo"; a Klever Komedy, in which Victor Moore is starred, entitled "Moving"; the 68th of the series of Burton Holmes, the world's greatest traveler, entitled "Batavia, the Javanese Capital"; and the 67th edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen.

Pauline Frederick's picture for this week is one of the most unusual productions she has appeared in, and it was for this picture that Director Robert Vignola had an exact replica made of the interior of the Supreme Court in the Criminal Courts Building of New York. Thomas Meighan will play opposite Miss Frederick, the others in the cast being Alice Hollister, Maude Turner Gordon, Charles Wellesley, Frank De Rhein, and Armand Cortez.

The story of "Her Better Self" is one which differs radically from anything in which Pauline Frederick has ever appeared on the screen. It was written especially for Miss Frederick by Margaret Turnbull and develops a new side of this versatile actress' ability.

Something new and decidely original in the form of a photoplay production will be found in "The Undying Flame," which will introduce Mme. Petrova as a Paramount star. This is a dramatic story of ancient and modern Egypt, in which Mme. Petrova plays first the daughter of a Pharoah, and then in the second part of the story, the young daughter of an English army officer. The mere fact that Madame Petrova was to star in a picture assured its success, from a histrionic standpoint, and the engagement of Maurice Tourneur, one of the foremost directors in the entire motion picture industry, to stage the production, is a guarantee of originality, lofty conception, and power in the presentation of the story.

The interior settings of the picture were staged in the newly acquired Fort Lee studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and the exteriors were taken in the sandy wastes of Florida, where Madame Petrova and her company spent several weeks under the personal management of studio manager Albert Kaufman, who made the trip from New York to Florida especially for the purpose of establishing the company under the best possible auspices and for arranging all details for the construction of the extremely elaborate settings which were required for the exterior scenes. The story of "The Undying Flame" hinges around a mystic scarab which is the central theme of the tale.

The 67th edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the screen, is a particularly interesting edition, in which are treated four subjects of unusual quality, entitled "How Submarine Mines Are Laid," "What Women Patriots are Prepared to Do as Their Share of the War," "How Modern Farming is Done," and a new series of Picto Puzzles.

After having seen the wonders of Colorful and Tropical Ceylon, Burton Holmes, in the 68th of the series of weekly trips around the world, takes his fellow travelers to Batavia, the Javanese Capital, where he shows them wonderfully interesting sights. Java is the richest island of the Dutch East Indies, and its capital city, Batavia is one of the most picturesque and interesting cities of the far East. All phases of life in the interesting island are shown in these pictures.

Very funny indeed is the next Klever Komedy in which Victor Moore appears, entitled "Moving." The story tells of the trials and tribulations that the comedian has in living in city flats, particularly when he finds it cheaper to move than to pay rent.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, who has made such a tremendous hit in his first Paramount comedy, "The Butcher Boy," will be seen this week in "A Reckless Romeo," a modern version of the world's great lover. Far more hilarious are the scenes in this production than in his first Paramount comedy. "A Reckless Romeo" is filled with action from start to finish, plenty of heart interest and a sufficient amount of comedy suspense.

CARMEL MYERS IN HAROLD LOCKWOOD'S SUPPORT.

Carmel Myers, one of the youngest of the newly discovered motion picture stars, and a recent "find" of D. W. Griffith's, has been engaged by Fred J. Balshofer to support Harold Lockwood in the film version of "The Haunted Pajamas," the popular novel by Francis Perry Elliott, which is now under production at the Metro-Yorke studios in Los Angeles.

Miss Myers is a striking beauty of the brunette type. Until her advent in pictures six months ago she was attending the Los Angeles high school, but after a chance meeting with D. W. Griffith, was "discovered." Her first appearance with the Fine Arts Company was in straight dramatic parts and in comedy drama.

In the Harold Lockwood production now under way, which is a clever society comedy, the role which Miss Myers plays, that of Frances Kirkland, gives her an opportunity for captivating bits of action with Harold Lockwood, with whom, as Richard Hudson, she falls in love.

"THE DUCHESS OF DOUBT," METRO, May 28.

"The Duchess of Doubt," one of the most attractive Metro productions of the year, with Emmy Wehlen as star, will be released by Metro, May 28. B. A. Rolfe presents this five-act feature, adapted and directed by George D. Baker from the original story by John B. Clymer and Charles A. Logue.

Palm Beach and St. Augustine, Florida, have provided the locality for many of the scenes of this screen play, and prominent society people sojourning at those winter resorts took part in some of the scenes of the production. Miss Wehlen as Clover Ames, the girl who is mistaken for a Duchess traveling incognito, wears some exquisite new "creations." A complete contrast is afforded by the opening scenes of the play, in which Miss Wehlen appears as "chief cook and bottle-washer" in a small town boarding-house.

Miss Wehlen has the support of an able cast in "The Duchess of Doubt." George Stuart Christie, formerly associated with well known stars in stage productions, has the part of Walter Gray, who calls himself a ribbon clerk. Frank Currier plays the part of the old Frenchman, Dubois. Peggy Parr is Helen, who tries to trick Clover out of her adored Walter, and others prominent in the cast are Kate Blancke, Walter Horton, Ilean Hume, Charles Eldridge, Ricca Allen and Fred Truesdell. "The Duchess of Doubt" has been given a handsome production

CAROL HALLAWAY IN FIRST LA SALLE COMEDY.

Carol Halloway is the featured player in the first La Salle comedy which will be released through Mutual on May 7, entitled "The Prodigal Uncle."

Miss Halloway began her career on the legitimate as a member of the Carleton Stock Company. Later she appeared in a number of Broadway productions, and is remembered for her impersonations of "Youth" in "Every Woman."

She is best known on the screen for her work in the "Beauty Comedies," released by the American. Her first motion picture work was with Pilot and included engagements with Lubin, Lasky, New York Motion Picture, American and Fine Arts.

"THE LITTLE ORPHAN" (Bluebird).

Ella Hall will reappear in the Bluebird series, directed as usual by Jack Conway, the week of June 18 in a screen version of H. O. Davis' story, "The Little Orphan." Bess Meredyth and E. J. Clawson prepared the scenario. In earlier announcements this subject was referred to as "The Little Belgian," a title reflecting the character type Miss Hall represents.

George Hupp and Chandler House are two clever lads who represent Belgian orphans who, with the heroine, are sent to America to find homes. Jack Conway, Richard La Reno and George Webb impersonate American bachelors who adopt these children and thus start the plot in motion. Gretchen Lederer, Scene from "The Little Orphan" (Bluebird).

Gertrude Aster and Ernie Shields are other principals who keep matters on the move.

While the European war is only an incident, the story has timeliness in its purpose to show how America must do its share to relieve the distress occasioned by the world-wide conflict. Ella Hall's abilities to interpret juvenile roles is declared to be better exemplified in "The Little Orphan" than in any of the previous opportunities Bluebird has given her to elaborate upon her skill in an uncommon line of artistry.

Hoyt Comedies Released May 28

"A Hole in the Ground" Will Start the Ball Through K-E-S-E.

SINCE Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay recently announced it would begin May 28 with "A Hole in the Ground," releasing the Charles Hoyt comedies in film, there has been a flood of stories printed about this famous playwright who made a fortune for himself and made it possible for hundreds of theater managers to pile up fortunes also. This announcement calls to mind that Charles Hoyt's palatial residence at Charleston, N. H., is used now as a home for aged and infirm actors. It is said that Hoyt had this in mind as the ultimate use of the place when he constructed it.

K-E-S-E state these comedies will be two reels each and will be made by William N. Selig. The comedies to be picturized are: "A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey," "A Day and a Night," "A Rag Baby," "A Contented Woman," "A Midnight Bell," "A Runaway Colt," "A Trip to Chinatown," "A Temperance Town" and "A Dog in the Manger."

It is said Mr. Selig spent a great deal of money and devoted much time to collecting a cast that would do credit to the Hoyt humor and philosophy. The Hoyt comedies in film, if they measure up to the standard of the Hoyt fun-makers as produced on the speaking stage, are certain to achieve success. Critics whose opinions carry weight in filmland, who have seen the first completed comedies, say there is no doubt of their excellence.

REVELATIONS IN TWO-REELERS.

"Screen Gems" is the way one delighted exhibitor reports upon the "Black Cat" stories to the headquarters of General Film Company, the exclusive distributor, echoing the commendations given by many others who have commented upon these offerings. The sales department of General Film finds that these most competently produced Essanay two-reel subjects are exactly what the trade desires. Entertaining, clever, yet with a touch of drama, the best short stories form the "Black Cat" publication have been done into exceedingly acceptable short length films.

In the latest three releases, all of which have been highly praised, "Pass the Hash Ann," "The Clock Struck One" and "Local Color," Marguerite Clayton maintains a splendid standard of work that stamps her as a logical star. In two of them Edward Arnold registers effectively in the male lead. In the other the lead is in the hands of Webster Campbell. In "Much Obliged," the current release, Virginia Valli, known for her good work in Essanay features, is given a great chance which she improves. Opposite her are Roderick La Roque and Ernest Maupain.

ART DRAMAS NOT BUYING SCRIPTS.

So many stories have been coming in to the offices of Art Dramas, Incorporated, that the company wishes to announce that it is not in the market for scripts of any kind.

Art Dramas, Incorporated, is a releasing, not a producing organization. It releases pictures made by Biograph, Apollo, Van Dyke and U. S. Amusement Corporation. Scenarios intended for these companies should therefore be sent directly to them.

All four companies are in the market for five-reel stories, to be submitted in synopsis form only.

The companies and their addresses are as folliws: Apollo Pictures, Inc., 116 West 39th street, New York; Erbograph Company, 203 West 146th street, New York; Van Dyke Film Corporation, 251 West 19th street, New York; U. S. Amusement Corporation, Solax Studio, Fort Lee, N. J.

GAUMONT PHOTOGRAPHS HUGE MELTING POT.

While the most notable contribution to current pictures of the war contained in Gaumont's Mutual Weekly No. 124 are the views of General Joffre and Monsieur Viviani, this issue also shows pictures of a celebration at Fresno, Cal., in which a huge melting pot pours out American citizens. No doubt this, seen on the screen, will give the idea to many another town.

Three Stars in Single-Reel Comedy

Kleine's George Bickel Fun Subjects Have Also Cissy Fitzgerald and Funmaker Crimmins.

EVIDENTLY an effort has been made in the new group of one-reel comedies now being released through Geieral Film Company, with George Bickel starring, to concentrate favorite personalities into them as well as comicality. In the first release, for instance, "The King of Cooks" is not only George Bickel, remembered in the laughable burlesque team of Bickel and Watson, but also Cissy Fitzgerald, musical comedy star, who is her inimitable beaming self, and Dan Crimmins of the vaudeville team of Crimmins & Gore.

Crimmins has created the part of a funny cop, one which begins where the familiar copy of comedy films leaves off. Anyway, three fields of the speaking stage are represented by stars in one reel of film—burlesque, the musical comedy and vaudeville. Others who will be recognized as favorites are also packed into these Kleine one-reelers, among them Millicent Evans, formerly of "Officer 666"; Della Connor, Maxfield Morse and H. H. McCollum. After the current group of one-reelers is presented it is expected that the Bickel comedies will be delivered in two-reel packages to get the full worth of the capable cast.

TAYLOR HOLMES SIGNS WITH ESSANAY.

Taylor Holmes, who scored so decidedly in "Bunker Bean," which experienced an exceptionally long run in New York's prominent theaters, has heeded the call of filmland and signed a contract with Essanay Manufacturing Company to star in the picturization of the "Efficiency Edgar" stories which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. K-E-S-E are to release the pictures, and in announcing the fact, said nothing regarding Mr. Holmes' salary. It is taken for granted, however, that he will be handsomely paid for appearing before the camera, and that George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, had to "come across" freely in order to get so splendid and so widely known a star as Mr. Holmes.

K-E-S-E also announce that it is to distribute a series of twelve Essanay features entitled "Do Children Count?", in in which little Mary McAllister, who is oftentimes referred to as "the most winsome child actress on the screen," is featured. These stories were written by Charles Mortimer Peck, and the pictures will be released under these titles: "The Guiding Hand," "The Wonderful Event," "Steps to Somewhere," "The Yellow Umbrella," "A Place in the Sun," "Where Is My Mother?", "When Sorrows Weep," "The Uneven Road," "The Season of Childhood," "The Little White Girl," "The Bridge of Fancy" and "The Kingdom of Hope."

BIG BILLBOARD USED FOR TWO-REEL FILMS.

What is believed to be a world's record is reported in connection with an O. Henry booking in San Francisco, where one theater is using forty-four stands for displays of twenty-four-sheet posters for the O. Henry pictures. It is believed at the General Film Company, exclusive distributors of these 2-reel dramas, comedy dramas and comedies, that never before has there been such a use of posters by any exhibitor for two-reel subjects.

The theater giving this unsual attention to two-reel pictures is the magnificent new Rialto theater, which has accepted the O. Henry releases for sixteen weeks' continuous showing. The twenty-four-sheet posters will be used for the entire sixteen weeks at the forty-four stands engaged by this house. Besides this the smaller posters will also be used. The Rialto undertook this campaign after Manager Sheehan had seen the quality indicated by the first two or three releases.

JANE COWL ACTIVE IN WAR CHARITIES.

The many activities which Jane Cowl, now playing in "Lilac Time," and soon to begin work on her first picture as a Goldwyn star, has undertaken in behalf of patriotic and charitable causes, were added to on a recent evening when she turned the regular performance of "Lilac Time" into a grand gala performance the entire proceeds from which were devoted to the promotion of two war objects—to the benefit of the American Ambulance Field Service, and in aid of the work of the Franco-American Committee for Protection of the Children of the Frontier.

That the benefit performance would be a financial success was assured when Miss Cowl personally made two trips to Wall street on successive afternoons, and sold at advanced prices to the generously inclined brokers practically the entire seating capacity of the Eltinge theater, where the performance was held.

GLOBE FILMS SUCCESSFUL WITH IVAN.

Globe Films, Limited, of Toronto, Canada, has started its distribution of Ivan Film's product, with the expected success. Arthur Cohen, president of the company, is owner of two fine theaters and president of the Ontario Exhibitor's League. His tactful methods have enabled him to be of great assistance to fellow exhibitors, and he always stands ready to work for the general improvement of the business. M. Fischer, manager of Globe Film, Limited, will shortly take a trip to the outlying provinces of the Dominion.

"Like Wildfire" Starts Off Universal

Program for Week of May 21 Contains Also a Nestor, a Gold Seal, Victors and a Good Variety of Subjects.

Stuart Paton is the producer of "Like Wildfire," the five-act Butterfly picture which heads the Universal program for the week of May 21, being released on that day. Mr. Paton has produced "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," "The Voice On The Wire," the great mystery serial, and is at present engaged in directing the forthcoming Universal serial, "The Gray Ghost," a film version of the famous novel, "Loot," by Arthur Somers Roche, which ran as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post.

"Like Wildfire," the story of which is by Louis Writzenkorn, is refreshing, novel and entertaining, and the acting of Herbert Rawlinson and Neva Gerber adds to the excellence of the production. In the cast supporting the stars are L. M. Wells, Howard Crampton, Burton Law, Johnnie Cook and Willard Wayne. On the same day the Nestor one-act comedy, "Moving Day," with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts, will be released.

The feature for Tuesday is the Gold Seal three-act Western drama, "A 44-Caliber Mystery," in which Harry Carey and Claire DuBrey have the leading roles. This picture is chock full of genuine thrills. It was written by T. Shelley Sutton and produced by Fred. Kelsey.

The other Tuesday. offering is the Victor comedy, "Who Said Chicken?" featuring Ernie Shields and Marcia Moore.

"Beach Nuts," unusually funny L-Ko comedy in two reels, in which Dan Russell and Gladys Varden have the chief opportunities for laughmaking, will be released Wednesday. Gladys Vardeh was known to thousands under the name Gladys Roach, and this is the first comedy in which she appears under her new name. Issue 73 of the Animated Weekly will make its regular Wednesday appearance.

Ruth Stonehouse is the star in the Victor comedy drama, "Mary Ann In Society," which appears Thursday. The Rex drama, "Unmasked," featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, is the other Thursday release.

On Friday the Laemmle two-part society drama, "Money's Mockery," in which Douglas Gerrard and Francelia Billington have the leading roles, will be released. The story was written by E. Magnus Ingleton and produced by Douglas Gerrard. Issue 20 of the Universal Screen Magazine will also apepar Friday. This issue contains many new features of interest.

The Bison two-part comedy drama of Saturday, May 26, entitled, "Dropped From The Clouds," is an exceptional two-reel release and contains much more new material than is found in many five-part features. It is novel in conception and execution. The principal roles are played by Gypsy Hart, Eileen Sedgwick and Kingsley Benedict, supported by the Universal cowboys. The story was written by W. B. Pearson and the picture was produced under the direction of Henry McRae.

The Joker comedy, "The Boss of the Family," with Gale Henry and William Franey will also appear on this date. Other Saturday releases are the second edition of Universal Current Events, and the Laemmle one-act drama, "The Light of Love," featuring Jessie Arnold.

The feature for Sunday is the Big U two-part war drama, "The Smashing Stroke," with Jack Conway, and the Powers split reel, "Cupid Gets Some New Dope," an animated cartoon, and "Navigation In China," a Dorsey educational.

During the week, the eleventh episode of the great mystery serial, "The Voice On the Wire," entitled "At the Poisoned Door," will be released. Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber are the stars in this continued film story.

EASTMAN ISSUES FIRE PREVENTION BOOKLET.

The Eastman Kodak Company, of Rochester, N. Y., has issued a comprehensive booklet titled, "Suggestions on Fire Prevention." The booklet contains almost one hundred pages of matter, including many photographs and diagrams, and is the most informative of its kind yet issued. The booklet is given with the Eastman company's compliments. To quote from the summary:

"For over a year and a half the Eastman Kodak Company has been conducting an experimental study of the fire hazards of motion picture film. The object of the study was to determine better methods of protection and to test the conviction of our engineers that the solution of the problem of minimizing the hazard lay in the proper use of the automatic sprinkler. Storage compartments have been built, filled with film, and fires started under various conditions, and the results observed. The record of this work, including photographs and diagrams, is reproduced.

"It is our belief these experiments have demonstrated that motion picture film can be stored and protected so that uncontrollable or dangerous fires will not occur."

In the order of importance the first finding as a result of the experiments as to what should be done was: "Protect every storage, cabinet or locker used for storing film by automatic sprinklers." Then follow ten other things that should be done, all proved by experiments, the results of which experiments and their manner of execution being described in detail in the pages of the pamphlet.

Fox Comedy Forces Active

Mae Busch and Paddy McGuire Newcomers—Billie Ritchie and Hank Mann Also at Work.

TWO new shining lights of laughter have been added to the Fox film comedy forces at the Hollywood studios. One of these is Mae Busch, well known throughout the country as a musical comedy star, and the other is Paddy McGuire, a screen comedian of no little fame. Mae Busch was born in Melbourne, Australia, and came to the American stage largely through the influence of Elsie Janis.

Paddy McGuire is a graduate from the ranks of burlesque. For several years he has been playing leads with a motion picture comedy company at Los Angeles. He is noted particularly for his pantomimic ability and his elastic face. Both Miss Busch and Mr. McGuire make their Fox debut in Director Charles Parrott's forthcoming Foxfilm comedy starring Charles Conklin. In the cast also are Alf Goulding, Sidney de Grey and Frank Currier.

In the first Sunshine comedy, directed by Henry Lehrman and presented on the Foxfilm program, Billie Ritchie, the internationally known screen comedian, is supported by Gertrude Selby and Victor Potel. Miss Selby played the feminine lead in "The House of Terrible Scandals," Lehrman's first comedy for Mr. Fox. Mr. Potel's initial Foxfilm appearance was with Tom Mix in "Hearts and Saddles." The first Sunshine comedy will set a record for screen productions. For laughs, thrills and surprises it is one of the most unusual pictures ever screened.

A notable cast supports Hank Mann in the next Foxfilm comedy starring that bashful-eyed young man. Peggy Prevost, previously seen in Foxfilm comedies with Charles Conklin, plays the ingenue role. The juvenile is Billy Mason, who was the featured comedian in the Foxfilm comedy, "Brainstorm." Aileene Roberts plays the amateur vampire, and Max Ascher is the heavy. Both are well known on the screen. Bill Hauber, the Foxfilm daredevil of "Her Father's Station" and "A Footlight Flame," and Martin Kinney of the raspberry bush hair, are also in the cast. The production was directed by Jay A. Howe, a newcomer to the Foxfilm directorial staff.

MAE MARSH WORKING ON THIRD PICTURE.

Miss Marsh has begun work on her third Goldwyn Picture—which means she will complete three productions in less than four months.

To make this possible Goldwyn has a new director for each picture. The director of this new production will be ably assisted by Margaret Mayo, the author of the play in which the little star is appearing.

SELIG TO RELEASE HOYT COMEDIES.

William N. Selig announces the forthcoming release in K-E-S-E service of a number of feature comedies, each two reels in length and founded on the famous plays written by Charles Hoyt. There will be ten of these comedies in all and they will be released every other week in K-E-S-E service beginning Monday, May 28.

The Selig Company claims that an unusually capable cast will enact these feature comedies which, although founded on the Hoyt plots, carry many new and original situations guaranteed to incite merriment. The cast of fun-makers includes William Fables and James Harris, supported by Miss Scene from Forthcoming Selig-Hoyt Comedy.

Amy Dennis. Miss Dennis is but sixteen years of age, and yet it is claimed she will quickly earn for herself an enviable reputation. The feature comedies are being directed by Joseph Richman.

The K-E-S-E is preparing an elaborate exploitation campaign. The bookings announced are as follows: Monday, May 28, "A Hole In the Ground," Monday, June 11, "A Brass Monkey"; Monday, June 25, "A Day And A Night"; Monday, July 9, "A Rag Baby." Others will be announced later.

Art Dramas for May

Four Charming Stars Are to Be Presented in Releases During the Month.

ALMA HANLON, Marian Swayne, Naomi Childers and Jean Sothern are the picture players who will be featured in the Art Dramas releases for May. The pictures come from the four studios: Apollo, Erbograph, U. S. Amusement, and Van Dyke.

"The Auction of Virtue," the first release of the month, dated for May 3, marks Naomi Childers' debut on the Art Dramas Program. Critics have been high in praise of this picture, which was directed by Herbert Blache, from the story written by Joseph Poland. In support of Miss Childers are Leslie Austen, Wyndham Standing, Kirke Brown and Evelyn Dunn.

Second of the month's releases, scheduled for May 10, is "Little Miss Fortune," an Erbograph production featuring Marian Swayne. This picture is Miss Swayne's first for the Erbograph company. The story of "Little Miss Fortune" was written by Rev. Clarence J. Harris, and was directed by Joseph Levering. This picture, which has just been completed, is considered by Ludwig Erb, president of Erbograph, to be the best thing ever done at his studio. It is a comedy-drama with a poignant heart appeal.

Next comes the Apollo picture, "The Mystic Hour," which is said to be one of the most unusual dramas ever screened. The publicity campaign for this has been so strong that inquiries as to its nature have been coming in daily from exhibitors all over the country. The fact that it is founded on a mystifying dream, in which a murder is committed, has aroused curiosity and interest in the minds of both exhibitors and laymen. Those who have seen the picture say it is one of the strongest and most gripping mystery plays ever screened. Richard Ridgely directed, and Alma Hanlon is featured. In the cast are Charles Hutchinson and Florence Short.

The last of the month's releases is entitled "A Mute Appeal." This is from the Van Dyke studios, and is said to be a story without villians, without unpleasant situations, and without dullness. It is a drama primarily of heart interest. Jean Sothern is starred in this. Walter Edwin, recently signed up by Van Dyke, directs, and Donald Cameron is the leading man Others in the cast are Tom Magrane and Elsie Mason.

The story of "A Mute Appeal" was written by an author of note, it is said. His name has not yet been announced. All of these productions are practically completed at the various studios.

PATRIOTISM IN UNIVERSAL "CURRENT EVENTS."

Patriotism is the keynote of the first issue of the Universal Current Events, the latest feature reel presented by the Universal which is devoted exclusively to commemorating on the screen the most important happenings in all parts of the world.

No phase of the historic trip of Marshal Joffre and the French Commission escaped the Universal cameraman. Every occasion where the illustrious visitors appeared in public has been photographed. The famous French general is shown on his whirlwind trip through the West and a great part of the reel is taken up with the celebration in New York.

Other features in the reel show the preparations being made by the ship builders of the country to turn out vessels for trans-Atlantic service, the drilling of recruits at various points; close-up view of President Wilson and Vice-President Marshall and an intimate view of Thomas Edison, who is working on a new invention that may determine the outcome of the war.

A novel method of titling has been adopted for the Universal Current Events. Instead of the hackneyed form used in other releases of this type the main titles are introduced in the form of newspaper heads in large type so the audience can grasp at a glance the subject matter to follow.

THE TRAINING OF AN EIGHT-OARED CREW.

In the 68th release of Paramount-Bray-Pictographs, the training of the young giants that pull the shells to victory or defeat is told in a most interesting and highly exciting way. The picture was taken in the training quarters at Yale and the men who are seen seated in the boat represent eight of the foremost athletes in the world—men whose names are known by followers of sports in every town and hamlet.

The film shows the progress made from the first day of practice up to the one great day when, seated in the long graceful shell, they await the starter's gun to send them away.

PARALTA ADVANCES MUTUAL RELEASE DATES.

The work of organization of the Paralta enterprise has advanced so fast that the original release dates of Bessie Barriscale and "Jack" Kerrigan pictures may be moved forward at least one month. As has been announced, Miss Barriscale's first release will be "Rosa O' Paradise," but the subject of Mr Kerrigan's first picture has not yet been selected from among four stories that have been bought for his use. This matter will not be decided till Mr. Kerrigan reaches Los Angeles, June 1.

Fox Busy on Children's Stories

In Preparation Are Many Pictures That Will Appeal to the Elders as Well as the Youngsters.

WORK is well under way on several Fox "Kiddie" features, both in the Fox Western studios and in the studios at Fort Lee, N. J. Children who have become famous in the silent drama have been gathered by Mr. Fox and they are all now busily at work.

In planning the "kiddie" productions Mr. Fox had in mind photoplays that would at once appeal both to the children and their parents. In addition to filming many stories that are familiar to the children, he has been going over hundreds of manuscripts that have been submitted to him by some of the foremost writers of children's stories in the United States.

Mr. Fox, who is very fond of children, has issued instructions that the children who are appearing in the "kiddie" features are not to be overtaxed either mentally or physically. A certain number of hours are given over to studio work, after which they are given their freedom to indulge in healthy childish games.

The fact that the corporation has announced the release of "kiddie" features has brought an avalanche of inquiries from all parts of the United States. Prominent kindergartners and well-known educators have written to Mr. Fox commending him on his innovation. In addition many exhibitors have wired to the booking offices asking for the first release of the pictures that will make such a popular appeal both to the youngsters and the grown-ups.

THOMAS MEIGHAN NOW WITH BILLIE BURKE.

Thomas Meighan, who has appeared opposite Pauline Frederick ever since his arrival in the East from the Lasky studio at Hollywood, has transferred his allegiance to Billie Burke and will play the leading role in Miss Burke's first Famous Players-Paramount picture, "The Mysterious Miss Terry," which is now in the course of production under the direction of J. Searle Dawley. During his stay in the East Mr. Meighan has appeared in support of Pauline Frederick in "The Slave Market," "Sapho," "Sleeping Fires" and "Her Better Self," all the productions in which Miss Frederick has starred since Mr. Meighan was transferred from Hollywood.

Owing to the exigencies of the Paramount schedule, after the completion and release of four Famous Players pictures which were produced in the East, Mr. Meighan will play opposite Blanche Sweet in "The Silent Partner." This is a Lasky production which was staged in the West just prior to the departure of Mr. Meighan, but matters have so arranged themselves that the picture is not scheduled for release until May 24.

"Her Better Self," the last of the Pauline Frederick pictures in which Mr. Meighan appears, will be released the 21st of the same month, and through this coincidence Mr. Meighan will have the unique distinction of playing the lead in two successive Paramount pictures.

"FILLING HIS OWN SHOES" (Essanay).

June 11 has been fixed for the release of Bryant Washburn's next Essanay feature. "Filling His Own Shoes" is the title. It is an adaptation from the novel of that title by Henry C. Rowland, which was one of the "six best sellers" a year ago.

Filming of this feature has practically been completed. It will be on exhibition for exhibitors at all K-E-S-E branches within a few days.

The story has to do with an American shoe clerk in Paris, France. He loses his job, joins a Red Cross corps in the Balkan wars, and during an engagement saves an aged Turk who had been wounded. The Turk dies, but in gratitude bequeathes him a fortune, not to mention his harem, consisting of three beautiful Turkish maidens. What the ex-shoe clerk does with his harem forms a decidedly promising picture.

Hazel Daly, the creator of the role of Honey in Mr. Washburn's "Skinner" pictures, again appears as his leading woman in this production. Also there is a woman in the cast who actually weighs 285 pounds, and provides some excellent comedy, so it is reported.

"Filling His Own Shoes" will have a screen time of 1 hour, 15 minutes, approximately.

BILL RUSSELL IN "FOR A LADY'S PURSE."

William Russell, the Mutual-American star, has begun work on his next production, "For A Lady's Name." The story is by Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude.

In this film Mr. Russell appears as a young society man who has become bored by his easy victories over woman and starts out to find a woman who is elusive and whom he can pursue. His conquest leads to many complications, which build up a story full of love and adventure.

Kathleen Kirkham, who has recently been added to the players at the American studio, will appear with Mr. Russell, playing the role of the adventuress in whom Philip Greycourt (William Russell) becomes interested. Francelia Billington appears as the innocent young girl madly in love with Philip and whom he ultimately marries; William Conklin is John Villiers, the husband of the adventuress, and Ashton Dearholt portrays the role of Philip's chum.

"Iron Heart" Leads Pathe for May 27

Edwin Arden Is Featured in Dramatic Story—Ruth Roland in "The Crucible."

EDWIN ARDEN in a dramatic feature, two strong serial episodes and a back-to-the-farm laugh festival, featuring the famous comedy team Myers and Theby, are features or Pathe's program, announced for the week of May 27. The role of players engaged to appear in "The Iron Heart," written by Ouida Bergere, author of "The Test," and produced by George Fitzmaurice, contains such names as Edwin Arden, Forrest Winant, Leonore Harris, Gertrude Berkely and Helene Chadwick.

"The Iron Heart" is the timely story of a mill owner and manufacturer whose only ambition is to make money. He becomes a great captain of industry, but he meets his fall through a woman as unscrupulous as he is. How the iron heart is melted, how the man comes to realize his mistaken view of life, is shown in a series of swift-moving events.

Ruth Roland is seen in "In the Crucible," the third episode of "The Neglected Wife." Mabel Herbert Urner's famous characters live in this serial. The story of a girl's pitiful fight against the temptations of the world is vividly pictured in this third episode.

Mollie King stars in "Love's Sacrifice," eleventh episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross," produced by Astra under the direction of William Parke.

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby are seen in "Rusticating," a one-reel comedy and one of the funniest of the type made famous by this team of farceurs. It tells of the attempt of a city-bred couple to find peace and quiet in the country.

The tenth release of the combitone scenic pictures is shown under the title of "Spots in Arizona." Among the many interesting scenes in this picture is an ostrich farm at Chandler, Arizona.

The International cartoon and scenic split reel will be "Krazy Kat," "Moving Day," and "The Great Chinese Wall." This is an exceptionally interesting scenic which shows in complete detail for the first time the barrier behind which China, feeling herself secure, has gone to sleep for hundreds of years. Many people in this country have thought that the Atlantic and the Pacific are walls which protect us from danger. They are learning better now.

Hearst-Pathe News No. 44 and 45 complete the program.

"LOVE OR JUSTICE" (Ince Triangle).

Louis Glaum soon will be presented on the Ince-Triangle program in "Love or Justice," by Lambert Hillyer. The "vampire de luxe" is offered for the first time in a part that demands a finished touch of a polished actress in each and every scene of the drama. The story deals with the underworld, and holds to view two characters who enact the big moments of their lives while swayed by an overmastering passion.

Miss Glaum, as Nan, a sort of uncrowned queen of the underworld, covets that which she has not within herself—culture and refinement. And when there arrives in her little world a newcomer who possesses these things, her sudden savage interest causes to flash eyes that have smouldered for years, and the first and only real affection she has ever known is awakened.

Charles Gunn and Jack Richardson, ably support Miss Glaum in this drama. Others in the cast include J. Barney Sherry, Dorcas Matthews and Charles K. French. The production was directed by Walter Edwards and photographed by Chester Lyons.

"THE LITTLE BOY SCOUT" (Famous Players).

"The Little Boy Scout," in which Ann Pennington, the celebrated Ziegfeld Follies star, makes her third appearance on the screen, presents this delightful little actress in a charming characterization. It will be remembered that Miss Pennington appeared last year in two Famous Players pictures, "Susie Snowflake" and "The Rainbow Princess," in both of which she was extremely successful.

Her new photoplay, "The Little Boy Scout," is entirely different from either of these previous productions in conception and in its general treatment. The opening scenes occur across the border in Mexico at the time that the National Guard was on duty along the Rio Grande.

NATION'S FARM CALL REFLECTED IN LESLIE FILM.

Because farms and farming are uppermost in the public mind, through Uncle Sam's persistent call for increased national effort in that direction, Gladys Leslie, of Thanhouser, and her director, Van Dyke Brooke, journeyed out to a farming district "somewhere in New York State" and took a picture on the most attractive farm in the vicinage.

The back-to-nature subject is "An Amateur Orphan," from Agnes C. Johnston's scenario, and released by Pathe June 1. Even a simon-pure barn dance is included to "plant" the pleasure that lies in the move the government wants patriotic men to make.

CABARET LIFE IN RAMBEAU'S NEXT.

Life on the "cabaret coast"—the hilarious existence which the gayest of New Yorkers lead—is the theme of "The Mirror," Marjorie Rambeau's latest photoplay released by the Mutual Film Corporation May 21. The story was written by Clara S. Beranger especially for Miss Rambeau. The picture was produced by the Powell Producing Corporation under the direction of Frank Powell.

As Blanche Merrill, married to and intensely in love with Scene from "The Mirror" (Mutual).

Bob Merrill, a poor but proud painter of portraits, Miss Rambeau runs the gamut of human emotions, her beauty lending enchantment to a virile love story.

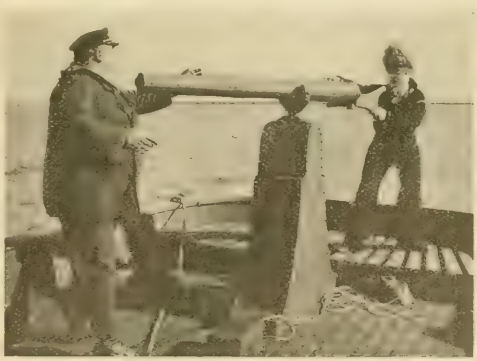
Miss Rambeau is supported by a first-rate cast. Irene Gerfield as Maizie Godard, the actress, is at her best, while Paul Everton as Boyd, the theatrical manager, is every inch the villain. Robert Elliot as Bob Merrill, the artist, Blanche's husband, gives a fine characterization and lives up to his reputation. T. Jerome Lawler, as "Russell Dana," and Frank Ford, as Dana's backer, are thoroughly adequate.

"NEPTUNE'S NAUGHTY DAUGHTER" (Century Comedies).

It has been decided to use the trade mark and title of Century Comedies for the Alice Howell pictures. An earlier announcement gave the series a different title, but it has now been definitely determined to use "Century Comedies" as the brand name.

"Neptune's Naughty Daughter" is one of three pictures that have been completed and are ready for distribution. J. G. Blystone, who has been director general for L-KO'S, will give his personal attention to producing all of the subjects in which Miss Howell will appear.

"Baloonatics" and "Automaniacs" are two other attractions



Scene from "Neptune's Naughty Daughter" (Century).

ready for circulation. Mr. Blystone is working on other releases in the West Coast studios and the completed arrangements call for distribution through state rights. Miss Howell will be the star of all Century Comedies and her name will be largely displayed in the advertising. Through her appearances in L-KO'S Miss Howell has earned her position, unique in moving pictures, as the star of a series of comedies.

"MODERN OTHELLO" (Warwick-Selznick).

With "The Silent Master" ready as the May release of the Robert Warwick Film Corporation, the second production under the Selznick banner, Harry Rapf, president of the producing company, announced the completion this week of this popular star's newest feature, "A Modern Othello."

Leonce Perret, the celebrated French producer who is making his American debut as director of "The Silent Master," is both author and director of the latest Warwick picture.

Scene from "A Modern Othello" (Selznick).

As an author of photoplays, Director Perret has a record unequalled by any man in the American field of film direction. During the fourteen years he served as director-general of Gaumont in Paris, he wrote and produced 308 feature films, many of which were shown in this country before the war, with great success.

The central character of "A Modern Othello," as portrayed by Mr. Warwick, is a virile young American, who prefers the outdoor life of his handsome country estate in New England to the clamor of the city.

In the role of the wife Mr. Rapf is presenting the charming Elaine Hammerstein, who made such a decided hit in the support of Mr. Warwick in his first Selznick-Picture, "The Argyle Case." Others in the cast include Madam Valentine Petit, Edward Kimball, George Flateau and Frank McGlynn.

"HOUSE OF CARDS" DEALS WITH BIG PROBLEM.

The theme of "House of Cards," the U. S. Amusement Corporation-Art Drama which marks the debut of Art Drama's program of Catherine Calvert and Frank Mills, is that the duty of a mother is to her child and not to a career. Starting in a typical modern household, where the wife insists on her independence and her profession, the picture draws conclusions of a convincing sort, and shows that most of our social unrest is due to mistaken ideals held by women of today.

APFEL RETURNS TO LOS ANGELES.

Oscar Apfel, the director, who will supervise the productions to be made by the J. Warren Kerrigan Feature Corporation, has returned to Los Angeles. Mr. Apfel was in New York about ten days in consultation with Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, which will release the Kerrigan productions.

Robert Brunton, the art and technical director, who will be identified with the productions of the Paralta releases returned to California with Mr. Apfel.

CUB COMPANY STARTS "JERRY'S MASTER STROKE."

The Cub Comedy Company has started work on "Jerry's Master Stroke," a picture which is filled with deep, dark plots connected with criminal and political intrigue and dealing with the present "spy scare."

George Ovey is cultivating an air of "mystery" in order to give the necessary atmosphere to his scenes.

"MELISSA OF THE HILLS" MINTER'S NEXT.

"Melissa of the Hills," by Mabelle Heikes Justice, will be the next vehicle for Mary Miles Minter. The little American-Mutual star is still at work on "Periwinkle." Immediately upon its completion Director James Kirkwood will start "Melissa of the Hills," a story of the Tennessee hills. It was originally entitled "The Circuit Rider."

"EXTRA" GIRL WINS PART IN FILM.

Mabel Rutter, who has played "extra" roles in many Fox films, has at last won the rewards of her persistency and good work in small things. She has won her first part. Miss Rutter plays the role of a little spinster typist in Stuart Holmes' coming release, which is now being produced under the direction of Carl Harbaugh.

CINEMA WAR NEWS SENDING OUT MEN.

The Cinema War News Syndicate announces it is now completing arrangements to send two special "cameraspondents" on a tour of all forts, mobilization camps and military establishments throughout the country. Views showing the latest military activities in all of the points visited will be taken for release in the American War News Weekly.

JACK RICHARDSON IN TRIANGLE FEATURE.

Jack Richardson makes his initial appearance under the Thomas H. Ince banner in the latest Triangle drama, "Love or Justice?" by Lambert Hillyer, in which Louise Glaum is featured.

ANN MURDOCK COMPLETES "OUTCAST."

Ann Murdock, the Mutual star, has completed at the Empire All Star studios the production of "Outcast," the picturization of the Frohman stage success which was written by Hubert Henry Davies, the noted English playwright.

Notes of the Trade

"TWO MEN THERE WERE," a two-act drama, is being filmed at Universal City under the direction of George Marshall. Janet Eastman plays the ingenue.

Hunter Bennett, Exchange Supervisor of the Mutual Film Corporation, has been making a southern trip visiting the offices of his company, located in Memphis, New Orleans and Atlanta.

Mr. Bennett has now returned to the executive offices in Chicago for a short stay, prior to making a tour of the Eastern Mutual Exchange.

The second episode of "The Mystery of the Gray Ghost" is being filmed at Universal City under the direction of Stuart Paton and featuring Harry Carter and Priscilla Dean, with Emory Johnson and Eddie Polo in the supporting cast. This serial is taken from Arthur Somers Roche's book, "'Loot."

Trade News of the Week

GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

Two Censors Appointed by New Brunswick

Two New Men Will View Pictures in St. John—Belong to Liberal Party—George Amland and Michael J. Nugent Appointed.

By F. F. Sully, La Tour, St. John, N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—From a large number of aspirants, George Amland and Michael J. Nugent, both of this city, have just been named by the Liberal government as members of the New Brunswick Board of Censors, to succeed Alfred E. McGinley, editor of the St. John Standard, and Charles Nevins, a broker, both of whom were appointed by a Conservative government. Mr. McGinley and Mr. Nevins have already tendered their resignations, and it is understood that the new censors will take up their duties at once. The personnel for the board for the next few years will be as follows: Dr. H. S. Bridges, chairman; Michael Coll, Mr. Amland and Mr. Nugent, all of whom live in St. John.

Mr. Amland is a well-known St. John business man. He is now a member of Amland Brothers, furniture dealers, Waterloo street. For fifteen years he was actively engaged in newspaper work in the city, and has a large number of friends throughout the city and province. Mr. Nugent is a retired grocer. For many years he was head of a large grocery concern on Brussels street, but retired a short time ago. Both of the new members of the board are men of experience and training, and should prove able successors to the two who were retired because of political differences.

Mr. Amland will probably sit in the Mutual exchange, which is but a short distance from his place of business, and Mr. Nugent will undoubtedly fill Mr. Nevins' chair at the Pathe projection room in Prince William street. With the exception of the factory inspector, who is more or less directly concerned with the business, the motion picture industry is not likely to be affected by any other changes by the government. A movement is already under way among the exchange men and some of the exhibitors to have John Kenney, a factory inspector, retained during the present administration, despite his political affiliations.

Appeal for Fairer Tax Passed Over.

Fredericton, N. B.—The appeal of Fredericton exhibitors for a permanent and just tax for their houses was passed over by the common council at its last meeting without any definite action being taken. At the time a communication was read from George Fenety stating that a new theater costing $20,000 was to be erected on the Span property by A. J. Gregory. Mr. Fenety also stated that work would commence at once provided the council would make some assurance that the license would be fixed at a nominal amount of, say, $250 a year. The proposed house is to have a seating capacity of eight or nine hundred, and it was felt that with the existing tax of 60 cents per year a seat, the taxation would be more than the business could stand.

Alderman Lemont contended that it was ridiculous to think or suggest that any person contemplating the erection of a $20,000 building would suspend operations because of an additional expense of two or three hundred dollars a year. Considerable argument followed and was centered around the alleged profits made by exhibitors, and Alderman McLellan suggested that the matter be referred to the legislature in 1918 with a request that the city be empowered to name a stipulated fee. Alderman Lemond added that if theater matters could be referred to special legislation all other industrial matters should also. The communication was finally placed on file without any action being taken.

Bert Fielding on Road to Recovery.

Truro, N. S.—Bert Fielding, who has been manager for F. G. Spencer at the Princess theater for the past three years, has just been discharged from the hospital after undergoing a serious operation. He was in the hospital for three weeks. His recovery is rapid and satisfactory and the physicians say that he will be able to resume his duties at the theater within a short time.

F. G. Spencer Celebrates Eighth Anniversary.

Truro, N. S.—F. G. Spencer is now celebrating the eighth anniversary of his entry into business in Truro. A special holiday bill has been booked. While it is the conclusion of eight years of active operations in Truro, it also marks the fourth year of Mr. Spencer's control of the Princess. The holiday bill will include the Vitagraph production of "The Christian," featuring Edith Story, the Mutual masterpiece, "The Valley of Decision," the Art Drama production "Rosie O'Grady," "The Eternal City," and Clara Kimball Young in the Brady-Made super-feature of the present war, "The Dark Silence."

While Mr. Spencer has been in the picture business but a comparatively short time he has acquired the largest individual holdings of any exhibitor in the Maritime Provinces, now controlling about a dozen houses. He is progressive, alive to the opportunities of the trade, and has rare foresight in measuring up the possibilities of motion pictures. At present he has a new house in the course of construction at Amherst, N. S., and plans have been submitted for a new $100,000 house in St. John.

Theater Served by Patriotic Women.

St. John, N. B.—The ushering at the Imperial theater has been undertaken by the Young Women's Patriotic Association. They are paid a regular salary and donate their entire earnings from this source to patriotic purposes, and at the same time the positions for the boys who are now in the trenches. Nineteen out of the twenty male employees of the Imperial, or 95 per cent, are now in France. One, who was formerly an assistant operator, has his Moving Picture World forwarded to him every week to read in the trenches.

Paramount Conference in Boston.

HIRAM ABRAMS, president of the Paramount and Walter Green, president of the Artcraft, were present at a meeting of the Paramount office forces at the Hub exchange, last week. At this conference were Manager Scully of the Connecticut exchange, Manager Moxley Blumenburg of the Portland, Me., exchange, Manager Harry Asher of the New England branch of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Manager McConville of the Boston Paramount office, together with other employees of this territory. The conference was held to discuss the new merger of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, the Paramount Pictures Corporation and the Artcraft Pictures Corporation.

Plan New Fox Exchange Building.

Boston, Mass.—Manager Harry Cambell of the Boston Fox Film office and Louis Lavine of the New York Fox office have been looking over property in the vicinity of Park square which is adjacent to the Boston Film district for the purpose of selecting a site for a new Fox building, which will be erected by the fall.

Some of the Big Features in This Territory.

Boston, Mass.—Clara Kimball Young's latest Selznick picture, "The Easiest Way," remained at the Modern theater for another week. So great was its success that Manager Pinanski decided that he would keep it on for another week.

"The Deemster," featuring Hall Caine's son, Derwent Hall Caine, had its Boston premier at the Park theater last week. This picture is one of the many state right pictures purchased for New England by Louis B. Mayer and was presented at the Park for the full week, with a special musical program. "The Masque of Life," another of Mr. Mayer's state right properties, was shown for the first time in Boston at the Loew's Orpheum.

Boston Business Items.

Boston, Mass.—B. Jaeger, traveling auditor of the World Film, paid a visit to the Boston World Film office recently to look over the Hub organization and found business booming.

Arthur P. McIntyre, Fox representative in Rhode Island, Connecticut and Cape Cod, reports bad business on the Cape owing to the war scare, and most particularly to the submarine menace. Many of the theaters have closed for the summer months and those that usually stay open for the heated term are considering not opening.

Fred Wright Aids Recruiting.

HAGERSTOWN, MD. — Fred. Wright, manager of the Colonial theater in this city, ran the Vitagraph production, "Womanhood, the Glory of a Nation" for three days beginning Thursday, May 3. The admission price was 25 cents, which, it is understood, is the highest price paid for this class of entertainment in Hagerstown for several months. Large crowds attended. In conjunction with the showing of this feature. Mr. Wright organized a large preparedness parade which took place on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The mayor, chief of police, other city officials and boy and girl scouts participated. A beautiful girl, dressed as Liberty, rode a white charger at the head of the procession and later appeared on the stage of the theater. It is estimated that fully 2,000 were in line. The end of the parade was the Colonial theater. A recruiting station was located in the theater during the three days and 7 were gained on the first.

Clover Changes Hands.

Baltimore, Md.—The Clover theater, 414 East Baltimore street, which has for some months been under the management of Harry P. Moorehead, has now been taken over by Milton Caplon, who, it is understood, will also operate a film exchange at 202 North Gay street. Mr. Moorehead is now managing the Plaza theater, 1105 North Broadway.

A. D. Gans Buys Out Opposition Exchanges.

Baltimore, Md.—The week of April 30, was a busy one for Arthur D. Gans, manager of the Standard Film Service exchange, for he bought out two of his opposition exchanges, namely: The Interstate Feature Film and the National Film exchanges, which were formally located at 202 North Gay street. Their entire equipment, including films, machines and office furniture was purchased by Mr. Gans and removed to his new headquarters at 141 North Gay street.

Booking Agency Includes Moving Pictures.

Baltimore, Md.—One of the features of the Eastern Vaudeville Association, a new booking agency which has just recently been opened in Baltimore is the fact that they are to include motion pictures in the acts which they will control. Those who are associated with the enterprise include: Charles E. Thropp, Charles E. Farson, both of Baltimore and F. G. Nixon-Nirdlinger of Philadelphia. According to arrangements which have been perfected, this organization will control musicians, dancers, singers, circus performers, hippodrome acts and motion pictures.

"The Easiest Way" Will Be Shown in Court

Selznick Corporation Will Make Test Case of Pennsylvania Censor Decision. Picture Shown to Local Reviewers.

By F. V. Armato, 144 N. Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—"The Easiest Way" starring Clara Kimball Young, was given a private review in the projection rooms of the Stanley company last Friday evening. At the request of Mr. Wilder of the Selznick corporation the dramatic editors of several Philadelphia newspapers were present.

The review was given as part of a campaign to contest the decision of the State Board of Censors. The censors had ordered numerous eliminations including the whole sixth reel, and the thought was to secure expert opinion to be used in evidence. Owing to the demands of the censor the producers have decided to make a test case and the picture is to be shown in court on Tuesday next.

The picture will be presented exactly as shown in order that the opinions of the experts may be available. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that there was nothing objectionable in the picture as shown and that it followed closely the stage version, which had a long New York run and played here and in many other places without objection. Nothing but praise was heard for the excellent direction of Albert Capellani and it was agreed that Miss Young has never done better screen work. This is particularly evident in the close-ups which are exceptionally numerous and exceptionally well done.

New Feature in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa.—During the current week many new and important feature productions have had their premier showings here. At the Forrest one of the most important legitimate houses of the city, Universal's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" commenced a limited engagement which is expected to be protracted for some time.

"Joan the Woman" entered its last week at the Chestnut Street opera house.

Mary Pickford's latest "A Romance of the Redwoods" was shown at the Stanley all week.

The Arcadia is showing Jack Pickford and Vivian Martin in "The Girl at Home," which is sharing honors with Bessie Barriscale in "The Snarl."

At the Strand Muriel Ostriche is being shown in "Moral Courage."

The picturizations of O. Henry's stories are in much demand here and are being booked as added attractions at practically all the leading houses.

C. E. Shurtleff Visits Local Pathe.

Philadelphia, Pa.—C. E. Shurtleff, special representative of Pathe, visited the local exchange within the last few days to outline new plans and install a new sales system, which he expects will increase the efficiency of the booking department. He is making a tour of the Pathe branches and previous to his arrival here had already visited Atlanta, Ga.; Charlotte, West Va.; and Washington D. C. His next stop will be Pittsburgh and from there he will continue westward.

Two Pathe Men Join Naval Reserve.

Philadelphia, Pa.—James M. Keating, shipper of the Pathe exchange, and William Bevan, a former Pathe employe, have enlisted in the Naval Reserve, and are already on their way to serve Uncle Sam. They were given a big send off by all their Pathe fellow workers.

Ruby Theater a Part of Central Market Claim.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Frank W. Buhler, general manager of the Central Market Street Amusement Co., has added the Ruby theater at Market and Marshall streets to the list of theaters under his direction. The theater is up-to-date in every particular and contains a magnificent organ. This makes the sixth theater to come under the control of the Central Market Street Company.

The other five are the Vistoria, at 9th and Market streets; the Savoy, at 1211 Market street; the Princes at 1018 Market street; the Market Street theater, at 333 Market street and the Auditorium, at 8th and Race streets. For several weeks workmen have been busy at the Savoy preparing an appropriate chamber for the installation of a two manual orchestral organ with string attachment, which is heralded as the first of its kind. It is expected that the new instrument will be completed by June 15.

Stanley Mastbaum Buys Globe Theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Following the recent announcement of Stanley V. Mastbaum's acquisition of two large and modern photoplay houses here, the Imperial and the Empress, comes the news that he has also purchased the Globe theater, at 59th and Market streets. This house was formerly the property of Mr. T. Cunningham.

Beautiful Staging of "20,000 Leagues"

Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Attractive lighting effects and special music rendered by an orchestra of twenty pieces were the features of the showing at the Belasco theater here of the photoplay, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." This production took exceptionally well and, as one newspaper critic put it, three generations turned out to see the visualization of a book which was famous long before motion pictures were thought of, and at a time when submarines were only the absurd imaginings of an eccentric Frenchman—Jules Verne.

Attention was attracted to the showing of the films at the Belasco by the employment of four men dressed in divers' suits, who paraded around the streets, and the two-horse float upon which rested a twelve-foot submarine. The lobby of the theater was decorated with cut flowers, huge potted rhododendrons, palms and ferns, and in the center of a bower of these was an oblong acquarium about four feet long, filled with large gold fish, loaned to the theater by the Bureau of Fisheries of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Inside the theater the decorations are carried out on quite an elaborate scale, for on the stage is a large collection of palms, ferns, cut flowers and potted plants. All of this work was done by Gude Bros., one of the best known floral firms in the city, and no pains were spared to make a big showing. The Belasco system of lighting was used throughout the showing of the production.

Another feature, and one that attracts attention at times such as the present, is the use of slides throwing on the screen three verses of "America." Before the first of these is shown, a slide bearing the request that the audience arise and sing is flashed.

"Nearly everybody who is anybody has visited the theater for this showing," said Sidney B. Lust, who is booking the production in this territory. "We have had the members of President Wilson's cabinet, officers of the General Staff of the Army, officials high up in the Navy and Marine Corps, members of Congress, and members of the diplomatic corps and the courts. We are doing very well with it and will continue the film for a period of two weeks in all. We are also going to run in Baltimore for an indefinite period."

Manager Berger Celebrates Anniversary

Washington, D. C.—Rudolph Berger, manager of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay film exchange, last week entertained at his home in the Mississippi apartments a dozen members of his office and sales force. The occasion was the first anniversary of the opening of the K-E-S-E office at Sixth and F streets, northwest. One of the side features of the dinner was the place card favor and menu. The place card was a miniature fiber film case which Mr. Berger had made especially for the occasion. It had a miniature reel of film on the inside and properly labeled. On the outside of the case was an address ticket bearing the name of the person before whose place it had been set. The red and yellow labels of caution and return were also stuck on just as they are on the real film cases.

The menu created a great many laughs. It contained the following:

Burlesque Menu, a la K-E-S-E.
Film men's consomme.
Minced film cases with shellac sauce.
Photographs a la Creole.
Filmed spaghetti. Musty Suffer demi-tasse Rope Cigars.

After the dinner the entire party went to Keith's theater, where they occupied a row of choice seats. Mr. Berger was congratulated in a number of speeches and the wish was expressed that the coming year would be even more successful than the last. Mr. Berger in turn thanked the sales and office people for the cooperation which they had rendered him.

Sam Flax Promoted to Head Local Metro.

Washington, D. C.—Sam Flax, formerly booker at the exchange of Pathe, Inc., in this city, is the new office manager at the Metro exchange. In addition to this, he will also have the title of secretary-treasurer of the corporation.

The change comes as a promotion to Mr. Flax, who is one of the best known attaches of the film business in this section. Naturally, everybody is glad that he made the jump and wish him success in this new undertaking. Mr. Flax had been with the Pathe exchange since it took over the Eclectic Feature Film exchange, having joined Herbert Osborn when the latter was made manager and remaining when Manager O'Donnell assumed charge, up to the time of going with the Metro outfit.

Sentiment for Putting War Tax on Patrons.

Washington, D. C.—The proposed new film exchange building again took up a large part of the evening when the members of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association held their semi-monthly dinner in the Flemish room of the National Press Club. But aside from this, plenty of time was found in which to discuss the pending war emergency revenue bill which contains several taxes to be applied against the moving picture business.

A number of speakers declared that the theater tax should be placed upon the public, and not upon the exhibitor, and the latter should be prohibited from voluntarily assuming the tax. They declared that the proposed tax on negatives and raw film would prove to be a heavy burden on the already over-taxed industry. The film companies under the new bill will have to pay taxes in some way or another on everything they buy, sell or do.

Allied Visitors See French War Films

Marshal Joffre, Viviani, Members of British Mission; Secretary Lansing and Many Notables Visit Belasco Theater.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The management of the Belasco theater last week had the opportunity of entertaining the members of both the British and French missions now in the United States for the purpose of conferring with American Government officials upon our own war activities. They represented one of the most distinguished audiences ever seen in a Washington theater.

The guests in the boxes included Rene Viviani, who heads the French Mission; Marshal Joffre, Admiral Chocheprat, Marquis de Chambru, the French Ambassador, the British Ambassador, General B. T. M. Bridges, of the British Mission; Secretary Lansing of our own State Department, and practically all of the other members of the British and French Missions accompanied by our own State Department officials. All of these men were heartily cheered on arrival.

The occasion was the showing of the French war pictures and the Belasco was crowded to capacity, while outside the house hundreds of people, unable to gain admission, stood that they might get a view of Marshal Joffre, their idol, and the other members of the party. Secretary of the Interior Lane presided and presented former Ambassador to France Myron T. Herrick, who paid a high tribute to the French people and their soldiers, and also spoke in glowing terms of the Ambassador and Mrs. Jusserand.

So great was the attendance that the performance was repeated, the proceeds being intended for disbursement in alleviating the suffering of the blinded and wounded soldiers of France.

Julius Peyser Buys Casino Theater.

Washington, D. C.—The Casino theater, on F street, near Seventh street, northwest, was last week sold at auction to Julius I. Peyser. The purchase was made from the trustees, Edgar A. Behrend and Isaac Nordlinger and was subject to a first trust (mortgage) of $60,000, although the price of the house was not disclosed. The new owner has declined to state to what use he will put the theater. It was built about seven years ago. It has changed hands several times and has not been open for any length of time this year. Although the entrance to this playhouse is only a few feet from Seventh street, one of the busiest thoroughfares of the city, it seems to have been impossible to make the theater pay its owners a profit.

Lusitania Picture Moves Washington Audience.

Washington, D. C.—The initial showing of the film drawings of Winsor McCay, the noted cartoonist, depicting the sinking of the Lusitania, were shown last week at the National Press Club to a large enthusiastic audience of newspapermen, Congressmen and other prominent more or less in public life.

It is said that 25,000 pictures were drawn by the artist. The task was completed Saturday, April 29, practically two years having been devoted to the work. The large audience at the Press Club greeted the pictures with favor, but without the usual applause, because of the awful tragedy represented by the sinking of the big passenger steamer which cost the lives of 1,500 people, including 200 Americans. The film shows the maneuvers of the German submarine, the sailing of the passenger steamer, the attack upon her and the sinking. It shows women and children jumping overboard from the doomed ship, their struggles in the water and the efforts to save themselves. It was declared by all that the film is a very powerful one.

MORE BALTIMORE ITEMS.

Baltimore Film Business Notes.

Baltimore, Md. — Frederick Clement Weber, manager of the Gertrude McCoy theater, reports that he had to hang out his S.R.O. sign when he screened Charlie Chaplin in "The Cure" last week.

The New Crescent theater, 1507 West Lafayette avenue, which had been under the management of Robert Newberry for several weeks in now closed.

Robert Fox, vice president of the Linden Company, operating the Rialto theater, is acting as a captain of a team to secure subscription to the Baltimore fund. Reports have it that he is doing excellent work.

G. S. Benjamin manager of the Red Moon theater states that on Saturday, May 5, Henry B. Walthal in "The Truant Soul" played to large houses.

In order to get proceeds toward a fund for the purchasing of grass seed, a moving picture entertainment was held at the Guilford School on Thursday and Friday night, May 3 and 4.

River View Park, one of Baltimore's most popular summer resorts, opened it 25th season on Saturday, May 5.

PITTSBURGH NEWS ITEMS.

Novelty Theater Again Open.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The rebuilt Novelty theater, 217 Federal street, Northside, Pittsburgh, which was destroyed by fire several months ago, was thrown open to the public on May 10. The owner, F. Miller, has spared no expense in the construction and equipment of the new Novelty, and it is a handsome addition to the fine array of picture theaters in its locality. The front has been restored to its original imposing proportions, while the interior presents an artistic and cosy appearance. The seating capacity has been increased to 800. The large opening attendance indicates that the Novelty will enjoy an even greater popularity than in the past as the home of high-class feature pictures.

Comique Reopens Under New Management.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Comique theater, Beaver avenue, Northside, Pittsburgh, which was conducted by Spencer Brothers, but which has been dark for some time, has been puchased by the firm of Murphy & Teggee, and was opened recently under very auspicious circumstances. The new owners of the Comique are experienced exhibtors and are putting into effect some progressive ideas that promise to make the theater a success. Among other good subjects they have booked Pathe's serial, "The Mystery of the Double Cross," featuring Mollie King.

Got Around Censor By Staging Living Scene.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—In connection with the elaborate showing of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," Manager William Moore Patch, of the Pitt theater, is staging with living actors several scenes that has been eliminated by the Pennsylvania board of censors, and the result has been very effective. As was the case with other large productions presented at the Pitt, the bulk of Verne's romance depends largely upon an episode which had been cut out, and after a fruitless appeal to the Board, Mr. Patch again resorted to the above means of presenting a coherent story.

Local Notes of Interest.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Manager Fuller, of the Pittsburgh Pathe exchange, reports business steadily on the increase throughout his territory, there being an exceptionally active booking on the latest serial. "The Neglected Wife," starring Ruth Rowland. To aid in handling the large volume of trade, three film inspectors have just been added, making seven in all. Robert Caskey has been made assistant booker at the Pathe exchange.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Elmore theater, Centre avenue, Pittsburgh, is being extensively remodeled by the owner, M. Feitler. The stage will be removed, the height of the auditorium made greater and a new front will be installed. Both the exterior and interior wil be handsomely redecorated. It is planned to convert the Elmore into an exclusively high-grade picture theater.

Kane, Pa.—The Temple theater, Kane, Pa., has been sold by Fred Lester to the Star Amusement company, which is composed of J. E. Fluke and F. D. Evans, who conduct the Star theater. Mr. Lester has taken over the Grand theater in Kane.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Olympic theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, has announced that all the Selznick releases, featuring Clara Kimball Young, will be run six days, beginning with "The Price She Paid."

John McAleer Heads Pittsburgh U Exchange

Former Manager of Wheeling Independent Exchange Promoted to Important Post —Additions to Sales Staff.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6104 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—One of the most important managerial changes that has taken place in some time was announced recently when John McAleer, formerly manager of the Wheeling, W. Va., branch of the Universal Film, known as the Independent Film exchange, was placed in charge of the Independent exchange in Pittsburgh. He succeeds T. C. Bronstetter, who has become special traveling representative of the company.

Mr. McAleer is one of the most popular film men in the trade and prior to his appointment to the Wheeling office he was prominently identified with the indutry in Pittsburgh. He has had wide experience here, having come to this city two years ago as manager of the local branch of the Picture Playhouse Film Company. When that firm passed out of existence, he joined the Universal forces and became assistant to Manager Hughes.

For the past year he has ably guided the affairs of the West Virginia branch, and his promotion is in recognition of his fine accomplishments there. Mr. McAleer is remembered as one of the moving spirits of the Pittsburgh Screen Club, and his work in leading the recent successful fight against the enactment of censorship laws in West Virginia was widely commended. His return to this city is welcomed by a host of friends who wish him the fullest measure of success.

The Wheeling branch of the Independent is now in charge of Miss I. M. Olszta, formerly secretary to Mr. McAleer.

In taking the reins of the Pittsburgh Independent exchange, Mr. McAleer has made several important additions to the sales staff. J. A. McCollough, formerly for several years with the Paramount here, has joined the force and will look after the interests of the Universal in the Western Pennsylvania field. J. Sarjin, recently of the Universal Mecca branch in New York City, will cover the West Virginia teritory, making his headquarters at the Wheeling office.

James B. Clark Says Patrons Should Pay War Tax.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The placing of a 10 per cent. tax on amusements by the war revenue bill now before Congress is one of the principal topics of discussion in local moving picture circles. James B. Clark, head of the Rowland and Clark chain of theaters in Pittsburgh, made the following statement as to the attitude of the exhibitor in regard to the added burden: "Under no circumstances should exhibitors bear the burden of the proposed ticket tax to be imposed on theaters by the government—that should be paid by the patron. The matter of a cent is a small one for the patron, but collectively it means a big item for the exhibitor. With many houses it would mean the elimination of all profit from their business, as the cost of conducting a theater has increased to such an extent that the net proceeds have been cut down to a minimum.

"Exhibitors should make up their minds that the patrons must pay the tax and they should adopt a rule to that effect just as soon as the law becomes operative. In other lines of business the consumer is obliged to pay the tax, why not in the picture business? It might be well to call a meeting of exhibitors to discuss the matter just as soon as definite information regarding the tax comes from Washington."

Feature Film and Calcium Light Will Distribute Merger Supplies.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The recent big merger of moving picture supply houses was noted with considerable interest by the trade and announcement has been issued by the Feature Film & Calcium Light Company, Film Exchange building, Pittsburgh, that this concern will be the distributing point here.

D. C. France, formerly manager of the company, will continue as manager of the Pittsburgh branch of the United Theater Equipment Corporation. Mr. France is well known to the exhibitors throughout this section and his choice as manager meets with much approval. He has been at the head of the Feature Film & Calcium Light Company for the past two years, prior to which time he had charge of the film department of the same concern for three years.

Metro Exchange Now at 133 Vine St.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Metro exchange has removed to large and handsome quarters at 1331 Vine street, where they occupy the entire building. The location is the same formerly occupied by Paramount. The entire first floor has been divided into offices, done in mahogany and very tastefully furnished. John Clark, the manager; William Bethel, assistant manager, and G. Smith, the booker, each have a private room. Mr. Clark has just returned from an extensive tour of the West on Metro business.

Allen May Joins Selznick Forces.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Allen May, for over two years city salesman for the World Film, has recently joined the Selznick forces and gone back to his old boss, Lewis J. Selznick, the man who introduced him to the film business. He was given a handsome reception by his friends in honor of the new connection and received enough bouquets to fill the display window.

John Spiers Is Proud Daddy.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John Spiers, of the Plaza theater, is the proud father of a ten-pound baby girl, which arrived last week. Because of its curly hair and winning smile it will be christened Mary Pickford Spiers.

Finds Out What His Community Likes.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Albert Brown, of the Overbrook and Grand theaters, is convinced of the necesity of special children's pictures for Saturday matinees. Last week he played Florence Reed in "The Eternal Sin," all day and while the evening performances were well attended and the picture apparently thoroughly enjoyed, the matinee was light. It is his belief that the sensational title had much to do with this result.

Cincinnati Screen League Is Being Formed

New Organization for the Betterment of the Business Will Take Anyone Interested in Films—Is Under Wing of Screen Club.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307, 1st Nat. Bank, Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI, O.—Plans which for some time have been discussed for the extension of the Cincinnati Screen Club to take in, besides exhibitors, film men, members of the press and others connected with the business, the public as well, were carried out recently when a meeting was held for this purpose. Representatives of a number of women's clubs and civic organizations were present, besides exchange managers, exhibitors and others, and the result was the organization of the Cincinnati Screen League, the object of which is to further the best interests of moving pictures by all possible means. I. W. McMahan, of McMahan & Jackson, was elected temporary chairman, and will shortly call another meeting for the purpose of further perfecting the organization.

Cincinnati Film Building About Ready.

Cincinnati, O.—Alterations on the building at Seventh and Main streets, the upper floors of which will be used by a number of Cincinnati film exchanges, have so far progressed that preparations are being made by the film men to take possession, and at least one exchange, the World Film, in charge of Manager Harris Hurst, has moved in. So many exchanges grouped in one building have brought about a movement to make the place a sort of general rendezvous for visiting exhibitors. Some sort of celebration in the nature of a house-warming, with appropriate entertainment for the guests, will be held when all of the film tenants have moved in, which will be about the middle of May. The building will probably be known as the Film Exchange Building, as all except the ground floor will be occupied by exchanges.

Cincinnati League Plans to Aid Red Cross.

Cincinnati, O.—In connection with the vigorous compaign to secure members and contributions for the Cincinnati chapter of the American Red Cross, the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League, with its usual patriotism, has come to the front with an offer to use every box-office to aid in the good work. Signs urging the public to affiliate with the movement have been posted in the box-offices, and ticket-takers have lists for the enrollment of members, and are authorized to accept the membership fees. The object of the compaign is to secure 30,000 members of the Red Cross in Cincinnati, and indications are that it will be accomplished.

"Daughter of Gods" at Faurot Opera House.

Lima, O.—The highest prices ever charged in Lima for a moving-picture attraction prevailed at the Faurot opera house for the two-day engagement of the Fox film featuring Annette Kellerman, "A Daughter of the Gods." At the matinees the range was from 25 to 75 cents, while at night the top figure was $1.00. Full houses saw the picture, however, in spite of these high prices.

"Mothers of France" Enthusiastically Received.

Cincinnati, O.—In connection with the exhibition of the Brady-World film, "Mothers of France," featuring Sarah Bernhardt, at the Alhambra, Manager Weigel at one performance had as his personal guests 100 members of the First Regiment, of Cincinnati, and a number of old soldiers, veterans of the Civil War. Following the performance the audience joined unanimously in the designation of a committee, headed by Christine Mayo and Manager Charles Weigel, to send a telegram to Mme. Bernhardt, in New York, expressing appreciation of the film, and hope for her early and complete recovery from her operation. A gracious reply was received from the great actress, thanking the senders for their expressions. Manager Weigel says that "Mothers of France" aroused warm enthusiasm at every performance, the obvious reality of the war scenes being especially praised.

"Joan, the Woman" Pleases Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O.—The opening week of "Joan the Woman," the great De Mille picture featuring Geraldine Farrar, proved to be a big one at the Grand, as the public flocked to see the popular prima donna in her greatest film role, and the high prices charged, ranging up to a dollar, were no shock after those to which people had become accustomed during the run of "The Birth of a Nation." Moreover, half-column reviews in the dramatic columns of the papers, highly favorable, and treating the attraction in the same manner as the regular theatrical productions seen at the theater, helped materially. The tone of the press toward the big film productions has been all that could be desired in Cincinnati, and has played no small part in their success as drawing cards. The run of "Joan the Woman" bids fair, therefore, to be one of the best of the film season at the Grand.

Piqua, O.—Manager H. W. Kress, of the May Opera House, did a graceful turn recently, and incidentally sounded a timely note, by entertaining the local G. A. R. veterans at his showing of "The Crisis," the army scenes in which greatly pleased the old soldiers. A vote of thanks was adopted at the next post meeting and formally forwarded to Manager Kress.

Memphis Managers Get Arrested Weekly

Every Sunday the Law Steps Forth and Serves Papers on Theaters—Council Urges Exhibitors to Sit Steady in Boat.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Sunday, May 6, marked the third consecutive action on the part of city authorities toward closing the local picture theaters on the Sabbath. Each time the papers have been served, but the theaters remain open and business continues to run in the customary manner. The trial in the city court had not been held for the last offense at the time this article was written, but on a former occasion the managers were assessed individual fines of $50, and bound to the Grand Jury, which refused to indict the show operators. Attorney Ralph Davis is determined to make a hard fight for the picture men, and reach a definite conclusion in their favor. Public sentiment is strongly in favor of the theaters, and every effort will be brought to bear on the powers-that-be to allow the houses to remain open as usual.

Hamilton Love Appointed to National Board.

Nashville, Tenn.—Hamilton Love, chairman of the local board of censors, has been appointed to a directorship on the National Board of Review, and will enter upon his new duties at once, wnich will be in connection with the local review work. The Nashville censor board is known to be one of the fairest in the country, and enjoys the co-operation of the local theater men at all times.

Alabama Censor Ordinance in Effect.

Albany, Ala.—The Albany moving picture censorship ordinance is now in effect. The Albany Council, following an exhaustive review and discussion of the situation, during which an ordinance repealing the one now in force was introduced by request, voted to stand solid on the position it took more than two weeks ago. At the meeting of the Council, C. H. Eyster, representing the local photoplay theaters, stated that a petition asking for the repeal of the ordinance had been signed by more than 600 voters of the city. Further investigation will be made and brought up at a later meeting.

Deposits Still Required in Tennessee

Exhibitors Have to Make Deposits to Get Programs—One Exhibitor Says He Would Welcome Open Market to Stimulate Business.

Nashville, Tenn.—Having received numerous inquiries from over the country recently, with regard to the deposit system in the Tennessee district, a few facts regarding this method of film rental are herewith appended. There seems to be a general impression that the deposit system has been given up by a majority of the companies leasing to Tennessee exhibitors, but such is not the case. The program companies invariably require this method of booking, and while not meeting the aproval of the showmen in a number of instances, is nevertheless employed unrestrictedly. The exhibitors are not allowed to use a selective method of booking, and in most instances the entire output of a certain company is designated to a particular theater or string of theaters in the same city operated under the same management.

With regard to the open market question, the effects of any such action on the part of the distributing agencies serving Nashville has not been noted, and the old order of things is still in effect. One Nashville exhibitor in particular recently made the statement that he would welcome the open market plan with open arms, as it would serve to stimulate business in his houses more than any other form known to him. Being a man of many years experience in the exhibiting field, he was in a position, he said, to know what he wanted and know what his patrons wanted, and could thus eliminate all undersirable subjects from his program. Another question submitted is with regard to express charges. The exhibtors pay all return express charges, and often when this item is overlooked at the shippers end of the line, a statement is forwarded from the exchange notifying the exhibitor that the amount of the shipment will be added to his account.

Kaufman Specials Booked in New Orleans.

Memphis, Tenn.—K. A. Bugbee, New Orleans manager of the Metro, is acting as agent for Kaufman Specials of Memphis, having been assigned all bookings for the animated cartoons and comedies distributed by Kaufman. The latest series to be assigned to Mr. Bugbee is the Flora Finch comedy output, which will be distributed both from the Memphis office of Kaufman and the New Orleans sub-division. A. H. Kaufman has just returned from a trip to New Orleans, where he closed extensive bookings with the Boehringer Amusement Company, which operates a chain of the high class New Orlean theaters.

"One Cent Day" Opens Serial Run.

Nashville, Tenn.—Wm. H. Wassman introduced in Nashville last week a "One cent day," the purpose of which was to get his patrons interested in the new serial, "The Double Cross," which began on that occasion.

Buffalo News Letter.

Buffalo Police Watch Sabbath Shows Closely.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Detectives acted as censors at the moving picture theaters of Buffalo last Sunday. They were ordered to do this by Police Chief Martin, who directed the local police captains to see that all theaters in their precincts complied with the law. After a thorough investigation no violations were reported. The police officers said they observed nothing demoralizing on the screens. Patrolmen were also ordered to inspect the local vaudeville shows on Sunday, and to close any house if the program got beyond the limits of a sacred concert. The theaters were all found to be operating within the law. The action of the police is said to have been due to a promise made by Mayor Fuhrman to delegates from the Buffalo Federation of Churches, when the delegates went before the City Council and demanded that Buffalo be made cleaner morally.

Minister Gets People to His Picture-Service.

Akron, N. Y.—Rev. Arthur Basham, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Akron, a village near Buffalo, who features moving pictures at his Sunday evening services at a theater in Akron, has offered his services to Uncle Sam in any way the Government may see fit to use them. Mr. Basham startled many members of his congregation when he first announced that he would devote a part of his Sunday programs to moving pictures. He then proceeded with his new plan of having his Sunday meetings in the Park theater, Akron, because, he said, many people would attend at the theater who would not go to church. That the idea was a success was proved by the fact that after the first couple of weeks, between 500 and 600 persons were in attendance each Sunday night.

Fire in Booth Does Little Damage.

Dunkirk, N. Y.—During a recent fire in the Empire moving picture theater in Dunkirk, N. Y., several hundred persons were able to file out of the house without any disorder. They were assured by the employees that there was no danger. The building was not damaged. A film ignited, and the fire spread to several other films, causing a loss of several hundred dollars damage. Charles Brooks, manager of the theater, and his brother, Earl Brooks, operator of the moving picture machine, were burned about the hands. Earl Brooks jumped from the machine room and slammed the metal door. Using hand chemicals, he and Manager Brooks fought the fire, which was confined to the operating room. Members of the fire department soon joined them, and the blaze was quickly extinguished.

Screen Stars to Attend Allied Bazaar.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Screen stars have been asked to attend the Allied Bazaar to be held in Buffalo on an elaborate scale at the end of this month for the benefit of the Red Cross. Managers of the bazaar announce that plans are being made to have these film favorites present: Pauline Frederick, Billie Burke, Raymond Hitchcock, Norma Talmage, William Farnum and William Gillette.

Find as Good Houses at Higher Rates

Louisville Exhibitors Pleased With Results of Increase in Admission Prices—Strand Has Been Getting Twenty-five Cents for Features.

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Stark Building, Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Since February the Strand theater has maintained prices at 20 cents or more, and has found that it is just as easy to get increased prices with good service and properly staged pictures, as it is to get ten cents. It has been showing "The Garden of Allah," "Womanhood," and one or two other large productions for 25 cents. This house has a large seating capacity, when the mezzanine, balcony and gallery are included, and while these seats sell at lower prices, the ground floor prices have been sufficient to show a good profit on the investment.

Other houses are also managing to get better prices without much difficulty, and it is being demonstrated that the public will pay the increases. J. J. Mussellman, manager of the Star theater, has been getting ten cents for several months, and reports that it is just as easy as getting five, and that some of the best crowds he has ever had have been experienced since increasing the price. Sunday business for several weeks has been exceptionally heavy.

L. J. Dittmar Visits Color Picture Studio.

Louisville, Ky. Louis J. Dittmar, manager of the Majestic Amusement Co., of Louisville, is at Jacksonville, Fla., where he is watching the work of the New Arts Picture Co., of which he is also president, and which is making a picture at Jacksonville, under the new color process which promises great things in the near future.

Second Floor Show Can Continue.

Shelbyville, Ky.—The operators of the moving picture theater conducted in "Music Hall," formerly known as Brown's opera house, will have no further trouble in operating the second floor picture show. Arrangements have finally been made whereby the effort to close the theater by the city officials has been given up. The house has been declared free from fire danger.

Civilization at Macauley's.

Louisville, Ky.—Macauley's theater on May 7 opened a nine day engagement with the big twelve reel war time feature "Civilization," the Ince spectacle. Four shows are given daily, starting at 12:30 o'clock, and lasting until 11 o'clock in the evening. Admission is placed at 25 cents and 50 cents. The First Kentucky Regiment has been aiding in attracting attention to the show.

Theater Notes Across Kentucky.

London, Ky.—W. C. Mills, who recently purchased the London theater, has completed the remodeling of the building, and recently opened his house.

Warsaw, Ky.—A. B. Bradley has disposed of the "Lyric theater," to his brother Leonard Bradley, having recently bought out the other stockholders in the Warsaw Lighting Co.

Frankfort, Ky.—R. L. McLean, former manager of the Capitol theater, has announced that he will shortly re-open the Grand theater, which has been closed for several months. The building is to be thoroughly overhauled, fire escapes will be arranged, and the house put in shape for conducting a first class ten cent show.

Owensboro, Key.—Manager Bleich, of the Empress theater, is installing a new electrical or mechanical orchestra, at a cost of $6,000.

Madisonville, Ky.—Manager Dozier, of the Garrick theater, recently swore out a warrent for the arrest of J. H. Calbath, who has been operating a publicity or popularity contest for the theater. Manager Dozier charged that Calbath had been converting money taken in to his own use. The examining trial was held before Judge Mills, and Calbath was held to the grand jury under a bond of $100.

Frankfort, Ky.—Following quickly in the wake of the Gem theater, the Columbia closed its doors last week, leaving only one theater in operation in the city. Manager H. W. Whitney, who had been running the house since January, said he was forced to close on account of the small patronage. The service of the theater has been leased to D. D. Smith, of the Capitol theater.

Glasgow, Ky.—The Trigg theater recently showed "The Crisis," featuring matinee prices of 25 cents and 15 cents; and night prices of 35 and 25 cents. These are good prices for a small town theater, but are considerably lower than prices asked in the larger cities.

Problems of Kentucky Theaters Discussed

Deposits and Bonding—Films That Can't Be Shown in Certain Localities—Payment of Express Charges Both Ways.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—During the past few months the question of paying deposits in advance on pictures of the first-run variety has been discussed with considerable interest, and exhibitors in various parts of the country have been asking for information on the subject. In handling program material one of the eastern companies is getting away from the deposit system, but requiring bond to be placed with an eastern bonding house, which relieves the exhibitor somewhat of paying out sums in advance. On wildcat stuff the exhibitor continues to pay in advance as he always has been forced to do. Some of the exchanges have been going into the open market more or less on old stuff, but are requiring all pictures to be paid for in advance.

On regular program stuff the exhibitors are not allowed to discard any of the features on the program, but in case features are sent, which may be dangerous to show in any special locality, the exhibitor as a rule has little trouble in cutting them out if he can show that the picture would be against public policy. Such pictures of course are not intended to be shown in districts where a court ruling would stop the showing, and the manufacturer does not care to take changes on starting something in such districts. However, the exhibitor is expected to take everything offered in a regular program, and he must show good cause for not accepting what is sent.

In the matter of paying express charges the exhibitor is required to pay all charges both ways, and to return films rewound and in good condition.

Reports have been received to the effect that exhibitors are allowed to pick their films and that the deposit system has been given up by one of the leading companies, but investigation has shown that such is not the case in this district at any rate.

Illinois Has Another Race Prejudice Bill

Negro Representative Introduces Into State Legislature a New Bill That Would Stop All Films Tending to Incite Race Hatred.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Representative Jackson, a negro, has introduced into the lower house of the Illinois state legislature a new bill, which would curb moving pictures tending to incite race hatred. The original bill on this line, which was so broad as to bar almost any film, was vetoed by Governor Lowden, and the new measure was drafted to meet the constitutional objections.

Of the former Jackson bill, the Springfield News-Record said, "The legislature must have been asleep when it passed such an act as this."

New Illinois Corporations.

Springfield, Ill.—Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson has issued certificate of incorporation to the following:

A. and B. Theater Advertising Corporation, Chicago; capital, $5,000; incorporators, Jules F. Beuret, George F. Adams, Carl R. Kiefer.

Advertising Film Service Association of America, Chicago; capital, $2,500; incorporators, Fred L. Steers, Harry T. Aspern, H. F. Imig.

Washington Photoplay Company, Chicago; capital, $5,000; incorporators, H. H. Hart, N. E. Fisch, I. F. Reedy.

Republic Film Producing Company, Chicago; name changed to Campbell Gas Generator Company; change of object; increase in directors.

Springfield Operators Get Increase.

Springfield, Ill.—A new three year agreement has been entered into by the Springfield exhibitors and operators. The increase will add $1.50 a week to the checks of the operators for three years.

Outdoor Show Season About to Open.

Springfield, Ill.—The summer season for outdoor moving picture shows given under the auspices of business men approaches. At Palmyra, E. V. Shearburn has contracted to supply the entertainment for the merchants each Thursday night, from May 1 to the last of September. A series of shows at Philo will be given for ten Wednesday nights, commencing May 9 at the local theater.

Galesburg, Ill.—The license of the Elite theater, on Cherry street, was revoked by the mayor becaus it operated on Sunday without permission.

Havana Theater Open on Sundays.

Havana, Ill.—The Lawford theater is venturing into the Sunday show field. This is an innovation for Havana, as no Sunday shows of any kind have ever been given.

New Theater in Benton, Illinois.

Benton, Ill.—It is reported that outside capital is planning to erect here a theater to cost $25,000. Negotiations have been entered into between the promoters and F. D. Whittington.

With Illinois Exhibitors.

Joliet, Ill.—Manager Rogan, of the Orpheum theater had as his guests at "Intolerance" Company E, of the Illinois National Guard.

Springfield, Ill.—The Lyric theater is cooperating with the citizens' naval committee in endeavoring to secure recruits by showing films of naval life.

Elgin, Ill.—The city plan is interesting Elgin citizens. The moving picture houses are aiding by showing slides with maps and views of Elgin as it should be.

Ransom, Ill.—The moving picture theater was opened for the season.

Hillsboro, Ill.—Moving pictures for Sunday visitors at Homer Park will open some time in May.

Paxton, Ill.—The Crystal theater had a film fire, but safeguards proved reliable.

Taylorville, Ill.—The Grand theater has put into operation a new policy of two acts of vaudeville and moving pictures. Admission will be five and ten cents.

Michigan Film Notes.

Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

An Exhibitor Who Has Made a Hit.

MANISTEE, MICH.—In chronicling the first anniversary of the advent of Otto Lauer into the local photoplay field the News Advocate says:

"In listing Manistee's gallery of celebrities it would never do to omit Otto J. Lauer, the lively manager of the Lyric theater. It never would, never, nevaire!

"Mr. Lauer has been in, of and for Manistee just a year ago. By way of celebration, he is off on a trout fishing expedition. We can't give him much on his choice of a day for such a diversion, but it's a good gamble that Lauer'll not be lonely wherever he is. For Lauer is good company, even if he's all by himself. If the trout won't bite—well, what's the matter with a game of "two pair" in a cozy camp? We're willing to wage that Otto is as expert at that as he is at fly casting.

"Lauer came to the Lyric as its manager May 1, 1916. Asked the other day when he expected to leave Manistee, he countered, 'Whaddaya mean, leave Manistee? Say, boy, they couldn't club me out of this town, that's how stuck I am on it.'

"Which proves what we've felt all along—that, although not a long time resident of Manistee, Lauer, in addition to being one of its most useful citizens, is one of its most enthusiastic boosters.

"Well, Lauer's year in Manistee has been a good one for him as well as for the city. Since coming here he has acquired a wife—got her in another city and brought her here, which is fair enough; also a membership in the Elks, and a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

"'Whaddaya mean, leave Manistee?' says Lauer. 'I ain't never goin' to leave it.'

"All right Otto. Suits us all right. Glad you feel that way."

New Theater Jottings in Michigan.

Flint, Mich.—The civic and fraternal societies of Flint sent congratulations to Col. W. S. Butterfield and Manager Frank H. Butterfield for the enterprise display in the erection of the new Palace theater on Kearsley street. The dedicatory ceremonies of the Palace was an event of considerable local significance.

Escanaba, Mich.—G. L. Stiles, of Chicago, has succeeded H. D. Brackett as manager of the Upper Peninsula exchange of the Universal Film Company. Brackett has resigned to conduct the State Film Company of this city, which he has formed. He will deal in state rights in the Upper Peninsula, starting out with "Civilization."

Port Huron, Mich.—Chas Hubbard has sold the Bijou theater to Herbert L. Weil. Weil will give a special show for the youngsters every Saturday morning. Weil also has taken a five year lease on the Majestic theater for use in playing big photoplay attractions.

Battle Creek, Mich.—Joseph Friedman has assumed the position as manager of the Bijou theater. Friedman has been in the photoplay business for some time, having spent five years with the General Film Company, and for the last two years having been prominent in the forces of W. H. Butterfield.

Monroe, Mich.—The Denniston theater has let the contract for the erection of the new Family theater. It will cost $42,000. It is to be ready for occupancy about August 1.

What Michigan Exhibitors Are Doing.

Bay City, Mich.—Manager Williams, of the Bijou theater, played a return date of "The Romance of Bay City," the home talent film.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—The Majestic theater has changed its policy, and will use vaudeville only on Sunday. The rest of the time will be devoted to pictures.

Hastings, Mich.—The epidemic of scarlet fever having abated, moving picture theaters here were allowed to open.

Port Huron, Mich.—The Bijou theater has been formally opened. A feature will be Saturday morning shows for children. At one of these special programs attendance was stimulated by giving 500 grab bags to the first 500 children to enter the doors.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—The Elite theater has just observed its fifth anniversary.

Cleveland Musicians Union Demands Raise

New Wage Scale Asked for Would Add from Two to Three Dollars a Week to Salaries—Prices Going Up All Along Line.

From M. A. Malaney, 218 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—The musicians union of Cleveland has announced a new scale of wages, amounting to from two to three dollars a week increase. Theater managers don't know what they will do about it yet, but upon being interviewed, several said they would cut down their orchestras one or two pieces so that the increase would not affect them.

Other smaller theaters may put in automatic instruments.

"If we don't do something like this, some of us will be put out of business," said a well known manager.

On top of this comes the announcement that the price of electric current is to be raised.

Already, within the last few weeks, the exhibitors have heard of the proposed war tax and the cost of printing has gone up. They believe, however, the war tax will fall upon the public, that is if it is worked like the plan in operation in Canada, where the patrons buys two tickets—one for admission and one for the war tax.

All these matters will be threshed out in the state convention which is held in Cleveland the week of May 15.

Censor Board Inspectors at Work.

Columbus, O.—Chairman Williams of the Ohio Censor Board made it known that there are a number of traveling inspectors for the state industrial commission, calling upon picture theaters to make inspections of the films shown, following a complaint that a man had called in a theater several times, showing a badge which he took from his pocket, but declining to give his name.

Cleveland Screen Club's Nominations.

Cleveland, O.—At a largely attended meeting of the Screen Club of Cleveland recently nominations for the officers to serve during the second year of the club, were made. They are:

For President—George W. Erdmann and E. M. Downs; for vice-president—Max Marcus; for treasurer—David Alder, Martin Printz, Tom Colby and Jack Greenbaum.

For executive secretary—William Friedman and George Oldfield; for corresponding secretary—M. A. Malaney, E. A. Esch-mann and Elmer Neubler; for sergeant-at-arms—Max Schachtel.

The election will be held at the business meeting June 6.

The club has made arrangements for a series of talks by well known local men. They will be given every Wednesday noon.

Cleveland Notes.

Cleveland—The Stillman theater has gone back to its old policy of playing pictures not longer than two weeks and at popular prices. This house was presenting big spectacular pictures at prices up to $1.50.

Cleveland—Tom Carroll, well known local theater man is now the assistant manager of the big new Mall Duplex theater.

Detroit News Letter

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

New Interests Take Over the Deluxe.

Detroit, Mich.—The Deluxe theater, now under way at Kercheval and Parkview avenues, Detroit, has been taken over by new interests, principally represented by F. A. Schneider, president of the Detroit Exhibitors' League and president of the Stratford theater, and William H. Steffen, secretary of the Stratford Theater Co. The Deluxe will seat 1,700 and will be ready about the first of November. C. M. Orth, now manager of the Boulevard theater, is on the board of directors of the Deluxe.

World Productions Going Strong.

Detroit, Mich.—The World-Brady-Made productions are creating a lot of new friends these days among exhibitors. We have had heard a great deal of unsolicited praise for the World from such houses as the Family, Detroit, Garden, Adrian, and W. H. Arthur of Marshall. They have found their business increasing very materially on days of the World program. Robert Cotton is manager at Detroit for the World and a more enthusiastic executive for his company you would never find. He never loses an opportunity to talk and sell World-Brady-Made Pictures.

The Palace theater in Saginaw has been re-opened with motion pictures. Sidney L. Alexander, president and general manager, says the policy will be "good pictures at 10 and 15 cents."

Charles A. McVicker, former general manager for the William F. Klatt chain of theaters in Detroit, and who left for California about the first of February, is back in town and is again associated with the Klatt enterprises.

The Drury Lane theater, Detroit, has signed for first-run in Detroit on the Butterfly brand of pictures to be released through the Universal.

The Gardiner Theater Equipment company has moved from 154 Woodward avenue to 101 West Fort street, Detroit. The former name of this concern was the Detroit Theater Equipment company.

Flint, Mich.—Colonel W. S. Butterfield announces that the new Palace theater, in Flint, now under construction and seating 1,450, will be completed and ready to open about the middle of August. Next season its policy will be vaudeville. The Garden theater, in Flint, now playing pictures, will again show pictures exclusively next season. The Majestic there will play road attractions and big film attractions on dark nights. The three houses will give Col. Butterfield a total seating capacity in Flint of 3,350.

Ontario Will Exact Tax from Pass-Users

Tax on the Highest Priced Seats in the Theater Will Be Required of Those Using Passes—Burden Wouldn't Be Widely Felt.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St., West Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, ONTARIO.—The Ontario Government has taken a crack at pass-holders in an effort to increase the provincial revenue. The authorities have decreed that all users of regular passes or complimentary tickets of any kind must pay the maximum war tax applicable to any particular theater or other place of amusement. In other words, if the scale of prices for an attraction ranges from 15 cents to $2, the holder of a pass, press ticket, etc., for a performance must pay the war tax for $2 seats regardless of the value of the seat he occupies. In many instances, of course, pass holders are given the best seats in the house so that they pay the maximum war rate anyway. If, on the other hand, a newspaperman runs into a theater for a few minutes just to take a "slant" at a show or picture and does not occupy any seat at all, he will have to pay the war tax on the best seat in the house.

The amusement war tax ranges from one cent to 25 cents, according to the prices of admission.

The top price for practically all of the larger film houses in the Province is 25c., except for a special attraction when the best seats may sell for 35c. or 50c. The war tax accompanying a 25c. admission ticket is only two cents. The new regulation is not going to bring any hardship upon anybody with the possible exception of the newspaper reviewer or critic who visits three to six shows in a day. At the same time the difference to the Government in dollars and cents is not going to mount quickly into a fortune.

Local Universal Notes.

Toronto—Clair Hague, general manager of the Canadian Universal, visited Montreal during the first week of May for the purpose of making changes at the Universal's Montreal branch following the resignation of Manager T. O. Eyerle to assume the management of the Montreal office of the Famous Players Film Service.

Allen Christie has also left the Universal's Montreal office to become the manager of the Independent Film & Supply Co. at St. John, N. B.

Toronto's Strand Bought By L. Meyer.

Toronto—The Strand theater, Toronto, has been purchased by L. Meyer of New York. This is one of the largest houses in Toronto but the former controlling interests made an assignment for the benefit of creditors after which the theater was put up for sale. Mr. Meyer was the successful bidder. The Toronto representative of Moving Picture World has been given to understand that practically no change in the house personnel will be made—for the present at least. Clarence Robson, formerly of Allfeatures, Limited, continues as manager of the Strand while his chief assistants, Mr. Mitchell and Dr. Dineen, are also remaining.

Since the change in ownership announcement has been made of a few physical changes, such as the installation of a new gold fibre screen, new projection machines, etc. An open booking policy is being followed, one of the first big attractions to be secured being the Sarah Bernhardt feature, "Mothers of France." This was shown during the whole week of May 7. During the previous week the headliners consisted of Metro subjects.

Will Add to the New Strand.

Hamilton, Ont.—Messrs. Farewell and Guest of the New Strand theater, Hamilton, have applied to the Hamilton city architect for a permit for a $15,000 addition to their theater. This addition will be a one story structure, 80 by 40 feet, and of brick construction.

New Picture Theater.

Burlington Beach, Ont.—Addie Burke, 17 Mulberry street, Hamilton, has started the construction of a group of amusement buildings at Burlington Beach, one of which will be a picture theater. The cost of all the buildings is placed at $24,000.

Canadian Theater Jottings—Changes.

Toronto, Ont.—F. Coulton, for two years in charge of the Photodrome, Queen Street East, Toronto, has become manager of the Globe theater, Toronto, in succession to Arthur Cohen. The latter has arranged to handle the distribution of Ivan productions in Canada and, in addition, he will continue to have general supervision of both the Globe and Rialto theaters, Toronto. Mr. Cohen is president of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario.

London, Ont.—Mr. Graves has suceeded Eddie Bernard as manager of the Lyric theater, London, Ontario. Graves was manager of the Grand opera house at St. Thomas for some time.

Ottawa, Ont.—The Strand theater, Willington Street, Ottawa, which had been dark for a long time, has been reopened and is under the management of Mr. Murray, formerly of the Empire theater, Ottawa.

Toronto, Ont.—H. Patte of the Toronto Universal headquarters has resigned and has left for Northern Ontario where he will conduct a summer camp for the next five months.

Montreal, Que.—J. Smyth of the Connaught theater, Montreal, and E. Boyd of the Rex theater, Montreal, have resigned to join the sales staff of the General Film.

Ontario Exchange Men's Club Proposes Red Cross Day.

Toronto—The Toronto Exchange Managers' Club has been considering the advisability of establishing permanent headquarters with a permanent secretary or manager in charge to deal with complaints from exhibitors, claims against express companies and other differences or issues.

It has also been proposed by James Travis, secretary of the Exchange Club, that the whole moving picture industry of Ontario celebrate a "Red Cross Day." The exchanges are to donate the use of all films for this day and the exhibitors will be asked to turn over the house proceeds to the Red Cross Society. Local exchange managers are considering the matter favorably and it is probable that all exhibitors in Ontario, numbering over three hundred, will be requested to do something in this direction.

The exchange managers are also feeling a little hungry, apparently, because they have been talking "banquet" for some little time. It is intended to have some sort of general entertainment and dinner in the near future after which the old question of a big film ball will be taken up.

Toronto—A. Reddy, Toronto manager of the General Film Company, Ltd., left for the Montreal headquarters of the company on May 6 for the purpose of discussing several important matters arising out of the recent reorganization of the Canadian General interests.

Visual Library Plan Tried Out in St. Louis

Children's Matinees at the Delmar Demonstrate Better Motion Picture League's Plan for Special Shows—Method of Co-operating with Exhibitors.

A. H. Giebler, 4123 Westminster Pl., St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—A children's matinee, which was the first practical demonstration in St. Louis of the methods of the Visual Library, a branch of the National Committee on Films for Children, was given at the Delmar, one of the Cornelius chain of theaters, on Saturday, May 5.

An audience of eight hundred viewed the pictures. Patriotic songs were sung, and speeches were made by Rabbi Leon Harrison and Frank Wyman. Miss Sarah Elizabeth Edwards, secretary of the Better Motion Picture League, who organized and sponsored the Visual Library, says that the programs of the league will be put in theaters in other parts of the city according to a zone plan, and that all the pictures used will be reviewed, graded and passed on by a board composed of thirty-seven women, all of whom are well known and active in club, civic and social uplift work.

Miss Edwards explains the working of the league's plan in co-operating with the exhibitor who uses the selected pictures, as follows: "The city will be divided into districts, and the programs will be put into one house in each district. The committee will sell six hundred coupon bearing cards for fifty cents each to the children and parents of the district. Each card will be good for twelve admissions to as many matinees. This will give the exhibitor a guarantee of twenty-five dollars for each performance. The matinee at the Delmar was the first try-out of the plan in St. Louis, but it has been in use at the Gem theater in Jefferson City, Mo., where it was inaugurated several weeks ago.

The Royal theater on Sixth street, between Olive and Pine, one of the Cornelius houses, has been closed for the hot weather season, to be opened September 1.

E. L. Hammerstein Right Here on the Job.

St. Louis, Mo.—E. L. Hammerstein, who travels in southern Missouri and Illinois for Universal, came in from a trip last week as mad as a Vespa Maculata (see page 706, Mr. Webster's Dictionary), because some one had been circulating the report in advance of him that he had been transferred and would not show up in his territory again, when as a matter of fact he was never more untransferred or more on the job in his life.

Leo Levy Made One of the Lair.

St. Louis, Mo.—Leo Levy got a job as film salesman from Sam Shurman, head Fox at the lair on Olive street, last week. Leo has had quite a lot of experience in peddling films in the St. Louis territory.

Harry Strickland to Represent Vitagraph.

St. Louis, Mo.—Harry Strickland has been made traveling representative for Vitagraph for the district covered by the St. Louis office.

Ben Abrams Hard at Work Hereabouts.

St. Louis, Mo.—(Big) Ben Abrams, special representative of Universal, has come to St. Louis, and will make a special campaign on "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" and other Universal special subjects. Ben will also assist in launching the new Butterfly Features that the Universal has just released.

C. E. Shurtleff Will Steer Local Pathe for Present.

St. Louis, Mo.—C. E. Shurtleff, special representative of Pathe, has assumed charge of the Pathe Exchange in St. Louis, and will be in charge until a successor to former manager C. S. Edwards is appointed. Mr. Shurtleff will also instill the new sales system that Pathe is putting in all of its exchanges in the east and south while he is in St. Louis.

Nat Barach Paid a Visit.

St. Louis, Mo.—Nat Barach, of the World Film, stopped off at St. Louis for a few hours, while on his way from Kansas City to New York, just to give Film Row the once over and renew old acquaintances. We're always glad to see Nat.

Prairie State News Letter.

Frank H. Madison, 628 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Joseph H. Gilday Visits Omaha for Standard.

OMAHA, NEB.—Joseph H. Gilday, formerly manager of the Willis Wood theater in Kansas City, Mo., but now with the Standard Film Corporation at Kansas City, handling Art Dramas' pictures in Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Illinois, was in this city with a view to open an exchange here for that concern.

J. W. Rachman Leaves General Film.

Omaha, Neb.—J. W. Rachman, who has been assistant to C. W. Taylor, local manager for the General Film Company, has resigned to devote his time to his other interests. Rachman is manager of the Grand theater.

Nebraska Theater Notes and Changes.

Cambridge, Neb.—O. E. Wicklund has sold his interest in the De Luxe theater to Mr. LeDon.

York, Neb.—W. D. Fisher has sold his interest in the Empress theater.

Stella, Neb.—John Schulenberg has sold his interest in the moving picture theater here to Joseph Harper.

Falls City, Neb.—Lightning struck an electric light pole in the alley back of the Electric theater, burning out the transformer. The reflection of the blaze was thrown into the window back of the screen, which created the impression that the theater was on fire.

Omaha, Neb.—The Strand theater departed from its usual policy of frequent changes by running "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation" for an entire week.

Orpheum at Minot, N. D., Begins Special Shows.

Minot, N. D.—The social service committee of the Federated Women's clubs of this city and the Orpheum theater are co-operating in using better pictures. Friday evenings have been set aside for special programs. The films used are those selected by Mrs. C. W. Cartright, of Minneapolis, who is at the head of the better film movement for the national organization of women's clubs. Mrs. T. H. Swenson, of Minneapolis, is visiting other points in this part of the country in an effort to enlist the co-operation of club women.

With Dakota Exhibitors.

Tolley, N. D.—Art. Miller and George Jenkins have purchased moving picture equipment, and will operate a show here Wednesday and Saturday nights.

Jamestown, N. D.—Manager Leen, of the Ruby theater, aided the Woman's club in the observance of Baby Week by furnishing his theater for actual expenses. In addition he furnished a comedy free.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Redheaded children were admitted free at the Olympia theater to a performance, "Polly Redhead."

Wisconsin Film Trade Items.

Milwaukee, Wis.—J. Warren Kerrigan, who appeared in person at the White House theater, was the guest of the Milwaukee Press Club. Incidentally the occasion was ladies' night.

Muncie Is Promised New 1200-Seat Theater

Papers Filed by New Concern to Erect a Downtown Theater at Cost of $125,000 —Company Is Offering Stock for Sale.

By Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

MUNCIE, IND.—The Muncie Theater Building Company, a newly organized concern composed of a number of the leading business men of the city, has filed incorporation papers with the secretary of state for the purpose of erecting a new motion picture theater. The capital stock is announced as $125,000. The directors of the concern are L. M. Milligan, C. L. Retherford and H. H. Shovel.

The new theater, which the company will erect, will be situated in the center of the downtown business district, will be modern in every respect, and will seat approximately 1,200 persons. The building will be of fireproof construction, and will contain a balcony, rest room and all modern conveniences. Stock in the new theater is being offered for sale to the citizens of Muncie at so much per share.

Jefferson Theater Has a New Manager.

Goshen, Ind.—By a deal consummated last week, Ezra F. Rhoades, owner and manager of the LaSalle motion picture theater in South Bend, became the lessee of the Jefferson theater, a standard playhouse in this city, for a term of five years. The amount of the consideration was not made known.

Mr. Rhoades, who has already taken charge of the theater, has announced that in the future it will be used exclusively for the exhibition of motion pictures. He contemplates making many interior improvements during the next few weeks, and in all probability will install a new pipe organ.

The Jefferson, rated as one of the finest in the Middle West, is owned by C. J. Allhardt, of South Bend. Robert Codd, who has managed the house for the last year, will probably accept a place with W. S. Butterfield, of Kalamazoo, Mich., owner of many motion picture and vaudeville houses.

Under the management of Mr. Rhoades the Jefferson ought to make an ideal motion picture house.

Plans School for Women Picture Operators.

Muncie, Ind.—The young women of Muncie are to be given an opportunity to become motion picture machine operators if the plans of Richard Addison, head moving picture operator and electrician for the city's largest theater, materialize. Addison says he intends to establish a school for girl operators in order that male operators of the city may feel at liberty to join the colors, especially those of the navy, where all kinds of electricians are needed.

Addison says he will instruct the young women free of charge not only so they may hold positions as moving picture operators, but may also become skilled electricians. The only requirements for admission to his school are that the young women be between the ages of eighteen and twenty-eight, and possess some high school education. He is already assured of a large class.

Exit Kokomo's Cort Theater.

Kokomo, Ind.—The Cort theater, for years one of Kokomo's popular photoplay houses, is now a thing of the past. Messrs. Mosiman Brothers, who owned the house will now devote all of their efforts to the Isis, another motion picture house in the city, which is under their control.

Miss Marie Heintz Will Manage Theater at Gary.

Gary, Ind.—Miss Marie Heintz, daughter of Pentis Heintz, ex-chief of the Gary police department, has been appointed by V. U. Young, owner of a string of motion picture houses in the city, as manager for the Twentieth Century theater, on East Sixth avenue. Miss Heintz recently appeared as the Goddess of Liberty in a great patriotic parade. She is the first woman to hold a position of this kind in Gary.

Star Theater's Owner Becomes a Farmer.

Bluffton, Ind.—The Star theater, on West Market street, has been traded by D. L. Reynolds to W. H. Rupright, of Ossian, Ind., for a forty acre farm in Spaulding County, O. Mr. Rupright will assume charge of the theater immediately.

Clinton, Ind.—Joe Vietti has sold his motion picture show on North Ninth street to a firm composed of Julius Berto, Alexander Berto and Ambrose Bragabone. All are young Italians.

Atlanta News Letter.

By A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Urban Koch Gets Married.

ATLANTA, GA.—Urban Thomas Koch, prominent Atlanta moving picture exchange man, is married and happy and all that, but he'll never get over the memory of the horrible fear that he was going to be left waiting at the church, which came to him just before the ceremony was performed in Augusta, Ga., last week. Mr. Koch has gone there to claim Miss Nellie Pilcher as his bride. It was going to be a church wedding with all the fuss and feathers necessary. But Mr. Koch's trousseau trunk was lost and a little while before the hour of the ceremony he found himself without a dress suit.

Then came forward the Rev. John S. Jenkins, who was going to speak the words. He was the bridegroom's size, from waist to collar and he had a dress suit. A little wheeling, and he lent it for the ceremony, and all was well. Mr. and Mrs. Koch were at the Hotel Ansley, Monday.

Paramount's New Booklet.

Atlanta, Ga.—A beautifully artistic publicity booklet has been issued by the Southern Paramount. It has sixty pages and is attractively bound, containing the portraits of twenty-nine of the leading stars in Paramount pictures with a brief appreciation of the work each had done.

The book is the original idea of Y. F. Freeman, manager of the Atlanta office. The reading matter and make-up of the volume was done by Grace Wyndon Vail, publicity chief of Southern Paramount.

The entire volume is done in tones of brown and India tint, with a big Paramount trade-mark on the cover.

Interesting Trade Jottings.

Waycross, Ga.—E. J. Sparks, who formerly controlled the Orpheum theater at Waycross, Ga., has sold his interest to C. H. Buchanan, who will divide time between moving pictures and vaudeville.

Spartansburg, S. C.—W. F. Neill, manager of the Strand theater, Spartansburg, S. C. was an Exchange Row visiter this week.

Asheville, N. C.—Dan Michalove, of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Ashville, N. C., was an Atlanta visitor this week.

Atlanta Ga.—R. W. Lynch, manager of the Dallas, Texas office of the Southern Paramount, was an Atlanta visitor a few days this week; while in Atlanta, Mr. Lynch was the guest of manager, Y. E. Freeman of the Atlanta Paramount office.

Minneapolis News Notes of Convention Week

New Garrick Shows "The Mormon Maid"—Notes for the Local Exchange Offices—What Exhibitors Are Doing—Visitors to the City.

By J. L. Johnston, 704 Film Exchange Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—President Benjamin Friedman, of the Friedman Enterprises, Inc., presented "The Mormon Maid" to exhibitors of the West for the first time at the New Garrick theater here, Tuesday morning, May 8. Over a thousand invitations were sent out, and a good sized crowd was expected to attend the showing. Special music by the New Garrick concert orchestra was also on the program.

At the State Rights Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Zenith, Saxe, Westcott, S. R. Thompson, American Maid and Supreme exchanges had displays at the convention.

The Westcott Film Corp. has secured the rights for showing "Intolerance" in five states, according to announcement by E. A. Westcott.

Manager Wilson, of the American Maid exchange, staged a special showing of "The Deemster" at the Strand during convention week. The feature was well received.

Harry A. Sherman, of Elliott & Sherman, postponed his weekly trip to New York so that he could be in attendance at the convention. John R. Elliott was also a visitor at the convention.

Mannie Gottlieb, manager of the Favorite exchange, killed two birds with one stone convention week. Mannie booked "The Libertine" in the New Garden for the week, and had scores of exhibitors seeing it at their convenience. He secured forty contracts for the picture in the three days of the gathering.

Manager Bradford, of the Saxe exchange, staged special showings of "Enlighten Thy Daughter" and "Beware of Strangers" at the Strand for exhibitors during convention days.

Manager Benjamin Friedman, of the Friedman Film Corp., has booked "Her Condoned Sin" in the Strand, St. Paul, for a week's run the latter part of May. Mr. Friedman expects to announce a Minneapolis run of the feature shortly.

Adding a Little Style.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The New Garrick and the Strand have added liveried footmen to their "corps of assistance." The New Garrick enjoyed a splendid week's business with Fairbanks' "In Again, Out Again." The Strand completed a good week with "The Law of Compensation," and began a week's run of "Beware of Strangers" with capacity crowds the first three days.

Paramount Exchange Had to Halt Roadmen.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager C. L. Peavey, of the Paramount exchange, has perhaps established a record no other exchange in the United States has equaled to date. His exchange has done as much business, to date, with one Arbuckle comedy, as the previous management of the local exchange did up to January 1, 1917, with all of the Paramount features. Mr. Peavey has signed up so many contracts for Paramount service he has been forced to wire his roadmen not to make any more until further notice, because he cannot get enough prints in time to serve his clientele. The roadmen are confining their efforts to Arbuckle comedies entirely. Three theaters on University, St. Paul, signed up for Paramount pictures last week.

Lyric Theater Gets "Valentine Girl."

Minneapolis, Minn.—Ruben & Finkelstein are switching their plans a trifle. Marguerite Clark's "Valentine Girl" was played in the Lyric instead of the New Garrick, as usual; Petrova's "Waiting Soul" is going into the New Aster instead of the Lyric, and a Paramount comedy has been played in the New Unique. The new policy seemingly is a good one, for the Lyric's attendance has picked up considerably, and so has that of the New Aster.

With Local Theaters.

Minneapolis. Minn.—Manager Henry P. Greene, of the three Lake theaters here, has reported business unusually brisk for this time of the year. Managers Frank Thayer, of the Calhoun, and J. S. Woodhouse, of the Lagoon, have also noted an increase in their business.

Manager James A. Keough, of the Strand, is considering an innovation which will undoubtedly prove popular. Mr. Keough proposes a sort of roof garden on top of the Strand's markee. The markee is strong enough to hold a good crowd, and Mr. Keough plans to place divans, chairs and flowers outside the theater, so that overflow crowds can wait for starting of shows in extraordinary comfort.

The Metropolitan theater here has announced the booking of the Williamson brothers' latest sub-sea feature for showing the latter part of week.

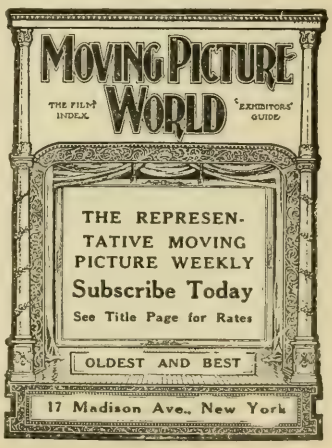
Visitors to Local Distributing Office.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Out of town exhibitors who visited local film exchanges the last week were: Tom Foster, Stanley, Wis.; Thomas Furniss, Duluth, Minn; Charles Gates, Aberdeen, S. D.; J. P. Adler, Marshfield, Wis.; Anton Gilles, Breckenridge, Minn.; H. L. Hartman, Mandan, N. D.; H. Hirtz, Deadwood, S. D.; Joseph M. Hopp, Chicago, Ill.; Bert Beyerstadt, Rochester, Minn.; L. J. Roesner, Winona, Minn.; C. J. Ludtke, St. Peter, Minn.; Oliver Whaley, Bemidji, Minn.; W. H. Crosby, Willmar, Minn.; D. Watson, Hopkins, Minn.; R. C. Gibbons, Huron, S. D.; Frank Nemec, St. Cloud, Minn.; Thomas Saxe, Milwaukee, Wis.

Rose Tapley in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Manager Frank Thayer of the Calhoun, Minneapolis' exceptional neighborhood theater, arranged for the personal appearance of Rose Tapley at his theater on Wednesday evening, May 2.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Two former Triangle stars, now under different banners, competed for honors at Minneapolis' two largest film theaters the week of April 29. Douglas Fairbanks in "In Again—Out Again" was the attraction, drawing capacity houses to the New Garick, and Norma Talmadge in "The Law of Compensation" enjoyed a big business at the Strand. At the St. Paul Strand Miss Talmadge's "Panthea" began a week's run April 29 with capacity business.



Kansas City Censor Is Upheld

Criminal Court of Jackson County Decides That City Censor Board Has Power to Prohibit Any Film It Deems Unfitted for Public Showing—Exhibitor Rudolph of the Maze Fined One Dollar.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The criminal court of Jackson county has upheld the authority of the censor board of Kansas City by imposing a fine of $1 on William H. Rudolph, who made considerable of a splash last summer, with "The Unborn" at the Maze. Mr. Rudolph is not in Kansas City, and the lightness of the fine was agreed to by the city counselor, who wished chiefly to get a decision upholding the ordinances and the board.

The history of this case is the reason that Kansas City is now having every picture censored that is shown. In former days, the board censored only those on which question was raised by the national board, or against which specific objection was raised by citizens. Last summer and fall, however, several theaters exploited extravagantly risque films, with bold lobby displays that aroused much local opposition. The censor was called on to exert his authority; but he showed that most of the pictures were innocuous, the trouble being with the advertising.

Mr. Rudolph came with "The Unborn" in the fall. He showed it without censoring, and attempts were made to get him fined for that offense. He was arrested several times, and released. Finally the board of censors issued a report against the picture, declaring that it should not be shown; and he was arrested, and appeared before Judge Coon of the police court. Judge Coon viewed the picture himself, and declared that it was a beautiful picture, which should be widely exhibited. He released Rudolph—but the city appealed the case. Coon's decision was based on the judgment that the picture was proper; the city's appeal was based on the theory that the question was one for the censors to decide, and their judgment was final.

The decision of the criminal court now makes the authority of the local censors absolute. It is backed by a decision last fall in the civil courts, which refused to interfere in behalf of an exhibitor who had complained against the prohibition of "Protect Your Daughter."

Since last fall the censor board has secured the equipment and the help, and is now censoring all the pictures for Kansas City. Incidentally, this increased showing of pictures at the board's quarters has given a desired opportunity for the various organizations and committees that choose programs for neighborhood theaters: they are attending many of the inspection programs, and selecting their pictures during the exhibitions.

The policy of the censors has not changed, however; they are not rejecting any more pictures than before—not so many, in fact, because the exhibitors evidently have caught the note of public taste, and are not offering many pictures that might offend.

Patrons and the Specially Chosen Shows.

Kansas City, Mo.—The special Friday night programs, approved and urged by the Collegiate Alumnae Association in Kansas City, are said by the women who manage the inspection of pictures to be a success. But they have conquered against great obstances. The women themselves admit that adults who consult their own minds do not patronize educational films any more enthusiastically than children do, and therefore pressure has been brought to bear on the parents, and the programs have been highly diversified. Mrs. Paul F. Simonds, vice-chairman of the committee, gave to a local paper the following synopsis of the committee's conclusions as to the preferences of children in pictures:

"We have found that children and young people prefer, in the order named, pictures of action and adventure: Cowboys, Indians, detectives, sailors, clean comedy, with a leaning, perhaps, toward the boisterous; pictures portraying emotion, heart interest, love, family devotion, and lastly, historical, natural history and instructional films."

Handy Frame for Photographs.

Kansas City, Mo.—Arthur Marowitz, president of the Imperial Feature Film Co. at Kansas City, Mo., has devised a practical and novel method of distributing photographs and lobby displays. He has had many frames made of the usual lobby display-board size, bound in brass; strips inside are easily removable for inserting pasteboard backgrounds for photographs. Designs are painted on these pasteboards. The frames have projecting edges so that the pictures are protected. Two straps on each end and each side buckle the two frames together for shipment. The same sets of photographs can therefore be sent to many exhibitors, some sets lasting in good condition for many months. The exhibitors seem to appreciate this service, which gives them an artistically designed and prepared lobby display at small expense.

Standard Film Takes Over Wider Territory.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Standard Film Corporation of Kansas City, which had been formed originally to handle and distribute Art Dramas programs in the Middle West, has been given the distribution in Northern territory also. The arrangement was completed by George Wiley, of the Art Dramas, during a recent trip West. The Standard takes over, under this arrangement, the distribution in North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and upper Wisconsin. R. C. Cropper, president and general manager of the Standard, made arrangements for new offices to handle the territory during a trip to Minneapolis for the exhibitors' convention.

George Bowles Opens Local Bluebird Office.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Bluebird office for Kansas City territory has been established by George Bowles, manager, at 606 Shukert building, where all equipment is in working order for a complete exchange. F. S. Cass, formerly Universal representative in Missouri, is now with Bluebird, and is traveling Kansas. V. A. Klingberg, formerly Bluebird, is now with the Universal covering Missouri territory.

L. Hensley Visits D. O. Reece.

Kansas City, Mo.—A "get-together" conference between the Kansas City and the Oklahoma departments of Universal was held in Kansas City recently, L. Hensley, Universal manager at Oklahoma City, coming to visit R. O. Reece, manager here. The managers talked over the conditions of the two territories, and are arranging to co-operate closely for the benefit of exhibitors. Sam Benjamin, Bluebird manager at Oklahoma City, was here at the same time, and joined in the confab.

J. H. Morgan Joins Local U. Forces.

Kansas City, Mo.—John H. Morgan, recently with the New Center theater at Kansas City, has joined the Universal forces as supply man, succeeding L. J. Doty.

Rearrangement of Universal Offices.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Universal offices at Kansas City have been rearranged following the removal of the Blubird offices. The extra space was sadly needed; and the particular area taken up by the Bluebird offices is now being used effectively by L. B. Douglas, manager of the serial department. "Butterflies" is going in great shape in Kansas City, where it is now booked in fifteen theaters, and it is being contracted for rapidly over the territory.

New Theaters and Changes.

Leonardsville, Kan.—Work on the Sykes opera house was started recently.

McCune, Kan.—The Electric theater was re-opened May 1.

Hoisington, Kan.—A moving picture theater will be included in a new $60,000 hotel that is being promoted.

Springfield, Mo.—The New Alhambra theater will open under the management of the Alladin Amusement Co.

Marysville, Mo.—The Fern theater is being remodeled, and will open under new management.

Hollis, Okla.—The LaGrande theater, A. M. James, manager, has a new Wurlitzer orchestra piano.

Collinsville, Okla.—H. C. Sowder has purchased the Odeon theater, and will change the name to the Royal.

Okamah, Okla.—L. E. Donahue is remodeling the Jewel theater.

Tulsa, Okla.—Work has been started on the $150,000 Empress theater, which will be erected on Third street, between Main and South Boulder.

Spearville, Kan.—T. J. Stimson has plans made for the erection of a new theater building.

Townada, Kan.—Sullivan & Wilkerson are arranging to open a first class picture show.

Versailles, Mo.—Geo. A. Kraus will reopen the Kraus opera house.

Hennessy, Okla.—P. R. Barryman has purchased the Electric theater.

Tulsa, Okla.—The management of the Majestic theater will open a new theater, which is now being built.

Hugo, Okla.—O. Gill has purchased a new Power picture machine.

Carlsbad, N. M.—The new airdome of the People's theater is ready for use.

El Paso, Tex.—A California moving picture plant is trying to make arrangements to start a plant here.

Harrison, Tex.—An airdome is being erected in the rear of the Y. M. C. A.

Albany, Mo.—The Rigney theater, which has been closed for repairs and remodeling will be reopened soon.

Allendale, Mo.—C. B. Murray will open a picture show here.

Bevier, Mo.—A handsome new theater was opened recently in the Frederick Building.

St. Louis, Mo.—The West End Lyric Amusement company was chartered with a capital of $5,000 by Rose Cornelius, James A. Cornelius and Herman Overstolt.

Some Notable Recent Display Ads.

Kansas City, Mo.—The advertising files at the Paramount office, Kansas City, make plain that some Missouri exhibitors believe strongly in advertising. France & France, owners of the Elite theater, Bethany, Mo., take an unusual amount of space in the Bethany Clipper and Republican. One ad which was particularly attractive was a seven column 6-inch of the Famous Players' "Snow White." In this ad there was an illustration of Marguerite Clark and the Paramount trademark. The other medium from this theater was a 12x18 window card printed in two colors.

F. E. Berry, manager of the Gem at Richmond, Mo., is also a big advertiser in the local newspapers. In one edition he had a 5 column 5-inch, with a half page story on the front page. Mr. Berry has just recntly taken charge of the Gem, and is using every means to attract a larger and regular clientele.

In this section of the country there are also several exhibitors who have the advantage of being also editors. One of the most successful of these is N. W. Houston, Columbus, Kan., who owns the McChie theater and the Columbus Daily Advocate.

Des Moines Film Letter

By Dorothy Day, Register-Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

Bluebird Office Changed.

DES MOINES, IA.—Curly Calvert, of the Omaha Bluebird office, was in the city last week moving the office from 918 Locust to the rooms formerly occupied by the General Film exchange, at 708 Mulberry street. A. Amos will continue as manager of the Bluebirds in their new location. The Universal have installed the Butterfly Film offices in the location vacated by the Bluebirds.

C. W. Stombaugh Assumes Management of Minneapolis Standard.

Des Moines, Ia.—The F-I-L-M Club of Des Moines gave a farewell banquet, last Saturday at the Chamber of Commerce, to C. W. Stombaugh former manager of the General Film exchange in this city. Mr. Stombaugh leaves at once to take charge of the newly formed Standard Film office in Minneapolis, the change being effective the 12th of May. Mr. Stombaugh was one of the most enthusiastic members of the F-I-L-M Club, holding the respect of every member and the good will of all the exhibitors over the state. He has been connected with the General Film since it was known as the Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Company, working in the Omaha and Minneapolis branches and holding the manager's office in this city. Since the merging of the local and Omaha General exchanges, Stombaugh has been traveling over Iowa and generally looking after the interests of his Iowa contracts. Mr. Stombaugh takes his new positicn with the good wishes of all his Des Moines and Iowa friends.

Gardiner Theater Supply Co. in Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Gardiner Theater Supply Company of Detroit opened offices in the Standard Film Bldg., last week under the management of Ernest H. Forbes.

Standard Adds to Local Forces.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Standard Film has developed so extensively in its short existence in Des Moines that Manager Marty Williams has been compelled to take two additional rooms. William Parsons, formerly Bluebird representative out of Omaha, is now traveling for the Standard out of this office and Harry Rosenberg has also been added to the traveling force for the Iowa and Nebraska territory. Joseph M. Feldman of the Standard, attended the Minneapolis Exhibitors' Convention and accompanied President R. C. Cropper in the opening of the new Standard office in that city.

Manager Lederman Buys Three Roadsters.

Des Moines, Ia.—D. B. Lederman of the Laemmle Film service purchased three roadsters for the use of his salesmen, last week. Lederman reports that business is picking up now and would brighten all the more if the weather would ever clear up.

O. H. Garland With Des Moines Film and Supply.

Des Moines, Ia.—O. H. Garland, former star salesman for the General Film exchange in this city, is working for the Des Moines Film and Supply Company and seems to be meeting with his former success.

With Exhibitors Over the State.

Blockton, Ia.—Glade Shearer has purchased the Starland theater in Blockton from R. O. Ford.

Lake Mills, Ia.—C. G. Roll sold the Dyme theater in Lake Mills to James Neste.

New Feature Picture Circuit Is Proposed

Calvin Heilig of Portland Has Plans for a Big Chain of Theaters to Show the Special Film Offerings at High Prices.

By S. Clark Patchin, E. 1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland will form the northwest end of a motion picture circuit, if the plans of Calvin Heilig of Portland are carried out, according to an announcement made by Manager Charles York of the Auditorium theater, Spokane.

Mr. York who just returned from Portland said, "While in Portland Mr. Helig and I talked over the plans of the new circuit, and it appears to be practically certain that the new circuit will be established in the northwest and in that case the Auditorium theater will house the shows here."

The plans are to form a motion picture circuit which would handle mutiple reel features in Spokane and elsewhere in the Pacific northwest on much the same basis that theatrical road shows are handled.

The pictures which the circuit would handle would be such as "Birth of a Nation," "Civilization," "Intolerance," and "Daughter of the Gods." The circuit, will maintain houses in the larger cities west of the Rocky mountains, and show the big pictures properly orchestered with traps and other mechanical effects that would bring out a last degree of realism.

The prices to be charged as admission would be the same as the road show prices, ranging from $1 to $2. Those houses in the east are said to be a big financial success and because they occupy an entirely different field from the program picture houses and therefore do not come into competition with the latter.

"Daughter of Gods" at the Liberty.

Spokane Wash.—P. S. Mattox, New York representative of the Fox corporation which presented Annette Kellermann in "A Daughter of the Gods," at the Liberty theater for a week beginning May 6. The theater lobby was embellished with a series of almost life size reproductions in color of the shapely star.

Mr. Mattox reports that the picture recently was witnessed by 26,000 people in Portland. The Liberty theater is the second exclusive photoplay theater to book the pictures, all other showings being in the legitimate theaters, where the picture is handled as a road show attraction.

A Fire Prevention Film.

Spokane Wash.—The fire prevention committee of the chamber of commerce met at the Davenport hotel to discuss its seasonal campaign.

Eugene Battles, fire marshal, chairman of the committee, announced that the five-part prevention film made by the underwriters' laboratories would shortly be available for presentation in Spokane as part of the educational campaign.

Marengo, Ia.—McConnell and Houser have sold their Orient theater in Marengo to E. T. Floren.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—James Henry Clark, owner of the Isis theater in Cedar Rapids, the first run Paramount theater in the state, has turned the Isis over to Mr. Clement the former owner. Mr. Clark has owned the theater about a year.

Ottumwa, Ia.—Two of the Ottumwa theaters have undergone a process of redecoration in the past few weeks. Maurice Lince has redecorated the entire Empire theater, and the front is looking spendid in gold combination. Manager Stein of the Princess has his front all shining with a coat of white paint.

Carroll, Ia.—H. B. Gray, formerly manager of the Royal theater in Carroll has accepted a position with the Paramount, working out of the Kansas City office.

Two Pathe Men With the Colors.

Des Moines, Ia.—The call for recruits have taken two of the employees of the Pathe exchange, George Chappell and Howard Wilson having responded to their country's call.

Philip Goldstone Visits Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia.—Philip Goldstone, who with Jake Schlank of the Princess theater in Sioux City, formerly owned the Federal Film Company of Kansas City, was in town last week. Mr. Goldstone and Mr. Schlank have dissolved partnership, the former reserving the Missouri and Kansas rights to the films that the firm controlled and the latter taking the Iowa and Nebraska rights, which rights he has combined with those owned by the Interstate Film Company of this city. Goldstone was finishing up this business while in the city.

Callers at the Des Moines Exchanges.

Des Moines, Ia.—Mr. Ludwig, of O'Dell and Ludwig, owners of the Alamo theater at Sixth and College, was in town last week. Mr. Ludwig is the silent partner in this firm, since he leaves the entire management of the Alamo in the hands of Mr. O'Dell. Mr. Ludwig lives in Hampton, Ia.

The Alamo theater management had the privilege, last week of viewing the big Metro special "The Call of Her People," when Manager Skirboll, ran the film off one afternoon recently. This Barrymore feature will open a four day run at the Palace Sunday, the 13th.

Bruce Gould, former head booker of the old General exchange and Henry Friedel, former shipping clerk, are working at their old positions with the Standard Film Company.

B. J. Brink, of the West Point theater in West Point, Ia., and W. H. Mart of the Strand theater in Grinnell were visitors at the Standard Film exchange last week.

Manager Budd of the Lyric in Grinnell and Joe Gerbracht of the Twin Star in Ames were callers at the Laemmle Film office last week.

Mr. McDowell of McDowell and Robinson, owners of the Gem theater in Armstrong, Ia., and George Martin of the Princess in Cedar Rapids, were Pathe callers last wek.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

By Frank H. Madison.

New Wisconsin Theaters and Changes.

Hayward, Wis.—Henry Ernst has sold the Grand theater to Arthur Hanson and Ray Olson.

Reedsburg, Wis.—The Orpheum theater has been sold to T. C. Johnson, of Mt. Horeb

Portage, Wis.—P. J. Conway, of Reedsburg, purchased the equipment of the Majestic theater from Jay W. Cook and Joseph Dalton, and will move it either to Reedsburg or to Stevens Point.

Reedsburg, Wis.—A moving picture theater will be opened in the Conway building under the management of H. E. Mansfield.

Berlin, Wis.—Frank Betchkel has purchased the Opera House of C. M. Dodson.

Downtown Houses in Frisco Bid for Trade

City Has Many District Theaters, Yet People Are Coming to Market Street to See the First Releases—What Is Being Offered.

From T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—The moving picture houses in the downtown district are making a stronger bid for patronage than ever before and are attempting, through the excellence of their shows and the fine music offered, to bring about a return of the old days when Market street held undisputed sway as an amusement center. This city is almost unique in the number and size of its district theaters, but it is noted that there is a gradual return of amusement seekers to the downtown section. The Exposition Auditorium in the Civic Center is proving to be a great meeting place and is bringing many downtown who have been in the habit of seeking amusement near at home. On the last Sunday in April twelve thousand persons gathered here to listen to a symphony concert in the afternoon, while five thousand more attended a short organ recital in the evening. These events attracted people downtown and many took advantage of the opportunity to see some of the late picture releases at the downtown houses. The bills for the week at the various houses make an interesting showing, as will be seen from the following list:

At the Portola theater "The Barrier" opened for a two weeks' run and capacity houses have been the rule every day since then, there being a crowd waiting in the lobby both afternoons and evenings. This is proving to be the best drawing card that has been put on at the Portola for some time and records for months past will be broken.

The Tivoli theater is showing "Beware of Strangers," which has been done, with matinees well above the average. The T. & D. Novelty Pictorial is becoming established as a feature at this house.

The Strand theater is featuring Douglas Fairbanks in his first Artcraft release, "In Again, Out Again," and is enjoying one of the best weeks since the transformation of this house into a moving picture theater. Several patriotic pictures are on the bill this week and a soldier stationed at the Presidio is singing a song hit, "It's Time For Every Boy To Be a Soldier."

The program offered by the Imperial theater includes three distinct features. Fatty Arbuckle is making his first screen appearance at this house in his first Paramount release, "The Butcher Boy"; Vivian Martin and Jack Pickford are seen in a picture of college life, "The Girl at Home," and there is a patriotic offering, "Shoulder Arms," in which members of the California Coast artillery appear. A recruiting station is located in front of the theater.

The Rialto theater is also to the front with a fine bill headed by William Farnum in the super de luxe feature, "American Methods," an adaptation from George Ohnet's novel, "The Ironmaster."

Edmonds to Stay with K-E-S-E.

San Francisco, Cal.—W. O. Edmonds, who recently tendered his resignation as manager of the interests of the K-E-S-E Service of the Pacific Coast territory, has withdrawn this and has revised his plans for a long rest. Here's hoping that our friend, W. O., will continue to grace Film Row for many a day.

H. H. Hicks Leaves the General.

San Francisco, Cal.—H. H. Hicks, who has been in charge of the local branch of the General Film for some time, has tendered his resignation, which has been accepted, and will affiliate himself with the Selznick organization. He has been succeeded at the General by Harry Schmidt, who has been with this exchange for many years and who has filled every position in the office in succession.

Change in Mutual Management.

San Francisco, Cal.—W. J. Drummond, for several months manager of the local branch of the Mutual Film, has resigned to go to New York and will be succeeded here by Newton Levy, of Los Angeles, but formerly of this office. Mr. Levy has been with the Mutual for about three years and has been in charge of the Los Angeles branch for several months. Mr. Drummond will leave shortly for New York, but intimates that he may return to this city later on. T. C. Malcolm, district manager of the Mutual, was here recently attending to the details of the change in branch management and inspecting the new quarters on Golden Gate avenue, soon to be occupied. He has just completed a trip through the territory, having been on the road about fourteen weeks.

N. L. Josey's Affairs Being Settled.

San Francisco, Cal.—The announcement has been made that Olin L. Berry, a local attorney, has taken charge of the affairs of N. L. Josey, who built and operated the Theater St. Francis for a time, later failing, with large sums due creditors for film service and theater equipment. Those having claims against Mr. Josey are requested to file these at once with Mr. Berry.

M. H. Hoffman Visits Coast.

San Francisco, Cal.—M. H. Hoffman, former general manager for the Bluebird, was a recent visitor here and announced that he was now in business on his own account handling large feature productions. He is considering opening a branch in this city.

M. & R. to Open Branch.

San Francisco, Cal.—Charles Rosenthal, Jr., of the M. & R. Film exchange, will go to Los Angeles within a few days to open a branch. Good success is being met with in booking the Flora Finch comedies here, and with the local office in good running shape it is desired to cover the rest of the territory.

Film Display Enjoined.

San Francisco, Cal.—Beatriz Michelena Middleton has filed a suit in the United States District Court against Clarence Payne and the California Motion Picture corporation for an injunction preventing the presentation of "The Eternal Mephisto." She alleges that this production contains scenes from an unfinished production of "Faust," in which she played a leading role, and that while the latter was a good photoplay, "The Eternal Mephisto" is "low, gross and immoral."

Here and There in San Francisco.

E. W. Castle, Mutual cameraman stationed at Los Angeles, paid a flying visit to this city recently.

The K-E-S-E feature, "The Trufflers," is to be shown shortly at the T. & D. Tivoli opera house and has also been booked for the T. & D. theater, Oakland.

The foundation is being installed for the new moving picture house to be erected on Market street, adjoining the Rialto theater, for the Gibbs interests.

Mr. Bierman, who conducts four moving picture houses on the west coast of Mexico, called upon the local supply trade recently and purchased considerable equipment.

Dan Reardon, the well known theater man, is no longer connected with the Nixon theater on Polk street.

The Oriental theater, located in Chinatown, is now being conducted under new management, but along the same lines as formerly.

Walter Preddey recently disposed of a motor-generator set to A. A. Richards, who is building a new theater at Lodi, Cal.

F. Barbanell, formerly of the Winter theater, has put in a film cleaning plant at the local offices of the Consolidated Film Corporation.

Robert Abraham, manager of the New Mission theater, is a member of the committee having the plans for the annual picnic of the Mission Street Merchants' Association in charge. Moving pictures of this event will be taken and shown later at the New Mission theater.

F. J. Alberti, Carbon King.

San Francisco, Cal.—F. J. Alberti, who has been engaged in the carbon business at San Francisco for the past year and a half has become such a factor in this branch of the supply business that he has acquired the title of the "Carbon King." For several years he was engaged in the electrical supply business but saw an opening for an exclusive carbon house and entered this field, opening offices at 100 Golden Gate avenue, the gateway to

F. L. Alberti (on right).

Film Row. He introduced National carbons and silvertips in this territory and is now doing a heavy business in the northern part of the State and Nevada.

In addition to distributing the carbon lines he has commenced to turn his attention to handling lamps and has succeeded in placing Franklin Mazda lamps in many theaters in this territory. He has also furnished a number of fine houses with Floralcone perfume, being sole agent for this article. His office on Film Row is a favorite gathering place for both exhibitors and moving picture operators and almost any time one may hear discussions going on here on some of the fine points of projection. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Alberti at his desk demonstating some of the features of silvertip carbons to George Roy, a leading exhibitor of Burlingame, Cal.

California Notes.

Oakland, Cal.—The Circle theater at Fifty-third and East Fourteenth streets, is to be reopened shortly by H. A. Yuzuk and A. W. Matthews of San Francisco. The house is being renovated and new equipment installed.

Morro, Cal.—A theater has been opened here by L. J. Lawrence and C. J. Cyr, a portion of the equipment having been furnished by Walter Preddey, of San Francisco.

Elmhurst, Cal.—A number of improvements have been made of late in the Bijou theater and considerable new equipment installed, including a projection machine.

Seattle News Letter.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

Theater Managers' Ass'n Plans Frolic.

SEATTLE, WASH.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Washington Theater Managers' Association on April 1, several important matters were discussed and comittees appointed to look after them. Joseph Muller, manager of the Palace Hip, suggested a plan for a "Midnight Frolic" to be given by the Association at one of the big downtown houses. The idea was enthusiastically received by the members present, and a committee has already begun preparations to make it a big event. The date, although not as yet definitely decided on, will probably be about the middle of the month, and the affair will be given at the Palace Hip. An act from each of the vaudeville theaters in town will be presented, and the Wilkes Players, a stock company will give a one act play. To represent the motion picture side of the entertainment it is planned to put on a good, rousing comedy, and all the orchestras from both legitimate and picture houses will be called on to do their share. The street car company has promised to put on special cars to accommodate the late revelers, for the affair will not open until 11 o'clock and will last until one or after. The Seattle Daily Times has promised to give a great deal of publicity to the frolic.

Among those present at the meeting were: Henry Newman, Arcade theater, Hoquiam, Wash.; H. C. Thomas, Dream, Hoquiam; Wm. Ripley, Rex and Bijou, Aberdeen; C. E. McKee, Orpheum, Everett; C. A. Butler, Terminal, Aberdeen; J. D. Farrel, Colonial, Ellensburg; H. T. Moore, Colonial, Tacoma; A. C. Anderson, Apollo, Tacoma; H. E. Shannon, Concrete theater, Concrete, Wash.; W. N. Allen, Vaudette, Tacoma; John Hamrick, Rex, Seattle; Joe Muller, Palace Hip, Seattle; Ed. Milne, Pantages, Seattle; Edward J. Fisher, Fisher Booking Agency, Seattle; George Ring, Society, Seattle; James Q. Clemmer, Clemmer, Seattle; Fred Mercy, North Yakima; Wm. Southern, Grand, Bellingham.

Colonial Theater Changes Hands.

Seattle, Wash.—The Colonial theater, Seattle, has been bought from E. H. Smith, who has owned and managed it for the last two years, by a stock company headed by S. Danz, of the Star theater, Astoria, Oregon. Norvin F. Haas, well known film man of Seattle, will be the new manager. The house will be entirely repainted and a new electric sign made for the front, and it will be opened Sunday, May 6. Five cents will be the admission price, but Mr. Haas assures us that it will be conducted with a 15 cent quality. Open market bookings will be used.

The Colonial, when it is opened under the new management will probably be the best 5 cent house in the West. Its architecture, both outside and inside, is in perfect keeping with its name, and the seating capacity is 946. It was built in the spring of 1913 by John Hamrick, at present manager of the Rex, one of Seattle's Second avenue houses. Mr. Hamrick opened the Colonial July 16, 1913, and for a long time it was the leading downtown theater, being the first to be built in the new business center around Pike street. Mr. Hamrick operated the theater for two years, after which it was taken over by Mr. Smith. It was operated as a 10 cent theater until last fall, when the price was lowered to 5 cents. For a few months during the winter, musical comedy was added to the picture bill, but that was taken off, and the house will hereafter be a picture theater exclusively.

"Mothers of France" at the Strand for Red Cross.

Seattle, Wash.—When "Mothers of France" is shown at the Strand theater June 6, 25 per cent. of the profits will be turned over to the Red Cross. The Society is already busy selling tickets. Mr. Smythe has also arranged with the British and French consuls to have several French-Canadian soldiers home from the Front to come over from Vancouver, British Columbia, and address the audiences. A very fine concert singer has been engaged to sing the Marsellaise.

Mr. Smythe has just signed for World pictures and will open May 6 with Lillian Russel in "Forget-Me-Not."

Seattle Exhibitor Appointed a Censor.

Seattle, Wash.—John Hamrick, manager of the Rex theater, has been appointed by Mayor Gill to serve on the Censor Board of Seattle. Mr. Hamrick has the reputation of being one of the "fairest and squarest" exhibitors in this territory, which probably accounts for this honor from the mayor.

J. von Herberg Boosting First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Seattle, Wash.—J. von Herberg, of the Seattle firm of Jensen and von Herberg, and manager of the Liberty theater, left last week for New York to look after the interests of the Northwest in the formation of the First National Exhibitor's Circuit.

Exchanges Lose by Incompetence

Oregon Exhibitors Willing to Pay Prices Demanded by Exchanges Are Unable to Get Service—Claim That Incompetency of Some Departments in Exchanges Causes Cancellations and Loss of Business.

By Abraham Nelson, Majestic Theater Bldg., Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Exchanges in the Northwest territory have of late complained of poor business, and managers have stated that, with some of the distribution concerns, their business in the territory was mostly "in the red," with an occasional run of luck that put the figures over on the other side of the column and caused them to break even.

Exhibitors who deal with these exchanges say that much of this alleged poor business is due to the distributing concerns' own fault, and is not due to the reputed barrenness of the territory. They say that it is the absolute incompetence or indifference of the exchange employees in dealing with the theater men that is causing the falling off of business, especially with exchanges employing long distance methods that have of late become the popular way of dealing with Oregon exhibitors.

Stupid bookkeeping errors are said to be made repeatedly by one out-of-town exchange, which has made life burdensome to exhibitors dealing with this concern. Another out-of-town distributor is reported to have a most erratic poster department that causes repeated complaints from Portland and Oregon exhibitors about short paper orders. Although the exhibitors have brought their troubles to the attention of the exchange, they apparently have been ignored.

Grossly careless interpretation of an exhibitor's letters by a most prominent exchange in the territory, recently caused this exhibitor to shut down his show one night a week because he could not get service. He says he likes this exchange's product because it draws well, and he is willing to pay the price the exchange asks. Yet, he complains, he is unable to depend on the exchange for anything, and as a result has been compeled to cancel.

Suburban Experiment Successful.

Portland, Ore.—W. A. Graeper, owner of the Union Avenue theater on the East Side, recently showed "Civilization" at 35 cents, and put the big picture over in grand style. Mr. Graeper looked forward to showing "Civilization" as an experiment in suburban programs, and was so well pleased with the outcome that he plans to show other big features at the Union Avenue at advance prices.

A. S. Kirkpatrick Is Promoted.

Portland, Ore.—A. S. Kirkpatrick, manager for Mutual, left Portland May 9 for Chicago, where he is to occupy an important position in the executive offices of the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Kirkpatrick was at one time manager for the Portland Metro office, and later traveling representative for Mutual. His work in Portland as an efficiency expert is well known by everybody in the territory, and it is anticipated that his work in the Chicago office will be along efficiency lines.

F. M. Simonton, formerly of the Standard Feature Film Company, has been selected as branch manager to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Kirkpatrick's promotion. Mr. Simonton is an old time Portland film man, and was one of the founders of the Standard company.

Pertinent Portland Briefs.

Portland, Ore.—H. H. Brownell, road man for the Film Supply Company, recently returned from a trip through Oregon, Washington and Idaho, where he has been booking "Hell Morgan's Girl" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" to good business. His next trip with these features will be through Montana.

S. C. Ayres, advance man for "Civilization," who has been making his headquarters in Portland for the past two months, is about to depart for Montana territory.

Jack Meldrum, former booker for Universal here, has also gone to Montana. He is now at the Butte Universal office.

Among the road men in the city the week of May 5 were W. S. Brewster, of Sherman Elliott, with "Ramona" and "The Crisis;" Weir Cassidy, of Salt Lake, with "The Eyes of the World," and H. W. Eden, traveling for Fox.

Glenwood, Wash.—Brewer and Kuhnhausen have closed their old showhouse, and will remain out of business a short time until their new theater, now in course of construction, is completed.

Elgin, Oregon.—Mrs. Geo. James has sold the Gem theater to William Wiggins, who also owns the theater at Imbler, Oregon.

New Theater in Washington.

Bellingham, Wash.—The old Panama theater has been bought by F. McCoy, who is remodeling it and will open it next week under the name of the Strand.

White Swan, Wash.—Messers. Love and McIntyre will open a motion picture theater here within a few weeks. The name of the house, which is now under construction, has not yet been decided upon.

Almira, Wash.—C. M. Philips is in Seattle buying chairs and equipment for a picture house which will be opened shortly in this town.

With Film Salesmen in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash.—George J. Ekre, formerly manager of the General office in Spokane, now closed, is spending a few days in Seattle.

C. H. Feldman, salesman for General out of Seattle, has just returned from a trip through the Western Washington territory and reports good business on the O. Henry Series and "Is Marriage Sacred?"

A. L. Rosenberg, of the De Luxe Features, home from a tour of Eastern Oregon, brings back the news that the war is depressing the exhibitors' business in that part of the country. So many of the men have enlisted that those who are left, both men and women, are kept busy putting in crops.

Stories of the Films

BROADWAY STAR FEATURE.

THE GREEN DOOR (Two parts—One of the O. Henry series).—The cast: The Girl (Mildred Manning); Rudolf Steiner (Walter McGrail). Directed by Thomas R. Mills. Scenario by A. Van Buren Powell.

Rudolf Steiner is strolling down a quiet street. A distributor of dental advertisements slips a card into his hand. On it is written "The Green Door." He tries again and once more gets the same sort of card, though others drop the ordinary dentist advertisement. Rudolf goes upstairs, locates the green door and when admitted finds a starving shop-girl, who, when fed and after her story is told, turns out to be the "real adventure" in his life—the adventure he has been looking for. Rudolf, who suspects her of the card ruse to get help, finds the cards were merely advertisements of a theater up the street and decides that fate's hand was in it; nevertheless he is sure that there will soon be a ring-time in his life, with Romance and Adventure proud of their subject and his Great Adventure—the girl.

"THE GUILTY PARTY"—(One of the O. Henry Series—Two Parts).—The cast: Kid Mullaly (Frank Brûll); Liz, the woman (Patsey DeForrest); Liz, the child (Audrey Barry). Directed by Thomas R. Mills.

An unshaven, untidy man sits reading the evening paper by a window. In an adjoining room a woman is cooking supper. Outside children are playing in the street. His little daughter, Lizzie, coaxes the man to play checkers with her. Much irritated, he refuses. The mother comes in and says, "John, I don't like Lizzie to play in the street; they learn too much that ain't good for them. You might amuse her a little." The man refuses again, saying: "Let her go and play like the rest, and don't bother me."

Lizzie is now a woman. In a saloon Kid Mullaly bets fifty dollars to twenty-five "I take Annie to the dance." They anticipate what Liz will do when she sees him with Annie. The Kid's pal, Burke, draws him to the bootblack stand and advises him, "cut that blond out, Kid, or there'll be trouble. You'll never find another that will freeze to you as Liz has." The Kid replies that he wants to teach Liz a lesson. Burke reminds Kid of what Liz was two years ago—a quiet girl who couldn't speak without blushing, and had never tasted a drink.

The warning is wasted. On the day of the dance Liz drinks several whiskies and later goes to the dance and plunges a knife into the Kid. She escapes, pursued by a howling mob—and "the good mother East River took Liz to her breast and soothed her." In the next world an officer reports that Liz murdered her fiancee and committed suicide—and has no defense. But the Court Official discharges the girl, saying: "The guilty party you have to look for in this case is an unshaven, unjidy man, sitting by the window reading, while his children play in the street."

THE MARIONETTES—(One of the O. Henry Series—Two Parts).—The cast: Charles Spencer James, M. D. (J. Frank Clendon); Mr. Chandler (Frank Crayne); Mrs. Chandler (Miss Mildred Mannang); Mammy, first cook (Thomas Murphy). Scenario by Heimer W. Bergman. Directed by Thomas R. Mills.

Dr. James, posing as a respectable physician while he works as a burglar, has made a haul. On his way home he is led to a house where a physician is required and finds Chandler unconscious, suffering from heart trouble. Mrs. Chandler is starving and suffering from the effects of a blow her husband struck her. Chandler recovers consciousness long enough to mutter something about money. Mrs. Chandler faints and is carried to another room.

Dr. James, with the same nitro-glycerine and syringe he used to blow up the safe, gives Chandler an injection, knowing it will kill him, but that the man's faculties will be temporarily stimulated long enough to disclose the whereabouts of the money. Chandler rallies and indicates a safe in the corner of the room. Dr. James picks the lock, but the safe is empty. Chandler tells him that he lost the money gambling. He reviles the doctor for being a burglar. The Doctor taunts back that he never struck a woman. The two regard each other scornfully until Chandler dies. Mrs. Chandler is brought in and Dr. James learns of her pitiful condition. He leaves his share of the booty on the table, telling her it was her husband's last bequest. She forgives her husband and Dr. James quietly takes his departure.

THE PRODIGAL'S RETRURN—(Two parts).—The cast: Harry Carter (Casson Ferguson); Jim Carter (M. C. Von Betz); their father (Fred Eckhart); Cora (Byrdine Zuber). Written by A. DeFord Pitney. Directed by Otis B. Thayer.

Jim and Harry Carter are sons of a well-to-do farmer. Jim is hard working and economical, while Harry is a gay young dog. Cora Ransom, the village belle, favors Harry, while Jim secretly loves the girl.

The mother's estate yields each one of the boys two thousand dollars. Harry takes his money and goes to the city, where he falls among evil companions. To cover his absence, he writes home that he is in business and prospering.

Cora, believing herself forgotten by Harry, turns to Jim for comfort. Harry, now a derelict, is persuaded to break into the rooms of the owner of a gambling den, but remorseful and appreciating the depths into which he has sunken, resolves to return home.

Jim is about to become a partner in his father's business and to win Cora, when Harry returns home. The father and the girl are both delighted upon the return of the prodigal. Jim is enraged, and going to the city, finds the man who was robbed by Harry, and arranges for a warrant for Harry's arrest. The officer is to appear at the Carter home on the very day when the father is to give a feast to celebrate the return of the prodigal son.

The day of the feast arrives, and the aged father gets the Bible and reads the parable of the prodigal son. Under the influence of the powerful story, Jim goes out, stops the detective and buys Harry's freedom with his own two thousand dollars, which he has saved.

"THE LAST OF HER CLAN."—The cast: Molly Howe (Virginia Kirtley); her uncle (Morris Cytron); her cousin (E. J. Brady); Henry Allan (Robyn Adair). Written by Mary H. O'Connor. Produced by Burton L. King.

Molly, an orphan, goes to live with her uncle and cousin, to whom she is betrothed. She finds that her family is at feud with Henry Allan's clan. During the fight among the mountaineers, Allan is captured and is taken inside the cabin of Molly's uncle to be used as a decoy to bring the other men back. A shot has struck Henry and affected his memory.

Taking advantage of Henry Allan's loss of memory, Jim, Molly's cousin, induces Allan to shoot at his own kin. Jim then confesses the trick he has played on Henry to demean the man, for he is jealous of Allan. Henry Allan is later freed, and is exiled by his own clan for disloyalty. It is then that Molly tells of her cousin Jim's act and of Henry Allan's innocence of any wrong intentions. Later Molly, the last of her clan, joins the Allans.

ESSANAY.

MUCH OBLIGED (A Black Cat Feature—Two Parts).—The cast: Wayne Chisholm (Roderick LaRoque); Norwood (Ernest Maupain); Hilda Norwood (Virginia Valli).

A burglar, in order to have free rein in robbing the apartment of Wayne Chisholm, a newspaper reporter, sends him an anonymous note directing him to be at a certain corner at midnight, if he seeks adventure. Through this medium Chisholm meets with the adventure of his life. Hilda Norwood, daughter of a millionaire, has been kidnapped the day previous. As Chisholm arrives at the designated corner, a girl's sidecomb falls at his feet. It bears a note from Miss Norwood announcing that she is a prisoner in the building above him, and pleading for aid. After a series of experiences, including a desperate battle with Hilda's captors, Wayne succeeds in rescuing her and registering not only a scoop for his paper, but her own gratitude. This more than compensated the reporter for what the burglar got.

SUNDAYING IN FAIRVIEW (A Black Cat Feature—Two Parts).—The cast: Dick Farragut (Mark Ellison); Ruth Small (Helen Ferguson); "The Rat" (Roderick LaRoque).

"The Hellion," as Dick Farragut is known to his friends, looks mild enough, but he has an awful punch. It is the unfortunate experience of "The Rat," a cabaret viper, to learn this fact when he attempts to insult a girl before Dick's eyes in the Moline cafe. Dick's fist lands so hard on "The Rat" as to knock him senseless. Young Farragut is panic stricken as he sees his victim fall, apparently lifeless, and escapes from the cabaret. He catches the first train out of the city and lands in Fairview on a Sunday. Here Dick seeks to hide, but meets Ruth Small, daughter of the village pastor. She takes him to church and by his marvelous execution on the pipe organ makes a decided hit. Thus it is, when friends finally discover him and inform him that "The Rat" was not really injured, that Dick refuses to return to the city, but marries Ruth and remains many more Sundays in Fairview.

"A RACE TO THE DRAWBRIDGE" (An episode of "A DAUGHTER OF DARING").—The cast.—Helen (Helen Gibson): Johnson (G. Routh); Brandon (G. A. Williams). Directed by James Davis.

Helen is seated at the telegraph instrument in Pardale Station when a train pulls in. She delivers orders to the engineer and sees three men climb from between two of the cars and hurry away.

Chuck, Pug, and Brandon, the three crooks, cross the fields to their lair. Brandon, the head crook, has been wounded in the arm. An examination is made by his pals and it is decided to obtain a doctor. Chuck drives to Pardale Station and requests Helen to wire for a doctor, giving her a new ten-dollar bill to pay the charge.

Helen has received a message stating that U. S. Treasury ten-dollar bank notes of a given series have been stolen. In making change she notes the newness of the bill and upon examination discovers that it is one of the notes stolen. She wires for the doctor and also a detective. They arrive; the detective takes the doctor's place and drives to the hut with Chuck.

Johnson, the detective, is discovered. The crooks tie him to a push car, and send it down a grade on the main line. Helen discovers the plot and races to the drawbridge which is drawn up as the push car and Johnson approach. She uses a lariet, throws it over the end of the drawbridge, lets herself down as the drawbridge goes up and as the car bearing Johnson, who has freed himself from the ropes, comes to the bridge. Helen slips her arm through his arms, which are handcuffed, and saves him from the plunge into the river beneath.

"THE VANISHED LINE RIDER" (An episode of "The American Girl"—Two parts).—The cast: Madge King (Marin Sais); Roger King, her father (Frank Jonasson); Matt Welby, the ranch foreman (Hart Hoxie); Prof. John Danby (Edward Clisbee); Jed Hawley (R. E. Bradbury); George Lane, the line rider (L. M. Phillips); Mrs. Lane, his wife (Mary Watson).

At her father's San Remo Ranch, Madge King receives a telephone message from her friend, Mrs. Lane, requesting her assistance in finding her husband, a line rider for the Vantana Electric Power Company.

While Roger King, her father, goes to the station to meet his old friend, Prof. John Danby, Madge and Matt Welby, the ranch foreman, call at the home of Mrs. Lane. They discover a note to the missing line rider, threatening him with death. They promise Mrs. Lane to investigate.

While returning to the ranch, Prof. Danby, who is a geologist, stops to examine a rare formation of rock. Near the spot, King finds a hat with the name "George Lane" written on the band. Two strangers, driving by, see King pick up the hat, and fire upon him. King returns the fire, and a struggle ensues. Another stranger, Jed Hawley, arrives on the scene, but the three men of mystery are put to flight when Madge and the foreman arrive.

Believing the incident to be connected with the disappearance of George Lane, Madge determines to see it through. She hides in the wagon of the strangers, and instructs her father to follow in his rig with the professor. The strangers drive to the shack of Jed Hawley where Madge is discovered by them, and locked in a closet in the shack. She manages to escape by shooting off the lock. She looks out of the window, and sees the three strangers unloading Chinamen from the covered wagon. They are evading the immigration laws by smuggling Chinamen into the state across the Mexican border.

Madge follows the strangers as they hide the Chinamen in a cave near the shack. She enters the cave, and there finds a secret door leading to an inner cave. She finds George Lane, the missing line rider, inside.

He tells Madge his story: "I was riding near this shack one morning when I chanced to see those fellows taking Chinamen out of a wagon. I understood what they were doing. They tried to bribe me into silence. I refused. They sent me a threatening letter, and later a 'phone call summoning me to Devil's Leap on pretext of wire trouble. There they overpowered me, and brought me a prisoner to this cave. I've been here ever since."

At this point Hawley enters the cave and discovers Madge there. He again makes her a prisoner. The timely arrival of her father, Matt and Danby brings about the capture of the smugglers and the release of George Lane, the "vanished line rider."

A MENAGERIE MIXUP (Ham and Bud Comedy).—The cast: Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton); Bud (A. E. Duncan); Ringworm (John Steppling); Hester Honeysuckle (Amy Murdoch); Hester Honeysuckle (Edythe Sterling).

While hunting with a beau shooter, Bud mistakes Ham for his target. In fleeing from Ham Bud knocks over Hester Honeysuckle, who is on her way to mail invitations to her masquerade party. Ham rescues her and she gives him an invitation. Ham decides to go to the party disguised as a bear.

Ringworm's circus comes to town, and the manager offers Bud "two bucks" to help him advertise the show by playing his escaped bear, "Willie." Bud accepts the position, and in a bear skin hides in a cave.

Ringworm has the whole village searching for the escaped bear. Among the party is I. C. Double, the village toper. When Ham, clad in a white bear skin and on his way to the party, is mistaken by the villagers for the escaped bear, things begin to happen. When I. C. Double sees both Ham and Bud, both disguised as bears, he gives the alarm. After the villagers have trapped the two bears in a cave, they smoke them out. But Ham and Bud, neither knowing the identity of the other, make a thrilling getaway by jumping off a high cliff. In the gully below, they doff their disguises and recognize each other and it fairs ill with Bud at the hands of Ham.

THE MAN HUNT AT SAN REMO (An episode of "The American Girl"—Two Parts).—The cast: Madge King (Marin Sais); Roger King, her father (Frank Jonasson); Hal Dawson (R. E. Bradbury); "Old Ben" Carter (Edward Clisbee); "Maverick" Charley (Paul C. Hurst).

While Madge King and her father are entertaining Hal Dawson, a mining promoter, at their San Remo Ranch, one of the ranch cowpunchers, "Maverick" Charley, surprises King by requesting a loan of a hundred dollars. King refuses to give him the money when "Maverick" will not tell him the cause of the sudden necessity.

"Old Ben" Carter, a prospector who has "struck it rich," calls at the ranch. When he is introduced to Dawson, he refuses to shake hands. Carter requests King to keep the gold he has just acquired until he returns from town, as he realizes his weakness for poker and fears he will lose his newly-gained fortune. King consents. From outside "Maverick" watches King put the money in the safe, and learns the combination.

Later King finds that his safe has been robbed. The alarm is sounded, and the man hunt begins. "Maverick" makes for Dave Bender's place, a rendezvous in the hills. There he obtains food, and asks to be left alone in a room while he writes a letter. When Bender later returns to the room he finds "Maverick" with two saddle bags, one containing the money box and the other a small bag and the letter. "Maverick" gives the latter bag to one of the men at Benders and pays him to deliver it to Mr. King at San Remo Ranch.

News of the reward for "Maverick's" capture reaches Bender's, but "Maverick" makes a getaway. He is captured, however, the money box is taken from him and given to Carter, who, upon opening it finds, it filled with sandwiches.

An explanation is offered as King rides up with the stolen money and a letter from "Maverick" which had been delivered to him. In the letter "Maverick" writes that "he is returning the money which Dawson made him steal." "Old Ben" Carter's refusal to shake hands with Dawson when he was introduced is here explained when it turns out that Carter knew Dawson in a mining town and was the cause of Dawson being driven from the town when caught cheating at cards. The reason of Dawson's visit to San Remo Ranch was to interest King in a fake mining deal, but when Carter showed up and recognized him he was afraid to go through.

When he heard of "Maverick's" need for money, he saw an opportunity for revenge on Carter. He persuaded "Maverick" to steal Carter's money, promising to split with him. When King asks "Maverick" what was his real motive in taking the money and then returning it, "Maverick" shows him a personal clipping from a newspaper, which reads: "Charley Mason: One more in family now. Destitute. All forgiven if you will only return home, Jane." King realizes why "Maverick" wanted to borrow a hundred dollars from him. As it turns out that "Maverick," instead of stealing the money, has saved it from Dawson. King makes him a present of enough to bring him to his home and family, while Dawson is placed in the custody of the sheriff.

DROPPED FROM THE CLOUDS (Two Parts—May 26).—A western saloon sells more liquor than a distillery can make, and a salesman, to fill the heavy demand, tries to introduce a new drink (Turkish Opal) into the town. The saloonkeeper agrees to take one thousand cases if the boys like it and the two await the arrival of customers.

The boys from the Bar U, five in number, are towing to town an aeroplane which has broken down. They arrive in time to have the salesman try his "Turkish Opal" on them. The drink wins favor at once and they then return to resume the towing. The drink is potent, and is all the salesman claims for it.

Returning to the plane, one of the boys points to the ground where a turkish rug appears. They decide to see how it feels to sit in an aeroplane; and the machine gently rises with them. They approach a town, and on close view it proves to be a typical Turkish city. The streets are crowded with Turks. Then the boys crash through the roof into a palace room, where a beautiful woman is discovered.

They win her favor and she becomes their guide as they leave to inspect the city. They meet the king who asks them to step into the anteroom. They bow, and back into the room into an opening in the floor, and come shooting down into a wild-beast arena. The sides are lined with cages full of lions. Their fair guide aids them to escape.

While going up the street, a big auto swings around the corner with an American girl in it, evidently a captive. Their guide suddenly stops, and shows them a train approaching. One of the boys grabs the girl and they then watch the express tear down the main street. A note flutters to their feet from a high window. It is from the American girl asking for help. They determine to rescue her, and a fight ensues. They are just escaping with her when their dream comes to an abrupt end. They accuse the new drink and return furiously to the saloon resolved to run the salesman out of town.

CUPID GETS SOME NEW DOPE (May 27).—Sammy Johnsin finds some love potion. He sees a nigger washer woman about to wake her lazy sleeping husband with a mallet. He squirts some of the potion over her and she kisses her husband instead. Then he comes to a man proposing to a spinster. She is about to refuse him but some of the potion makes her accept him. There is a "Keep off the grass sign" and a nurse with a baby on the forbidden grass. A policeman is about to arrest her, but the potion makes him love her instead. At least, just as he thinks that he had reformed the world, Sammie wakes up and finds it a dream.

NAVIGATION IN CHINA (Dorsey Educational—On Same as Foregoing).—The Chinese have navigated the Yangtze River for thousands of years, but the gorges are so deep and narrow that there has been a terrible toll of human life every year. Some years as many as 100,000 lives have been lost. The channel keeps changing on account of the constant rise and fall of the tide.

The junks must be towed through the ravines, by means of a line from the top of the mast to the shore, pulled by from twenty to one hundred and fifty men. The bare feet of these men have worn deep grooves in the rock. Every available foot of land along the river is cultivated by the villagers of the little villages which line the banks.

WHO SAID CHICKEN? (May 22).—The cast: Ernie (Ernie Shields); Wife (Florence Noar); Mr. Lane (Eugene Walsh); Mrs. Lane (Marcia Moore); Fatty (Ed Sedgwick); Sally Sloppus (Jane Bernoudy). Written by Walter Newman. Produced by P. C. Hartigan.

Ernie has a wife much older than himself, and he flirts with Mrs. Lane. Her husband threatens to have his life. Sally finds a note to Ernie from a friend telling him to go to Bear Lodge as the eats are great, especially the chickens. Ernie has torn the letter and only the part referring to chickens is found by Sally.

Lane has made arrangements with Fatty, with whom Sally is in love, to go to Bear Lodge. Fatty is the proprietor of it. When Ernie arrives, too, Lane thinks he has come after Mrs. Lane and is madder than ever. When Mrs. Ernie arrives, Mrs. Lane says that her husband has sworn to kill Ernie.

Sally and Fatty are getting the chickens ready for dinner. The wives hear Sally say, "Don't kill him," and think it is a fight between the husbands. They run off for help and find two huntsmen. Lane has fallen in the mountains and sprained his ankle and Ernie is helping him home. They have explained to each other and are friends. They arrive as Sally and Fatty are picking the chickens, and they are nearly choked with the feathers.

She invites her to spend the afternoon. First she puts her in a riding habit and makes her ride a horse.

Mary Ann stands it as long as she can. Then she rebels and her clothes are changed to a frock and half socks which embarrass her much. She has a horrid time till she sees a man with a hose. She takes it away from him and proceeds to enjoy herself. They all try to get it away from her and every one is soaked. Mary Ann goes home determined to do without "sunshine."

LAEMMLE.

MONEY'S MOCKERY (Two Parts—May 25).—The cast: Billy (William Wayne); Nancy (Francelia Billington); Jabez Peterson (Douglas Gerrard); Daws (M. Titus). Written by E. M. Ingelton. Produced by Douglas Gerrard.

Alone in his elegant dining room, old Jabez Peterson sits at a princely dinner. He has little appetite, and even the efforts of Daws, the butler, meet with little response. Jabez's mind wanders to the past. Home was a happy place then with a wife and little Billy, and Billy's birthday was always a happy event. The old man realizes that it is Billy's birthday.

Billy loves a young girl, Nancy, while studying art, and against his father's wishes continues his love making. The father threatens that unless he breaks off with the girl he will disinherit him. Billy later writes to his father that he has married Nancy. The old man tells his son never to come to him for anything.

Times are hard for Billy and his girl wife. Business is poor and there is little market for Billy's work. They establish themselves in a poor tenement. Here their finances reach the lowest ebb and on the day of days (Billy's birthday) their lights are turned off, the landlord is coming for the overdue rent and the larder is empty. Billy sets out determined to get work of any kind.

Nancy realizes it is Billy's birthday and there is no present for him. She decides to pawn her wedding ring and have a big dinner. She does so, and returning home, loaded down, meets Jabez. He is wearing old clothes and she, thinking he is an old friend in need of help, invites him to share the dinner. The old man is amazed at the cordial invitation given him, an entire stranger, and he helps in preparing the meal. His old heart is touched when he learns the sacrifice the girl has made to celebrate Billy's birthday. He hurries home, making an excuse.

Billy has been unable to find a thing to do. He returns home and is welcomed by Nancy and eyes the steaming dinner hungrily. Before leaving, old Jabez insisted the girl put on a wedding ring he has to hide the absence of her own. Billy sees the ring and recognizes it as his mother's. Nancy then tells of having to pawn her ring and while she is crying on his shoulder, old Jabez returns, bustles the bewildered couple into his waiting car and tells them that Billy's birthday celebration will be on him.

THE LIGHT OF LOVE (May 26).—The cast: Louise Morgan (Jessie Arnold); Donald Morgan (Thos. J. Crittenden); Agnes (Marjorie Ellison); Amelia (Virgina Corbin). Scenario by Bess Meredyth. Produced by Ben Horning.

THE BOSS OF THE FAMILY (May 20).—The cast: Pat Kelly (William Franey); Maggie Murphy (Gale Henry); Pansy (Lillian Peacock); O'Rourke (Milburn Moranti). Written by C. D. Hoadley. Produced by W. W. Beaudine.

Pat is a plumber in love with Maggie. She won't have him till she hears that he is heir to a million. Then she wants him but he turns her down. He gives a dinner to celebrate, but in the midst of the festivities a note arrives from his lawyer saying that Maggie is suing him for breach of promise. He decides to marry her. She rules the roost, and he is not allowed to have his friends in the house. She forbids O'Rourke to have anything to do with Pansy, her daughter. She gives a musical party, and does not invite the plumbers. Pat does, and he and his friends break up the whole thing with gas pipe for weapons. After this Maggie is subdued.

MOVING DAY (May 21).—The cast: Young husband (Eddie Lyons); His Wife (Edith Roberts); A Mover (Lee Moran); His Assistant (Harry Nolan). Written by Fred Palmer. Produced by L. W. Chaudet.

Eddie and Edith, a young married couple, are ready to move and are waiting for the van. Edith goes on ahead to the new house to wait for the furniture. The movers induce Eddie to take a drink or so, and he becomes a little muddled. After much labor, they get the van loaded and start.

After lunch they find what they think is the right house and move the stuff in, only to be informed by the owner that they are wrong. They move out again and after further adventures move back into the house from which they started.

Edith returns to find Eddie paying off the movers, and they start to carry the furniture back to the van.

BIG U.

THE SMASHING STROKE (Two Parts—May 27).—Jack and Robert Walton are owners of a plantation in Georgia. Their overseer, Peter Randall, is brutal to their slaves. He beats one of the negroes and Robert remonstrates with him. The two men get into a fight. Jack interferes to stop them, and Randall swears vengeance upon Jack for interceding. Helen Langdon is Robert's sweetheart, and rides over to their plantation. War is about to break out, and Robert and Jack are discussing it. Robert says that he loves the South, but he hates slavery and that it must come to an end. He declares that he will enlist in the Northern army. Jack will enlist with the Confederates. Helen declares that she will break with Robert if he joins the Unionists.

A year later, Jack is a secret agent in the Confederate army. They are in the neighborhood of their own plantation. Robert is detailed to supervise the destruction of the bridge to cut off the Confederate supplies. Jack goes to his home and is greeted by his mother and Helen, and the baby. He is called to action, the bridge is blown up and Jack is captured. Randall, who is a spy of the Confederates, though in the Northern army, determines to aid Jack to escape and put the blame on Robert.

He sends word to the plantation that Jack is a prisoner. Helen and the baby come over to the camp to beg permision to see him. Robert allows it. He goes into the tent where Jack is confined with Helen and the baby. Randall slips a Union cap and coat with a note to Jack in the pocket under the tent flap. Jack finds it. While Robert is talking to Helen, he puts on the clothes and makes his escape. He returns to his mother. The escape of the prisoner is reported and Randall tells the captain that he is Robert's brother.

Robert is accused of aiding him and is put under arrest. Randall is sent with an important message. He sends word to Jack by a farmer that the Union army is scheduled to leave for the shore, and that a train wreck is planned. The farmer brings the note to Jack. Randall is accidentally shot. He manages to reach the plantation, and falls off his horse. Dying, he writes a note to say that Robert is innocent as he alone aided the prisoner to escape. Helen rides with the note to the Union camp.

Robert is about to be shot. Helen comes just in time with Randall's confession. Robert is freed. He superintends the blowing up of the railroad track as planned. The Confederates, warned, attack the Unionists. There is a fierce encounter. Jack is killed, and Robert and Helen meet over his body and renew their vows.

BUTTERFLY.

LIKE WILDFIRE (Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Tommie Buckman (Herbert Rawlinson); Nina Potter (Neva Gerber); Mr. Buckman (L. M. Wells); Mr. Potter (Johnnie Cook); Tobias (Howard Crampton); Brown (Burton Law); Phil (Willard Wayne). Scenario by Karl Coolidge. Produced by Stuart Paton.

In the small town of Winton, Phillip Potter keeps the only Five and Ten Cent Store. He is a typical small-town merchant who shows no progression in either action or attire. He is a semi-invalid.

Nina, his daughter, is a complete antithesis to her father. When the town doctor urges Potter to take a vacation. Nina forces him to follow this advice and determines to run the store herself. She immediately begins to advertise and to clean up the whole store.

William Tobias, the real estate dealer, threatens to raise the lease of the store because Nina will not marry him. He writes to John Buckman that he can offer him a store in the heart of the city, directly opposite the only Five and Ten Cent Store and that he will hold the option for thirty days.

Buckman sends his son Tommie, a gilded youth, to Winston to report on the advisability of placing a store there. It is Tommie's chance to make good. Buckman then sends Brown to Winton so that he can check his son's report.

Tommie arrives in the small town, visits the Five and Ten Cent Store, and to cover his tracks, buys a dollar's worth of ribbon. Tobias taunts him for his purchase, a fight is begun and Tommie lands in jail. He sends a telegram to his father, saying that he is innocent, but the answer is that God takes care of the innocent and that Mr. Buckman is through with him. Tommie then appeals to Nina who arranges to have him released from prison.

Tommie accepts a position in the store. But soon he becomes the manager of the place and a general favorite with Nina and all the clerks. Meanwhile, on Brown's enthusiastic report, Buckman has opened a store in competition to Nina's. But Tommie watches closely and eventually outdoes Brown in every way. Brown becomes very discouraged and finally wires Buckman to come to Winton.

Nina invents a "sad iron" and Tommie goes to the city to sell the patent. His friend Phil manages the business end of the deal and sells the iron to Buckman for five thousand, the money necessary to pay the new lease on the store. But, celebrating with his club-fellows, Tommie is put on a train going in the wrong direction so that he does not arrive in Winton when Nina expects him.

Tommie has gone by the name of John Jones in Winton, but Tobias discovers that he is really Buckman's son, and informs Nina of this fact, telling her that Tommie is only a spy, working for his father's interest. She also sees a large advertisement of the "sad iron" in the opposite store and concludes that Tommie has betrayed her trust in him. She begins to weep and Tobias, taking auvantage of his opportunity, puts his arms about her.

Tommie, meantime, arrives in Winton and rushes to the store. He sees Nina in the arms of Tobias. He then writes a note to her, confessing to being Buckman's son, but denying being a traitor or spy, enclosing the check for five thousand and congratulating her upon her coming marriage.

A clerk hands the note to Nina and she runs from the office and catches Tommie as he is getting ready to leave. She explains her side of the trouble and he adds his explanation. Tommie grabs Nina and impulsively embraces her.

Buckman comes to Winton, and he and Brown walk into the store across the way, and are shown to the office where they find Tommie and Nina sitting on top of a desk, their arms about each other.

A 44-CALIBRE MYSTERY (Three Parts—May 22).—The cast: Sheriff (Harry Carey); Kitty Flanders (Claire Du Brey); Bob Flanders (Frank MacQuarrie); Pete McGuire (Vester Pegg); Horton (William Gettinger); Joe (Hoot Gibson). Scenario by C. J. Wilson, Jr. Produced by Fred Kelsey.

"Bow-Legged" Billy Jenson, Sheriff of Driftwood, declares for law and order. Kitty Flanders, daughter of a pioneer prospector whose wife is dead, falls in love with him. The Sheriff, fearless in all things else, is timid when it comes to love-making.

A masked bandit, believed to be "Lone Jack," holds up the stage coach near Flap-Jack. A cowboy, riding in the distance, sees the robbery and reports it to Deputy Sheriff Horton. The bandit is Pete McGuire.

McGuire returns to Driftwood. Deputy Horton also arrives in Driftwood seeking the robber. Seeing McGuire, the Deputy watches him. Kitty goes to the store for groceries, where Pete McGuire watches her admiringly. Sheriff Billy Jenson is watching Pete suspiciously. Pete surmises that Kitty and the Sheriff are sweethearts. A rough-neck drunk approaches Kitty and insults her. Pete McGuire interferes, and plays the "hero." Kitty permits Pete to walk home with her, much to the discomfiture of the Sheriff.

That night the Sheriff and his deputy, Horton, compare notes and become convinced Pete is the bandit. Horton insists on the right to capture Pete unaided. One of the saloon habitues overhears their plan, and "tips" Pete. The latter hides in a deserted outhouse, but is loath to leave camp, as he wants to obtain Flanders' mine. The following morning Pete sees Flanders on his way to the mine and follows him. Deputy Horton sees Pete and follows him. Flanders discovers that he is being followed and hides behind a rock, gun drawn. Pete also hides, knowing that it is Horton who is after him. Both Flanders and Pete are taking aim at Horton when the latter comes upon Flanders. Before Flanders or Horton can realize their mutual mistake, Flanders and Horton have both fired. Flanders believes the second shot (the one fired by Pete) is the echo of his own. Horror-stricken, he believes he has unintentionally killed the deputy. Pete confronts him and encourages the mistake. He tells Flanders he is likely to be hanged by the vigilantes.

Pete agrees to seal his lips if Flanders will deed Pete one-half of the mine and "fix it" for him to marry Kitty. Flanders confesses to his daughter that he killed Horton. Pete woos Kitty and her father pleads with Kitty to look with favor on his courtship. Billy, the sheriff, has no evidence on Pete. He is therefore compelled to step aside and allow the man he believes is a bandit to woo his sweetheart. Kitty and Pete are to be married, and she is forced to tell Billy, she loves Pete.

Pete tells the boys to defy the sheriff. They start a rough house. Billy tells them to behave or leave town. It is now a show-down. The sheriff is about to draw his gun, but his love for Kitty still checks him. Flanders learns that Kitty is heart-broken over her prospective marriage. He decides to save her, and to make clean breast of everything to the sheriff. He does so. Billy is amazed and says: "You're crazy! The bullet that killed Horton was a .44 steel-jacket. Your gun shoots a .38 soft-nose." Flanders is amazed and recalls the "echo."

The sheriff tells Flanders it was the "echo" that killed Horton. He decides to take Pete's gun away from him and examine it. Kitty has admitted that she hates Pete and loves Billy, so Billy now has a clear road to kill or capture Pete. Everyone in camp believes that he is afraid of Pete. Billy enters the saloon, walks up to Pete, and quietly lifts the gun from Pete's holster, confirming his suspicions that Pete's is a .44 hard-nose. A gun battle ensues and Pete is slain.

BEACH NUTS (May 23).—The cast: Ima Knutt (Dan Russell); Knutt Sunday (Bert Roach); Hazel Knutt (Gladys Varden); Krazy Knutt (Walter Stephens). Directed by Noel Smith.

Ima Knutt was the life saver on the beach and the idol of all the girls. He liked girls to be small and slim, and was much disconcerted when the biggest nut on the beach, an enormous lady in a black bathing suit, insisted upon having his services to teach her to swim. At the same time Knutt Sunday, the clerk at the soda fountain, was regaling Hazel Knutt, his sweetheart, with the sweetmeat named after him. Ima much prefers Hazel to the fat lady.

Into the bathhouse comes Krazy Knutt. He decides to go in swimming. So does Hazel. Ima brings water wings for her and is delighted with the chance to teach her. He invites her to go for a ride in a beach chair. It runs away with them and Knutt Sunday gives chase. At last they return to the bathhouse. Krazy is pushed into the water, and Ima and the girl sit on the edge making eyes at each other. Krazy ties their shoelaces together, and they both fall in when they try to get up. Ima then seizes Krazy and makes him his assistant life saver. He then goes off with the girl to get some ice-cream. Knutt ties a weight to his leg as he is eating it and the weight drags him into the pool. Ima pulls Knutt in with him.

They rush out onto the beach. Ima and the girl hide behind a beach umbrella. Knutt removes the umbrella and puts it over a hideous girl. Ima returns to her and is disgusted. Ima and the girl go for a ride in the flying boats and Knutt follows and spills Ima into the sea. A crab grabs him, and he rushes to the shore. He puts the crab on Sunday. Sunday determines to be revenged. He decoys Ima and the girl into a bathhouse and then chloroforms them with a bicycle pump through the key hole. He hires two confederates to push the machine into the sea and drown Ima and the girl. The police see the suspicious characters and arrive in time to rescue Ima and Hazel. But the men make a mistake in the bathhouse and Knutt Sunday is drowned.

JERRY JOINS THE ARMY (May 24).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Rookie and Chief (George George); Father, (Louis Fitzroy); Daughter (Claire Alexander); Army Officer (H. Archer). Written and directed by Milton H. Fahrney.

After viewing an enlistment poster, Jerry decides to fight for his country. On his way to the recruiting station he becomes an interested spectator of a preparedness parade. Indeed, so interested does he become that it requires the services of two policemen to quiet his ardor. When he explains that he is on his way to enlist, they release him.

At the recruiting station he is told he is too small, and he combats this statement so strenuously that he has to be chased away. Tired by his exertions, he lies down and dreams of the "Spirit of '76," he having seen the picture at the recruiting station. Seeing himself as the drummer in the picture, fires his zeal anew, and he is playing the part and the drum to perfection when he is awakened by another policeman who wants to know what ails him.

When Jerry explains his desire to enlist, the officer takes him to the recruiting station and the matter is fixed, and Jerry takes his place with a squad of rookies. But unfortunately he gets into an argument with another rookie, and during the melee which ensues Jerry runs off to avoid being put in the guard house.

The training camp is near the border and Jerry, unconsciously running in that direction, is made prisoner by a Mexican bandit chief. He is taken to their headquarters, and there meets a beautiful girl and her father, who are also prisoners.

Then Jerry is tied to a tree and sentenced to be shot, but the girl manages to elude her captors and comes to Jerry's aid, and his Mexi-

"THE SERPENT'S TOOTH"—(American—Five Parts—May 28).—James Winthrop, a wealthy New Englander, returns to Totten Corners, after spending several years at college, and resumes his friendship with his boyhood playmates, Faith Channing and Jack Stilling. The former has developed into a beautiful woman and the latter is a young practicing physician.

Both men are in love with Faith, but Stillings, realizing his small income, decides it would be unfair to ask her to share his life. Winthrop finally marries her. Faith is certain that she loves Winthrop, but her affection for Stilling does not waver. Stillings becomes the Winthrops' best friend, as well as their medical adviser.

Fashionable friends visit the Winthrops, buy property and erect summer homes, so the place grows into a fashionable resort. This brings great wealth and high social ambitions to Winthrop. His wife does not share these ambitions. The husband and wife gradually drift apart and Winthrop becomes interested in Mrs. Hortense Filliard, a fascinating woman of the fashionable set.

A child upon which Faith has built hopes of winning back her husband dies at birth and she grieves alone. Jack Stillings, owing to her slow recovery, is forced to administer morphine. Hortense insists that Winthrop compel his wife to receive her. When she does call she is insolent, and Mrs. Winthrop orders her to leave the house. Before Hortense leaves Jim enters and they discover morphine tablets on the table. Hortense intimates if Faith were out of the way she would marry Winthrop and informs him the use of morphine is legal grounds for divorce in that state.

Jack calls and informs Winthrop and his wife that the latter must not take any more morphine, as she no longer needs it, and if she continues she will be in danger of becoming addicted to its use.

From this time on Winthrop administers morphin to his wife secretly with the hope that she will become a slave to the drug, and in doing so he himself becomes a victim of it. Stillings comes in time to save Faith, and Winthrop, upon learning that Hortense has announced her engagement to a richer man, dies in a fit of delirium.

GAUMONT.

TOURS AROUND THE WORLD (No. 29—May 22).—This issue of "Tours Around the World" takes the motion picture traveler via the screen to Cadiz, Spain, as the first point of interest upon this travel reel. This is the largest military port in Spain. Those who have visited Cadiz will appreciate how important are the Gaumont pictures of Isabelle Place and the Cathedral Square. There is an interesting panorama of the town, as well as many characteristic street scenes.

"River Life Near Paris" shows the favorite pastime of Parisians upon the Marne, a tributary of the Seine. Needless to say, these pastimes were photographed before the war, as the present Marne's aquatic activities are entirely directed by the military forces.

Gibraltar, the great British fortress that guards the gate between the Atlantic and the Mediterranean, is pictured from the water in an interesting section of this reel. The rock is probably the most strongly fortified place in the world.

Martinique, the West Indian island which suffered so terribly from the eruption of Mount Pelee, is pictured with great skill. The eruption in 1902 destroyed 40,000 lives. Evacuations at St. Pierre have been made sufficiently to give an excellent idea of how the houses look denuded of their coats of ashes and lava.

"REEL LIFE"—(No. 56—May 24).—Now that the world's production of sugar has been curtailed the Gaumont pictures of "The Sugar Industry of Barbados" in this issue of "Reel Life" is of unusual interest. The pictures are typical of the industry in the tropics, showing the laborers at work, the fields of cane, and the method of treating the juice after it has been crushed from the cane.

Another important section of this reel is "Plowing With a Motor Car." This recent invention enables a farmer to convert his automobile into a farm tractor. It will be a revelation to all who see the picture, the jar and weight being sustained by a separate shaft.

Caviar, that Russian delicacy which is now so scarce that gourmets pay two dollars for a small portion of it in New York hotels, has a prominent place in this issue of the Gaumont film magazine. The pictures show how the roe of the sturgeon provides the eggs and how they are treated in preparing them for the table. The best caviar is made in the winter. The poorer quality is a staple article of diet for Russian peasants.

"Golfing on Wheels" is now an accomplished fact, the pictures in this section not being a prophecy. Enthusiastic golfers who do not enjoy walking are seen touring the links on autopeds.

A fifth section of the reel shows a child's playhouse valued at $1,000.

VOGUE.

FLIRTING WITH DANGER—Two Parts—May 26).—The cast: A retired capitalist (Harry Huckins); his wife, an old man's darling (Myrtle Lind); his daughter (Mary Jones); owner of bowling alley (Larry Bowes); a representative of the unemployed (Paddy McQuire); a young sport (John Oaker). Directed by Rube Miller.

Harry Huckins is a gay old gentleman whose young wife is mistaken for his daughter by two ardent young lovers and his daughter is taken for his wife. A feeling of jealousy springs up between Bowes, the strong man and trainer in a gymnasium, and Oaker, a wealthy young chap, when each discovers that the other is trying to win the affections of Huckins' wife, whom they suppose is his daughter.

There is a quarrel between Evans, Bowes assistant, and Bowes himself. Evans, with his gang, then loads a number of Bowes' bowling alley balls with dynamite and wrecks the gymnasium. Out of the wreckage the various parties involved in the case of mistaken identity are happily brought together in such a way that satisfactory explanations are made all around.

"MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS"—Episode No. 10, "The Hole in the Wall"—Two Parts—May 20).—The cast: Philippa Brewster (Molly King); Bridgey Bentley (Ralph Stuart); Peter Hale (Leon Bary); Fuck Annesley (Gladden James); The Masked Stranger (????).

Peter believes he has reached the end of his search when he learns Philippa has been injured in an automobile accident and spirited away by the Masked Stranger. "If Philippa shows any signs of having been in an accident, I will know she is the Girl of the Double Cross—the girl I love," says Peter. When he meets Miss Brewster she professes surprise when he asks her how she is feeling after the accident. Peter, amazed, tries to undo the shoulder strap of her gown to see if there is a mark of the Double Cross on her arm. He is detected by the girl, who resents his boldness.

Later Peter sees Philippa go to the home of the Masked Stranger. Infuriated, he bursts into the house, but only the Stranger is there. "I swear," Peter is told. "Philippa is not here, nor has she ever been here." Peter is unconvinced and threatens the Stranger unless Philippa is produced in two minutes. The Stranger, secretly summoning servants, has Peter thrown out of the house. Across the street he is amazed to see Philippa. He rushes to her and is rebuked for having had Bridgey Bentley thrown into jail.

One of the important features of this episode is the return of Hubert Brewster, Philippa's father, who mysteriously disappeared in his own home. Philippa is lured to the hole in the wall, carrying a note from Bentley to one of his henchmen instructing him to recover from the District Attorney's safe the confession in which Bentley admitted his crime. The henchman was also instructed to detain Philippa. Bentley also planned to compromise Philippa so that she would be compelled to marry him.

"THE CANDY GIRL"—(Thanhauser—Five Parts—May 20).—The cast: Nell (Gladys Hulette); Nell's little sister (Helen Badgley); Jack Monroe (William Parks, Jr.); Jack's father (J. H. Gilmour); Geo. Wingate (Thos. A. Curran). Scenario written by Philip Lonergan. Directed by W. Eugene Moore.

Nell's fudge making was the talk of the countryside. She was called the candy girl by the youngsters. Sweetness was one of the chief characteristics of the sunny-hearted girl. Speaking to her aunt, Nell exclaimed, "We're going to New York, and I am goin' to make candy for everyone there, and we're going to be rich." The following week found her established in New York, the proud possessor of a little store not far from the Great White Way.

Two men enter Nell's life, one a musician, and the other, Jack Moore, the idle son of a millionaire. Inducing the musician to play ragtime, instead of operatic compositions, Nell leads him to the road of success, while Jack for the first time experiences impulses of goodness. Aspiring to win Nell's favor, Jack tries to make good. Listening to his pleadings, Nell married Jack, whose father was opposed to his marriage. She tells her that for several years Jack has been addicted to the drug habit. All efforts to save him have been useless. Stunned, Nell listened silently until the father offered to secure an annulment of the marriage. Refusing the offer, Nell rushes to Jack and throwing her arms about him, she says, "We'll return to my little country home and there we'll wage this fight together."

"THE NEGLECTED WIFE" —Episode No. 2, "Weakening"—Two Parts—May 20).—The cast: Margaret Warner (Ruth Roland); Horace Kennedy (Roland Bottomley); Mary Kennedy (Corene Grant); Edgar Doyle (Neil Hardin); Frank Norwood (Philo McCullough).

After rescuing Margaret in an accident, Kennedy escorts her home. As she regains consciousness she discovers herself in Kennedy's arms and, becoming frightened, she pushes him away, asking what has happened. Kennedy tells her that they have just escaped death. Margaret discovers that she has lost her handbag and asks Kennedy to search for it. Convincing her this would be useless, Kennedy offers her a check, which she finally accepts as a loan.

Mary decides to take a trip on their houseboat. She meets an old friend, Frank Norwood, a magazine editor, who shows her a manuscript which impresses him very much. Mary is startled at the inscription, "His Wife and the Other Woman,' by Margaret Warner."

Kennedy telephones Margaret, asking her to dine. She consents and they go to a fashionable cafe, followed by Doyle, the crooked lawyer whom Kennedy had disbarred.

Doyle knocks over a large urn placed directly over Kennedy's table. Fortunately, it misses Kennedy by a small margin.

Kennedy leads Margaret away to avoid publicity. She repulses his advances, telling him to remember his wife. Both receive threatening letters, which disclose that someone has learned their secret, and Margaret refuses to see Kennedy any more.

"BACK STAGE."—Props, the stage man, and his assistant at the Orpheum Theater, Pinkville, divide their time equally between drinking and attention to duty. The Wiggle sisters, an Hawaiian act, arrive and demand the star's room, and there is a rumpus when Props declines to accede to their request. But Props relents when Babe, the strong man, and his wife, Ethel Burton, arrived, for Props has an eye for beauty. Props is forever getting in the way of the performers and causing unmeasured confusion.

His bibulous assistant has an unfortunate propensity for dropping the curtain at wrong moments. However, the audience in front likes the show, and the philosophy of Props appears to be "I should worry." The strong man and his wife present their act, assisted on the stage by Props, who is always in the way. The curtain descends, leaving the strong man alone on the stage. The audience thinks this is part of the show and applauds accordingly.

But to the succeeding act, "Rags and Riches," a serious drama, they tender a hostile reception and leave the house. Meanwhile the strong man, returning to his dressing room, finds Props making love to his wife and there is a fierce altercation. But Props escapes punishment and appears to be immune from the attacks.

Bobby Bumps Volunteers.—The cartoon in this issue is about Bobby Bumps and his pup, Fido. Bobby decides to offer the services of himself and his pup. In accordance with this he sets out to the nearest recruiting station and makes known his resolution to the recruiting officer, who smiles and tells him he had better grow a little more. Not in the least fazed, Bobby sticks around and then decides that he'll guard the nation's liberty at all costs. Just how he accomplishes this is brought out in a funny manner.

Money—Old and New.—In this section of the Pictographs Uncle Sam shows us what is done with the old currency. In consideration of the fact that there are over a billion dollars in gold in the subtreasury alone it is necessary to have expert inspectors go through every bag of gold and make sure that there are no spurious coins mixed in.

Then we turn to the "Old Money" part of the matter. This money, when it is received in bad condition after traveling all over the country, is sent through what is termed as a laundering process, after which the bills come out just as good as new. It is indeed a pity to watch an operator at one of these machines destroying the old money that cannot possibly be repaired, for the while he is punching holes in fifty dollar stacks of bills, you'll find yourself holding on tighter than ever to that lone "Simoleon" in your jeans.

A Lesson in Wood Carving.—Mme. Frieda Van Emden, a native of Friesland, Northern Holland, who is one of the most remarkable wood carvers of modern times, has consented to unfold for Paramount audiences that dexterous art of wood carving. Here it is shown what can be done with a chisel and a couple of keen knives if—one has a little patience and an artistic sense.

The Sun Cure.—At Perrysburgh, N. Y., is located the J. N. Adam Memorial Hospital maintained by the City of Buffalo. This is the only institution to make use of the sun's rays for curing tuberculosis bone cases.

The keynote of the treatment is the exposure of the body gradually to the sun's rays, after which the patient is constantly kept in the rays out of doors. These rays act as a stimulant to the nervous system, and as the body becomes accustomed to exposure so does strength return.

IN BATAVIA, THE JAPANESE CAPITAL—(Burton Holmess—May 21).—In this trip Burton Holmes takes your patrons to Java, the richest island of the Dutch East Indies, and Batavia, its capital city, one of the most picturesque and interesting cities of the Far East. We see many unusual sights, such as the embarking of the Dutch troops for Sumatra, another Dutch possession, to quell a revolt. Then a Dutch treat. "How many have wondered where the expression Dutch treat came from?" We are shown an originla one. An important feature concerning this so-called "treat," which is termed by them as the "Rice Table," is the amount of service required to serve the courses, of which there are as many as there are varieties of Heinz's pickles. It takes seventeen waiters or attendants to make the meal complete.

Next week Mr. Holmes will take your patrons to rural Java.

THE PRIMROSE RING (Lasky—Five parts—May 8).—The cast: Margaret MacLean (Mae Murray); Bob MacLean (Tom Moore); Dr. MacLean (Winter Hall); Sandy (Little Billy Jacobs).

Margaret MacLean, a thin little waif with a twisted spine, is one of the children in the incurable ward of a hospital. As a foundling she has been named after the head surgeon, Dr. Robert MacLean. The doctor is interested in Margaret's case and performs a successful operation to straighten her spine. Margaret is sent to school and then to study to become a nurse.

The doctor sends his son, Bob, to Paris to study surgery. At the age of eighteen Margaret is a nurse in the children's incurable ward and attentively watches over the invalids, telling them wonderful fairy stories, much to the chagrin of the head nurse. Dr. MacLean receives a photo and letter from Bob saying he is coming home. Margaret takes the picture and shows it to the children, telling them it is the white knight who is coming to free them from the rule of the Ogre, Pain.

Dr. MacLean dies suddenly before Bob returns, the head nurse taking charge until Bob reaches home. When he does arrive, Margaret is surprised to find that he does not agree with her idea of entertaining the children. Finally, when he announces that he is going to dispense with the ward, she throws off her cap and apron and leaves. Dr. Bob is just about to go into the ward to tell the children they have to go when they all rise up and hail him as the white knight, and little Sandy tells the story which Margaret has told them.

Margaret has established herself in a small room and has made several unsuccessful attemps to secure employment. Finally the employment agency sends her to a place in the country. As she stands waiting at the door of the big house she reads a sign—"Margaret MacLean's Home for Incurables." Inside she finds all her little charges, with all their toys—and Dr. Bob awaiting her with open arms.

THE SILENT PARTNER (Lasky — Five Parts—May 10).—The cast: Jane Colby (Blanche Sweet); Edward Royle (Thomas Meighan); Harry Wilson (George Herbert); David Pierce (Ernest Joy); Edith Preston (Mabel Van Buren); Mrs. Preston (Florence Smythe); Mrs. Wilson (Mayme Kelso).

Jane Colby, doubting the honesty of Harvey Wilson, a member of the firm by which she is employed, discovers a discrepancy in his accounts, and his resignation is therefore requested by Edward Royle, his partner. Both these men are interested in Edith Preston. Wilson is her favorite, the fact that he is married having been kept from her. She accepts Royle's proposal of marriage. Wilson, revengeful, plans with David Pierce to effect Royle's financial ruin.

Jane has saved nearly $10,000 with which to purchase a home. She is daily becoming of more value to her employer, and discovering that the stock in which he is interested is going down, and unable to reach Royle, forges his signature to a check and buys "Consolidated." Wilson learns that Jane has pulled Royle out of the hole and works through Edith to obtain her discharge. Royle quickly finds out how little he really knows of his own business and puts Jane back to work. Believing Jane out of the way, Wilson and Pierce are confident they can "clean" Royle and make a fortune for themselves. Jane learns it will take $10,000 more to make Royle safe, and buys the stock with her own money.

Edith has refused to help Royle, forbidding him to touch her jewels. She leaves Royle and goes to Wilson's apartment, leaving a note for her husband. The latter learns from the chauffeur where she has gone and follows. Fearing trouble, Jane also goes to Wilson's apartment and hides Edith as Royle rushes in. He accuses her of also being under Wilson's spell and reveals the fact that he is married. Edith hears this, and, mad with rage, bursts into the room, puts her arms around her husband, who repulses her. Wilson also states he wants nothing more to do with her. At the office Jane shows Royle a news item about a big foreign order which revives the stock, but he believes it has come too late. As Jane reveals to him how she has saved him, he tells her that she is no longer a silent partner, but a full partner, and the love which has never before been expressed lights up both their faces.

THE MARCELLINI MILLIONS (Morosco—Five Parts—May 14).—The Cast: Guido Bartelli (George Beban); Antoinetta Bartelli (Helen Jerome Eddy); Leo Marcellini (Pietro Sosso); Wade Crosby (Henry Woodward); Mr. Hargrave (Fred Huntley); Nancy Harris (May Gaston); Mr. Waring (W. H. Bainbridge); Mr. Murray (Eugene Pallette); Mrs. Murray (Adele Farrington).

Guido Bartelli, an Italian truck gardener, with his wife and baby, living happily on a little farm. Leo Marcellini, a wealthy wine merchant, having wronged the mother of one of his clerks, Wade Crosby, wills him his entire fortune, but when Crosby insists upon marrying the stenographer, Marcellini, overcome with rage, tears up the co-partnership papers, but the letter containing the will falls to the floor and lies there unnoticed. In the excitement Marcellini is stricken with a heart attack which results in his death.

The only living relative who can be found is Guido and he and his wife are made sole owners of the beautiful Marcellini Hall. Two crooks, Mr. and Mrs. Murray, descend upon the Italians and act as their social mentors, and proceed to spend for them the Marcellini millions. Guido dislikes his new home—he is uncomfortable, and Mrs. Murray takes Antoinetta, his wife, dresses her in fashionable clothes and escorts her into society. Guido feels his wife slipping away from him and goes to the old home and move his furniture into the big mansion. Through Mrs. Murray's influence the wife becomes indignant and when Guido finally orders a crowd of Mrs. Murray's roisterous friends from the house Antoinetta is induced to get a divorce.

Guido goes back to his little truck garden, but is very lonely. Marcellini's crooked manager has found the paper and attempts to extort money from Antoinetta by telling her that she has no right to the Marcellin millions. Antoinetta is overjoyed at this news. Crosby receives the fortune and Antoinetta goes back to the little truck garden, and when Guido returns from the fields he finds her there hard at work, and, as they sit down to their first happy meal in months, Guido repeats his remark—that he is "pretty lucky fella."

MOVING—(Klever Komedy—May 21).—Vic is living in one of those city flats where there is everything except fresh air. So his wife decides that Vic should get busy and look for a country place. The children must have a place with fresh air and green grass.

Vic visits a real estate agent. He shows Vic a picture of a bungalow and the location at Bentwood Ave. and Proposed Street on the map. It is "swept by the ocean breezes" and is absolutely devoid of mosquitoes. Vic agrees to take the place. He pays his deposit and the balance is to be paid monthly.

Vic arrives home with the maps and photos of the bungalow and shows them to his wife and children, and they dance with joy. The family arranges to move at once. The milk man arrives just as they have all the furniture on the wagon. He has a bill and Mrs. Vic discovers that she has left her purse in the dresser drawer, which is packed on the wagon, and, much to the displeasure of the moving men, they must unload to get at the dresser. After reaching it, it is not to be found, and Mrs. Vic remembers that she left it on the shelf upstairs. The milk man is paid and the wagon is reloaded. Mrs. Vic is so worried about the effects on the wagon that she insists they go along with it. They all pile on the wagon, kids and all, and off they go.

As they go down Main street they come upon a seed store and Vic suggests that they stop so he can get some seed, etc. He does; in fact, he gets everything ever used in a garden, or a farm, including some "succotash seed." He piles it all on the wagon, and off they go again. En route to the bungalow a garden hose which he has bought manages to become undone and causes no end of trouble to the pedestrians.

They travel along for a couple of hours and come upon a bungalow which Vic insists must be the house, as it looks like the picture the agent showed him, and they stop and unload the family. Vic goes to the house as the owner comes out and Vic shows him the map. He tells Vic that his place is two miles further out. The whole party is disappointed, and off they start again. It is soon lunch time, and Vic makes the moving man stop, so he can feed the family. They spread a cloth on the ground and soon they are all at it.

Finished, they are off again, and presently they come upon the location mentioned in the map. It is a street, as yet undeveloped, and more like a cow path. Vic feels there must be some mistake. He stops a stranger to ask him if he knows where Proposed Street is. The stranger tells him he is on the street. Vic then spots a little bungalow at the upper end of the alleged street and is sure that it must be the house. It is. He tells the moving men to go ahead, but the ground is so soft the wagon gets stuck, and there is nothing left to do, but to all get off and push. They all do

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAY, INC.

THE FLASHLIGHT—(Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Delice Brixton (Dorothy Phillips); Jack Lane (Wm. Stowell); Henry Norton and Porter Brixton (Lon Chaney); John Peterson (Alfred Allen); Barclay (George Berrill). Written and directed by Ida May Park.

Jack Lane has gone to the mountains to experiment in photographing animals. His own invention, combined with a flashlight arrangement, sets off the camera when an animal steps upon a certain twig or moves the branch of a tree, automatically photographing the object within range.

Lane has a cabin in the vicinity, but night overtakes him at some distance from his shack. He applies for shelter to Porter Brixton, a recluse, who refuses. Lane goes into the woods, sets his photographic outfit, and goes to sleep in his blankets. He is awakened by the sound of his flashlight exploding. Coincidentally he hears the report of a rifle in the direction of Brixton's cabin.

When morning dawns Lane takes his blankets and photographic outfit and goes to his cabin. There he develops the plate and finds the photograph of a girl, carrying a rifle, snapped by his camera at a moment she is evidently in flight. Later he learns that Porter Brixton has been murdered.

Curiosity leads Lane to Brixton's cabin. The sheriff arrests him when the tracks Lane made in the mud when he asked for shelter the night before fit the shoes Lane wears. Going overland with his prisoner the sheriff stops at a mountaineer's cabin for the night. Lane, bent upon escape, lines up the men in the cabin to take their photograph. Amid the smoke produced by the exploding flashlight Lane gets away.

Morning finds him exhausted upon the banks of a mountain stream. He is awakened by the presence of the girl his camera pictured. She parries his inquiries, but suggests that the two stick together in their efforts to escape. The girl has a canoe, and in this the man and woman make their way down stream until they are overtaken by the bands of mountaineers who seek to recover Lane.

Lane and the girl get ashore and separate. The sheriff's deputy re-captures Lane and takes him to the county seat for trial. When things look blackest for Lane, the girl appears as a witness, and her testimony acquits him.

She tells that Brixton, who is her father, has not been murdered. The dead man was Brixton's half-brother, who has been killed by Brixton in pursuance of a feud that the murdered man went to Brixton's cabin for the purpose of settling. Because of their striking personal resemblance Brixton changed clothes with the dead man and left the vicinity forthwith. Now he returns for the purpose of freeing an innocent man and standing trial for an act of self-defense.

Lane and his "flashlight girl" are free to bring to fruition the love that had been born on the day they endeavored to escape from their pursuers in the journey down the mountain stream. They have assurance from the mountaineers that Brixton's trial will be a mere matter of form, so clearly has an act of self-defense been established.

CHRISTIE FILM CORP.

WITH THE MUMMIES' HELP—(May 7).—The cast: Mrs. Morton (Margaret Gibson); Mr. Morton (George French); Prof. Bugg (Eddie Barry); his wife (Ethel Lynne).

Professor Bugg is a "nut" on antiques, but his wife, Ethel, is not so keen about them, and when he orders two mummies sent to their house it is the last straw. Mrs. Morton, an old friend of Ethel's just come to town, finds her crying and they decide the Professor needs a lesson. The mummies are brought while Bugg is out, so Mr. and Mrs. Morton, in Egyptian costume and cerements, get in the mummy cases.

Bugg opens Mrs. Morton's case first. She tells him she was his sweetheart in a former incarnation, and they are getting along finely, when the other case opens and out steps "Karnak," his hated rival of earlier days. Karak bears a gleaming scimitar, with which he chases Bugg and gives him such a fright that he is glad to yield to Ethel's entreaty that he get rid of, not only the mummies, but the rest of the junk, as well.

THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER—(Third Series, No. 6—"Pure and Simple"—Kleine—May 6).—Musty becomes a carpenter's assistant. He decides that a twin brother would be a great help to him in his work, so he makes one out of wood. Thrown out of the shop, Musty and the dummy break into a girls' tea party with startling results. Of course, in the end, our hero gets very much the worst of it.

THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER—(Third Series, No. 7—"Spliced and Iced"—Essanay—May 13).—In the Spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of matrimony, and Musty is no exception. In spite of all the warnings voiced by his married friends, Musty takes the leap. The results are terrible from Musty's point of view, but furnish a series of incidents that cannot but elicit mirth and laughter from theater patrons.

THE LAD AND THE LION—(Selig—Five Parts—May 14).—The cast: Nakhla (Miss Vivian Reed); William Bankinton (Will Machin); Ben Saada (Charles LeMoyne); Sheik Ali-Es Hadji (Al W. Filson); James Bankinton (Lafayette McKee); Broot (Capt. Ricard); Col. Vivier (Cecil Holland); Marie (Gertrude Oakman); Captain Tagst (Mr. Frank Clark). Written by Edgar Rice Burroughs. Directed by Al. Green.

James Bankinton, a millionaire, consents to his only son, William, making a trip to Africa. The boy takes passage with Captain Tagst. They pass a sailing vessel carrying a caged lion to America. In the hold is a stowaway named Broot, and the pipe he smokes starts a fire. Knowing there is a consignment of powder the captain and crew abandon the ship. The stowaway extinguishes the blaze and discovers the lion.

Captain Tagst's ship is wrecked and William is left alone on a raft. The stowaway rescues the lad. Fright and exposure have robbed him of his memory. Time passes and the lad has made friends with the lion, for both are kicked and cuffed by Broot, the stowaway. Later the lion escapes and Broot springs overboard.

In after years the lad and the lion continue comrades in their lair near the desert. Nearby lies a little Arab village where Sheik Ali-Es Hadji rules with his daughter, Nakhla, who is self-willed, self-assertive, high spirited.

Ben Saada, the arrogant chief of a band of brigands, asks for Nakhla to be his wife. "Give me time to think, oh father. I am not yet sure that I love Ben Saada," exclaims Nakhla. Trembling with rage, the brigand bows in obedience to the girl's decision.

The lad and the lion discover an antelope. Saada, returning from his mission, also sees the antelope and kills it. His men, seeing a monstrous lion with a man standing beside it, flee and the lad claims the antelope.

Returning to the village, Saada tells the Sheik that he has seen a white devil with a lion as his companion. The Sheik, and Nakhla, his daughter, laugh, arousing the man to fury.

Nakhla rides one morning into the hills and comes to a waterfall. The lad and the lion are near, and Nakhla's horse, scenting the lion, runs away. The girl sees the man and the beast and also endeavors to escape. Four brigands see the girl and attack her. The lad sends the lion to her rescue. The brigands flee, leaving one of their band slain. The lion approaches the cowering girl and the lad assures her that she will not be harmed.

The man and the maid are mutually attracted to each other. At the suggestion of Nakhla, the lad puts on the garments of the slain Arab. When Nakhla's horse returns to the village the Sheik is about to send a party to search for his daughter, when the girl returns and tells her father of her experience.

Nakhla and the lad meet frequently. The princess soon learns to love this handsome stranger, and the lad thinks that never before has he seen anyone so beautiful. Saada informs the Sheik "the white dog is following in the footsteps of the beauteous one." Then the Sheik forbids his daughter to go again into the desert.

Saada tells the lad the girl has married one of her own tribe. The grief-stricken lad again dons his animal skins. Marie, daughter of Colonel Vivier, commander of the French garrison, is spending the day in the hills when the lion encounters them. Arab servants leave the girl to her fate. The lad approaches, calms her fears and escorts her home. Colonel Vivier, grateful to the lad, makes him a dragoman.

The Colonel visits the Arab village and the lad accompanies him. In the village he again sees Nakhla, and his love for her is intensified. Nakhla, seeing the lad with Marie, believes that he has forgotten her.

Saada decides finally to abduct her and force her into a marriage. The plot partially succeeds. He takes the girl to his camp, sending one of his servants with an ultimatum to the Sheik. The Sheik summons the soldiers and vows he will rescue his daughter. The lad, with his lion, also institutes a search and meets Ben Saada.

The bandit strikes the lad a fierce blow on the head. The lion, seeing his beloved master attacked, springs upon Saada and kills him. The blow revives the lad's memory. He realizes that he is William Bankinton, son of the millionaire. He does not forget his love for Nakhla, however, and he takes the beautiful girl into his arms.

METRO PICTURES.

THE BEAUTIFUL LIE—(Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.—Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Louise Joyce (Frances Nelson); Mortimer Grierson (Harry S. Northrup); Paul Vivian, artist (Edward Earle); the other girl (Elsie MacLeod); Mary (Sally Crute); Howard Hayes, Grierson's nephew (John Davidson); Mrs. Joyce (Mrs. Allan Walker); butler (Emil Collins). Directed by John W. Noble.

Mrs. Joyce, a seamstress, has worked hard to provide a home for herself and her daughter, Louise. She dies only a short time before the girl's education is completed, and Louise goes to the city, where she becomes a stenographer to Mortimer Grierson, an architect. Grierson soon makes advances to Louise, but discovers that she is only to be won by marriage. Howard Hayes, Grierson's nephew, has at one time forged his uncle's name on a check, and Grierson never permits him to forget it. He now uses it as a lever to force the young man to arrange a mock marriage for him. After the marriage he sends Howard to Mexico to look after some oil interests for him.

Tiring of Louise, Grierson decides it is time to end the farce of the so-called marriage. His decision is influenced by the fact that he has met another girl who attracts him. He comes home intoxicated one night and tells Louise the marriage is a farce. She is stunned, and Grierson leaves the house. Louise follows, imploring him to return and make their marriage legal. She is still protesting when he pushes her aside, gets into a waiting automobile and drives away. A policeman, believing she is annoying a wealthy man, arrests her as a disorderly woman and takes her to the station house.

There Louise is thrown in among unfortunate women. Mary, a woman of the streets, fearing the girl may fall into deeper abysses through desperation, tells the story of her own life and urges Louise to give her heart to no one, but to make men pay, to take all from them, but to give them nothing. In the morning Louise is arraigned, but discharged as a "first offender."

Taking Mary's advice, she becomes known as the "ice maiden." She becomes a model for Paul Vivian, an artist, recently returned from Paris. He is a protege of Grierson, who has paid for his education. He falls in love with Louise, and she, despite her resolve, falls in love with him, but she feels that she is unworthy of him. When Grierson tells Paul she has been an outcast, she does not deny it. Paul threatens to kill the man who has ruined her life, but when Grierson says, "I am the man," he relents. Louise says nothing of the marriage, simply telling Paul that she has a record as a disorderly woman.

Grierson goes away on a trip. Already he has tired of "the other woman," a new face having attracted him, and on their return he tells her he is through with her. In a jealous rage she shoots him. Mortally wounded, Grierson says he has shot himself. His physician tells him to put his affairs in order as death is imminent, and he plans to make provision for Louise. Howard returns from Mexico and confesses that the marriage to Louise was genuine, since in a spirit of revenge against his uncle he secured a real minister to perform the ceremony. After Grierson's death Paul finds Louise. He learns all and they begin life anew.

YANKEE PLUCK (Five Parts—May 21).—The cast: Polly Pollard (Ethel Clayton); Lieutenant Richard Travers (Edward Langford); Lieutenant Tommy Patterson (Johnny Hines); Baron Wootchi (Montagu Love); George Henry Singleton (Eric Wayne); John Pollard (Charles Bowser); Mrs. Madison Derwent (Isette Monroe). Directed by George Archainbaud.

John Pollard, once wealthy but now impoverished, lives in what is known in Washington circles as the "shabby genteel." His daughter, Polly, is the arch flirt of the District of Columbia. Pollard has a penchant for liquors, which is the despair of his daughter. First Lieutenant Richard Travers, comfortably wealthy, arrives from the Philippines on a three months' furlough. He becomes attracted to Polly Pollard. George Henry Singleton, a multi-millionaire, is considered the best catch in Washington by everyone except Polly. She is polite to him for the sake of her father.

At a party given by Mrs. Madison Derwent, the widow of a cavalry officer, Travers, his chum, Lieutenant Tommy Patterson, and the Baron Wootchi, of the Japanese Legation, are among those present. Tommy imparts to Mrs. Derwent that although Travers is interested in Polly, everyone knows and says that she is going to marry old Singleton. This sets Mrs. Derwent thinking. Baron Wootchi receives a letter from the Japanese Government, ordering him to watch Richard Travers, who has valuable papers that the Japanese must procure.

Later, at Mrs. Derwent's, Singleton proposes to Polly, but she rejects him. Singleton denounces Pollard, who comes in, but Pollard threatens to make Polly obey his wishes. Baron Wootchi asks Mrs. Derwent to watch Lieutenant Travers. At first she refuses, but when he gives her a bauble, she consents. Singleton comes into the room in time to see the jewel change hands, and with a cynical sneer he joins them, pretending not to have seen.

When all her guests but Singleton have departed, Mrs. Derwent asks him whether he really loves Polly. He resents her attitude, but she tells him she will fix it so that he will marry no one but herself, reminding him that he owes her something, after all the years during which they have been very intimate. He tells her that he knows most of the secrets which her house holds, and this silences her.

Tommy, who had overheard Pollard announce that his daughter will be made to marry Singleton, repeats it to Travers. Mrs. Derwent informs the Baron Wootchi that the Pollards are almost penniless, adding that Polly is in love with Travers, but her father is bitterly opposed to her choice. Baron Wootchi informs Pollard that Japan would give $50,000 for plans of the new army aeroplane which Travers carries. When Pollard starts at the remark, Baron apologizes for the offence.

Travers is accepted by Polly. He shows her the drawings of his plans, explaining that if accepted by the Government, they will net him over $100,000. When Polly tells her father of her engagement, she is surprised at his ready consent. Singleton calls, and when Polly speaks of her engagement, he denounces her father, saying that the note for $50,000 which he (Singleton) holds against him has been due for three months, and will be collected within ten days. Pollard explains to his daughter that he gave their home as security for the loan, and she realizes she must marry Singleton to pay off her father's debt. She telephones Travers, breaking the engagement.

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.
317 East 34th St. New York

In another week Travers completes his plans. Feigning drunkenness, Pollard reels into the hotel room occupied by Travers. When the young man sees his seeming condition, he places Pollard on a couch, where he pretends to fall into a deep slumber. Travers places the completed plans into the pocket of his dress uniform and while he is in the adjoining room with Tommy, Pollard steals the plans.

At Pollard's home Wootchi offers Pollard a check for the plans. Pollard demands cash. The Baron leaves. Polly arrives and finds a cigarette case with a Japanese inscription; she asks the butler whether the Baron has been there, but the man denies all knowledge of the Baron's call. She runs into her father's room to ask him, and sees him hastily hiding some bulky papers that have a familiar look. She becomes suspicious. Travers discovers the loss but will not report to the War Office, for fear that the scandal might implicate Pollard, and for Polly's sake, he must protect her father.

Polly sees her father and the Baron leaving in an automobile, and follows them in another car to a little inn. She prevails upon the waiter to allow her to bring the drinks to the men, assuring him that it is all a little joke on her father and his friend. Inside the room she notices the stack of bills near her father, and sees the Baron looking over Travers' plans. She realizes the truth and leveling a revolver at the Baron commands him to return the plans. He attacks her. She fires and hits his shoulder just as he is about to go out of the room. Stuffing the money back into the Baron's pockets and taking the plans, Polly explains to the waiter and landlord who enter, that the Baron had been explaining to her how the Japanese held their revolvers at target practice, when she discharged the barrel by accident. Baron Wootchi corroborates her story. The next morning Polly reads a newspaper item, telling of the accident in which Wootchi had been wounded, adding that in a few days he will be able to leave for Japan.

Travers reads the same account, and telephoning Polly, asks whether it truly had been an accident. She replies: "Certainly—it might have gone through his head." Realizing that the plans are worth a good deal more than fifty thousand dollars to him, Travers pays Singleton the money which Pollard owes him, gaining as a reward the hand of Polly Pollard.

ART DRAMAS, INC.

LITTLE MISS FORTUNE—(Erbograph—Five Parts—May 10).—The cast: Sis (Marian Swayne); Ned (Bradley Barker); Jim (Hugh Thompson); Flossie (Lucile Dorrington). Scenario written by Rev. Clarence J. Harris.

Sis is a poor country girl of unknown parentage. In the small town where she lives she is snubbed by all the other girls, and life is made generally miserable for her. It is her ambition to be a famous actress, and when an opportunity for escape comes she takes it and goes to the city.

Here she secures a position in a theatrical boarding house. In this institution there are Flossie, an ingenue; Jim, a leading man, and Ned, a leading man out of a job.

Jim is rehearsing his part and seeing Sis sweeping up his room one morning he persuades her to take the opposite role and help him rehearse. Her ability in delivering the lines astonishes him and he begins to see real promise in her.

Ned steals Flossie's jewelry and Sis is accused. She is taken to jail, but Jim discovers that Ned is the thief. Sis is released and as Flossie is ill, she gets an opportunity to play her part, in which she is letter perfect. From this point the love between Jim and Sis grows until it brings about a delightful ending.

FOX FILM CORP.

HIS BOMB POLICY (Two Parts).—The cast: C. Gull (Charles Conklin); Nichols (Alf Goulding); The Cook (Ann Ivers). Directed by Charles Parrott.

C. Gull is a manicurist. He loves a cook. An insurance agent induces him to take out a policy of which the cook is the beneficiary. When Mr. Gull takes the policy to his culinary love he finds Nichols, the cop, in the kitchen. Believing the cook false to him, Gull hastens away to commit suicide, but everything he tries fails. Finally he hires two amateur assassins to kill him.

Then a gang of bomb tossers work their way out of jail and into the plot. They are intent on blowing Nichols, the cop, into an early grave, but Gull, who has disguised himself as a policeman, attracts their attention and they decide to try the bomb on him. Pursued by the bomb throwers, the hired assassins, the cook and the policeman, Gull flees over the skyline of Los Angeles. He climbs to the dizzy heights of the electric signs that surmount the sky-scraper and counts with death in every way that comes to him. Finally he is run to earth by the cook and the cop; the cook accepts him for better or worse, and he celebrates by falling off the roof of a fourteen story building.

HEART AND SOUL (Five Parts—May 27).—Jess is taken when a child by her mother to the Hawaiian sugar plantation of her uncle. Her little sister, Bess, goes with her. En route the mother dies and exacts a promise from Jess that she will always look out for the welfare of her younger sister, Bess.

When the girls grow to young womanhood Bess is wooed by Martin Drummond, a cruel planter and renegade, whose estates border on that of the girl's uncle. Bess spurns him, hoping to win the love of John Niehl, a young American. Niehl pays little attention to her, as his love is for Jess.

Jess learns of her sister's love for Niehl and, recalling her vow to her dying mother, she leaves home to overcome her own heartbreak leaving Bess and Niehl to know each other better.

Bess, still spurning Drummond, is captured by the latter, who has started a revolution against the United States Government. Niehl goes to rescue her, but is wounded and captured. With Jess he escapes and they make their way back to her home, only to find it in the hands of Drummond.

Jess faces a crisis. Should she care for the wounded man she loves or go to her sister and rival? Duty to her oath wins. She rides to a distant fort and brings a detachment of United States soldiers to the rescue. Niehl meantime has been captured again by Drummond and, with the girl's uncle, ordered shot.

Just as the firing squad is about to shoot, Jess returns with the American troopers. Drummond, mad with hate, fires into the charging soldiers. Jess falls and is taken to the house dying. She places Bess' hand in Niehl's and tells him to look after her little sister. She dies.

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

THE SIXTEENTH WIFE (Five Parts—May 14).—The cast: Olette (Peggy Hyland); Kadir (Marc MacDermott); Warburton (George J. Forth); Hackel (Templer Saxe). Written by Molly Elliott Seawell. Directed by Charles Brabin.

Olette is posing in Russia as a dancer of the ballet. She is supposed to be French. She has as a maid a black woman, Zula, represented to be a Nubian. Hackel, her manager, plays up Olette's proclivities in dress and mood and makes a great success of her. Kadir Il Raschid, a noble and wealthy Turk, falls in love with her and showers rich gifts upon her. He pays Hackel a great sum to cancel her engagement in Russia and come to the ballet at Constantinople. There he offers her as a treat a view of the harem. Once inside among his fifteen wives he offers Olette the honor of becoming the sixteenth. Olette's embarrassment is heightened by the violent jealousy of Mimi, the fifteenth wife. She wants to escape, but huge slaves bar her way.

Although Kadir has trapped Olette he intends to win her fairly or not at all. Olette forms an alliance with Mimi, who aids her to escape. She flees to America, followed by Kadir. Here he renews his wooing. Jimmie Warburton, a live young New York newspaper reporter, comes to interview her about her reported engagement to Kadir, which has been used for publicity purposes by Hackel. During many adventures while Kadir hounds her, she and Jimmie fall in love and conspire to get rid of the Turk. Jimmie incidentally having penetrated her identity as a girl he had known as plain Mary Ann in the old home town in Kentucky. Jimmie dresses up as a rival Turk. This does not get rid of Kadir, but only makes him more determined. He disguises himself as Jimmie, whom he has kidnapped, and so secures an audience with Olette. Jimmie gets free in time to spoil the effect of this coup. At length the Turk is eluded by Olette setting sail for Europe, he shadowing her on the same boat, but she slips away out in the harbor with the pilot boat to rejoin Jimmie and marry him.

If It's a Motiograph You Know It's Made Right

It is the Projector that Represents the Standard of Value and Quality

The MOTIOGRAPH factory has the reputation of turning out a projector that is made of the best material obtainable. Did you ever hear of a MOTIOGRAPH gear though used five or even ten years, that had to be replaced on account of becoming worn?

The Sliding Disc Connection, which took the place of the ball arbor July, 1915, has been continuously used on thousands of MOTIOGRAPHS since that date, and not one of them has been replaced on account of defect or wear.

The New MOTIOGRAPH Condenser Mount, placed on the lamphouse in December, last year, is receiving favorable comment from every part of the country. It has reduced condenser breakage to a minimum.

If you buy a MOTIOGRAPH you have the satisfaction of knowing that it is made right and will give the best projection at a price which is within reach of every conservative buyer.

THE RESULT of building a projector that is "made right" is that the MOTIOGRAPH factory is compelled to work overtime to fill all orders promptly.

CENSORSHIP of moving pictures places a brand on the industry that is unjust, discriminating and against the spirit of our free institutions

Anti-Censorship Slides

Exhibitors:—This is the most convincing method of crystallizing public sentiment against the idea of "legalized" Censorship of moving pictures either Federal, State or Local. Sets of nine slides, all different, see page 1944 of issue of March 24th for complete text of each slide. We will mail sets for $1.00 per set of nine, postage paid.

United Theatre Equipment Corporation has announced the names and locations of the concerns of which it is composed. We have announced our broad policy, but wish to again impress upon you, MR. EXHIBITOR, that our organization can now give you prompter and better service.

We are the largest and most responsible distributors and retailers of everything required for the Motion Picture industry excepting the film. All goods sold by U T E through any of its branch offices are backed by

OUR UNITED GUARANTEE

We have with us a large majority of the responsible and experienced men who have made your projection a success. Their knowledge and advice is at your service.

When you are in need of Machines; Motor Generators; Transformers; Carbons; Equipment or Supplies of any kind, write to us and we will immediately put our nearest branch office in touch with you for prompt service. We distribute the HALLBERG 20TH CENTURY MOTOR GENERATORS and ECONOMIZERS, "FULCO," "KLEINE," "P T E" and "NOVELTY" specialties. The present national conditions will make many new patrons for the less expensive amusements.

Put Your House in Order NOW

Be prepared to meet the rush! Delay will handicap you with slow deliveries, increased prices and transportation troubles. We make liberal allowance for your old machines in trade for new.

BE WISE—WRITE TODAY.

Your Patrons' Eyes

The profits of your theatre depend upon your regular patrons—those upon whose attendance you can count for week in and week out.

To build up and hold a regular patronage, you must show pictures that do not strain or tire your patrons' eyes.

Equip your projector with a

lens and insure clear and sharply defined pictures.

Do not let an inferior lens keep down your box office receipts. Remember the quality of the lens affects every picture you show.

Twenty Years in the Carbon Business
An experience of vast proportions

HAVING achieved unparalleled success in the various other carbon products, we were compelled by the enormous demand of exhibitors and operators to also enter into the manufacture of "Speer Projector Carbons."

OUR factory was first devoted to the manufacture of high class cored and solid carbons, the styles with which operators are most familiar. The latest developments also produced the famous "Hold-Ark" negative carbons, which are making tremendous strides in revolutionizing the entire motion picture industry.

IN order to produce the best photoplays, high amperages are necessary. The metal coating of the "Hold-Arks" provides the additional carrying capacity and still permits the use of a small carbon in the lower holder.

"HOLD-ARKS" are also manufactured in several different sizes for all operating conditions on direct current.

ABSOLUTE steadiness of arc, the paramount requirement of critical operators is the essential feature of these carbons. The hard core turns the trick.

EXHIBITORS and operators who desire perfect projection should trim with a Speer cored upper and a "Hold-Ark" lower. A mere trial of this combination will afford proof of this statement.

A BEAUTIFUL theatre and elaborate equipment, with inferior carbons in your lamp house is like a ship without a rudder. The start may be ideal, but trouble will soon follow.

WHY have a light with ghosts and flickering shadows when they can easily be eliminated? Speer Carbons are today recommended by projection experts and indorsed by skilled operators and critical exhibitors as a remedy for these ills.

THESE carbons, stamped with the well known slogan, "Made in U. S. A.," have taken their place in the foremost ranks of the carbon manufacturers of the world. That they will remain there is evident, as quality alone is the first consideration.

OPERATORS who find their projection inferior to the high standards they desire, should familiarize themselves with Speer Carbons. Results that others have obtained can easily be told, yet first hand facts are invariably the most convincing.

WRITE today for prices and request that samples be sent.

STRAND THEATRE

Week of May 27

To book the Lincoln Cycle at the Strand Theatre, Mr. Mitchel H. Mark, President, and Mr. Harold Edel, Managing Director, set aside an entire program; something that has never been done since the Strand opened more than three years ago.

Another significant point is that they are paying more for the feature than was ever paid for any moving picture for the same length of time.

THE HANDY LIST OF WINNERS

THE BIG "VOICE"

The Universal's Surprise Mystery Serial Making a Big Noise Everywhere.

THE mammoth serial production—the Universal's latest and greatest—the surprise mystery serial photodrama —"THE VOICE ON THE WIRE"—is the big noise in movie circles these days. It is not only one of the most fascinatingly mysterious dramas ever filmed, but so ably is it directed by Stuart Paton

The "Thought Machine" from "The Voice on the Wire"

(who filmed the big Universal Spectacle "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea") that there are punches in every reel and every episode leaves the audience in a state of suspense that is sure to bring them back to the next.

Ben Wilson, popular Universal star, plays the lead and opposite him is beautiful Neva Gerber. They are supported by Joseph Girard and a huge and brilliant cast, while the production is lavish in the extreme. Every sort of thrill that appeals to the movie patron is present in this multi-reel drama, from deeds of daring and the element of mystery to an all-absorbing romantic and adventurous love story.

"The Voice on the Wire" first appeared in book form. It was written by Eustace Hale Ball, who novelized "Traffic in Souls" and many other successes. It has been read and enjoyed by multitudes and its appearance in film form has been eagerly greeted by these readers throughout the country.

So strong an impression did this wonderful serial make at a private showing that it was booked for the entire circuit of Marcus Loew theatres. These prosperous houses have first choice of everything on the market, but, in spite of all competition, and solely on merit, "THE VOICE ON THE WIRE" was chosen. Here is a worth-while tip for Exhibitors. Get in touch with your nearest Universal Exchange today and arrange for a booking, or address the Home Office.

SCREEN MAGAZINE GETS CROWDS

JUST as the demand for information and the average person's love for pictures has made huge successes of the great illustrated periodicals, so the Universal Screen Magazine has made its popular appeal to the masses who want to be informed, instructed and entertained at the same time. The Universal Screen Magazine is a huge popular illustrated magazine in moving picture form. Its range is so wide as to include something of interest for every person who sees it regardless of age or sex. There are cooking lessons and beauty hints; latest progress in science, industry, manufacture and the arts; detailed views of the making of many things in daily use; physical culture subjects; our dumb animal friends; what we eat; intimate views of great cities and the remarkable animated sculpture by the famous sculptor Willie Hopkins. No mere list of subjects can begin to give any idea of the fascinating character of this one-reel feature. Wherever it is shown it creates its own demand. If you show it once you must be prepared to show it every week. Get in touch with your nearest Universal Exchange today and if your competitor hasn't already beaten you to it you can book this wonderful release that will pack them in on the dullest day. Or address UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, 1600 Broadway.

COMEDIES THAT TICKLE

Bring the Tinkle-Tinkle-Tinkle of Coins to the Till—Three Varieties to Choose From.

COMEDY night is the night of profits —as every Exhibitor knows—if you have the right comedies. The mighty Universal makes this easy by supplying three distinct varieties of comedy under the Nestor, L-KO and Joker brands. The first is in the nature of polite or parlor comedy, though the funny antics of Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are broad enough at times to satisfy even a lover of horse-play. L-KO'S are unique. There are perhaps more daring stunts put out under the L-KO brand than are usually found in the so-called stunt dramas. L-KO'S are deservedly popular. They are getting the money for Exhibitors everywhere because they are laff-getters and therefore prime favorites with the fans. Jokers are always screams. If you want to book the funniest comedy ever filmed, get "The Cross-Eyed Submarine," a burlesque of the Universal's famous "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." It is full three reels, but was cut down from four, so you can imagine that it is crammed full of action. On the opposite page you will find under "SPECIALS" these comedies listed for the week of June 11. Book them all for a big comedy night, and clean up. Any Universal Exchange.

Joker Comedians in "A Simple Sappho"

WATCH FOR "THE GRAY GHOST"

Based on the Famous Saturday Evening Post Story "LOOT" By Arthur Somers Roche.

MUTUAL NEWS

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS EXCHANGES

JUNE 2, 1917

GAIL KANE'S SECOND MUTUAL PICTURE IS "THE SERPENT'S TOOTH"

GAIL KANE'S second Mutual Picture is completed. "The Serpent's Tooth" is its title. It is five reels in length and was staged at the American studios in Santa Barbara, California. The star is surrounded by a supporting cast that has seldom been equaled.

Directed by Rollin Sturgeon.

Director Rollin Sturgeon superintended the production of "The Serpent's Tooth." Every exhibitor is familiar with Sturgeon's attention to detail and aware that his productions are always marked by perfection of stage settings and photographically above criticism. In this sense, "The Serpent's Tooth" is a typical Sturgeon photoplay. Miss Kane is afforded some unusual opportunities for emotional acting in this powerful story of American life. It begins when the star, in the role of Faith Channing, decides to marry James Winthrop, a wealthy young neighbor, instead of Jack Stilling, the good looking country physician who has been paying her attention. Stilling realizes he can scarcely support Faith in the position to which she is entitled in the world and gracefully accepts his dismissal. Some months later, Faith, now the wife of Winthrop, discovers that her husband is being spoiled by his wealth and is no longer satisfied with the simple life they have been leading. As time passes he drifts farther and farther away from her, and Gossip, insidious as a poisonous snake, begins to whisper bits of scandal about Winthrop and a certain Mrs. Filliard. Faith struggles vainly to maintain appearances, and at last startles her old associates by slipping out of her Puritan mannerisms and emerging as a beautiful butterfly. Even then the Winthrops find themselves on different planes, and their problem isn't solved until the very end of the picture—and then it comes about in a most unusual fashion. During the production Miss Kane appears in some stunning frocks which will add not a little to the interest of the feminine portion of any audience.

Released Week of May 28th.

"The Serpent's Tooth" is released the week of May 28th. Her first American-Mutual picture—"Whose Wife," is showing to capacity business everywhere. Bookings on both can be made now at your nearest Mutual Exchange.

Henry King, who has directed some wonderfully successful pictures, has been signed by President Samuel S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company, Inc., and will supervise the future Gail Kane productions.

"Periwinkle" Is Next Minter Production

Dainty Mary Miles Minter will make her next appearance in Mutual Pictures as a little waif, rescued from a shipwreck and raised by a beachcomber as his daughter. She is christened "Periwinkle," which gives the title to the picture. The play was adapted from a story of the same name by William Farquhar Payson. Little Miss Minter appears throughout the greater part of the picture in trousers, rubber boots, oilskin coat and sou'wester. Once more George Fisher has the leading male role opposite the diminutive star, and the balance of the supporting cast includes such well known people as Arthur Howard, Clarance Burton, Alan Forrest, Harvey Clark, George Periolat and Ann Schaefer, James Kirkwood, as usual, directed the production. Bookings can be made now at your nearest Mutual Exchange.

Jackie Saunders in "A Bit of Kindling"

As the fourth of the Jackie Saunders-Mutual Pictures, E. D. Horkheimer will present his hoydenish star in "A Bit of Kindling." She enacts the role of a typical little newsboy—only she's a girl. The rags and tatters she wears throughout four reels of the five, together with the bedraggled hat through which peeps an occasional curl, would prove far too much of a handicap for many a screen star, but to Jackie Saunders they are but an aid to her art, and she wins her way straight into the hearts of her audience. Arthur Shirley, good looking leading man, has the principal role opposite Miss Saunders as a young civil engineer, and these two are supported by a highly capable cast.

"RAILROAD RAIDERS" AND "LUMBERLANDS" WIN BIG POPULARITY

HELEN HOLMES' latest Mutual success—"The Railroad Raiders"—has captured the photoplay fans. Theatres everywhere are reporting phenomenal business with this new chapter-play. It is proving as great a success as "A Lass of the Lumberlands," and "The Girl and The Game," the two Helen Holmes successes that are setting box-office records.

"The Railroad Raiders"

No more striking example of what Mutual chapter-plays are doing for the box-office can be cited than "The Railroad Raiders." From the standpoint of punch, thrills and action it hangs up a new record. Amazing as were the first two or three chapters, later installments outdo them. In a recent chapter, Helen Holmes is hurled off the end of a moving car-ferry, locked in a boxcar, and only rescued as the car sinks beneath the waves of the harbor. The week following she braves death by driving a high-powered motor car off the end of a dock and crashing down upon a barge that has just moved away from the same dock. These are but two of a score or more of the thrilling incidents in this one photo-novel. "A Lass of the Lumberlands" proved just as fascinating in its way, though an entirely different type of story. In this fifteen chapter photo-novel Miss Holmes won new laurels for herself. "The Girl and the Game" was Miss Holmes' first railroad serial released by Mutual, and as a story of the rail proved a remarkably popular attraction. Exhibitors everywhere are familiar with "The Diamond from the Sky" and its success. "The Sequel to 'The Diamond from the Sky'," in four absorbing chapters, each two reels in length, is proving a worthy successor—some even consider it better than the original tale.

You Can Book Them Now.

All these photo-novels are now playing. If you haven't shown them at your theatre you have a wonderful opportunity now for booming business through the summer days that are just at hand. The nearest Mutual Exchange will give you full information regarding prices, open dates, posters, heralds and other accessories on any or all of these attractions.

Charlie Chaplin is rapidly completing work on his eleventh Mutual-Chaplin Special which is just as unique and laugh-provoking as "The Cure," "Easy Street" or any of the other ten Mutual-Chaplin Specials released to date.

Gee whizz! Everybody knows the Gaumont Company is a bear on single-reels, but only the very, very wise ones have been hep to the true dope—which is to say: Gaumont is putting out more subjects in certain lines than all other manufacturers combined.

Along come the figures for the first three months of 1917, and Gaumont is 'way out in front, far ahead of any other producer in the Industrial, Scientific and Topical fields. It's the all-fired truth; Gaumont has 77 subjects in these lists, and all other producers have only 73.

Exhibitors everywhere agree with what one trained trade paper reviewer says: "'Reel Life' and 'Tours Around the World' offer a special chance for the live exhibitor to build up a much neglected patronage from among the people who want to know what is going on in the world at large."

Come up, dear brother, and put your name on the dotted line at the Mutual Branch. Don't forget that Gaumont also puts out the Mutual Weekly which gives you news of the world FIRST. You need it. Selah!

HOBART HENLEY'S

Thought Film of Real Life

Featuring
ANNA LEHR, HOBART HENLEY and BARBARA CASTLETON
Supported by a group of characters as human as you and your neighbors.

Picture patrons are hungry for films that are clean, wholesome and entertaining.

They want to see features so compelling in theme that they make a lasting impression.

Without being sensational, without vampires or mellow melodrama—"Parentage" is the really big film of the year.

"Parentage" is distinctive. It is human to the core.

It presents a vitally absorbing story that will appeal to every man, woman and child.

It is a picture that will create word-of-mouth publicity, and this, added to its exceptional advertising possibilities, makes "Parentage" a film that will repeat and book for longer runs at higher prices.

of the war, but declares them to be the most graphic war pictures ever shown.

"The Official British War Films are unlike any previous war films. They are not only by far the best moving pictures I have seen of the war, but they are the most graphic description of present day war methods ever presented in any form, pictorial or fiction." Louella O. Parsons in the Chicago Herald.

"Three thousand people vainly sought admission to the Auditorium last night as the Official British War Films were shown to a house that paid $10,000. for the sight." The Chicago Tribune.

"We Americans are at war. These pictures will be good for us." Richard Henry Little, Dramatic editor, Chicago Herald

Goldwyn's First Warning To American Exhibitors

YOU are unfair to yourself as an exhibitor if you sign a contract now that ties up your theatre to a program or any other features until you have first seen Goldwyn Pictures.

You are robbing yourself of the opportunity to book better pictures than you are now playing.

You are depriving your theatre of stars that the great American public will demand to see.

You are forfeiting the chance to obtain productions that will make you a larger profit than the pictures to which you have bound yourself under contract.

When you have done these things, you are virtually helpless—and some other exhibitor will reap the advantage that your theatre could have had over all of its competition.

Why You Should Wait For Goldwyn Pictures

ALL of the energy and brains of more than a hundred successful men and women have been applied for months to the creation of Goldwyn Pictures.

More than one million dollars is being invested in completed productions to be shown to you before you are asked to book them.

Exhibitors who have seen only our partially assembled pictures pronounce them to be unlike any screen productions they have ever seen—both as to quality and character.

In Goldwyn Pictures you have the exclusive services of five tremendously popular stars—Mae Marsh, Mary Garden, Maxine Elliott, Jane Cowl, Madge Kennedy, and others to be announced.

What exhibitor can afford—in a financial sense—to book any other pictures until he has first seen the Goldwyn productions?

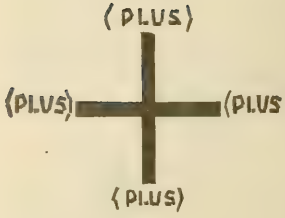
PARALTA PLAN



YOU have been reading about the PARALTA PLAN for several weeks. Now we are going to tell you something about the PARALTA PLAYS which are to be produced as a part of our original "SQUARE DEAL" system of distribution.

But while reading about PARALTA PLAYS, do not forget what we have told you about the PARALTA PLAN, which will help you make money and save money the same day.

A more effective system of real business thrift has never been thought out in connection with moving picture exhibition—or any other enterprise. You can learn all the details of the PARALTA PLAN by sending us your name for our mailing list and studying our instructive literature on bookings and rentals.

A merchant cannot sell a kind of goods buyers do not want. Neither can an exhibitor of motion pictures. He must have the genuine thing—the kind of pictures in class and entertaining value that his patrons want to see—"REAL BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS." All PARALTA PLAYS will bear such trade mark and can be readily identified.

A "REAL BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION" is founded on a story of genuine human interest. It must ring true in telling on the screen, or it will fail. One cannot fool a moving picture audience on this point. They quickly detect a crack in the bell—a story that lacks in human interest. PARALTA PLAYS will all be great stories by acknowledged great writers.

A "REAL BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION" must also be complete in production—in the casting of characters, in locality of scenes and in technical and dramatic direction. The principal roles must be played by great stars of popular standing, who meet all requirements in talent and personality. All PARALTA PLAYS will be complete in every essential of cast and production that goes to make up 100 per cent. in box office value.

The story will be the thing considered "first, last and all the time." We will tell you more about PARALTA PLAYS next week. We know you will be interested in our "CAPACITY PLAN" too.

"THE NIGHT WORKERS"

Marguerite Clayton and Jack Gardner

The false glamour of night revealed. An exposition of the life artificial, the greater truths of its theme softened by the love of a pure girl for one of the worst disciples of the city's darkness. His gradual elevation, their triumphs together, the final burst of understanding and his return with her to the clean existence of her little town, form a story of distinctiveness from which the interest never strays.

Facts and Comments

SANE and sensible combinations founded on right business principles will go far to lifting the industry out of its present unsatisfactory condition. Recent combinations of prominent exhibitors and also of supply dealers are indications of a movement in the right direction. Do not be misled by ill-considered and ill-advised "bunk" about "trusts" and "dictating prices" and the usual drivel of that sort, which is generally put out as a matter of fact by rivals, who try to build up their own little house by pulling down that of the other fellow. Consider, for instance, the hundreds of thousands that will be saved, to say nothing of greater efficiency and better service when the exchange and renting end of the business is consolidated and run under even ordinary business methods. It has got to come right here and elsewhere in the producing and renting ends of the business, and the sooner the better for the whole industry.

NATIONAL Organizer Fred J. Herrington of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League is meeting with greatly increased interest in the question of organization on the part of exhibitors at recent gatherings. As a result of his efforts, applications have been made for affiliation with the national organization by several groups of exhibitors. This is as it should be. To stand aloof because the affairs of the national or state organizations have been mismanaged or because the present or former officers have been incompetent or negligent is poor policy and gets nowhere. There is work to be done and the place to do it is from the inside. Take an interest, do your share, lend a hand and plan to have your State and your interests represented at the Chicago convention next July.

OVERPRODUCTION seems to be the cry everywhere. Is it, however, the only trouble or even the real sore spot? Can the larger theaters succeed and adequately support the manufacturers without the smaller theaters? Is not the future stability of the industry largely dependent on a sufficient number of theaters, large and small, to make it profitable for several producers to give sufficient variety, quality and volume to the weekly film supply to retain the present hold on public patronage? Fewer theaters means fewer patrons and fewer theater programs means fewer films, and so on down the line. Bookings on features that would be prohibitive to only a few theaters become reasonable when booked in a large number of houses. Therefore, protect, foster and encourage the small town exhibitor as well as the largest house and every kind of house in between. One theater closed means a daily program less or a loss of rental on around eighteen hundred reels yearly on a five-reel program. A few hundred theaters less and we are soon confronted with overproduction, ruinous competitions, etcetera.

THE Louis Frank suit for one hundred thousand dollars against the National Exhibitors' League and several of its members is evidently calculated to disconcert the League in its efforts to successfully promote the National convention and exposition at Chicago in July. The complainant may have some cause for his action at law but as a member of the League and a member of the board of directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry he cannot have the best interests of the industry at heart in bringing the action at this time. Nothing possibly could be gained by it except disorganization and gratification of personal desires regardless of everything else.

THE power of the screen to teach by precept is great; but when it comes to leading the public away from dangerous ideas of indiscriminate saving, the example of the exhibitor is greater. When people have money and are afraid to spend it the picture man's best insurance against hard times is the general appearance of his house. Freshness of paint, carpet, hangings, seats, decorations and above all freshness and quality in the shows will coax dimes and quarters out of the deepest pockets.

Squandering

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THERE is an astonishing amount of imbecility among people inclined to regard themselves as intelligent. The boast "I have never been to the movies" or "I never go to the movies" is more common than it is possible for those of us interested in motion picture production to realize. We are almost constantly brought into contact with rational beings and rarely hear inanities of this kind. We cannot be blamed for smiling with tolerant amusement at such fatuous announcements as those just quoted, but there is another class of people who do not declare their impaired mental faculties in any such childish terms, who quietly stay away from the exhibitions for good reasons.

The impotent opposition to moving pictures which is manifested by the intellectually aloof need not concern us in the least. From them we hear that our exhibitions are theaters "for the poor," as if intelligence was an attribute of wealth, as if our men of creative talent and critical taste were drawn from the ranks of privilege. All that sort of stuff is on a par with the hateful aspersions cast upon Dickens when he was depicting life among the lowly, those people who receive scant reward for their brave efforts, who are most loved by great minds of all ages.

Our theaters may be for the common people, among whom Christ preferred to live, from whom Lincoln was derived, most loved by Mark Twain, for real Americans of sound common sense and of freedom from pretense; so the slurs of undemocratic imbeciles need not receive serious attention, but we are as bad as the intellectual snobs when we give those common people plays of no consequence. We are treating them as of no particular importance and belittling the new art besides.

It may be a part of the evolution of this new art to develop talent among interpreters by the star system, but rivalry among producers in bidding for exceptionally good performers is bringing about a condition which is bound to react in time, not only on the public and the exhibitor, but upon producers themselves. Already these stars are running their own companies, as they can well afford to do, and the business end promises to be confined to publicity and distribution, leaving artistry entirely in the hands of performers who exact the limelight to the detriment of all else of interest in the production.

The tremendous popularity of moving pictures has a blinding effect, like the tremendous popularity of certain stage plays on Broadway during a prosperous season, when New York is crowded with strangers attracted by flaring billboards, or ready to patronize piffle for mere pastime. That same piffle is handed to people throughout the country with a Broadway indorsement which is very misleading. It is not representatively American. It does not even represent New York taste any more than do the flashy cabarets grouped in the hotel district. A very large part of it is Coney Island stuff designed for the unthinking, and Coney is a measly hole outside the bathing season.

The drawing power of Coney lies in what nature provided, not in its vulgar shams. The drawing power of the drama and of the moving picture theaters lies in the best they have to offer, not in the side shows that cater to mental weaklings. We are in the throes of a tremendous social upheaval, a part of our evolution as a nation, and the minds of our people are swiftly turning to the problems we shall be compelled to solve in collective effort and the best individual expression of ourselves.

Let us acknowledge that it is of the utmost importance for John to take Mary in his arms after five reels of anxious expectation—is it not possible to give John and Mary some interesting semblance to human beings, that our sympathies for them may be more deeply engaged? Why make John a carefully massaged young man who has never earned an honest dollar in his life, who merely stumbles upon good fortune in the shape of an inheritance from a handy uncle, a deal in Wall Street, or a nugget of gold? Why present Mary as a girl of untested character?

Those of us in front who have to work for what we get—and we at least have the satisfaction of knowing that we are in the majority—feel as though John and Mary are not of our world, nor are they of any other recognizable sphere as a rule. On that account we are not on edge to see them kiss by the fading light of day in the last scene. In order to have two half-baked lovers in a thin-soup embrace the wings of genius are clipped and doors are barred to creative imagination and constructive fancy. There is not vital urge to stir our hearts or brains.

However laudable and worthy it may be to give up the leading role in plays to colorless ingenues, particularly if they need the money, the idea is shamefully imitative. One ingenue made a name for herself after many years of steady effort, during the larger part of which she was without particular recognition, therefore every doll-faced Dotty Dimple in the country is regarded as a coming Mary Pickford. What acute reasoning! Must all screen stories be about a good little girl who was terribly abused at first, who at last becomes a dream of chiffon and satin. This kind of stuff, with a dash of Vampire, we are handing to people confronted with the greatest spiritual problem of their existence.

At first sight, when we get away from the impossible hero who never does wrong, and the dear little thing who could not if she tried her very worst, we seem to lessen the importance of the star, but it is from the story of human struggle toward finer ideals that the real star emerges, a stronger figure that he is really representative of erring humanity. Only when the author provides vital phases of what is going on among us, or is likely to grow out of what we are doing, can the actor be said to interpret life. As it is, he is merely given a vehicle to interpret himself and exploit his bag of tricks.

With two or three exceptions, star performers have been created by the producers themselves, and usually to their sorrow. After they have spent years of careful work and large amounts of money to arouse public interest in a performer, a rival concern, intent on wrecking competition, steps in with an outrageous bid for the star's services, and so the game goes on while the stars twinkle merrily to themselves. Without risking a dollar, while being handsomely paid, they receive the publicity that could have been retained by the concern exploiting them under the wiser business system of advertising the brand.

We may shake our heads and wisely declare we are giving the people what they want, but the plain truth is that we have never even offered them a chance to decide. A five-hundred-dollar play is bound to be dominated by a ten-thousand-a-week actor. It does not require a mind extraordinarily discerning to perceive why our dramatic output is slowly starving to death. No Ibsens, Shaws, Maeterlincks and Rostands need be expected in this new art so long as public approbation is only sought for exacting and high-priced interpreters of the trivial.

Subjects of Discussion

By Sam Spedon

WE are stanch believers in organization because we get more than one side of business conditions and learn some inside facts that are enlightening. Organization brings us together in convention and open meeting where we can discuss things pro and con. Coming events cast their shadows before. What we hear in local conventions we may expect to hear in general convention. We present a few advance discussions we have heard in open meetings and on the side that are indicative of what we may hear discussed at Chicago in July. At the Minneapolis Convention, for instance, this month the exchangemen were given a chance to speak.

EXPRESS CHARGES—Harry Cohen of the Metro said: "Not one exchange in Minneapolis is making money. Return express charges cannot be paid by exchanges, owing to cut throat methods. Metro lost fifteen thousand dollars last year. Exchanges must make a little money. They get no more for their rentals from the exhibitor whether he makes money on a picture or not. I learned accidentally that an exhibitor who paid us sixteen dollars for a feature, including paper, took in one hundred eighty-three dollars on it as his day's receipts. He didn't pay us anything because he made big money and yet he wanted us to reduce our prices. We are willing to be fair and are doing our best to solve the problems that arise and we hope in time to do so to the satisfaction of all, but it takes time. The industry is still young—that reminds me of a story.

"A French Canadian girl was telling a man what a great person Laurier, the Governor General of Canada, was The man asked if he was as great as King Edward. She said: 'Monsieur Laurier, he much bigger man.' Then he asked: 'Is he greater than God Almighty?' She replied: 'O Monsieur Laurier, he only young man yet.' The industry is only ten years young. We cannot be expected to perform miracles. Everything will be rectified in time."

W. K. Howard of the Vitagraph Exchange frankly said: "The Vitagraph insists upon the exhibitor paying express charges both ways. It makes no difference whether we pay express charges or the exhibitor pays them. It amounts to the same thing. When a merchant sells an article he calculates the cost of production, salesman expenses, overhead and transportation, and charges his customers accordingly. Everything is included in sales price, no more, no less. The Vitagraph calculates cost of film, paper, transportation, etc., therefore it has a set price and holds to it conscientiously and firmly. It is my opinion that exhibitors ask for a reduction in price on general principles, whether warranted or not. We always give consideration when and where conditions warrant it.

ADVANCE DEPOSITS—Dave Rogers made the broad statement that he had it on good authority that a manufacturer, who, when asked by an exhibitor where his deposit money was, said he had his six hundred dollars lying in the bank, then went in the other side of the bank and drew it out to capitalize his business. Rodgers further claimed there was no security for exhibitors' money and will take this matter up with the manufacturers at the Chicago Convention. Again, exhibitors can't collect admissions a year in advance with nothing to secure them. How do patrons know they will be alive? It would be a nice thing for the exhibitors.

PATRIOT DEPOSIT IDEA—In conversation with "Billy" Brant, president of the Brooklyn Exhibitors' League, he advanced a very novel idea how to dispose of the money held as advance deposits by the several film companies. He said: "There are about five million dollars held by the film companies which are drawing no interest. Why can't the exhibitors demand this money, purchase Liberty loan bonds from the Government and give the bonds as deposits with the film people? They would draw interest for us and at the same time be gilt edged security." Not a bad suggestion. It is practical and patriotic too."

OPEN BOOKING—In talking with an exchange man he touched upon open booking and advanced the following: "Open booking is all right with big features but not with programs. Open booking prices must be greater than program charges. Small towns can't expect to get open booking features at same price as they do on contract and they cannot expect to book program pictures at the same prices they are getting them on the prevailing program system; they will cost them more if they expect to pick them. It is a great question if the smaller theater can afford to patronize open booking at all.

Two Great Mediums of Expression

By SAM SPEDON.

WASN'T it enough to make us all feel proud to hear "Bob" Wooley, chairman of the Liberty Loan Publicity Committee, a representative of the United States Government, come right out and say before all those "newspaper fellows" in New York City that there are two great mediums of expression, the press and motion pictures? And then request the motion picture industry to aid this great nation in propagating a universal movement for the good of all mankind. It has been a long time coming, but all things come to those who wait. The "movies" have at last come into their own and their mission has finally been recognized. If any man besmirch the screen shoot him before sunrise and let him hang as a warning to all future evildoers.

That was a great thought that W. A. Brady gave voice to when he said this national movement afforded an opportunity of forming a great National organization of the motion picture industry, giving all a common interest in increasing the power of the screen for good; giving every branch of the industry, no matter how small, every individual member, a chance to gain the respect of the world for motion pictures and advancing their usefulness.

We know not what a day may bring forth. Little did we think when we listened to our traducers at the Wheeler bill hearing at Albany that moving pictures would be acknowledged by the United States Government as a power for good and request their aid in promoting a national movement. We have occasion to rejoice. It is a great incentive to get together and retain this recognition and win a still greater.

SERVICE to our readers and subscribers will be, if possible, more than ever our chief aim during the coming months. Your theaters and business will require increased attention in order to retain your usual volume of business during the period of unsettled conditions due to our entry into the war. Careful reading of our advertising pages for information on the latest productions and of our departments and editorial and correspondence pages must result in helpful suggestions that may add tens of dollars weekly to your receipts.

Varner Disagrees With Other Film Men

North Carolina League Secretary Tells Senate Finance Committee His Views on War Tax

Washington, D. C.

THE exhibitors of North and South Carolina are apparently not in line with the sentiments expressed by the committee which last week appeared before the Senate Finance Committee to give utterances to their views on the question of motion picture taxation. The Senate Finance Committee, as reported in these columns last week, has been holding hearings on the various provisions of the revenue bill in advance of its passage by the House of Representatives. On behalf of the exhibitors of the Carolinas, H. B. Varner, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North Carolina, and A. F. Saams, attorney, also representing this league and the exhibitors of South Carolina, appeared before the committee on Monday to tell them how they disagreed with the views of the other speakers.

The testimony given by these two and those who appeared before the committee at the previous day's hearing, had reference to the following sections of the bill:

TITLE VI.—WAR TAX ON MANUFACTURERS.

Sec. 600. That there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid—

(c) Upon all moving picture films (which have not been exposed) sold by the manufacturer or importer a tax equivalent to one-half of 1 cent per linear foot; and

(d) Upon all positive moving picture films (containing a picture ready for projection) sold or leased by the manufacturer, producer or importer a tax equivalent to 1 cent per linear foot.

TITLE VII.—WAR TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES.

Sec. 700. That from and after the first day of June, nineteen hundred and seventeen, there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid a tax equivalent to 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place, to be paid by the person admitted, and a tax of 5 cents for each admission of each person (except in the case of a bona fide employee and children under twelve years of age), admitted free to any place for admission, to which a charge is made, to be paid by the person so admitted: Provided, That the tax on admission of children under twelve years of age where an admission charge is made shall in every case be 1 cent. These taxes shall not be imposed in the case of a place the maximum charge for admission to which is 5 cents.

No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to any admissions all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious or charitable institutions, societies or organizations, or admissions to agricultural fairs all the proceeds of which inure exclusively for agricultural purposes.

The term "admission" as used in this title includes seats and tables, reserved or otherwise, and other similar accommodations, and the charges made therefor.

Sec. 702. That every person, corporation, partnership, or association (a) receiving any payments for such admission, dues, or fees, shall collect the amount of the tax imposed by section seven hundred or seven hundred and one from the person making such payments, or (b) admitting any person free to any place for admission to which a charge is made, shall collect the amount of the tax imposed by section seven hundred from the person so admitted, and (c) in either case shall make returns and payments of the amounts so collected, at the same time and in the same manner as provided in section five hundred and three of this Act.

Varner Objects to 10 Per Cent. Tax.

"I am representing, not the motion picture interests of the world, but I am representing the motion picture theaters of North Carolina, which consist of 250," said Mr. Varner, "and we come here seriously to object to this tax of 10 per cent. on the gross receipts. We do not object to paying our proportionate part of the tax to carry on this war, or any other expense. But we do object to being put out of business. We are perfectly willing, if it is necessary, to give all of our profits to the Government during this crisis, but we ask you to permit us to operate our theaters so that we can produce a revenue for the benefit of the Government and for the amusement of the people.

"Saturday here there was a brief presented claiming to represent 75 per cent. of the motion picture theaters of the United States. That brief and that group of men do not represent the motion picture exhibitors of the United States. They are representing a few men in New York and a few theaters in the large cities of the country. Their recommendation that you adopt this 10 per cent. may work out in Canada: it may work in New York, or with a few theaters in Washington; but it will absolutely destroy more than 90 per cent. of the motion picture theaters in North Carolina; and what is true of North Carolina is true of all of the states that are made up largely of rural populations and of the small towns; and it is true of the South and the West; it is true of the states of the North and East, with the exception of those that have large cities. And we beg you to let us continue to operate; and, if it is necessary, put an income tax on us, or tax us on our net profits; and, if necessary, take all of them; but permit us to continue to operate, not destroy the motion picture theaters of the country; because when you destroy them you are destroying the manufacturers and the whole industry from top to bottom. It is shortsightedness when the manufacturers come here and try to push this tax on the exhibitors and destroy them, because in destroying them they are destroying themselves and haven't got the foresight to see it.

"But what they are after is arbitrarily to push this tax on someone else. We are not trying to dodge taxes. We just simply come to you and ask you to allow us to continue to operate our theaters, and if you need the money take all our profits, if necessary, if you are going to take all the profits of all the industries of the country. We do not want to give up all our profits. If necessary, take 10 per cent. or 20 per cent. or 50 per cent., but do not destroy the industry.

"I have another gentleman here, the attorney of our association, Mr. Saams, who wants to talk to you for a few minutes."

"I do not think anyone has taken the position that the motion picture houses of the country should pay 10 per cent. of their gross business and live," declared Mr. Saams. "I have never heard anyone who has made that point. But the argument has been, from those who favor this action, that they can pass it on and let the public pay it.

"I desire to call the attention of the committee to the fact that that is utterly impossible, because of the fact that we have no 4 or 9 cent pieces to make change at the window and sell a ticket for 11 cents. People will not buy them, and the exhibitor will be forced to pay the 1 cent on his 10 cent admission, which amounts to exactly 10 per cent. on his gross business, regardless of whether he is making it or losing. I know some theaters that are making money. I know some that are losing. I happen to know one theater that is taking in about $600 weekly, and a weekly expense of $700. It runs not only motion pictures, but some vaudeville. There is a loss of $100 a week, and yet this tax would fall $60 a week on top of that.

"The proposition we submit is this: It is impossible to pass it on to the public, because we can not make the change. These tickets have to be sold within 20 or 30 minutes' time at the door or window by a cashier, who has to make the change with the people crowding there, fishing out their pennies to give 4 pennies back to everyone who buys a ticket and lays down a dime or a nickel or a dollar or $5. In addition, the cashier would have to tear off the Government stamp and destroy that. It is altogether impossible to be worked so as to pass it on to the public.

"It is impossible also for any business that has not more profits in it than an amusement business has to pay one-tenth of the gross—not of the gross profits, but of the gross business—and remain in existence.

"I want to say further, that the gentleman who filed this brief started out by saying that they are the representatives of the national league and allied interests, and the fact of the ridiculous position they take and their intimacy with the film people shows that the emphasis ought to be on the allied interests. They set out in this that they represent practically 16,000 theaters, and from the best information I can get there are only 14,000 in the United States. I am positive of the fact that they represent none of the interests in the small towns of the United States, and you can not find that they represent anything except in two or three or four or five of our larger cities.

"We want to present a brief in this case that will go with this brief that has been filed by those who claim to be the representatives of the motion picture interests of the entire country."

McCumber Asks About Players' Salaries.

Senator McCumber, a member of the committee, who had asked a number of questions from preceding witnesses in an effort to find out if there was not some way of cutting down the million dollar salaries paid to certain of the stars, asked Mr. Saams, "Can you not save a good deal of this (the money with which to pay the taxes and recoup falling profits) by getting together and saying you will not pay a face con-tortionist a million a year who is not worth $5,000 a year?" Mr. Saams said that "It is impossible for the exhibitor to control that. The film men might do it, but the trouble is that the exhibitor has no way in the world of reaching it."

Messrs. Varner and Saams submitted the following brief:

We represent the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North and South Carolina, the owners or operators of nearly three hundred and fifty moving picture houses. Most of these are small houses, located in small towns, and the average seating capacities will not exceed three hundred seats. Our admission charges rarely exceed 15 cents—in a few instances, where special films are displayed, as much as 20 to 25 cents, but in the main our regular prices are 5 cents for children all day—5 cents for afternoon performances for adults, and 10 cents for adult evening admission. Our houses are limited as to patronage because of the strictly local relation, and yet competition is such as to demand the display of the best service; hence our expense for films is in the highest ratio of cost to capacity. In our entire field there is not one single operator who has been more than ordinarily successful—naturally when the capacity of a house cannot exceed $50 a day gross admissions—six days in the week—where excessive summer heat cuts the year to an average not to exceed forty weeks and where the race line so complicates the problem of marshaling an audience, the profit at best cannot be large, and on a basis of investments the most successful house merely returns good interest on the money.

The payment of one cent on a ticket in accordance with the terms of the House bill becomes an immediate physical impossibility. Stamping 200 or 300 tickets within twenty minutes and making changes in pennies in the same period can only be accomplished by the employment of a stamping-clerk, who, like our present cashiers, would have to be on duty twelve hours a day at twelve hours' pay. In order to render less than an hour's actual service. The other side of the argument, granting that the Government would issue tickets, including stamps, reduces the physical problem to "change making," but you must bear in mind that fully half of your patrons come in because the price is "only a nickel" or "only a dime" and they could not "change a coin" in order to "go to the show," which they would have to do if we asked them to pay the tax and which we cannot afford to assume ourselves.

For instance, the writers are part proprietors of the Piedmont Amusement Company, operating nine houses in Winston-Salem, Greensboro, High Point, Charlotte, Thomasville, Durham, Lexington, North Carolina, and Danville and Lynchburg, Virginia. In 1916 we made a loss of $26,000. This was an operating loss; and had we paid a tax of 10 per cent. on admission as here proposed, before earning it, our loss would have been $12,000 additional or $38,000 in all.

This was due to the general poor business in our section, coupled with standard expenses, which could not be reduced. The return of prosperity put all of these houses on an earning basis and we are now earning very decent profits, out of which we are paying the indebtedness incurred during the season of loss. To tax us 10 per cent. of our gross admissions—our only source of revenue—might be tolerable during six months of the year in 50 per cent. of the houses, but impossible in the balance of the time for the best of them, and absolutely impossible in the balance of the houses, which by this process would pay taxes out of our capital.

A group of men styling themselves "The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North America" (why not the world?) and other allied interests are misrepresenting the small town theater owner, whether in North or South Carolina or any other Southern State. They probably do fairly represent the "allied interests," who, in the main, consist of film-makers, whose wonderful financial successes have been quoted as "moving picture fortunes." They boastfully pay half a million a year to a single slapstick comedian, and, as in the case of this tax, pass the buck to the little man, who takes what he gets and pays what he is compelled to pay in self-defense with no chance to save his financial soul.

The 25-cent houses or 50-cent houses with a seating capacity of 1,000 to 3,000 might be able to carry this burden, but even in their case it would be fair to tax their profits after they have earned them. The proposed exemption of straight 5-cent houses is ridiculous. Do you wish to encourage the "Fly by Night," or the men who run what in the parlance of the trade is known as "the drugs"—the dirty, ill-kept, unsanitary and immoral little places which are never fit for children? To waive the tax on these and compel us to pay 20 per cent. on our 5-cent children's admission certainly does not appear either just or honest. If you thus put 50 per cent. of our enterprises out of business you will defeat the purpose of your bill, "to raise revenue."

We recognize, under the extraordinary conditions now facing the country, we must contribute a larger sum in taxes for the uses of the Government than at present—and we are willing and ready to do so, but we ask co-operation in the same measure that we offer it. A tax upon our net profits would be fair, just, equitable and sane. Give us the opportunity to make the money before you take it away. Take as much as you need of this—our fair proposition, but do not throw our investment into the "scrap heap"; do not destroy our livelihood; help us keep it intact until normal times will re-establish normal opportunities for us.

A tax of 10 per cent. of the net earnings of our theaters would be enough to start with; if it isn't, come back for more in your next bill, but bear in mind that if you start by taxing us to death there won't be "any more" to come back for.

Johnson Favors Canadian Plan.

Another person discussing the admission tax problem was Ligon Johnson, representing the theatrical interests of the United States covered chiefly under the Theatrical Managers' Association. "We are fearful of the effect upon admissions under the tax as drafted in the bill. We believe that Canada's experience shows a fair indication of conditions and of possibilities in amusement enterprises. War conditions, as you know, have existed in Canada for some time. It has been the purpose of the Canadian Province parliaments to exact the highest tariff the traffic would bear and at the same time to permit amusement enterprises to continue as going concerns. In Canada the admission charge is 1 cent on 15 cents. 2 cents on amounts over 15 cents up to 50 cents. 3 cents from 50 cents to a dollar, 5 cents for a dollar, and 10 cents for amounts over a dollar. They have found that that brought in the largest revenue and the most satisfactory condition, and we respectfully refer that to the committee for its consideration.

"Another point that I desire to raise with relation to amusement taxes applies to the theaters' chief competitor, and the single interest that has done more to detract from the theatrical patronage than anything else in the United States; that is, the cabaret. The House committee contemplated a tax on cabarets, as it says in its report: 'It is recommended that this tax be imposed on all places to which admission is charged, such as motion-picture shows, theaters, circuses, cabarets,' and so on.

"The trouble is that to the cabaret no admission fee is charged. That the cabaret is a public performance for profit is no longer a question. The Supreme Court of the United States last January settled that in specific terms. I quote from the decision of that court in the case of Herbert v. Shanley:

"'The defendant's performances are not eleemosynary—they are part of a total for which the public pays, and the fact that the price of the whole is attributed to a particular item which those present are expected to order is not important. If the performance did not pay, it would be given up. If it pays, it pays out of the public's pockets. Whether it pays or not the purpose of employing it is profit.'

"As all of us who have attended cabarets know, there is a uniform increase in price in the food, drinks and merchandise sold. We would suggest that it would not be difficult to draft an amendment bringing public performances for profit in under the bill. As a matter of fact, we suggest that an amendment along these lines be adopted:

"'That from and after the first day of June, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid a tax equal to —— per cent. upon all moneys paid for refreshment and merchandise at public performances for profit to which admission fees as such are not directly charged, said tax to be paid by the person attending such public performance for profit and purchasing such refreshment or merchandise.'

"In conclusion I regret to be forced to answer some suggestions of the motion picture manufacturers, that to another phase of the bill, in which it was suggested that all of the burdens be passed up to the theaters, and put in the form of admissions. I presume that will be fortunate, indeed, for the motion picture manufacturers, if they could make our theaters bear their burdens. They, of course, do not pay any part of that.

"We can understand from the motion picture point of view, where the proprietor of a motion picture magazine, depending upon the motion picture man's advertising, would advocate a thing of that kind, and we can even concede that the motion picture exhibitors would say, 'All right, we will bear the tax,' under the threat of the motion picture manufacturers 'If you do not let this tax go forward in a form which cannot be passed along to the public, we are going to increase your prices to a point where you will have to pay it,' and therefore I can see even motion picture exhibitors accepting this form of a tax, under the threat of increased prices from the motion picture manufacturers. It seems to us, however, that in view of the fact that the motion picture manufacturers are not engaged in actual exhibition, it is rather a gratuitous suggestion on their part that they might do a little house-cleaning in their own houses, and get perhaps more satisfactory results. We think that men in any enterprise that can take a slap-stick comedian and in a few years give him an earning capacity greater than the gross earning capacity of all the Senators of the United States; or can take a girl barely out of her 'teens and create her into annual value in excess of the salaries of the President, the Cabinet and the Supreme Court of the United States, might look into their own fields for forms of taxation without attempting to pass it on to the theatrical interests."

LEO WHARTON APPOINTED TO ANNAPOLIS.

Both the army and navy are to have representatives of Wharton, Inc., when the real squabble starts with His Dishonor, the Kaiser, for from the Wharton studios at Ithaca have gone fighters to both branches, one to enter the navy through Annapolis, and the other through the Officers' Training School at Plattsburgh.

The navy fighter is to be Leo Richmond Wharton, son of Leopold D. Wharton. He has been appointed to Annapolis by Senator Pratt of New York and is to take his examinations June 27. The army man is Paul Gordon, who played one of the leads in the Whartons new super-feature for state rights release. "The Great White Trail." Mr. Gordon has received word that his name was the first to be chosen from the restricted list.

Assemblyman Wheeler Quits

Defeat of Picture Tax Bill Discourages Up-State Solon—Many Bills of Committee Unpaid.

ASSEMBLYMAN Heber E. Wheeler is through with politics for good and for all. He has had enough. The defeat of his pet measure, that of taxing the motion picture industry, proved the straw that broke the camel's back. Assemblyman Wheeler has packed his kit bag and returned to his home in East Bloomfield, which is located "somewhere" in Ontario county, where Mr. Wheeler served in times past as the village postmaster, justice of the peace and county treasurer.

Before leaving Albany and incidental to an announcement which he made to the entire Assembly that his political career was over, Mr. Wheeler stated that he would soon associate himself with one of the banks in Canandaigua and from then on his sole interest in the motion picture business would be confined to an occasional visit to some show. If anything is ever attempted toward a further "regulating" of the motion picture business in this State, Assemblyman Wheeler will be found on the side lines. He has served in the Assembly since 1913.

Some of the members of the Wheeler committee, before leaving Albany, expressed the belief that the committee's plan to tax the movies would have at least been reported out of committee had it not been for the fact that the Hill-Wheeler local option bill was shoved across to a successful conclusion.

There is little question but that politics played its part in the Wheeler committee and its subsequent report and the drafted bill. One member of the committe was open in saying that the bill had been poorly drawn and that it was too late in the day to remedy matters before the session closed. Others in the Legislature were free in expressing the opinion that Assemblyman Wheeler acted unwisely in making radical changes in the hopes of getting the bill through. After spending several weeks and incidentally several thousand dollars, it was figured out that the committee should have acquired sufficient knowledge to correctly interpret a just footage tax and an equally just license fee, without being forced to grope about in the dark and then reduce the figures to the extent that they became a veritable joke to many.

It frequently happens in Albany that when a committee or a senator cannot get through a bill such as they first desire they resort to the practice of at least getting something through, regardless as to whether or not it copes with conditions and remedies the situation.

Up to the present time public records in the Comptroller's office show bills incurred by the Wheeler Investigating Committee amounting to $2,704.65 as having already been paid, including one item of $583 spent in stenographic work at the hearings in New York City. Judging from the fact that Assemblyman Wheeler sought and was given the sum of $7,200 in addition to the original appropriation of $5,000 and bills of $2,704.65 have already been paid, it now looks as though ex-Senator Harvey Hinman will come in for about $9,000 for his services as counsel to the committee, there being no other bills of any magnitude outstanding so far as can be learned.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of May 20 at New York's Best Motion Houses.

"Her Better Self" at the Strand.

THE principal photo-dramatic feature at the Strand theater the week of May 20 was "Her Better Self," in which Pauline Frederick enacted the stellar role. The play, by Margaret Turnbull, tells a romantic love story, cleverly interwoven with thrilling episodes. The cast includes Thomas Meighan, Alice Hollister, Maude Turner Gordon, Charles Wellesley, Frank De Rheims, and Armand Cortez.

The motion pictures of the Battle of the Ancre, which were exhibited at a special benefit performance attended by Mr. Balfour and the British commission at Carnegie Hall recently, were also featured. These pictures were taken with the official sanction of the British Government on the actual field of battle and show the heroism, hardships and endurance of the men who are today fighting in France for liberty and humanity.

The soloists were Henri de Caux, Irene Stoljosky, Arthur Depew.

"The Undying Flame" at the Rialto.

Madame Petrova, in her first Paramount picture, "The Undying Flame," a story of ancient and modern Egypt, was featured at the Rialto. The versatile Russian actress was directed by Maurice Tourneur in this production. The splendor of the Pharaohs and the mystery of modern Egypt are well conveyed by the play, in which the reincarnated souls of a princess and a shepherd lad find each other again after a separation of many centuries. The story is by Emma Bell. Among the players in support of Mme. Petrova are Mahlon Hamilton, Edward Mordant, Warren Cook, and Violet Reed.

The final installment of "Sailors of France" showed among other things the capture of a U-boat by a French cruiser, Ernest A. Reed, formerly manager for Underwood & Underwood, continued his narratives of daring stunts performed by camera men in search of pictures for the newspapers and magazines.

The soloists were Mlle. Madeleine D'Espinoy and Signor Marion Rodolfo.

Bill at the Eighty-first Street Theater.

At the Eighty-first Street theater four pictures were shown: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Wm. Desmond in "Paddy O'Hara," and Maude Wayne in "The Camera Cure" were the picture features.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Charles Ray in "The Pinch Hitter," and Ford Sterling in "A Maiden's Trust" were on the program.

Broadway.

"The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" is in its last week at the Broadway theater.

PENNSYLVANIA CENSORS LOSE.

Judge Patterson Decides that Selznick's "The Easiest Way" is not Immoral—A Few Sub-titles Eliminated.

IN THE action of Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., against the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, heard on appeal by Judge Patterson of the Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia, Pa., the court has adjudged that the censors have abused their discretion in eliminating the title and certain important sub-titles and sustains the appeal of the Selznick Company.

The appeal is dismissed as to a number of titles said to be unimportant.

The court ordered that a certificate of approval be issued upon compliance with the conditions.

SAN FRANCISCO'S RIALTO AIDS RECRUITING.

That the West is keenly alive to the exigencies and needs of the present war situation and that the motion picture industry of the West is doing its share and quota towards getting fodder for the great war machine is evident from the view depicted here of the recruiting depot maintained in front of the Rialto theater, in San Francisco, by the Coast Artillery Corps.

Last week Managing Director H. J. Sheehan showed the enterprise of this popular Pacific Coast theater by obtaining a special reel of views showing the huge armored "tank" or "tracklayer" in action. The intrinsic entertaining value and educational interest of the film was proved by the crowds that thronged the theater all during the week of its showing. In connection with the reel of the actual maneuvering and workings of this most deadly instrument of warfare, a detachment of Coast Artillery men maintained a recruiting depot in front of the theater and several clever talkers among them aroused to a wild pitch of enthusiasm the crowds that were constantly in front of the Rialto. Great curiosity and interest was evinced in the machine gun, which is shown in the picture. Managing Director Sheehan did everything in his power to aid the emissaries of Uncle Sam. The response to appeals made by the soldiers was most gratifying.

Boosting the Liberty Loan

The Motion Picture Industry to Work in Connection With Government in National Bond Selling Campaign.

ROBERT WOOLEY, the manager of the Liberty loan bond publicity propaganda, held a conference with the representatives of the motion picture industry at the Equitable Building in New York City, Wednesday, May 16. There were about thirty in attendance. Mr. Wooley opened the meeting by saying: "There are two great mediums of publicity, the press and motion pictures," and he made an appeal to the industry, in behalf of the Government of the United States, to promote the sale, through the screen, of the Liberty loan bonds.

W. A. Brady, as the president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, made a patriotic offer of the association's aid in furthering the project. Raymond Bartlett, representative of the Selznick Features Company, offered the services of Herbert Brenon to produce a picture for the propaganda, including its leading stars. Mr. Bartlett said Selznick was not a member of the N. A. M. P. I., but would gladly co-operate with it. Mr. Brady, speaking for the National Association, said it would be happy to work with Mr. Selznick and appoint him as a member of the executive committee—or still better would like to make him a member of the N. A. M. P. I. Mr. Bartlett thereupon expressed his desire to become a member. Herbert Brenon expressed his desire to co-operate with the association and said he could deliver a finished negative of a one-reel picture three days after deciding upon a scenario.

E. A. McMannus, of International, suggested that a committee be appointed to enter into executive session and report to Mr. Wooley. On motion Mr. Brady was made chairman of the committee, to appoint fifteen members and select a proper name for the body representing the motion picture industry, such as the Motion Picture National Defense, or Liberty Committee. On motion it was decided to appoint sub-committees from all branches of the industry in all parts of the United States.

Mr. Brady advanced the thought that this work of the industry in connection with the government would lead to a welding into a great national organization of the whole industry for the advancement and widespread influence and power for good of the screen in a common interest. Mr. Brady requested Mr. Wooley to appoint a representative of his department to work with the motion picture interests, in committee, in co-operation with it. Mr. Wooley made the appointment at once.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the N. A. M. P. I. rooms on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

It was understood by all and plainly set forth that this work of the motion picture industry in connection with the government was not to be considered as a matter confined to nor monopolized by the N. A. M. P. I.; it is a matter of the whole industry and not one organization; all branches individually and collectively are included. The organization as perfected at Thursday's meeting is as follows:

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—Chairman, William A. Brady; Vice-Chairman, Walter W. Irwin; Treasurer, William L. Sherrill; Secretary, Frederick H. Elliott.

FINANCE COMMITTEE—Arthur S. Friend, Chairman; William L. Sherrill, J. E. Brulatour, R. H. Cochrane, E. A. McManus.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE—Arthur James, Chairman; Representatives of each of the motion picture trade papers.

COMMITTEE ON TRAILERS—Walter W. Irwin, Chairman; P. A. Powers, B. N. Busch, Lee A. Ochs, Lewis J. Selznick.

COMMITTEE ON SUBSCRIPTIONS—Adolph Zukor, representing Producer Class 1; Lee A. Ochs, Exhibitors, Class 2; H. T. Edwards, Supply and Equipment Class 3; Lewis J. Selznick, Distributor Class 4; Walter J. Moore, General Division, Class 5.

COMMITTEE ON SLIDES—Joseph F. Coufal, Fred J. Hawley, B. P. Shulberg.

PRESIDENT'S ADVISORY COMMITTEE—William L. Sherrill, I. E. Chadwick, Arthur S. Friend, Louis F. Blumenthal, William A. Johnston.

COMMITTEE ON PROCLAMATION — Arthur S. Friend, William A. Johnston.

The men appointed to the film committee by Mr. Brady consist of: Arthur S. Friend, Walter N. Seligsberg, Richard A. Rowland, Walter W. Irwin, William L. Sherrill, David W. Griffith, Harold Bolster, E. A. McManus, J. A. Berst, P. A. Powers, William Fox, Lewis J. Selznick, Lee A. Ochs, L. F. Blumenthal, Lewis L. Levine, Samuel H. Trigger, Jules E. Broulatour, Walter J. Moore, J. H. Hallberg, Joseph Coufal, William A. Johnston, John Wylie, W. Stephen Bush, Tracy H. Lewis, Lyman O. Fisk, B. P. Schulberg, Fred Hawley, I. E. Chadwick, Carl Laemmle, Adolph Zukor, J. Stuart Blackton, Frank H. Hitchcock, H. T. Edwards, H. E. Aitken, J. J. McCarthy, Theodore Mitchell, William Brandt, Samuel L. Rothapfel, Harold Edel, Marcus Loew, Theodore Wharton, Herbert Brenon, A. M. DuMahaut, Ricord Gradwell, William Wright, Mitchel H. Mark, Albert E. Smith, John J. Whitman, Edgar Selwyn, Archie Selwyn, Samuel Goldfish, Joseph A. Golden.

K-E-S-E Heads Meet in New York

Messrs. Kleine, Selig and Spoor Make Arrangements for War Shipments and Transact Much Business.

THE bustle and activity in the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay New York branch office (and reports from the twenty-two other K-E-S-E branches tell of the same conditions) indicate that war has not affected this big concern. George Kleine, with George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, and William N. Selig, of the Selig company, have spent several days in New York in conference regarding the coming summer's K-E-S-E releases and plans. Just before Mr. Kleine left for Chicago he presided at a meeting of the eastern branch office managers of his organization. This conference, it is understood, had to do chiefly with the introduction of a new selling plan.

The probable effect of a possible disruption of the country's transportation facilities due to the war was also discussed and arrangements were made to fortify K-E-S-E service against any possible disarrangement of their distributing channels. Every contingency in this direction was carefully gone over and safeguards provided, as Mr. Kleine expressed it, "so K-E-S-E patrons everywhere may rest assured of receiving their films with unfailing promptitude."

At this conference the federal mail carrying service was represented by an executive who described in detail just what the Government could and would do with regard to transporting film by parcels post. The express companies also had representation at the conference.

Mr. Kleine and his eastern selling force appeared optimistic in regard to the business outlook, Mr. Kleine dwelling especially on the great success achieved by Essanay's "Skinner's Dress Suit" and "Skinner's Bubble," Selig's "The Danger Trail" and "The Lad and the Lion," and Edison's "The Law of the North" and "The Telltale Step," calling attention to the effective response of the public to pictures of this nature.

Mr. Kleine, habitually conservative, bubbled with enthusiasm as he talked about the coming Essanay series of twelve two-reel dramas, "Do Children Count?" featuring winsome little Mary McAlister and released June 6. "Do Children Count?" was written by Charles Mortimer Peck. In every scene there is entertainment, bulwarked by a powerful appeal for more toleration and consideration of children in the home. Mr. Peck based the plots for these stories on his minute observation of life while the editor of a Chicago daily newspaper. Every effort has been made to inject enough real humor and realism into them to provide pictures that will be interesting to grown-ups as well.

Mr. Kleine was no whit less enthusiastic over K-E-S-E releasing ten Charles Hoyt two-reel feature comedies, beginning May 28 with "A Hole in the Ground." "I think," said Mr. Kleine, "that Mr. Selig will reap a big reward for his sagacity in obtaining the rights to Hoyt's comedies, as on the speaking stage they were positive successes, and their titles were so extensively and effectively advertised that everybody knows about them and will be curious to see Hoyt comedy and philosophy picturized."

With especial enthusiasm Mr. Kleine referred to Essanay's engagement of Taylor Holmes to star in a series of "Efficiency Edgar" pictures made from the stories under this title appearing in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Holmes' first picture will be "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," released early in the fall. Mr. Kleine also spoke glowingly of George K. Spoor's sound judgment in signing Jack Gardner, star of many musical comedy successes, for a series of far western features. He paid Mr. Selig a high compliment for having secured the services of Henry B. Warner, whose first release, "The Danger Trail," under K-E-S-E auspices, is being shown now.

If all the big leaders in the film industry were as optimistic and as sanguine as is Mr. Kleine, the sun would be shining all the time, on both sides of the street.

Great Throng Sees British War Pictures

"Battle of the Ancre" Star Feature of a Great Benefit for the Red Cross.

PERHAPS the most remarkable audience which ever faced a motion picture was that gathered at Carnegie Hall on the evening of Saturday, May 12. The occasion was a benefit for the British Red Cross, given under the auspices of the American committee of the society. Present among the four thousand persons who thronged the vast hall were the Right Honorable Arthur James Balfour, head of the British commission in the United States, accompanied by all the members of his party and the Ambassador from Great Britain. The orchestra tickets, which were listed at $10, had long before the close of the sale jumped to $25. The boxes, originally designed to sell at $200, were bid for at a thousand-dollar rate. It was estimated that the Red Cross would be $50,000 richer by reason of the receipts of the single night.

The chief feature of the program was the set of five reels of official British government pictures of the front, the "Battle of the Ancre." It was the first time these had been shown to any audience in the city. There was no question about their appeal to the great house. They were of the intimate sort, of the soldier in camp, on the march, and in battle. Every branch of the service was covered. One of the most interesting elements was the tank, the juggernaut, which "walks" over and through barbed wire fences as if they were garden grass, that step across trenches, that can be balked by nothing short of artillery. There were pictures of the charge across "Out There" in the dim morning light, the wonderful barrage fire in the distance, and later the return of those of the wounded who still were able to creep back. It was all of the deepest interest. Standing out above everything else to the World man who, through the courtesy of Pathe Exchange, Inc., was permitted to see these films in their unusual setting, was the picture of the barrage fire. At a distance of a quarter of a mile or more in the background was one straight line of white smoke, of the explosion of many shells rolled into one. The great house rose to the pictures—and sunk to them. It was an alternation of loud applause and deep silence—and all of it tense.

The strain on the emotions of the throng did not cease with the showing of the soldiers at work. The introductory remarks when the films were thrown on the screen were by Major Gordon, of the Canadian forces, known to readers of books as Ralph Connor. E. H. Sothern introduced those who had contributed their services—Julia Marlowe, who recited three times, the first of her offerings being "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." Jules Rothier, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, sang the "Marseillaise," accompanied by the band of one of the British warships and a chorus of two hundred. Harrison Brockman sang British recruiting songs. Mrs. Julie Opp Faversham recited "The Hymn of Peace." Mme. Alda sang "The Star Spangled Banner." Laurette Taylor, from "Out There," gave the lines of the nurse's exhortation to enlist. And the Kiltie Band! They upset a house already on edge. First it was "Tipperary," and then, still marching around the outside aisles and the rear of the orchestra and over the stage, came "Yankee Doodle" as only pipers can stir the hearts of men.

After all was over, or after the promoters seemed to think so, there were loud and insistent calls of "Balfour, Balfour." The former prime minister of England held off for a moment, and then, turning to Joseph H. Choate, who had entered the hall with him and who had been at his side continuously, he left the matter to the decision of the great American lawyer and statesman. There was only one answer. Mr. Balfour talked for ten or more minutes—and he knows how to do that, none better.

The war pictures are being shown at the Strand in New York for the week of May 20. These follow the successful showing by the same theater of the previous Official Government Pictures of the Battle of the Somme.

Exhibitors will be interested to know that the pictures are now released for distribution from the following Pathe Exchanges: Chicago, Minneapolis, Boston, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Washington, Omaha, Buffalo, Dallas, Denver, Kansas City, New York, Newark, Cleveland, St. Louis, Atlanta and Seattle.

PATHE EXPANDS IN CHICAGO.

The business of Pathe's Chicago Branch has increased so rapidly that it has been found necessary to take new quarters. Since May 1 the office has been on the fourth floor of the Consumer's Building, 220 South State street. C. W. Bunn is branch manager.

Mrs. Castle Working in a Five Reeler

Under Director Fitzmaurice the Star of "Patria" Is to Be Seen in Story of Secret Service.

THROUGH her new contract with the house of Pathe, Mrs. Vernon Castle, one of the best known women in America, becomes one of the highest paid stars of the screen. Work has been begun on her first five-reel feature at the Astra-Pathe Studio under the direction of George Fitzmaurice, producer of such successes as "New York," "The Test," "Kick In" and "The Hunting of the Hawk," which have been seen here.

During the filming of scenes for Mrs. Castle's first feature, her young husband, who having won the "croix de guerre," is now on this side of the Atlantic to train aviators for service at the front, was an interested spectator. The couple were snapped together for the first time in months by a cameraman in a "set" representing a scene in the film.

Mrs. Vernon Castle.

This is a picture of the United States Secret Service. It is a detective play characterized by thrills and fast action. In it Mrs. Castle has a part that gives her greater opportunity than she has had before.

She is prettier than ever, as the accompanying photograph shows, and it is said that judging by her work in the scenes already completed, she is going to be even more successful as a feature star than she was either on the stage or as Patria Channing in the serial that has broken all records.

"The work in features gives me a real chance to act and I feel that I am learning a great deal under the direction of Mr. Fitzmaurice," says Mrs. Castle.

The scenario for her first feature has been chosen as a story of the red-blooded, fast-moving type that is so popular. Some of the "punch scenes" already completed give an idea of the thrilling nature of the story and action. Other scenes yet to be filmed will show the beautiful sets and atmosphere that George Fitzmaurice always has in his pictures.

It was in order to make sure that Mrs. Castle's success in five-reelers will equal that which she made as Patria Channing that Mr. Fitzmaurice was selected as her director and to Philip Bartholomae, author of "Very Good Eddie," "Over Night," "Little Miss Brown," and many other stage hits, was intrusted the important work of writing the scenario for her first Gold Rooster play.

GRIFFITH TO AID LIBERTY LOAN.

D. W. Griffith, the American motion picture producer, now in Paris after a month in the trenches, where he has made some special pictures for the French Government, cabled his office last week that he was hurrying home to make a special picture for the Liberty loan campaign in this country. He will handle a new subject showing what this mammoth loan means to this country.

"SPIKE" ROBINSON BREAKS COLLAR BONE.

"Spike" Robinson, who appeared as the trusty in the initial Fairbanks-Artcraft picture, "In Again—Out Again," and who also appears in "Wild and Woolly," "Doug's" new picture, suffered a broken collar bone during the production of this subject. "Spike" is known to all old-time picture-goers as the Biograph Indian. He possesses a vast assortment of the paraphernalia of the aborigine.

REVIEW BOARD WORKING FOR SOLDIERS.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, has named a commission to study social needs of the soldiers in the training camps. The motion picture naturally will be an important element in the entertainment and recreation of the "soldier boys." The National Board of Review is assisting this commission in relation to motion pictures.

"Motion Picture Problems" Discussed

Speakers at Dinner of Twilight Club Delve Exhaustively Into Every Phase of Motion Picture Art

OUR good friend the motion picture was cussed and caressed, beaten and boosted, lammed and lauded, and generally dissected and put together again by speakers who addressed more than four hundred members and guests of the Twilight Club at the club's annual banquet, held in the Biltmore Hotel, New York, on Saturday night, May 12. The Twilight Club's membership is made up mostly of professional folk—writers, artists, actors, etc.; a big group of the city's serious thinkers.

J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, acted as toastmaster and was the first speaker. Mr. Blackton spoke on the motion picture of yesterday and today. He told of early conditions in the industry and gave accounts of several amusing incidents in his experience as a producer. The speaker carried his audience over much of the ground covered by the films in the past few years, stating that it was but a few years ago that big stage stars would have considered it an insult to have been offered a place in the "movies." Today, he pointed out, there were but a handful of stage stars and a handful of noted authors who had not been won over to the screen.

Mr. Blackton told specifically of good accomplished by motion pictures, and used as an example a certain section of the United States where the majority of the saloons had been forced to go out of business because of the attraction of pictures. He stated—and proved—that the motion picture was the worst enemy of the saloon.

The next speaker was Dr. Cranston Brenton, chairman of the National Board of Review. He told the assemblage a few truths about censorship of motion pictures and placed himself and his more than two hundred co-workers on record as being unalterably opposed to any form of legalized political censorship. He told of the work of the Board of Review, explaining the object of the voluntary workers. The speaker said that the motion picture could be killed by only two things: internal degeneration or strangulation. He said that if producers made filthy films they would kill themselves, and that legalized political censorship would strangle the industry. It is for the producers to realize this fully he warned, and to shape their course as to avoid either of the pitfalls.

Roi Cooper Megrue, dramatist, followed Mr. Brenton. Mr. Megrue spoke very slightingly of "the movies," as he termed them. Mr. Megrue got many laughs at the expense of the motion picture, but was later made the target of a few remarks by William A. Brady, whose daughter, Alice Brady, preceded her father on the speaker's list.

Earnestly, forcefully, and with a serious purpose that soon made itself felt all over the big room, Mr. Brady came to the defense of the motion picture. Pounding his fist against the table and looking squarely at Mr. Megrue, Mr. Brady said that one great trouble with the industry at the present time was the fact that many persons in it did not take their work or the motion picture seriously. He said that it was such sentiments as expressed by Mr. Megrue that accounted in a large measure for some of the things that Mr. Megrue laughed at. It had been said by Mr. Megrue that motion pictures were hurting the theater. Mr. Brady said that that was emphatically the case, and that one reason was that playwrights were not writing plays worth seeing or hearing. He said that he could not understand why people went to see them.

Then Mr. Brady launched into the subject of dirty pictures. "Only one-half of one per cent. of the producers are making pictures of that sort," he said. "And for that one-half per cent. all of the producers had to suffer; for that one-half per cent the motion picture has become the butt of every grafting politician in the country. If only one of the producers who made an off-color picture were put in jail the production of such films would stop immediately. That's what we need and want—police regulation, not censorship. Censorship? Why, ladies and gentlemen, the motion picture will some day supplant the newspapers; it will supplant the school textbooks; Mr. Carnegie will some day have to take his books out of his libraries and put motion picture films in their places.

"Censorship? Why, consider the vote in the United States Senate yesterday. That vote on the censorship of newspapers was the result of fear. The Senate was afraid to censor the press—afraid of the newspapers. Fear, that's all that killed the newspaper censorship clause—fear of the consequences. And some day—soon, ladies and gentlemen, sooner than you might expect—the motion picture is going to back the newspaper off the map, and politicians will then be AFRAID to censor motion pictures."

Mr. Brady's speech was comprehensive and impressive. He championed the films in a manner that convinced and silenced many of those who had come to scoff.

De Wolf Hopper, the comedian, was the next speaker. He kept the gathering in a continual laughter, telling of his experiences with motion pictures. He told a few stories, also.

Roy McCardell, who was referred to on the program as a humorist and critic, spoke of the motion picture from the author's point of view. He uttered many too true things, but was also guilty of some rather superciliously disparaging remarks.

McCardell told of the difficulty on the part of an author to get his story produced in motion pictures as it was written. He said that many of his stories had suffered at the hands of the director, and that that was true of almost every writer's works.

Samuel L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto, New York, took issue with the speakers who had said that the public does not want clean films. He said that his experience had proved otherwise. Mr. Rothapfel said that the motion picture had been responsible in a greater measure than any other one factor in bringing good music to the public at a low price. He also reaffirmed his absolute belief in motion pictures, and said that the time will come when entertainment not even dreamed of at the present time would be given the public at a nominal admission.

Eugene V. Brewster, editor of the Motion Picture Magazine, and several other speakers were heard.

ENLARGING GENERAL FILM OFFICES.

Owing to the improved business of General Film Company and its added product of selected short length subjects, a number of the branches in the Central West have larger quarters.

Business Manager H. H. Buxbaum has made a trip to Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis and Cincinnati to inspect those branches of General Film, arrange for the handling of a doubled output, and to see toward securing enlarged quarters for each of the exchanges. The volume of business at each of these exchanges is already so great as to make their existing space seem cramped, and when the added releases are all listed a great deal more room will be in demand. With the improvements planned the branch managers are looking forward to greater business made easy with greater facilities.

ROSENBERG LEASES EIGHTH AVENUE THEATER.

Criterion Theater Company, of New York City, Walter Rosenberg president, has leased from the Henry C. Miner Estate, Miner's Eighth Avenue Theater for a term of five years commencing September 1, 1917. Mr. Rosenberg will entirely remodel the premises, redecorating, re-seating and overhauling the house completely, and will install a big pipe organ. He will conduct the theater as a high-cass motion picture house.

EXCHANGE MEN TRANSFERRED.

The New Orleans office of the General Film Company is now under the management of A. S. Parker, according to an announcement by General Sales Manager Sidney R. Kent. He succeeds F. E. Garner, who has been transferred to the Dallas office. Mr. Parker was formerly office manager at Memphis.

BARTLETT PURCHASES THE MAJESTIC.

C. W. Bartett, of Fairbury, Neb., recently purchased the Majestic Theater in that city. In the not very distant future Mr. Bartlett will begin enlarging the Majestic, making it 142 feet deep. He will also increase the seating capacity to 600, it now being 480. The purchase price was $20,000.

Bill Hart Hits the Great White Trail

By George Blaisdell

Ince Director-Player Gets Warm Greetings in Theaters and Streets on His Trip Across Country

WILLIAM S. HART, affectionately known to his followers as "Bill," arrived in New York on Thursday, May 17. It was the first vacation of the big Inceville director-player in three years, the first time in that period he had seen Broadway, with which through a long life on the stage he had been thoroughly familiar. His trip across the country had been one ovation after another—and the lines in the face of the man who has become famous as the portrayer of western types bore ample evidence of loss of sleep. He had been honored as have few players. Cowboys in droves deserted the range and traveled far across country to greet their screen prototype. Townspeople had surged to the stations, to shake hands with the man they felt they knew so well. Dispatchers had been threatened with dire penalties if they started trains before the crowds were through. Flying motor trips had been made around large cities and in each a dozen theaters visited, where the player addressed crowded houses.

William S. ("Bill") Hart.

In Dodge City, Kan., the town "turned out" at 7 o'clock in the morning, headed by a priest and the town officials. The Rev. Father Handly mounted the observation platform and addressed Mr. Hart. He unbuttoned his frock coat and displayed about his waist a formidable looking pistol and all the accompanying paraphernalia. The player was told that the small arsenal had been taken from the person of one of the more or less large number of bad men whose careers had come to an end in that boisterous border town of other days, that the equipment, undisturbed, had been taken from the "archives" of the town to be presented to Mr. Hart as a souvenir, accompanied by the freedom of the township. The pistol was a five and a half-inch barreled "forty-five," the cartridges were moldy from the exposure of a generation. The whole proceeding was representative of the regard in which the "man of the west" is held by the men who know what was what in the days now happily past.

At Rattoon, N. M., a band of cowboys invaded the train in the early hours yelling "Bill Hart, Bill Hart!" The player said that as he was arrayed only in his pajamas he remained snug in his berth and the cowboys missed him, to the grim satisfaction of passengers whose sleep had been disturbed.

The arrival at Kansas City was at 8 o'clock in the evening. There was a great crowd at the station and the player was compelled to make a speech before he could get through. In two hours and forty-five minutes Mr. Hart had visited ten theaters, addressed 15,000 persons, traveled many miles, and was back at the station. In St. Louis he was met at the station by a band and three companies of the First Regiment. The major in charge insisted that the player mount his horse and he was thus escorted to the Jefferson Hotel, where he made a speech urging enlistment. At one of the theaters in that city the services of fifteen patrolmen were necessary to get him through the crowds.

Hearty Greetings in the East.

That the regard for the man who has put "westerns" back on the map is just as great in the East as it is in the West was amply demonstrated in many theaters in New York City during Mr. Hart's stay here. On Thursday night a half dozen houses were visited in Manhattan, and all were crowded by enthusiastic photoplaygoers. The writer accompanied Mr. Hart on his tour of Brooklyn on Friday evening and had an opportunity of witnessing first hand what may be accomplished in three years by a screen player in the way of making admirers by the thousands. Six houses were visited; the story was the same in each. Prolonged applause greeted the appearance of Mr. Hart, there was the closest attention to what he had to say, and there was always a hearty good-bye.

Among his associates Mr. Hart is the quietest man, the softest spoken, in the town. When he faces an audience he steps out of himself, the native reserve is thrown off, and so far as his auditors may be able to judge he is just from the range. Arrayed in his primitive rig, not a detail missing, even to the handles of the two big Colts plainly visible at his broad hips, it is as if his well remembered Cash Hawkins had come to life and was speaking. The art of the actor is blended with the apparent diffidence of the man with the bark on. The voice is one of the surprises to those who have not heard it in full depth. It has unusual power, but when occasion requires, reflects marked pathos.

Mr. Hart's talks are whimsical, anecdotal, personal and impersonal. One of his most effective lines is his reference to his favorite horse. "I'm very sorry my pinto pony Fritz is not here tonight—I am sure he would enjoy meeting you," he would say. "You know, I think that old snoozer is about half of me, any way, and so he deserves half of this reception." Invariably there would come a burst of applause, demonstrating the interest that has been created in this live bit of spotted horseflesh. There were appreciative laughs, too, when Mr. Hart told of his dog Rags. Rags was known, beyond question. Another of the player's effective bits marked his withdrawal from the stage. It was a story from his boyhood, of the sorrow of an Indian at the departure for the East of Hart's father and family. It was a dramatic recital and an exposition of the sign language of the red man. Mr. Hart varied his program with stories and recitations.

Stops were made in Brooklyn at the Rialto, where Mr. Hart met his sister; the Royal, Bijou, Broadway, Halsey and Regent. Between 7 and 10 o'clock the player addressed approximately a dozen thousand photoplaygoers and was greeted by many throngs in the street. The outside crowd at the Broadway was the largest.

Mr. Hart was accompanied on his trip by Bert Lennon, manager, and Don B. Keyes, photographer. The latter has taken many pictures of the interesting events of the trip, at night as well as by day.

On Friday afternoon the writer had a talk with Mr. Hart at his hotel. The actor had his first real sleep in ten days. He was still under the spell of the continuous receptions. "It is difficult for one to conceive the greetings that have been extended to me, the warmth of them," he said. "I can't understand them, unless it is because I have been portraying a phase of life, that of frontier days, in which there is such a wide interest. I am not egotistical enough to think that they are for me, but rather for what I have been permitted to represent."

Mr. Hart said his plans for the future contained no radical departures from those of the past, that he intended to go ahead on the same lines. "I believe in loyalty," he said. "I am at home in Inceville. I know all the horses, all the dogs, all the cowboys; everybody knows me. All of my pictures have been made at Inceville, and I think you will agree with me, they have been at least measurably successful. As long as the Triangle company is doing what is fair by me why should I leave?" The latter remark was brought out in the course of a reference to the number of offers Mr. Hart is continually receiving from other concerns.

The player said he put in a fairly busy day, one way and another. He arises at 6 o'clock, is at Inceville, twenty-one miles away, at 8:30, ready for work at 9, and in the evening he goes over his work for the day following. Then, too, he finds his mail increasing."

Mr. Hart has been a steady worker. His accomplishment of sixty-five completed reels in fifty-two weeks is quoted by his friends as a world's record for feature picturemaking. In speaking of the stories in which he works he had words of warm praise for C. Gardiner Sullivan, the author.

Without having opportunities of looking up old friends Mr. Hart started on his return on Monday, May 21.

Dear Editor: Is there much money made out of the moving picture business? J. E. D.

Yes, a lot made out of it.

The Property Man's Soliloquy.

I am the goat. My hand is magic. I make moons from green cheese and starry skies from calico. Over night I cause trees to grow on the Nile, and chisel pretentious statues. I furnish everything that isn't nailed down. I am the most unhappy of men. I hold up scenes, and when I don't the director says I do. The spectators do not appreciate my handiwork. The fat comedian shoots a hole in a Venetian vase I spend two hours creating. My name doesn't appear in the cast of characters, and my only reward is the weekly rouble. I am the property man.

New T. & D. Theater a House of Comfort

Proposed San Francisco Structure Will Have Every Convenience for Patrons—Auditorium 200 by 250 Feet

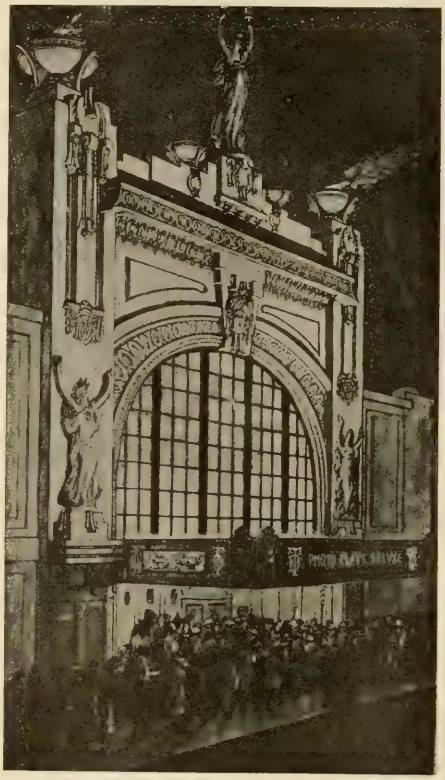
THE fast growing concern of Turner & Dahnken Circuit, largest on the Pacific Coast, has just completed final negotiations for one of the largest and grandest theaters in the world. This new venture is to be situated on the old Central Park site owned by the McCreery estate at Eighth and Market streets, San Francisco. This location, due to several new enterprises, has become the center of activities and is within one block of the magnificent new City Hall, Civic Auditorium and State Public Library.

The new T. & D. Theater, as it will be named when completed, will be a work of art both as to its exterior finishings, interior decorations and the consideration of the comfort and convenience of patrons. The exterior is designed in modern art and is to be executed in concrete and terra cotta. The entrance is to be through a tiled floor vestibule with paneled walls and ornamented domed ceiling, thence into a marble floored lobby leading into the promenade foyer, which is 50 feet in width and 260 feet in length.

The center of the promenade foyer will contain a beautifully designed water lake, aquarium, electric fountain with live ducks of the most gorgeous plumage. The walls and ceiling of this foyer will be finished in ornamental plaster and with a very elaborate color scheme. Off the foyer will be a reception room 25 by 65 feet in size, a women's rest room 22 by 25 feet, men's smoking parlor 24 by 25 feet, three lounging parlors 24 by 25 feet, house manager's office, kitchen, lavatories, ushers' room and storerooms.

The reception will be a combination tea room, where milady may partake of tea, cakes and ices, or make appointments for the meeting of a friend, while waiting for the next feature film to start. This room will be in charge of two capable and experienced matrons. Here the children may be taken care of while the parents watch the program.

From the foyer there will be six gradients leading to lower portions of the main auditorium, also gradients 25 feet in width leading to the mezzanine floor, on which floor will be the children's room and nursery 30 by 50 feet, fitted with every modern amusement contrivance of interest to the kiddies, including a beach of sand, hobby horses, swings, etc. Check rooms and first aid requirements will be included in the house appointments, as well as an inter-communicating telephone system for both the outside as well as the interior of this magnificent theater.



New T. & D. Theater, San Francisco, Cal.

The auditorium is 200 by 250 feet in size, with a seating capacity of 6,000. Of this number 900 will be loge seats of a very expensive type. The orchestra seats will be of the latest style, promising the maximum of comfort to the occupants. Each of these seats will contain a French steel spring that is worked by compressed air, which is absolutely the newest thing in theater chairs.

The lighting arrangements will be a distinct feature and of a very original nature, being so arranged that any desired color scheme may be had by certain combinations located on the main switchboard. This main switchboard will be so wired that when giving the audience any particular scheme or when lighting the auditorium with a certain color scheme a miniature arrangement over the board will designate to the operator the exact colors that are being blended throughout the house. These lights will be of a semi-indirect nature, and upon the projection of a picture that calls for a scheme at dusk or a volcano effect or in fact anything that requires color the operator can give this desired effect, naturally harmonizing the auditorium or seating parts of the house with the scene being projected upon the curtain.

Aside from this wonderful color scheme, there will be two large what might be called sun porches, so designed on each side of the proscenium arch. Looking through these sun porches, arranged with glass, gives the occupant of a seat in the auditorium a feeling of looking out upon a vast landscape. This color scheme so arranged throughout the house will also be added to these wonderful paintings, and in the case of a pyramid scene the spectator will be able to sit and look upon a scene in Egypt from the dawn of morning to the gradual close of day, showing all the beautiful tints of the sky as well as the rays from the setting sun. A number of these scenes are so arranged that upon reviewing a coming attraction the scenery can be arranged to fit the parts required to harmonize with the projected exhibition.

The dome in the center of the ceiling of the auditorium will also be provided for in this wonderful series of color schemes, restful to the eye and harmonizing with any color in the picture. Behind the elaborately ornamented proscenium arch with a width of 80 feet will be the various pipes of the master organ, which will be operated from the console in the orchestra pit in front of the stage. Especial attention has been given to the selection and distribution of the organ parts, as well as the acoustic properties of the house. The organ will consist of ninety odd actual speaking stops, not barrel stops, but actual speaking stops.

The proscenium arch is to be ornamented, aside from its decorations, with a magnificently draped velvet curtain and trimmed with an additional valance, to give it artistic lines. Just inside of this drapery will be a beautiful drape on each side of the stage, as well as an artistic one to cover up the space where the pictures are projected. All of these curtains will be mechanically arranged so that by pressing a series of buttons the front curtain can be opened, then gradually the ones on each side, exposing wonderful, transparent, perspective scenes of landscapes. This also includes the part of the stage where the picture is projected, and upon the completion of this operation, which will cover the time required for an organ overture or orchestral overture, the curtains with the exception of the front one will slowly close again and the scenes covering the picture curtain will gradually rise to the beginning of the opening of the picture attraction.

In method of construction and mechanical equipment, this new T. & D. Theater is equally admirable and adequate. It will be of fireproof construction throughout and equipped with double the number of exits required by law and with all the improved safety devices. The heating and ventilating system will, of course, be of the most modern, and designed so that warm air may be delivered into the auditorium and the temperature automatically regulated by thermostats to a degree that is consistent with the comfort of the patrons.

There will be two box offices situated on each side of the main entrance. Passing through the entrance into the vestibule, masses of hothouse flowers will bring joy to the eye and the sweet music of innumerable German roller canaries will please the ear.

The operating room is to receive especial attention and will be constructed entirely of concrete and located in the center of the auditorium, so designed that it will not be visible to the audience. The machinery to be installed in this room will be of the latest design and so arranged that under the most extreme conditions this room with its various emergency machines and devices will make it impossible to have a breakdown or a delay of any kind in the exhibition of its performances.

When finally completed and its huge steel doors swing open for its initial bow to the critical and discriminating motion picture public of the world, and San Francisco and California in particular, the T. & D. Circuit will have presented an entertaining offering in theatre perfection, the like of which has never been seen or dreamed of. Without resort to press agent persiflage of their truth twisting prerogatives, but with a simple emphasis, it is true that the new T. & D. Theater of San Francisco will rank as the largest and absolutely the finest photodramatic playhouse in the world, representing a total investment of about three million and a half dollars ($3,500,000).

This article would not be complete, of course, without some reference to the men behind this enterprise. The officials of the T. & D. Circuit consist of Fred D. Dahnken, president, and J. T. Turner, vice-president and general manager, the founders of this chain of theaters, the largest in Western America. Messrs. Turner and Dahnken started in the motion picture business with very little capital. Closely associated with them in the management of their successful houses are E. B. Johnson, secretary and legal adviser, and Claude L. Langley, managing director and treasurer of the circuit.

New Grand Theater, Lander, Wyo.

John R. Buckley's New Photoplay House to Open Late in May Ranks Among the Prettiest in Wyoming.

ONE of the first features one notices in the new Grand theater being built by John R. Buckley at Lander, Wyo., is the inclined floor of the house that gives a perfect view of the screen from every seat. The seating capacity of this floor is 350, and provision has been made for the early installation of boxes, and a balcony will be added when demanded.

The size of the building is 25 by 120 feet and the cost will be $15,000. It is two stories in height and has offices in front up stairs. A candy store is provided for the convenience of patrons. There are also convenient drinking fountains, toilets, etc. One special feature is an emergency room to be used in case patrons should be taken sick.

The lighting will be semi-direct during the intermissions and indirect while the pictures are on the screen. The walls are decorated with pleasing pictures. The heating is by the Trane vapor system burning oil. The lobby, which is 14 by 14 feet, will have the conventional center ticket booth. Above this there will be an arching electric sign, reading "Grand," and at the sides will be two American flags in electric lights and waved. The house will be managed by the owner, John R. Buckley, assisted by Wm. R. Franey.

Rolin Company's Rise

History of Rolin Film Company Is Typically American—Present Success Earned by Work.

THE history of the Rolin Film Company is typically American. As a young company it was practically on the rocks when Success with a capital S came its way. What was thought to be its dying gasp turned out to be the first breath of a new and vigorous life. Pluck, ability and self-confidence saved the day for it, and within the short space of two years its "Lonesome Luke" comedies on the Pathe program have won an enviable popularity and became an attraction certainly unsurpassed and declared to be unequalled in their field today.

Hal Roach, president and general director of the Rolin Film Company, personally supervises the direction of all the "Luke" comedies. It is his ability in this direction that has made the comedies unique, full of "pep" and original situations. He personally selected and trained Harold Lloyd, "Snub" Pollard, Bebe Daniels and the other members of the cast.

Mr. Roach is a young man, still under thirty; was born in Elmira, N. Y., and started his career as a mail carrier in Alaska. His was not a house-to-house delivery such as most of us are familiar with. It was a long horse-back ride over frozen hills, valleys and tundra, sometimes with the snow up to the stirrups. He nearly lost one of his feet from frost bite and decided it was time to quit. He went to California and got a job with a firm of contractors. While in Los Angeles he met some persons connected with a big motion picture producing company. The business interested him. Getting a short vacation, he applied for and secured a job as an "extra" in a "western" picture. A scene was put on showing cowboys playing roulette. The director was staging the picture so inaccurately that any cowboy who ever saw the scene would give it the horse laugh. Mr. Roach offered his advice. It was accepted and the young man found himself with a regular job, and soon became an assistant director.

After a while at this he became ambitious and with a friend formed the Rolin Company. They sold several pictures to different distributing companies. Each company went broke owing them the purchase price. The Rolin capital was tied up in those pictures and things looked pretty black. Roach decided upon one last desperate effort. He took his company and put through every funny situation he could think of, called the picture "Just Nuts" and sent it on to Pathe on speculation. Pathe looked at it, liked it and bought it. The Rolin Company was saved and "Just Nuts" made such a hit that it is still playing. Pathe asked for more pictures, so to get the proper capital to do things right Dwight Whiting was interested in the struggling company.

Mr. Whiting is a Los Angeles man of a wealthy family and was destined for the law. After going through Groton School in Massachusetts and Stanford University he decided to leave law to the other fellow and entered business. He opened and managed a large automobile agency in San Francisco. His father having died, he found it necessary to sell his business and return to Los Angeles to look after the family properties. As this did not occupy this full time he asked his lawyer if he know of anything that he could get into. The lawyer was looking after Roach's affairs also and told Whiting that Roach had produced some pictures that seemed to be all right and wanted money to produce more. The two men were brought together and Mr. Whiting acquired a third interest in the Rolin Company. Mr. Whiting immediately set out upon the task of putting the company's finances, books and systems upon a business basis, and called in his assistant, W. H. Doane, to help. Dan Linthicum, the third owner of the business, sold out his share jointly to Whiting and Roach, leaving them the sold owners.

As a result of Mr. Whiting's management, the Rolin Company, since he took an interest in it, has discounted every bill presented and the company doesn't owe a dollar.

Today Mr. Whiting is general manager of the company; Mr. Roach is president and general director; Mr. Wisdom, the attorney, is vice-president, and Mr. Doane, who recently acquired an interest in the company, is assistant to the manager and secretary.

The success of the "Lonesome Luke" comedies was the cause of the recent change in their length from one to two reels. Exhibitors asked for longer comedies of the same quality as the one reelers. The new two reelers have been booked by some of the largest picture theaters in the country, among them the Rialto, Loew's American, Loew's Bijou and Loew's New Forty-second Street theater, New York; Proctor's Newark; the New Grand Central, St. Louis; The Olympic, Pittsburgh; the Coliseum, of Seattle; the Madison, of Detroit; the Majestic, of Des Moines; the Orpheum, of Cleveland; Clemmer's Spokane, and the Triangle, of New Orleans.

BRISTOL OF TRIANGLE RETURNS FROM COAST.

C. H. Bristol, advertising manger of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, has just returned from a two weeks' trip to the coast, where he visited the studio producing Triangle-Ince plays and Mack Sennett Keystone comedies.

In commenting on his trip, Mr. Bristol stated that he was particularly impressed with the efficiency and attention to detail that is practiced at the Triangle-Ince studios. There are at present five enormous glass stages at the Culver City studio, and arrangements are now being made for the construction of additional stages.

Mr. Bristol also stated he was particularly impressed with the amount of property used at the Mack Sennett Keystone studios for use in the production of comedies. At this studio the word "impossible" is never included in the vocabulary.

AL GREEN DIRECTING "THE HEART OF BEAUPERE."

Director Al Green is now engaged in producing a Selig feature in two reels, entitled "The Heart of Beaupere." The drama deals with life in the Northwest. Those in the cast include George Fawcett, Vivian Reed, Will Machin, Charles Le Moyne and Eugenie Besserer.

Picture Situation in the United Kingdom

Budget of Interesting Consular Data on Business in British Isles—Canvass Shows That 75 Per Cent. of Films Exhibited Are American

THE number of places of amusement in Liverpool where motion pictures are exhibited, according to Consul Lee Washington, stationed in that city, is 62, made up as follows: Music halls, 4; theaters playing stock and motion pictures combined 4; and buildings in which moving pictures are exclusively shown, 54. The total capacity of these places is more than 40,000. The prices of admission to picture theaters in the central part of the city vary from 12 to 48 cents, and in the outskirts of the city from 4 to 24 cents. In addition to these prices the Government entertainment tax of 2 cents on each 12 cents is collected. Various estimates by those interested agree substantially that 75 per cent. of the films exhibited have been of American manufacture, 15 per cent. British and 10 per cent French and Italian. More recently American pictures have gained a stronger hold.

A system stated to have been introduced recently into this country of "block booking" American pictures is alleged to have been the climax in its effect on the British film industry, and to have made British films "as dear as diamonds" in comparison with American products. This system is alleged to be a kind of blending operation. The good, bad and indifferent pictures are lumped together for selling, and are offered on a long contract.

The statement is made, and is given as showing the extent of the trade, that motion pictures amuse 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 people in this country every week; that the country is paying nearly $4,866,500 a year to import foreign pictures, chiefly American; and nearly $48,665,000 to see them.

Charge for License.

Consul Augustus E. Ingram, Bradford, writes in "Commerce Reports" that the charge in Bradford for a license for showing motion pictures is $4.86 per annum, the year ending March 31. The prices of admission range from 4 cents to 24 cents, plus the amusement war tax. The charges in the center of the city are slightly higher than at the theaters in the suburbs. American films preponderate in this district.

The prices paid for the purchase or rental of films vary considerably and are according to arrangement. During the last two or three years the "exclusive" dramatic film of four, five or six reels has increased in popularity, supplanting to some extent the open film. The market, however, is said to be tiring of these long films which occupy so much time. The patrons demands a greater change in the picture program.

An "exclusive" film may command any sum up to $389 or $487 for its first week's run, depending on the character, interest and drawing power it is likely to have with the public. The more expensive of the "exclusive" films are shown for six days to make them pay, a change being made after three days in the open films which usually complete the program. An open film may be obtained for $19.47 or $24.33 upward, according to its length and interest.

Demand for Serials of American Manufacture.

Thirteen theaters in Swansea, Wales, give motion picture shows with seating capacity of 300 to 1,200, according to U. S. Consul M. K. Moorhead, stationed there. Three of these can accommodate more than 1,100 persons each. The prices of admission are 6, 12, 18 and 24 cents, according to location of seats. Most of the theaters run a continuous performance from 2:30 in the afternoon to 10:30 at night, the program being repeated at 5 o'clock and again at 7:30. Serials are very popular, especially those of American manufacture. Long films, with well-known legitimate actors in popular modern plays and classical dramas, do not appeal strongly. The dramas that are offered must be clean and wholesome.

The majority of the pictures shown in Swansea are of American manufacture. According to the manager of one house, American films are superior to those of all other countries. He suggested, however, that when American manufacturers send films to Great Britain they should avoid the use of American slang in the descriptive notes thrown on the screen. The popularity of motion-picture plays in this district is steadily increasing. Swansea, with a population of only 120,000, has 13 theaters devoted to motion pictures, and these are practically always crowded.

New Amusement Fields Opened.

From U. S. Consul Albert W. Swalm, Southampton, we learn that in the Southampton consular district picture houses are most numerous at Portsmouth, Bournemouth, Weymouth, and Jersey and Guernsey in the Channel Islands. Places are well established in such centers as Salisbury, the Aldershot Camps, Andover, and Romsey, and about 20 or more other communities in which theatrical performances were never before given are now afforded entertainment by means of "movie" exhibitions. Twelve picture theaters are operated in Southampton.

Prices of admission are from 5 to 37 cents in the various picture theaters of the district. Of the pictures shown, 80 per cent. are of American production; 90 per cent of the humorous films are American.

The Borough of Huddersfield at the last census had a population of about 110,000, and with the suburbs added the number probably is approximately 200,000, within a radius of 8 or 9 miles, says U. S. Vice-Consul David J. Bailey, Huddersfield, writing in "Commerce Reports." In this section are 20 licensed motion picture establishments—11 in the borough and 9 in the suburbs. As all picture houses employ some form of musical accompaniment, it is obligatory for each of them to obtain a license from the borough justice, which has to be renewed annually.

A new picture theater has been completed during the past twelve months in this district, and it is equipped on modern lines. The building is oblong in shape and has a seating capacity of about 1,000. The theaters in Huddersfield are open daily, and provide a continuous performance between 2:30 and 10:30 p. m. Those in the suburbs are open evenings between 8 and 10 p. m., and also give a Saturday matinee for children.

British film companies are making every endeavor to advance their product in the market, and undoubtedly these efforts have met with some degree of success. It is stated that their pictures are assuming a more attractive and modern character—qualities which were lacking formerly. The French film is also displayed here. American makes, however, claim a good proportion of the patronage in this district, and if there is no deterioration in quality and the price is reasonable the connections probably will be retained. There are no imports of films into this district.

Four motion-picture houses are maintained in Dunfermline, Scotland, according to U. S. Consul H. D. Van Sant, who is stationed there. They are: The Cinema—seats 700; prices of admission, 22, 14 and 8 cents. Palace Kinema—seats 1,200; prices of admission, 26, 22, 14 and 8 cents; La Scala—seats 780; prices of admission, 14, 8 and 5 cents.

Prices for four-part and longer films vary considerably according to maker, popularity and gripping power of the subject, as well as quality of production. For three-day booking, which is the usual limit of exhibit, an average price is $50. The Cinema is said to book the best and highest-priced pictures at present. The managers of these houses state that American productions have reached such a high standard of quality that they have no suggestions as to improvement.

Women Inspectors Make Censorship Rigid.

U. S. Vice-Consul David C. Kerr, Birmingham, says that there are 60 motion picture theaters in this city and 26 in the city's suburbs. The seating capacity varies from 3,000 to 400, and the prices of admission range from 2 to 24 cents, not including the tax that the Government has levied on all amusements for the past eight months. The general character of the films varies, but they must be absolutely clean. The censorship in England has recently become very strict, and this is attributed to the fact that women inspectors are now employed.

The amounts paid for film hire vary from $487 per week to $12. The only recommendation offered by renting agents as to any improvements desired in American films is a request for "less of the sexual problem." People of all classes attend the picture houses, and films based on novels and plays known to the English people are the most popular.

Houses Commodious; Business Increasing.

Sheffield, according to the American consul, John M. Savage, there, has 38 licensed houses devoted exclusively to picture shows, and four large halls which give occasional exhibitions and at other times are devoted to various forms of entertainment. The business seems to be steadily increasing. Nearly all of the houses are large and commodious, and were specially built for the purpose. The two leading theaters give daily continuous performances from 2 to 10:30 p. m. Some give daily matinees and two evening performances and still others semi-weekly matinees and two evening performances. Performances usually occupy two hours and none are given on Sunday. Prices of admission vary from 4 to 24 cents for adults, while children are admitted at half price.

It is the invariable rule that each performance shall contain one of the "topical" productions, which are here the most popular pictures of the day. These show important events of recent occurrence in everyday life, and are not confined to any particular country or series of events. Natural history films showing bird and animal life in the wild state are much appreciated on account of their educational qualities.

The Sheffield picture houses hire their films from agencies in London. Eight of these are American, two French and one British. The nationality of the film shown is probably in proportion to the agencies mentioned.

British Notes

THE Kinematograph Trade Council, the body formed last year to tackle the then ominous question of censorship, has been organized upon a more representative, and it is to be hoped, a permanent basis. The executive committee is superseded by a general committee composed of ten members of the Exhibitors' Association, five of the Renters' Association and five of the Manufacturers' Association, with A. E. Newbould of the Exhibitors' Association as president. The committeemen are Matt. Raymond, E. W. Peall, Sidney Bacon, F. R. Goodwin, E. J. Brown, R. C. Buchanan, A. Cunningham, A. J. Gale and H. V. Davies (Exhibitors' Association), A. M. Kay (Ideal Film Renting Co.), Isidor Joseph (Butchers' Film Service), A. C. Lovesey (Raffells Exclusives), J. W. Barber (Castle Films) and T. E. Davies (Western Import Co.) (Renters' Association), E. H. Montagu (Selig), Paul Kimberley, Thanhouser), A. F. Wagner (Edison), Cecil Hepworth and Will Barker (Manufacturers' Association). The first meeting was held last week and a spirited discussion ensued regarding the trade-show deadhead, the uninvited guest who turned up at the trade-shows to the exclusion of the genuine exhibitor. One exhibitor held that elaborate trade shows at West End theaters attracted these people, who were out for something for nothing, and the remedy was entirely in the hands of the renter. A renter's counterstroke to this suggestion was that the exhibitor who could not attend trade-shows often distributed his invitations among his friends or even his patrons. And so came to pass two resolutions. One to the renters urging less pretentious trade premieres and one to the exhibitors advising more careful use of invitation cards.

Birmingham recently appointed two women constables for the express purpose of visiting local entertainments, but particularly kinematograph exhibitions and reporting upon conditions prevailing in different parts of the area. The neighboring city of Coventry contemplates similar action, directly the result of a petition from the National Union of Women Workers. Coventry's chief of police does not, however, seem enamored of the proposal and he very pointedly told the council that moving picture theaters were a tremendous power for good in Coventry. Furthermore inspection of films was a very delicate subject indeed. Should these policewomen be appointed he submitted there was the possibility of a legitimate trade being endangered simply on the opinion of two women, who might be temperamentally unfitted for passing judgment on the matter.

The War Office announces the fourth of the special war films, "Sons of Our Empire," of which a private view was given to the trade last week. It is in ten reels and the releasing firm here is to issue it in five weekly sections. For the first time in these official records the work of the Royal Navy is depicted, and the two reels devoted to the activities of the fleet will be of no less interest upon the western side of the Atlantic than on the east. Both the material and photography are a distinct improvement on "How Britain Prepared." The land forces and the air services are recorded in full fighting trim in the other parts, the most notable of the former being the Canadian massed attack on Courcelette. Some of the aerial photography is both curious and sensational. In one scene, for instance, the cameraman descends with the pilot in a quick spiral from a great height; it looks almost like a sheer drop and a performance evidently done at great risk to both. "Sons of Our Empire" will be handled in America by Chas. Urban.

Harry A. Spoor, who presides over Essanay's European destinies, has a little novelty up his sleeve which he will most likely place on the market during the summer. It is another Chaplin melange with the flippant title, "Chase Me, Charlie." It must not be confused with the Chaplin review released in the States last year, although it is constituted of the best scenes that could coherently hang together from his successes released under the Essanay banner. A dozen subjects have been cut up in the firm's London office with additional novelties such as C. C. signing the Mutual contract, so that the promised five-reel feature may quite conceivably be the most variegated comedy the market has seen for some time. Of the continuity of the story we are assured. Mr. Reed, the London publicity manager, spent nearly five months piecing the picture together. If reconstructions like this prove to be acceptable to the exhibitor then we have one solution of the over-production problem, and incidentally a new vocation within the trade, the professional re-hasher of films. I wish the innovation better success than attended a Northern exchangeman's venture. Being in urgent need of an exclusive he concocted a three-reel "Fall of Constantinople" from five years' accumulation of news reels. The first exhibitor saw through the imposition and before despatching it to its second engagement scratched a few feet of the first reel clear of emulsion so that a white light would show on the screen. This he prefixed with the title "General White, the hero of the story." What happened to the subject during its subsequent bookings would take too long to tell, but just sufficient length of the original arrived back to make the enterprising exchangeman a pair of braces.

"The Scarlet Runner," the Vitagraph serial, has arrived at the London offices of the company and is down for early release. It is the first Vitagraph serial to be available for British exhibitors, its predecessor, "The Goddess," being, for reasons well known, withdrawn from the market.

J. Brooke Wilkinson, secretary to the British Board of Film Censors, told the Kinema Commission the other day that it was decided last year that the British Board of Film Censors should undertake the censorship of posters, but this had not yet been carried into effect. Since the issue of the Board's last report (summarized in the "World" at the time) objections have been taken to scenes in films upon grounds which might not have been raised had the country not been at war. Depiction too realistically of the horrors of war has accounted for a few and at least one production showing British officers in a discreditable light in their relations with Eastern peoples was turned down. The materialization of the conventional figure of Christ still remains the most deep-rooted of objections with the board, and I have heard speculations during the past day or two of the fate of "Intolerance" in this aspect. Should the subject be submitted for censorship the holy land scenes would most undoubtedly have to be cut. But I do not think there is a man in this country who could convince Mr. Griffith of the utility of censorship.

American Film Releases, of which R. S. Edmondson is managing director, have in consequence of increasing "Bluebird" business taken large premises adjoining Wardour street. The address is now 16 Great Chapel street, London, W. I.

The Trans-Atlantic Film Co. is engaged upon the production of the first serial film to be undertaken in this country. The story is written around the boy scout movement and the chief of that organization, Lt.-General Sir R. Baden-Powell will, it is stated, appear in the production.

NEW THEATER AT GOOSE CREEK.

Messrs. Mitchell, Mitchell, Stephenson and Trifon recently opened in Goose Creek, Tex., a thriving town in the coast oil belt, an up-to-date playhouse known as the Cozy Theater. Representing an investment of $10,000, this house is fireproof, and thoroughly modern in every particular. It has a discriminating clientele, drawn from the town whose population is about 8,000. Only the latest and best moving pictures will be shown.

"Making Grape Juice" (Mutual-Gaumont).

THE MANUFACTURE of grape juice which twenty-five years ago became a popular drink is well illustrated in "Reel Life No. 54," in which we are privileged to watch the various stages through which this luscious fruit passes on its way from the vine to the bottle. After being gathered, the grapes are placed in boxes, which when filled are taken to the factory and placed in a machine which carries them along through a continual flow of water in which the grapes are cleansed. The fruit is then passed through an automatic stemmer, and after being slightly heated in aluminum kettles it is placed in the pressing machine where it is pressed and strained through cloth at the same time. The heating of the fruit eliminates danger of fermentation, and immediately after the juice is extracted from the grape it is put in large glass carboys to await its turn at the bottling and capping department. This is an interesting subject.

"Copper Industry—Arizona" (Pathe-Combitone).

No. 9 of the Combitone Series covers in an intelligent manner the copper industry of Arizona where large deposits of this mineral help to increase the tremendous output of the country. The scenes of the picture show the locations of the mines, the taking out of the ore, the transportation of it to the smelter, and the actual smelting of the ore. An interesting and well-illustrated subject.

"A Submarine Oil Well" (Mutual-Gaumont).

The great demand for oil for use as fuel in the navies of the world has caused California to bore for it under the bed of the ocean: so we learn from "Reel Life No. 54." The scenes in the picture show us how from one central power unit all these submarine wells are pumped and the oil emptied into large storage tanks ashore. Pictures of some of the great oil wells of California, covered as they are at the present time by huge protectors presumably made of steel or metal of some sort.

"The Small Cat Animals" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

In a picture entitled "The Small Cat Animals," Raymond L. Ditmars has told a number of things in connection with the cat family that many of us did not know before. The members of the cat family which he has photographed for our benefit are the American wild cat which, by the way, is "bob-tailed"; the Canada lynx, whose fur is of considerable value, whose ears are tasseled, and whose feet are unusually large and heavily furred to support it in walking over deep snow, and the domestic cat. In the picture our attention is drawn to the fact that the domestic cat is still governed by hereditary influence, even to its hatred for animals of the dog type. A picture of the wolf, which is the enemy of smaller species of wild cats, is shown, following which are some scenes which are highly amusing, in which a domestic cat holds her own in a fight with a bull terrier. Some pictures of an ocelot kitten at play and also of the adult ocelot, whose fur is vividly spotted, are shown.

"New York's Great Aquarium" (Universal).

The second of a series of scenes photographed in the New York Aquarium will be found in the "Universal Screen Magazine No. 20." Among the fish shown are the silver moon fish, natives of the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards. These fish average two pounds in weight and make fine food. Its sides have a silvery sheen and the reflecting qualities of an ordinary mirror. The angel fish which is also exhibited in the picture, is found in the tropics and is the most beautiful of the coral reef dwellers. They also make splendid food and are caught by trapping. Another fish shown is the porcupine fish which is not used for food purposes and is often seen in New York Bay. By inflating its body it is able to protect itself from enemies.

"New York's Harbor Police" (Universal).

The "Universal Screen Magazine No. 20" gives a good illustration of the duties of the harbor police. We are shown their headquarters and the rapid manner in which they respond to an emergency call. Views are given of the policemen boarding the patrol boat, and of the rapid-fire gun on its forward deck, which is a terror to river pirates. They are also shown boarding the craft of suspected boatmen, which is searched and then released. We see them supervising the loading of an ocean liner, and boarding the loading barge. A search for suspicious characters and the arrest of three suspected men finish the lesson on what is expected of our harbor police.

"Proteges of a Big City" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Reel Life No 54" we find much of interest in connection with the hospital for the feeble-minded which is situated on Randall's Island. This subject has been well covered by the photographer, and we became acquainted by the methods used in dealing with these poor unfortunates. By means of certain tests the mental age of the child is determined; for instance a man may be forty years of age and have a mentality equal only to that of the average child of nine years. In this hospital the girls are taught to cook, sew, embroider, and in fact do all kinds of ordinary house work. The boys learn the art of shoe making, carpentering, etc. At recreation hours we see them dancing on the green to a band composed of feeble-minded boys; and in the course of events they perform a Scotch dance, wearing kilties made by the girls. The boys love to drill and do it well. Free entertainments are provided these afflicted individuals from different sources.

"The Training of An Eight-Oared Crew" (Paramount-Bray).

The Paramount-Bray Pictograph No. 68 contains a fine illustration of how the Yale oarsmen train for the season's work. We learn through this picture that all winter long the men row in a shell placed in a tank and that the only immediate satisfaction they get from this daily grind is a tired set of muscles. In addition to the work in the tank they are put through a series of exercises to develop their bodies. The picture shows how these things are conducted and accomplished and illustrates the progress made from the first day of their labors to the one great day, when seated in the long graceful shell, they await the sound of the starter's gun, and closes with a thrilling boat race.

"Making a Bronze Statue" (Universal).

The making of a bronze statue by Allen C. Newman, a noted sculptor, is shown in the "Universal Screen Magazine No. 20." The opening scenes were photographed in the studio of Mr. Allen and show him first designing the statue while a model poses. We see in the picture the modeling of the famous "Hiker" monument, which after the work of the artist is finished is taken to the foundry for casting. We are shown the furnace pits, the lifting of the crucibles of molten bronze, the pouring of the molten bronze into the mold, the digging of the bronze out of the sand mold, the inspection of the cast by the sculptor, the removal of the rough sand from the cast, and the coloring of the finished product. The final scene shows the unveiling of the monument.

"The Tribes of Senussa" (Educational Films Corporation of America).

The scenes of this picture show that part of the desert of Sahara frequented by the tribes of Senussa. In the picture we learn that contrary to belief of the average person the desert of Sahara is composed of something more than sandy waste, and that there are beautiful spots covered with luxuriant vegetation to be met with at intervals on the trip across the sands. In the picture our attention is drawn to the ruins of an ancient temple, to flocks of sheep apparently in good condition, and to the beautiful streams bordered by palms and other kinds of foliage. A swimming pool where the children bathe regardless of onlookers is shown, and also a stream of clearest water, where the women wash their clothes and bathing is also indulged in.

"Pompeii" (Mutual-Gaumont).

In "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 27" will be found some comprehensive views of Pompeii, the ancient city near the Bay of Naples that was buried hundreds of years ago and its luxury loving inhabitants destroyed by an eruption of the volcano Vesuvius. We enter the city by the gate of Stabia and pass by the ruins of mansions of ancient glory and on to the ruins of the arena. On a wall as we pass we see the posters of a politician and a contractor's notice, and we walk through what remains of the residence of one of the wealtiest citizens of Pompeii and contemplate the evidences of the luxury which characterized that period.

"Zurich, Switzerland" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Scenes in and about Zurich, Switzerland, appear in "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 27." Here we see the business section of the city, noting the fine shops which are to be found there. We learn also that the city is noted for its picturesque Gothic architecture, and that the newer part of the city stretches up the slope of the Zurichberg. We learn that it is built upon both banks of the river Limmat, where it issues from Lake Zurich. The water life of Zurich is notable, and several attractive views of the rizer and lake with boats of all sorts flitting about are also shown.

Mourom, Russia" (Mutual-Gaumont).

Views of the ancient Russian village of Mourom, built in the time of Ivan the Terrible, are exhibited in "Mutual Tours Around the World No. 27." The village, we learn, is on the Oka river, we are given glimpses of the streets and of its market. We are also interested in the sleds and different types of vehicles in the streets and the ruins of an ancient church which is shown. The building of a new railroad bridge is also included in these scenes which are typical of the Russia that was.

New Series at Rialto

"Sailors of France" Embodies Inspiring Series of Naval Pictures Presented Through the Courtesy of the French Commission. Pathe-Combitone Number Also Included in Program.

THE new series of educational pictures which are now being shown at the Rialto theater have been photographed by the cinematograph department of the French Army, and are being exhibited through the courtesy of the French Commission.

The first instalment of these pictures shows us the French fleet entering the Adriatic, the battleship "Mirabeau" on high seas, and various other views of the fleet of one of the warring nations for which America has exhibited much warmth of sentiment. The series bids fair to be of great interest, and as presented under the management of S. L. Rothapfel, gains much by way of effect.

This same program, shown the week of May 6, also included an excellent sample of the Pathe-Combitone series entitled "Along the Apache Trail." A verse from "Navajo Nights," introducing this picture, which, by the way, was given an effective musical setting, describes its character well. This verse inserted in the printed program is as follows:

"Past painted buttes and mesas bare,
Where the rattler lurks in his rocky lair,
Through the twisting canyon's shadowy deeps,
Where the shimmering sunlight never creeps,
Over the blistering cactus plain,
Ever untouched by the cooling rain,
There leads the old Apache Trail, the Land Where the Sun Goes Down."

"Out in the Rain"

Third of the Motoy Comedies Destined to Please Even the Adult Portion of Audience.

WHILE one may have to get used to the style of the Motoy comedies which are being made by the Peter Pan Film Corporation, of 729 7th Ave., New York City, we have discovered that the getting used to them means learning to look with eagerness for them. When you get thoroughly acquainted with little Jimmy, the comedy doll of them all, you will learn to adore him with the same sort of adoration which Charlie Chaplin has at last succeeded in inspiring in many people still ashamed to admit such a thing. While "Jimmy" is quite different in style from "Charlie," and is only a mere doll, he is imbued with remarkable magnetism; and in spite of ourselves we love the little fellow with his silken hair, big dark eyes and chubby little body.

In the third number of the "Motoys" entitled "Out in the Rain," we see Jimmy and a party going on a joy ride in which a defective brake is the cause of a disastrous ending. Left stranded they look about for something to amuse them, and while the other dolls play at "teeter totter," Jimmy noses into a dog kennel, where his reception is not the warmest. In a mischievous mood he turns the hose on the dogs, and when an electric storm blows up the dogs, driven from their home, the dolls find shelter in the kennel.

Special mention should be made of the effective manner in which this number has been produced The electric storm is realistic, and the same may be said of the entire production. In view of the fact that all the performers are dolls and toy animals, it is really a remarkable piece of work. It takes six weeks to make one of these little comedies which take but six minutes to run.

Pictograph Aids Patriotism

"The Awakening of America," Title of Cartoon Section of Recent Paramount-Bray Release.

THE USEFUL character of the cartoon section of the 68th number of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph makes it worthy of special mention. This cartoon is entitled "The Awakening of America" and opens with a scene showing America at work. Farmers are seen plowing and reaping; great factories are busy and freight trains and vessels are seen hurrying on peaceful errands. Suddenly the call to arms is heard, and is followed by intensive activity and excitement; the implements of peace are dropped and in their place appear the implements of war. Great armies are seen mobilizing everywhere, and America is seen bristling with bayonets and cannon ready for any foe, and over all waves the starry emblem that spells "My Country first in Peace or War."

This cartoon is an inspiration and will no doubt add much to the popularity of this particular number of the Pictograph.

Better Films Movement Grows

Interesting Information From All Parts of the Country Points Toward a Brighter Outlook.

IN THE month of April alone ten organizations were added to the list of Affiliated Committees for Better Films associated with the National Committee for Better Films. This includes one state organization of Mothers' Congress and Parent Teachers' Association, all of which points to a brighter outlook and is significant of a firm foundation.

The following reports received by the National Committee from different Affiliated Committees should be of interest to readers:

Mrs. John Malick, Chairman of the Civic Committee of the Utah State Federation of Women's Clubs, reports that they have sent out a circular in which they urge co-operation with exhibitors and suggest that every town which maintains a picture house should have a children's matinee or an evening for the family group.

Out in Omaha Mrs. W. S. Knight reports that the motion picture committee of which she is chairman has made a most profitable study of motion pictures this winter. After getting the program for the Saturday mornings for the young people well under way they prepared a questionaire for use in the examination of theaters and spent several weeks visiting the motion picture houses. "This part of the work," she reports, "has been the means of bringing us into very pleasant co-operation with the managers of the theaters and we have learned many things from them and gotten an insight into their problems. They have always been most generous and willing to do everything that we wanted for our programs and more. In many frank talks with them about pictures in general we have found their ideals as high as our own and without making any effort to change the kind of pictures shown the tendency is towards better things all the time."

From Jefferson City, Mo., Sara Elizabeth Edwards has reported the great success of their juvenile programs. The first one was held April 14. The house was packed with young people, 600 of whom held season tickets for a series of twelve such matinees. The mayor of the town, the superintendent of schools, clergymen and the master of the Boy Scouts addressed the 1,000 children. There are about 200 Boy Scouts in Jefferson City. A certain number are assigned every Saturday to assist at the matinee. The financial success of the whole series of matinees was guaranteed by the sale of the season tickets in advance.

In Buffalo the Motion Picture Committee of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, which is one of the Affiliated Committees for Better Films, reports that a Boy Scout Day was held on Saturday, May 5, and that other special performances are being arranged for.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Swat the Fly.

COMMENCING right now, begin pour "Swat the Fly" crusade if you have not already done so. Full details are given in "Picture Theater Advertising," but for the benefit of those who have not that handbook, these suggestions are offered. Form a swat the fly club. If possible work in with the editor of the leading local paper. Require that all flies be brought to the theater at times other than showing hours. Count the flies by weight. Offer small prizes weekly for the best weekly catch, a larger monthly prize and a grand season prize for the largest total catch. It has been suggested that the flies be kept in a case in the lobby as an attraction, but the very newest fad is to burn the flies immediately to kill all the germs with which they are loaded.

The local papers will be glad to work with you, and so will local merchants, school teachers are welfare associations. Pathé and Selig probably still have the one-reel subjects made for this crusade some years ago, and you can get a lot of material by writing to your congressman or to the Superintendent of Public Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington. The Merchants' Association of New York City has compiled a four-page circular from Government sources which it is distributing free. If you desire to print a similar bulletin you can probably arrange with them to obtain electros. The front page reads:

As a practise Measure of Preparedness, the Disease-Carrying House Fly must be eliminated. American Military records show that it causes more deaths than the enemy.

Inside this copy is carried:

Kill Flies and Save Lives.

Kill at once every fly you can find and burn his body.

Observers say that there are many reasons to believe there will be more flies this season than for a number of years.

The killing of just one fly NOW means there will be billions and trillions less next summer.

Clean up your own premises; see and insist that your neighbors do likewise.

Especially clean "out-of-the-way-places," and every nook and cranny.

Flies will not go where there is nothing to eat, and their principal diet is too filthy to mention.

The Fly Is the Tie That Binds the Unhealthy to the Healthy!

The fly has no equal as a germ "carrier"; millions of germs have been found in and on the body of a single fly.

It is definitely known that the fly is the "carrier" of the germs of typhoid fever; it is widely believed that it is also the "carrier" of other diseases, including possibly infantile paralysis.

Do not wait until the insects begin to pester; anticipate the annoyance.

April, May and June are the best months to conduct an anti-fly campaign.

The farming and suburban districts provide ideal breeding places, and the new born flies do not remain at their birth place but migrate, using railroads and other means of transportation, to towns and cities.

Kill flies and save lives.

RECIPES FOR KILLING FLIES.

The United States Government makes the following suggestions for the destruction of house flies: Formaldehyde and sodium salicylate are the two best fly poisons. Both are superior to arsenic. They have their advantages for household use. They are not a poison to children; they are convenient to handle, their dilutions are simple and they attract the flies.

A formaldehyde solution of approximately the correct strength may be made by adding 3 teaspoonfuls of the concentrated formaldehyde solution, commercially known as formalin, to a pint of water. Similarly the proper concentration of sodium salicylate may be obtained by dissolving 3 teaspoonfuls of pure chemical (a powder) to a pint of water.

A container for the solution that has been found especially convenient for automatically keeping the solution always available for flies to drink consists of a common tumbler, a plate and a piece of white blotting paper. An ordinary thin walled drinking glass is filled or partly filled with the solution. The blotting paper and plate are placed over the top of the glass and the whole is inverted. Only enough of the fluid escapes from the glass to wet the bottom of the plate and as this is died out by evaporation the water seal is broken and more of the fluid is permitted to flow into the plate. A match is placed under one edge of the glass to ensure a proner depth of fluid.

Other Simple Preventives.

Any odor pleasing to man is offensive to the fly and vice versa, and will drive them away.

Take five cents' worth of oil of lavender, mix it with same quantity of water, put it in a common glass atomizer and spray it around the rooms where flies are. In the dining-room spray it lavishly, even on the table linen. The odor is very disagreeable to flies, but refreshing to most people.

Geranium, mignonette, heliotrope and white clover are offensive to flies. They especially dislike the odor of honey-suckle and hop blossoms.

According to a French scientist flies have intense hatred for the color blue. Rooms decorated in blue will help to keep out the flies.

Mix together one tablespoonful of cream, one of ground black pepper and one of brown sugar. This mixture is poisonous to flies. Put in a saucer, darken the room, except one window, and in that set the saucer.

To clear the house of flies, burn pyrethrum powder. This stupefies the flies, but they must be SWEPT UP and BURNED.

Recipes for Stables, Barns and Out-of-Doors.

Borax is especially valuable around farms and out-of-doors. One pound of borax to twelve bushels of manure will be found desirable as a poison without injuring its manurial qualities or farm stock. Scatter the borax over the manure and sprinkle with water.

Lye, chloride of lime, or copperas (sulphate of iron) dissolved in water, crude carbolic acid, or any kind of disinfectant may be used in valuts.

One point not covered by the circular is that young flies are not attracted by decaying matter or unpleasant odors, and it is the young flies which lay the eggs.

The menace of the fly is yearly attracting more and more attention. Get in with the crowd on the interest excited and make it work for you. Make your house the center of the fly campaign. Throw it open mornings for a lecture on fly hunting and run off a comedy to attract the crowd. You can get a commercial for a dollar and regard that as your contribution. Start right in. Make a fly caught in June worth ten killed in July and twenty-five in August. This will give you big scores quickly and at the same time you will be infinitely under the proper estimate as to relative values.

A Return Date.

Mrs. A. R. Woodruff, of the Colonial, Camden, N. J., sends in a program and writes:

Nearly a year ago we sent a program for your criticism. You very kindly gave us some hints and we profited thereby. We are sending one now, and again ask your opinion. We have never sold any space to local merchants, because we found so much to talk about each week that we had no space to spare.

This is a six by nine, four pages, We recall that the initial issues were in blue on buff paper, an effort to get the colonial buff and blue, but the current issue is white stock of a fair graue printed in black.

Hear the New Colonial Organ at every performance.

A superb and impressive presentation of Victor Hugo's powerful story "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," with Theda Bara in the most dramatic and telling work of her distinguished career.

A charming story of the power of innocence, told in terms of children, with little Mary Swanson doing exceptional work in a dual role.

A picture in which Mae Marsh's alluring charm, her cleverness and humorousness are expressed in her first comedy to play the part of a boy.

A masterpiece that holds a place on the roll of honor

A world commanding story that has as its theme one of the greatest facts in human life—the power of mind over mind for good or evil. A famous photoplay that was a famous stage play written by Augustus Thomas.

Parents are guaranteed a most enjoyable hour when we thus patronize. It is a great treat for us to know, with a genuine grip and sweeping thrill with the turn of a story we're told. Highly dramatic, with telling moments, and powerfully constructed. It portrays the career of a man seduced with a mad rapture of creating wasted worthless show boat. It may not interest you, but it does getting to a small town in a play that centers on influence, the slaughter of a super schools by base power and has the will power of good feel of adventure and fearlessness on each returning. It has what every movie play must have—a splendid theme and a measure of presentation that is entertaining, forceful, natural and impressive.

A special and optimistic story that has a charm for children and grown-up alike. Produced with a delightful atmosphere of fairy and to furnish very many tense and emotional scenes.

This is a story of a "domestic failure triple" with one of the funniest and most attractive stars of the stage and screen as the wife-star. It is a merry harmonizing tale of a psychotic girl, who finds and cured her impressionable personality of wealth and royal splendor, never dreaming that the good humor would make her dreams come true. It is a novel plot, presented and worked out in a novel way.

ADDED ATTRACTION—Current and Dame Comedy.

The printer gets a very poor impression on his job and he makes a very rotten job of closing up his corners on the boxes, as the cut will show. If there is any one thing that looks make-shift, even to the untrained eye, it is a poor job of mortising, and this is a particularly bad job in this respect. He should be very severely scolded, not only for this, but for the gray effect he gets on all four pages. The front page is the same colonial lady who was on the job a year ago, and she doesn't look a day older. The back page is house talk and of the right sort. One good line is:

> The average family cannot live cheaply in these days of soaring prices, but it must find entertainment at reasonable prices, else it must forego entertainment.

This is a line of universal appeal. With living expenses risen all out of proportion to the slight increase in incomes, the picture theater alone makes it possible for the average family to find entertainment within its means. Inside the layout is excellent; the opening paragraph in italic with body type following, and the added attraction in bold face. In the margin the date, star and attraction are picked up at a glance. Apart from the lock-up and printing, the program cannot be greatly improved. But we are not in agreement on the question of foreign advertising. There is no reason why the outside advertiser should be let in, but on the other hand, there is no very good reason why he should be kept out, and an eight-page program with three pages of advertising and an additional page of house talk could be made self-supporting instead of a source of expense. Mrs. Woodruff's inherent good taste would enable her to keep the foreign stuff from becoming too intrusive.

A Half and a Six.

G. Murdoch, of the Variety, Victoria, B. C., sends in a half-page and some six-page folders and writes:

> I am sending you herewith a copy of a half-page advertisement which we used on "THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN," also a copy of the third edition of our weekly bulletin, "REEL NEWS."
> I am a great believer in the value of advertising, which naturally has to be "put over" in the right manner in order to get the business.
> Our local newspapers go to great lengths in order to give us a good "lay-out," although it is only recently that they took notice of the fact that the photoplay houses were an asset of the city, just as much as any other business institution. However, I suppose they are now endeavoring to make up for lost time. I have been working in conjunction with the editors in an endeavor to get them to increase their service for the local houses, and so far have had favorable results.
> Your advertising department in the World is certainly a great help to exhibitors, and if everyone would study it up thoroughly every week it would improve matters for all concerned.

The half-page is shown in reproduction. It is not badly done, but with a few changes we think the result could have been made even better. In the first place the copy in the shield is not important. It may be the sweetest story ever told, but the line is hackneyed because it has been used so often in other connections, and the statement carries no weight, though a surprisingly large number of Exhibitors have picked this up from the company press work. In no case is the statement worth the prominence given it. The prices, too, are not so important as they are made to appear. Get them interested in the appearance of Miss Pickford. If they are in any way interested, let them find the prices in a small box in the lower left-hand corner. This will give the compositor a chance to lengthen the title box and let it run almost as long as Miss Pickford's name, and this will also permit the use of an extended type instead of a condensed face. It will be easier to read and will stand out better. The musical program can go in a box on the right of the house title, to balance the prices of admission on the other side. Another good make-up would be to leave the title as it stands, run both prices and orchestra announcement where the prices now are and run a few lines of description where the two panels now are, using a clear twelve-point type. The three programs are six-page railroads. The make-up is different from the ordinary. The program is on one page, and that page the one usually given to the underline. In the reproduction it will be seen that a page of jokes is given the second best page. Inside the first page is house talk and the second and third gossip of the plays and players. The sheet is folded so that the joke page is first seen when the front page is lifted. The house runs but two changes a week and sometimes uses only one subject for the full week, so that the entire program is easily contained on the single page. This being the case, the best make-up would give the program the page here given over to clipped jokes, but which in other issues is given to a portrait of the star. The program will then show as the front page is lifted and with the underline or portrait cut, as preferred, on the back page, the announcement will all be carried on the same side of the sheet and all the chat on the other side. The hardest working page is the editorial, with some sound, strong house talk. That, in the long run, will do the house more good than even the announcement of the titles.

All Alike.

The reproduction given here is the motion picture directory of the Chicago Tribune, and it is a study in make-up. The department runs across six columns and drops twelve inches without the heading. It is a curious study in sameness. Of course not much can be done with but an inch or two of space, but something can be done. This is a directory rather than an advertising page, and probably display is discouraged, but there are a lot of little tricks that can be brought into play. In the first column the Colonial advertisement gets seven inches, yet it does not stand out on the page much above the others. It has the same linear rule work the Studebaker, in the next column, employs and which is used for display in many other advertisements. The title is one of the three to stand out on the page, the other two being "Enlighten Thy Daughter" and "Broadway Jones." The "Libertine," just below, does not get the proper display, and only the name of the player stands up. The three lines below "The Libertine" could better have been set in six-point (in which case they could have been condensed to two), giving some white space in which to display the title, which also would have gained through lack of strong competition immediately below. Both these ads and the ones in the second column must get their effect from type, since there is no chance for an attractor as they are set. This being the case, the big lines should be given all possible chance and made to stand out. Compare the Castle with the Studebaker. Note how, in the latter, the name of the star and the title of the picture do not have to fight black masses of type. In effect at your first glance you get "George M. Cohan," "Broadway Jones," "Now playing" and "Studebaker," which tells the entire story. The rest is merely an elaboration of the announcement. The Castle takes three lines to tell that this is the first showing of the picture in Chicago direct from the Playhouse. This line is too unimportant to be played up. No one cares particularly that it is direct from the Playhouse. Play up star and title in a way that will show quickest. Coming to the smaller advertisements, there are few that stand out. Too many trust to linear rule to get the eye, and when all are trying to do the same thing then no one succeeds. Take that Bryn Mawr advertisement, for example. There is a six-point rule each side. If that same copy had been set in smaller sizes with a twelve-point border of white around it, the same display could have been gained and it would have stood out on the page, practically alone—until the others tried the same scheme. The rule is useless as an attracter where so much of the same rule is used elsewhere. The Hamlin, over in the fourth column, makes a better effort at getting out of the rut, but the lines are too closely set together to show up well. It would be better to give the address in the lower part of the scroll, now devoted to "In a class by itself," which means absolutely nothing at all, and then with this address line out of the panel the other three lines could be properly displayed. Here the spacing of Hart's name with letter spaces or even one-point spaces would have helped display the short line. The compositor will not take the trouble to do it unless he is told, for it means hand work against machine, and it is nothing in his young life if the ad does not pull. He must be told and then watched to see that he does it. Better still is the plan of the Kimbark, toward the bottom of the fifth column. Here Hart is given all the display on the safe proposition that the star means more than the title in this case. Compare that with the Gold at the bottom of the fourth column. If you were merely looking for a show, which would catch your eye first? There is not a really well-set advertisement in the entire lot. The paper is not to blame. It is up to the advertiser to supply his own tricks. If he can afford only an inch it is all the greater reason for trying to make every line work. Do you notice how the paper's own space is made to work? It is the one advertisement in the section that stands out, even if it is not good.

Invitations.

The Unique, St. Johns, N. B., used an invitation to launch the Patria serial and, although it was a type-printed card, the effect was almost that of engraving. The greater novelty is the envelope which is reproduced here along with the invitation. This is merely two-point rule, cut on a mitre machine where the white spaces were to be let in, but it looks like a special effect and probably not a single invitation went unopened. Since the envelopes had to be printed up anyhow, the additional cost of cutting the rule could not have been very great, yet this extra work represents the difference between seventy and one hundred per cent. effectiveness.

Resting Up.

C. A. Fisher, of the Censor, Albion, Mich., has sold his house to George A. Bohm, who has also a smaller house in the town, and is resting up. They explain that our Censor programs were cut out because Mr. Bohm uses no house organ. We are going to miss the Fishers, but hope soon to hear that they have started in again.

Screen Announcements.

Take a little trouble to get your screen announcements right. A Philadelphia photoplay writer sends in a verbatim copy of a slide used in a house there. It runs:

In Interest of Public Health

A reward will be paid for the report of any person you see spitting throwing, chewing gum, peanut shells orange skin, on this floor, report such person to Manager. By order of the Board of Health.

It would not require a very advanced school child to correct the expression and punctuation of this announcement, and yet it is run every performance, advertising the ignorance of the management. If you are not certain of your ability to express yourself intelligently, submit your copy to someone who can correct it. And even if you are certain it will pay to have the stuff copy read by another.

Ready Prints.

If you use a ready-print program with general advertising, scrutinize the advertising carefully. A number of houses in the New York district are using a ready-print program the back page of which is regularly occupied by an advertisement for girls to go into pictures. It is vaguely worded to get past the Post Office ruling, but the unspeakable thief who runs the swindle makes his money by persuading stage-struck girls to pose for test pieces (at about a dollar a foot) "to show the directors" when they apply for a job. No director ever asks for test pieces and the swindler knows it, but he keeps on advertising and even got a front page picture and a writeup lately. What he deserves is a jail sentence, but what the Exhibitor needs to remember is that if his patrons get swindled he will be held responsible by the victim and her friends and her friend's friends.

Extra Condensed.

For much information in a small space, the Majestic, Mansfield, O., seems to be much in the running. It's V. P. four-pager is 4 by 4¼ inches for the double type page, yet it gives a time table for each subject. It might make for an even ruling if "Shown at" were substituted for the double line "Time of showing." The back page carries the program for the Grand, under the same management. The days should be dated in both programs, and something should be said of the Saturday and Sunday attractions, but apart from these points the program is a model of compactness and gives more in small space than most. One point we like is the liberal border of plain The type used runs from a small six to a small ten-point, and yet the proportions are so well displayed that the features are as prominent as on many programs for four times the area.

Uses a Folder.

Hunt's Theater, Wildwood, N. J., used a four pager all summer, but takes an eight page railroad for the winter, perhaps because you have to pull harder to root the inhabitants away from their warm fireside on cold nights. Wildwood is a summer resort and it drops in population after the winds blow cold. But the program is well planned to get them out. It runs a page to a day, dates days, and is well set and well printed. The front carries this excellent talk:

You Need Hunt's—Hunt's Needs You.

After you've looked over the program of next week's shows, just think a minute of what Hunt's means to you. Have you ever considered how different the old town would be without its Hunt's to turn to when the whole world seems blue, when you feel everything is wrong and you don't care whether school keeps or not. Two hours at Hunt's and, well life looks different. You've given your brain a rest. You've been with the bunch, rubbed elbows with your neighbor, your heart has been touched by some pathetic appeal in the pictures, you've laughed a bit and you've seen nature's beauty spots; you're different and you're glad.

That is the right idea. Make your house a local institution and a local necessity. Even if yours is a community house with opposition you can still strive to make your patrons believe that your house is the only one. Run it the right way, with good programs and in time it probably will be.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. uestions should be stated clearly and should be typewrittne or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

The Thankless.

EVIDENTLY the boobs are not all dead yet. Two recent stories have come in that are good enough to pass on. One woman, a southerner, writes:

> The Boob stated that she wanted to write "movies" and understood that I had been successful along those lines. I asked her to be seated. She took out a ROLL of paper, and read me some ten or twelve verses of poetry (?) when I stopped her. The reading was to show me that she was already a writer and therefore could write photoplays. I explained to her that the two had no connection. The recovered from the surprise but was not convinced. I gave her what information I thought she MIGHT absorb in regard to the writing of photoplays and she hurried away, greatly to my joy, to begin at once. A few days later she was back with some stuff I explained was not a photoplay, and she asked to see one of mine. As I happened to have a bunch of returns near I picked one I thought an extra good one and gave it to her saying "Here's one that has been the rounds eight times." She read it weeping and laughing where I meant to produce those results. When she finished she said, "Do you mean to say a play like THIS has been refused?" I nodded. "Well if this has not sold I cannot write photoplays!" I thought she was more sensible than I had given her credit, but—"I must write something for I need the money!" I gave her my "1001 Places to sell" and she made notes of several addresses, and rising said she would try ARTICLE writing as she felt sue could do that successfully. Several weeks passed and I hoped she had landed SOMEWHERE, but she showed up full of enthusiasm. She read in some book, that when companies held contributions over two weeks, it was practically a sale. She had sent an article to The Youth's Companion and it had been THREE WEEKS, did I think they would take it? I asked her what was the nature of the article and imagine my surprise, "HOW TO MAKE LACE." When I recovered, I explained that the article was hardly suitable for a boys' magazine. Then as she did not seem inclinde to leave, I asked if she was an expert in the art of face making and I haven't fully recovered from THAT answer yet. "No, I do not know anything about it, I COPIED THE ARTICLE FROM NEEDLE WORK MAGAZINE!" Now she is one of those who are filling the mails with rot or stolen stuff.

And a California correspondent writes:

> I had another lady who wanted to write comedies; I met her at the College woman's club and told her a few things, in answer to her questions; then I told her to get some of the numbers of the Moving Picture World and read your department; especially the paragraphs about the synopsis, etc.; the next time I saw her, she said she had told her husband about me, and he said "Why don't you get acquainted with her?" I thought she was doing pretty well as it was, in two metings; I hardly expect to pour out my soul on the neck of every lady I meet. She also said she couldn't find the numbers I told her to get; so I said I would cut out the pages of my copy and send her to read and she could return them; I did better than I promised, for I took the time to hunt out the numbers with the Kellette sold synopsis, and sent them; as I was pretty busy, I didn't take time to write an intimate letter, but simply wrote my name and address on the top margin, put the bunch in a big envelope and mailed it. Well, in about a week, I got it back all right, but the lady who wanted to get acquainted with me, had not taken the time or wasted any of her note paper in writing her thanks, but had simply lead pencilled on the margin of my property, "Many thanks, Mrs. ————." You can guess how intimate her acquaintance with me will grow to be, can't you? They certainly are the limit, but one hardly likes to turn them down instanter; there may be some hope.

These are the people who want to buy their experience ready made and all done up in a package tied with a pink string. They would never dream of going to a business college and demanding free instruction in typewriting and book keeping, nor would they ask their dressmaker to teach them how to make their own gowns, but they have not the slightest hesitation in wasting the time of competent writers who are perfect strangers to them, and then abusing their courtesy as often as not.

And yet there is always the off chance that there may be something in the boobs that is worth bringing out. That is the most difficult part of handling such matters. You cannot tell definitely that the time will be wasted. Eighteen years ago we used regularly to run out of our office a hanger on press agent who was in the habit of wasting our time and more than once we threw him out bodily. He seemed to be hopelessly the boob, and yet he had hits in three Broadway theaters the past season. It took him a dozen years to find success and longer to attain affluence, but he had it in him and he had the persistence to bring it out. But on the other hand, he did not pester other writers and dramatists for tips. He was a nuisance in other ways.

It is never possible to say that a man or woman cannot write, provided they know how to spell and use reasonably good grammar. Some authors develop so slowly that they seem to be hopeless cases, and yet they will suddenly round into form and be all the better for their slow development, just as the brilliant writer with nothing behind him may come rapidly to the front and even more speedily disappear. But the writer who is destined to succeed is never the boob, and the boob will betray himself in time, though meanwhile he may get more attention than he deserves.

Pollard Wants Plays.

J. Edward Hungerford, editor for Pollard Picture Plays, writes that they are in the market for plays for Margarite Fischer. He writes:

> We want high class comedy-dramas on the order of "Miss Jackie of the Navy," "The Pearl of Paradise," etc. We want detailed synopsis, giving all the incidents in the story as well as the main plot and theme. We prefer the work of experienced writers, but this does not preclude the amateur, if he has anything worthy to offer. Unless a play is exceptionally good, however, it will be futile to submit it to us.

The letter head states that the company is a trust estate and that all persons having dealings with the company must look solely to the estate for claims.

The Difference.

Lately an author complained that he could not think of a railroad idea for Kalem, though he wanted to try that market, and another wrote that he had been unsuccessful with two. Then along comes Edward Matlack in the course of a letter to remark that he wrote twenty Hazards of Helen in March. He wrote most of these one and two reel stories, and the more he wrote the more easy he found them though it is no easy matter to invent a new and stronger stunt week after week. One man could not think an idea, so he gave up. Another man writes twenty in a single month because he has trained himself to the task. It is only through constant practice that one keeps in writing trim. You cannot write a story today and another next month or the month after. You must keep in trim if you would plot with facility.

Return Trip.

Because a company, in returning a story, points out certain real or fancied changes to be made, it does not follow that if you make these changes the company will then accept the story. To the contrary, it is almost certain that a second submission will be followed by a second and less courteous rejection. If the company cared for the story, the changes would be made without referring the matter to the author. Other stories are taken and changed; indeed it is seldom that a story ever goes through as an author writes it. It follows, therefore, that if the company does not make the changes, it does not want the story and suggests the alerations in a well meant effort to make it easier for the author to sell the story elsewhere. It does not always happen that the suggestions are of real value, but where they are, they are offered not with the idea of taking the story when the changes have been made, but merely through good fellowship. As a matter of fact there are few in the editorial chairs at the moment whose advice is worth much. Lawrence McCloskey was about the last of the old line editors who really knew the buisness. The present day readers are narrow in their views and know only their own company's wants—and not always that.

Projection Department

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

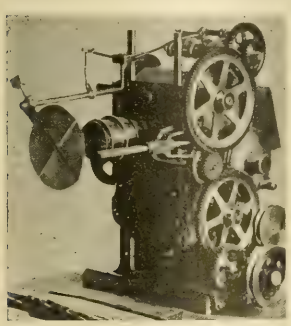
Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

A Cut-Off Shutter.

The attached photograph illustrates the mounting and action of a new invention known as the Boylan Shutter. This particular thing has not been actually tested by the department, but apparently its action is positive and it could not fail to work, provided that if there be a transparent tail-piece it must not exceed six inches in length.



The idea is that as the end of the film passes down through the machine, when it reaches a certain point the shutter will be released, drop, and thus automatically cut off the light from the screen.

The inventor has offered to send one of the devices to New York to be tested by the department, but just at the time when my departure from New York for a period of four months is drawing near, I cannot possibly undertake any tests.

I think operators can see from the photograph just how the thing works and form a pretty intelligent opinion as to its value to them. I would personally have to see it in practical operation under varying conditions in order to either approve or disapprove, and I would like to have reports from operators as soon as the device has had a general all round try out.

Has Helped Him.

Harry Hill, Lebanon, Ohio, orders a Handbook and says:

> I have the two other editions, and must say they have helped me out of the hole many times. And now, Mr. Richardson, I would like to tell you about a new incandescent projection lamp it was my pleasure to see in operation at the plant where it was made. Also had one tried out in my operating room. This lamp is about 7 inches long and about 1¼ inch in diameter. Three coils of filament supply the illumination. The voltage is 32. There is a reflector back of it which can be set any place desired, as there is a special lens for projection and a regular set for the stereopticon. It is known as the Delco Light outfit, and we tried it out on my Motiograph. After quite a little experimenting and adjusting we got it O. K., and ran a film. I am bound to say it was as clear a picture as anyone could ask for.

Yes, Brother Hill, the incandescent lamp proposition is being made the subject of extensive experiment. I went to Cleveland a short time ago, just for the purpose of looking over the incandescent lamp proposition, and was very much encouraged by what I saw, though I am still unprepared to say to what extent the incandescent lamp is going to displace the electric arc. I think, however, there is no doubt but that the future will see the incandescent dealing the arc lamp some pretty heavy body blows, at least so far as small town theaters be concerned. That is the way it looks to the man up a tall sycamore at this particular writing.

Camera Speed.

There seems, of late, to have been a decided tendency toward increasing camera speed. In fact some of the manufacturers apparently are using a standard which comes nearer to 80 feet of film per minute than 60. Any change in the speed of taking pictures is an extremely important matter, far reaching in its effect, because it necessarily involves a corresponding change of speed in projection. An increase in speed of projection, within reasonable limits, is good, in so far as concerns the elimination of flicker on the screen. From this viewpoint, taking local conditions as they come, and considering the increased tendency toward brilliancy of illumination of the screen, an increase in projection speed up to, say, 70 would serve an excellent purpose.

In considering a matter of this kind, however, we cannot base a decision upon one point alone where there are several involved.

Any increase in projection speed compels an instant increase in tension at the aperture plate, which has the minor effect of adding considerable to the strain under which the intermittent of the machine labors, and the major effect of setting up heavy additional strain on the delicate sprocket holes of the celluloid film. Now if the picture is going to be steady on the screen it is absolutely essential that these sprocket holes be mechanically absolutely accurate, down to even as infinitesimal measurement as one ten thousandth of an inch. The film is pulled down by the intermittent sprocket against a tension which must be sufficient to stop the film over the aperture and hold it there perfectly still while it is being projected. This strain is so great that the delicate edges of the celluloid sprocket holes actually grind away high grade steel, which has been made glass hard, in a comparatively short space of time. I mention this latter as showing the comparative enormous strain to which the sprocket holes are subjected, and this strain is instantly and hugely augmented when we increase the speed of projection.

Another point which should not be overlooked in this connection is that for very obvious reasons the securing of a rock steady picture is much more difficult at a speed of 80 than it is at 60. The higher the speed the greater the tendency to vibration.

Matters of this kind are very deceptive, because their significance is seldom realized. Neither the manufacturer nor the average operator realizes how many millions of dollars per year will be added to film wear by an increase of 20 feet per minute in the speed of projection, and granting the proposition that 60 is perhaps a little bit low, now that we have semi-reflective screens and very brilliant light, I believe 70 would be amply high to meet the requirements of flicker elimination under practically all conditions. I would therefore respectfully suggest to manufacturers that any increase in camera speed beyond that necessary to meet the practical requirements of flicker elimination can only be made at a huge additional yearly expense for film wear, which will necessarily be saddled upon the already overburdened industry.

I would also call the attention of manufacturers to the fact they are not altogether at liberty to select any camera speed which may happen to suit their own individual ideas, because the instant one manufacturer who is putting films out into general service increases his camera speed and thus forces an increase in the speed of projection, he automatically compels the increase in projector tension, not only upon his own films but upon the films of all other manufacturers, because the operator is, in practice, compelled to set his tension to meet the highest speed requirement, and use that tension on all the films he projects. It is not a practical thing to change the tension of a projector for different films of the program.

Waste.

What would you think of an operator who deliberately grounded his projection circuit in such a way as to waste a large percentage of the current he is presumed to use in securing light on the screen? You would either say he is a fool or a knave, would you not?—qualified by the possibility that you would use considerably stronger terms.

But this is precisely, in effect, what a great number of operators are doing. I can go into operating rooms in which I will find operators who sneer at projection departments, light ray experiments, Handbooks, etc., and find the "wire leading into the ground" with one eye shut. They are getting fairly good results, or even perhaps very good results on the screen, yes, and that much of it is to their credit, but it is by no manner of means to their credit that the result on the screen is costing their manager one-third or even one-half more than it ought to cost him. Pull open their lamphouse door and as a rule it will perhaps show the crater to be four to five inches from the condenser, or the condensers are spaced ⅜ to ½ inch apart, or their lamphouse is within 15 or 16 inches of the aperture, with the projection lens working at 5 or 6 inches back focus. Their revolving shutter may be jammed right up against the lens, whereas an experiment lasting not more than thirty seconds will prove that it ought to be 6 inches away, which means that their main shutter blade is too wide.

All these various things spell loss of light, and let me tell you that, for instance, if you can only trim off ⅛ inch from your main shutter blade by moving it to the proper position (and if it is improperly located you certainly can do that) it means that the ¼ inch add'd light occurs about one thousand times a minute—which is quite some considerable light going to waste after all, isn't it?

No one would presume to question the statement that the engineer in charge of a power plant should by all means understand the valve motion of his engine. In fact very few employers would dream of placing a man in charge of a power plant who did not thoroughly understand the valve motion of his engine. The theater manager, however, seemingly has no compunction about placing a man in charge of his projection machine who does not know any more about the optical system of a projector than a sparrow knows about the Scriptures. Personally, I have never been able to understand the mentality of a man who is willing to work day after day, week after week, month after month, and year after year with an instrument or an apparatus he does not understand without making any even half way adequate effort to understand it. Yet that, I am sorry to say, is precisely what altogether too many moving picture machine operators do, though I do thank fortune that the number of "by-guess" operators is decreasing every year, and make the prophecy that within a comparatively short time the operator who takes the position that knowledge means nothing in his young life will be just about as friendless as an alarm clock at 5 a. m. Right now, at this present moment, he is as much out of place in an operating room as a faro layout would be in a Sunday school, and his disappearance therefore is purely a question of how long it takes Mr. Theater Manager to come to an understanding of the fact that he is losing money every day he permits that kind of man to remain in his employ.

Progressive Operator.

W. A. Labarthe, Port Arthur, Texas, sends in answer to question 172 and says:

> I have been a reader of the department ever since its origination, and could not begin to tell the vast amount of benefit I have received through your years of hard labor and ceaseless toil, for it has been toil in every sense of the word, as any operator who can remember back to the time when you started this work ought to know. The honest operator who knows the conditions and the standing of the operator in those days, and who has followed the course of events, cannot but acknowledge that fully two-thirds of what has been accomplished toward placing the operator and the presentation of motion picture upon a higher scale has been brought about through your untiring efforts. I have the first and second editions of the Handbook; also a set of Hawkins' Electrical Guides. I firmly believe that any operator who has a reasonable amount of practical experience can, with the aid of the Handbook, a set of Hawkins' Guides, and some good, hard common sense, overcome any obstacle confronting him, and be able to put nigh class projection on the screen. I have several times been tempted to come in and get my feet wet in answering the questions, but have continually put it off. This speed question is, however, one in which I am very much interested, so here is my answer.
> As we have not enough men here in Port Arthur to justify you in coming over to give us a lecture, I intend to meet you personally in Galveston and attend your lecture there, which I am sure will be well worth the trip. In closing, I wish yourself and the projection department all possible success.

Well, Brother Labarthe, I cannot but appreciate the kindly spirit in which you write. For more than seven years I have held but one purpose in view and that purpose was the elevation of the profession of picture projecting, or "operating." There have been times when the task has been a discouraging one, due to the apparent lack of interest of a large percentage of the men themselves, but I have observed that in this vale of sorrow the man who is right usually wins out if he sticks to it, therefore I have stuck; also I believe I may fairly say I have won out. I shall be very glad indeed to meet you in Galveston. With the notation that there might possibly be a variation one day either way, though I think not, I will arrive in Galveston 8.35 a. m., Saturday, April 21st, via the International & Great Northern Railway, leaving 10.45 a. m. Sunday, April 22d, for Houston, where I will lecture Sunday evening, April 22d. The last time I was in Galveston they had a large percentage of that classic city jacked up about nine or ten feet in the air, and were industriously engaged in pumping in some tens of thousands tons of sand to fill in the aforesaid vacancy under the houses. That was, I think, about 1904 or 1905.

Your reply to question 172 will receive due consideration along with the others.

Good Equipment.

J. H. Andresen, Fort Dodge, Iowa, says:

> It has been some time since I butted into the department, but here I am again. I am now working with excellent equipment. Am operating at the Strand Theater, and the following is what I have to work with. It is the best money can buy. One 75 volt, 75 ampere Westinghouse generator; two American auto arcs; two Powers Six E machines, and a dissolving stereopticon. There is a four-inch pipe running from each machine (Lamphouse), I suppose you mean, Brother Andersen.—Ed.) to the outside of the building, and a sixteen-inch ventilating fan sucks the air out of the operating room. I have a 2x7 foot marble switchboard, covered by a glass cabinet. There is cork inlaid linoleum on the floor, and a steel washboard nine feet high around the walls. The walls are dark green in color. The room is 9x12 with an 8-foot ceiling. I have 6½-inch E. F. Gundlach special lenses, projecting a 14.43 foot picture at 104 feet, using 35 to 38 amperes. I use ⅝-inch National cored carbon on top with 7/16-inch Silver Tip below. As to the American Auto Arc, why one cannot say too much for that little device. It is small in size, but words are not large enough to express my favorable opinion. It works perfectly in every respect. So far as I know I have the only pair in the state of Iowa. I will have some photographs of this plant in a few weeks, and you may look for a copy of same.
> The owners of this "Palace of Dreams" have spared no expense in its equipment, and everything put into the operating room had to have my approval. Everyone else connected with this theater gets the same treatment. If men of this caliber had been in the picture business eight or ten years ago the industry would be far in advance of its present status.

Yes, Brother Andersen, that is true, but when we consider what has been accomplished in the brief span of life the moving picture industry has, up to date, enjoyed, I think we have no cause for complaint. In the beginning John the junkman, Bill the grocer, and Tom the butcher threw down their tools and went into the "moving picter" business, intent upon making their fortunes. Bill was a good groceryman, Tom may have been a good butcher, and John may have been a good junkman, but none of them were showmen. In order to make the aforesaid fortune, John, Bill and Tom had to pass through a form of evolution and become showmen. Some of them did, and some of them most emphatically did NOT, but with all this handicap we have advanced rapidly. Of course had John, Bill and Tom been showmen to start with, the industry would have made an even more phenomenal advance than it has. My compliments to your managers. May their tribe increase and multiply. They have certainly shown good judgment in providing you with first class equipment. See to it, my brother, that you show your appreciation by delivering high class results on their screen, as I am sure you will. You have proven your progressiveness by having at hand the technical works dealing with your profession, and studying the projection department. It is possible to be progressive without doing these things, but the fact that you do do them is proof positive that you are progressive.

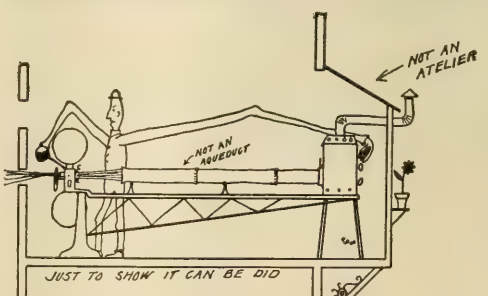
I will lecture in your city June 30, and hope to have the pleasure of examining the Strand operating room at that time.

Long-Armed Operator.

In dealing with the rectification of the divergence of the light beam on the projection lens side of the aperture, Brother R. W. Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., proposed a condensing lens which would do the trick by making the Y distance four feet.

Anticipating the objections which would meet this proposal, he sends in the accompanying drawing, just to show that it can be did.

The scheme might work out all right optically, but if it were adopted



we would either have to develop a race of operators with arms somewhat as shown, or Mr. Operator would be obliged to develop his sprinting qualities, it seems to me.

From San Francisco.

In a personal letter from a friend in San Francisco occurs the following:

> Of course I am writing this while at work, but you know this is the land of auto signals, arc controllers, big reels, etc., as we build them ourselves out here, and a fellow is not tied down to his machine, notwithstanding which fact there is a clear picture from 9 A. M. to 11.30 P. M. This is the rule; not the exception.
> I believe you will be cordially welcomed in the city of the Golden Gate, and that your lecture will be given much attention and consideration by our boys; also I am sure it will do us a world of good. I will stop now, as I know you are a busy man, but it is the busy people who do the world's work.

I will agree that with automatic signals, arc controllers, etc., it is possible to have a clear, steady picture, even though the operator be not anchored to the side of his machine watching the picture all the time. I, however, will not agree, nor do I believe I ever will agree, that the operator ought to be anywhere else under heaven except right square in front of the observation port while the machine is running. The man who writes this letter is a high-class operator. I know that to be a fact. He is a man of brains and ability, but the most he can claim for the assertion he makes is that there is less danger in leaving the machine now than there used to be, and that he can leave the machine with a practical assurance that there will be no change in the illumination of the screen.

I have, however, long since taken the position that the really fine part of projection consists in interpreting the action of the film by careful judgment and governing of the speed of projection. This I am sure no San Francisco operator will dispute, because San Francisco operators are distinctly high-class men. They are men who receive good salaries, and deliver good work in return therefor.

As to the lecture, why, I believe the San Francisco men will agree, after it is over, that it has, at the very least, been decidedly interesting; also I venture the assertion that, as in other cities where I have lectured, there will be a number of San Francisco operators making careful investigation of certain matters bright and early next morning.

I feel some degree of hesitation about lecturing in San Francisco, because of the fact that, while there have been times when I could cheerfully have spanked the whole works, still I know I will be facing perhaps as intelligent and high-class body of operators as I shall find in any of the almost eighty places in which I am to lecture while on the trip. I am, however, looking forward with genuine pleasure to renewing my acquaintances with Dolliver, Woods, Boyle, Smeltzer, Preddy and the other men I met while in 'Frisco three years ago. And so far as the lecture he concerned, I will be perfectly willing to leave the matter to your judgment after it is over.

Quite Classy.

In cleaning up my office preparatory to the coming trip, I found a program of the second Annual Grand Ball and Entertainment of Motion Picture Operators' Local Union No. 75, Peoria and Pekin, Ill., given on New Year's Eve 1914-1915. On one of the pages appears the following, which it seems to me is well worthy a reprint. I have made one change, viz.: "With bells and noise we welcome 1915," to "With bells and noise we welcome 1917."

When It's "Just a Moment" Time in Photoplay.
By David C. Adams, Operator Empress Theater.

When the theater is crowded, and the picture's on the screen,
And you gaze in admiration at the moving picture queen:
While the music's softly playing, then you let your fancies roam
Mid the scenes which form a story, bringing thoughts of folks at home.
When the light is clear as crystal, with projection bright and keen,
You forget the guy, with eagle eye, beyond the port, unseen.

When we get our reels of film, they're not always new and clean;
Some are full of "rain" and flicker, with bad patches in between.
When the show is nearly ended, if a "rainbow" looms up dim—
It's a sign we're using carbon stubs, and time we need a trim:
So, while we fight the flicker, if you're pleased with what you've seen,
Don't roast the guy, who hopes they'll buy an up-to-date machine.

When the picture's on the curtain and the audience, serene,
Have forgotten work and trouble in the most dramatic scene;
If there comes an interruption and the light is blotted out,
Then you blame the operator, while the facts you leave in doubt.
It may be a film that's breaking in the upper magazine,
But you knock the guy, who toils up high, and knows what troubles mean.

When the sparkling snow has painted white the fields and woods of green,
And with bells and noise we welcome Nineteen Hundred Seventeen,
It is time for resolutions, and the men who speed the cranks
Will resolve to throw a better show, and try to win your thanks;
But trouble comes at times and then, you critics of the screen,
With patience try to help the guy who runs the old machine.

Good Doctrine.

The following was written some years ago by D. C. Adams, then (and possibly now) of Peoria, Ill. It is well worthy of study by both union men and theater managers all over the country, because these lines of verse contain a world of truth:

Every day the world is proving that in union there is strength,
And since strength is the requirement sought by all,
It but follows that the moving picture boys would see at length
That a union stands where single factors fall.
Like all men, we seek a living, in return for skillful toil,
And believe the task which counts must be well done;
So our union teaches, giving earnest effort, staunch and loyal,
To secure the right results from pictures run.
Our employers have protection and are treated with respect;
They now get the best-grade work since shows began.
For we all must pass inspection and be able to project—
In return we justly ask the rights of man.
There is dignity in labor, but there is none at all in strife—
We're for peace, but on this point we do agree:
"A square deal demand, to give and get, in every act of life"—
That's the motto of our I. A. T. S. E.
"Like all men, we seek a living in return for skillful toil."

Good! But can every operator who reads that line look it square in the face without blushing? Don't all say yes at one and the same time.

"So our union teaches giving earnest effort, staunch and loyal,
To secure the right results from pictures run."

Well, now, brother, does your union, or doesn't it? Now kindly don't get excited, but just look that question straight in the eye and answer it.

"Our employers have protection."

Have they, brother, HAVE THEY? Do you require that your members give the very best that is in them, or do you allow them to put any old kind of projection on the screen they wish to and call it a picture? Mind you, I am not talking of faults in projection which are not the fault of the operator.

Just read those lines over fifteen or twenty times, my brother, and let them soak in. If they don't accuse you or your union of anything, no harm will be done. On the other hand, if they do it is up to YOU.

Care of the Motor Generator.

B. L. Johnson, Unionville, Mo., says:

> I expect very soon to take charge of projection in a large city theater where current for the arcs is taken through motor generators. I have had no previous experience with such machines, therefore feel just a little bit nervous about the matter. Now, Friend Richardson, don't tell me I should have studied up on such things long ago, for I now know and realize that fact. But I did not (possibly you, yourself, may have made mistakes in the course of your pretty active life), and now seek to remedy that error as best I may. Please tell me what points are of most importance; also what will be the result of improper care of the machine.

Well, Brother Johnson, that is a pretty large order. First and foremost, let me say that results of improper care may be merely a loss of efficiency, with consequent unnecessarily heavy current bills, or it may be that and much more serious things, according to what the improper care consists of.

To begin, you should write the manufacturer, asking what oil or grease he recommends, and full instructions as to the lubrication of the machine. Or if you have the third edition of the Handbook you can get pretty accurate information under the instructions covering whatever make of motor generator it is—you did not say what make it is. Good oil and careful attention to proper lubrication are of very great importance. Poor oil, or lack of knowledge as to how long an oil well should run without refilling, may, and probably will, do constant and insiduous damage, which will greatly lessen the life of the machine, or call for unnecessarily frequent repair bills. You should by all means have the theater manager purchase a good, stout hand bellows, of sufficient size to produce a strong air blast, and use same EVERY DAY to blow out all dust from around the commutator, brush holders and field magnets, especially between the armature and pole pieces. Many a burned-out armature has been traced to an accumulation of dust around the armature, field magnets and brush holders. The next thing of importance is the commutator and brushes. DON'T purchase or allow the manager to purchase cheap brushes merely because they ARE cheap. High-grade brushes cost a little more, but they are cheaper than loss of efficiency through the use of cheaper ones, or turning up commutators. It would be out of the question to treat of this phase of the matter fully in the department, as it would require too much space. I must, therefore, refer you to "Care of Commutator," pages 372 to 380, inclusive, of the third edition of the Handbook, of which I suppose you have a copy. If you have not, then I by all means advise you to get one AT ONCE; see advertisement at end of department.

And now, Brother Johnson, don't get caught this way again. DON'T wait until you are literally forced to learn something pertaining to your craft. Get busy and learn everything you possibly can learn about everything pertaining to your profession. Don't be satisfied to merely be able to "get by" in the matter of the motor generator. Keep right at it until you know everything there is to know about that machine, for the more you know the more efficient will be the service you can give in return for your salary.

Making Dupe Negatives.

MAKING dupe negatives is a business not to be encouraged, but it is so often that a dupe is wanted for perfectly legitimate purposes that a few words about some of the difficulties commonly encountered will not be amiss.

As generally practiced, making a dupe gives a hard, harsh result that may be instantly recognized by even the novice in the picture game.

The range of gradation in negative stock is much larger than that in positive stock, and it is because this is not thoroughly understood that the average dupe is so hard and contrasty.

Many maintain that the reason for the peculiar appearance of a dupe is that it was made on positive stock.

It is possible to make good dupes with either negative or positive stock, but the difference in their characteristics must be taken into account.

Negative stock is so much more sensitive than positive stock that to use it successfully for duping, both the printing and darkroom lights must be changed so that the stock will not be fogged or overprinted—on the other hand, where a dupe is required from tinted and toned films is almost essential that panchromatic negative stock be used.

Where the original negative is available for the purpose of making a dupe, the chances for success are greatly increased, as a print may be made which preserves all the possible gradations of the original negative.

Where the dupe can only be made from a print, all that can be done is to reproduce what gradations are in the print available for duping. The best print for dupe is therefore a soft one in which the texture is visible in the high lights and the detail in the shadows.

A harsh print seldom reproduces all the gradations of a negative from the shadows to the high lights, and while a softer dupe can be made from it, no amount of manipulation will put in details which are not in the print.

The secret of a good dupe is in printing deeply enough to get all the shadow detail and then to develop until the shadow detail is out, but to stop before the high light texture of the positive is buried. If you have used positive stock, which is to be recommended in all cases where it is possible, forget that it is positive stock and develop as if it were a negative. Too many are prone to regard it as a print because it is on positive stock and remove it from the bath before it has received enough development.

Where it is possible to make a print for making a dupe negative, and positive stock is used, print much deeper than usually and then develop it until all detail is out—this will give a print much too dark for projection purposes, but the increaaed quality of the resulting dupe negative is well worth sacrificing the stock. If it should be a considerable item, the print may be used after printing the dupe by reducing in Farmer's reducer.

In cutting dramatic negatives, it is often desirable to introduce dissolves and fade-outs that have not been made in the camera. A short strip of film from the two negatives to be dissolved are taken and held in the aperture of the printing machine, the perforations being cut away on each side so that the claws will engage only the positive stock. A print 3 feet long or of whatever length you wish the dissolve to be, is made, first marking the frame line on the positive. The printing light is gradually diminished from that required for a dense print to the minimum possible exposure, after which the other piece of negative is put in place and the positive rethreaded at the marked frame line; it is then printed, gradually increasing the printing light, until at the end of the dissolve the piece of negative is receiving a very full exposure. This piece is developed, fixed and dried and a dupe made of it which is cemented between the two scenes to be dissolved.

Positive stock is recommended for duping because it has a much finer grain than negative stock, and the use of negative stock not only increases the granularity, but generally increases the fog or veil. Negative stock is so sensitive that it is almost never free from a certain amount of fog, while positive stock works with a minimum amount of fog. Using negative stock makes an additiona. amount of unnecessary fog.

Close-up Inserts.

In taking closeups of small objects, such as visiting cards, etc., it often happens that the lens of the motion camera cannot be racked out far enough to give an image of the desired size.

A magnifier of not too short a focus may be slipped in front of the regular lens, making the focal length of the combination much shorter and permitting objects to be focused at a very short distance from the camera.

The front element of a kodak or still camera lens may be slipped over the barrel of the cine lens, using a bushing of paper or pieces of wood or cork to center it approximately.

Magnifiers used on cameras alter the number in the same way and to precisely the same extent as they alter the size of the image of a distant object. If this is halved, the f numbers will be halved also, and so on.

Positive or magnifying lenses shorten the focus of the lensse with which they are used; negative or reducing lenses lengthen it.

All combinations of camera lenses and magnifiers are makeshifts. They may serve, but not so well as a complete lens of the required focus would do.

Triangle Film Laboratories of Jacksonville.

Jacksonville, Florida, on account of its being the nearest point to New York where summer scenes may be made during the winter season, is gaining in popularity as a film-producing center.

The large number of visiting companies who wished to have negatives developed and sample prints made without the delay occasioned by sending them back to New York, led to the establishment of the Triangle Film Laboratories of Jacksonville by three fore-sighted young men located there.

The three young men are: J. Melvin Andrews, former cinematographer of the Eagle Company, later with the Vim; G. L. Coutant and W. H. Greene, still connected with the Amber Star as expert camera men and pioneers in film laboratory work in the South.

Their judgment is justified by the fact that the plant which they established is now turning away work that it is unable to do, being utilized to the full extent of its capacity for twenty-four hours each day.

Prizma pictures were exhibited before the National Academy of Sciences at their recent annual meeting. The exhibition was given in the auditorium of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C. One hundred and fifty of the greatest scientists in this country were in attendance. Among those present were: E. L. Nichols of Cornell, R. S. Woodward of Carnegie Institute, Earnest Brown of Yale, Ernest Fox Nichols of Yale, Henry Drew of Northwestern University, E. B. Wilson of Columbia, J. J. McCarthy of the New York Telephone Company, Gilbert Grosvenor, Editor National Geographic Magazine; David C. Fairchild of the Department of Agriculture, Edw. B. Frost of Yerkes Observatory, A. G Abott of Astra Physical Laboratories, Dr. Wm. Welsh of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, and many others.

A Hint to the Educational Cinematographer.

In order to give the spectator some idea of actual size or "scale," it is highly advisable to include something of known size in the picture—a coin, for instance. But often one gets a better idea from a small scale of inches, millimeters, etc. For this it is convenient to keep at hand a few pieces of white card of various lengths, on which a scale (of inches, etc.) is drawn. The three following will be found generally useful: (a) A foot, showing 12 inches. (b) A 3-inch strip, showing half and quarter inches. (c) A 1-inch piece, showing quarters, eighths, and dots for sixteenths.

In scenic pictures also where mountains and canyons are shown a solitary figure of an animal, man or a hut gives an idea of the relative immensity that can be conveyed in no other way.

Chas. Bass Purchases Camera Company.

Chas. Bass, manager of the motion picture department of the David Stern Company, informs the department that under the name of "The Bass Camera Company" he has purchased the business and good will of the old-established firm of Phil. G. Luber, 100 Dearborn street, Chicago, and will continue the business with a greatly increased line of photographic apparatus, new and second-hand.

Notwithstanding his new position, he will continue to promote the motion picture department of the David Stern Company, as heretofore.

COMPILED BY THE STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT

LIVINGSTON, Jack. Born in St. Albans, Vt. His father was Scotch-American descent and his mother of English birth. He is five feet, eleven and one-half inches tall and weighs 175 pounds. Dark brown hair and dark blue eyes. Mr. Livingston made his stage debut in 1917 and has divided his time about evenly between the stage and photoplay, for he remained on the stage for five years and about five years ago he decided that the pictures offered the wider scope, and he made his screen debut in a Kinemacolor, the title of which he does not remember. After that he had plenty of experience, for he has played with Selig, Alberqurque, Masterpiece, Universal and Morosco companies, but now he has settled down at Culver City as one of the Triangle family, playing leads, juveniles and heavies, as fate and the casting director dictate. Is fond of outdoor sports, but is not particular as to the nature of the diversion.

Jack Livingston

RAY, Carles E. Born in Jacksonville, Ill., in 1893. American parentage. Is half an inch over six feet and weighs 170. Medium complexion, dark brown hair and brown eyes. On the stage he devoted himself to musical comedy and spent four years with various well known companies, but about four years ago he joined the New York Motion Picture Co., and has remained under Thomas H. Ince ever since. He has not played with any other motion picture company. His debut was in the name part of The Favorite Son, under the direction of Francis Ford. Other parts he likes to remember have been the son in The Coward, the young lieutenant in The Deserter, the son in Honor Thy Name and juvenile leads in The Dividend, The Wolf Woman, The Weaker Sex and The Honorable Algy. He is fond of tennis, chess, riding, swimming and automobiling, but his strenuous work in his plays is exercise enough, as a rule.

Charles Ray

SPREIGHT, Nina. Born in Vienna, Austria. Austrian-Australian parentage. Is five feet, two inches tall and weighs just 100 pounds. Olive complexion, black hair and brown eyes. Miss Speight has posed for many well known artists because her pronounced type brought her into demand, and has had experience both upon the dramatic stage and in vaudeville. In motion pictures she has been connected with the Australian Life Biograph and the Frazer Films, and her present studio connection is with the Rolin-Pathe Company, in which she plays a line of ingenue parts, which is a far cry from her first picture, played in January, 1914, which was The Wreck of the Dunbar. For amusements she puts dancing first, but she is fond of all the outdoor sports that give her exercise and keep her in physical trim, but motoring and tennis are her preferences, though she likes any change from studio routine.

Nina Speight

HASTINGS, Carey. Born in New Orleans, La. American-German parentage. Is five feet, five inches tall and weighs 130 pounds. Dark complexion, brown hair. Miss Hastings is a capital player of eccentric roles, and though she prefers comedy, has made some of her most striking successes in drama. On the stage she played the character parts in Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Temple's Telegram, has played in stock in New York, Norfolk, Richmond and Atlanta and has toured with The Girl from Rector's, St. Elmo and other productions. It was in St. Elmo, playing the mother in the Thanhouser production, that she made her debut, and she has been one of the Thanhouser standbys ever since, for she fits in in any eccentric or character role and does not complain that parts do not appeal to her. She is especially fond of swimming and tennis, but is not particular in her amusements so long as they take her outdoors.

Carey Hastings

PRETTY, Arline. Born in Washington, D. C. Her father was English and her mother American. Height five feet, five and one-half inches and weighs 125 pounds. Fair complexion, light brown hair and dark gray eyes. Miss Pretty writes that this is her "really, honest-to-goodness own name," which goes to show that Shakespeare was not dead right when he asked what's in a name. This one, at least, fits. Miss Pretty, like most girls, wanted to go on the stage, but, unlike most of them, she did. Her stage debut was made with the Columbia Players, a Washington stock company, and she made so good that she remained with that organization for three seasons, but she was essentially a photographic type, and after playing with Vitagraph and for Universal as leading woman for King Baggot, she is now playing leads with Douglas Fairbanks. Played the lead in The Secret Kingdom.

"An Optimistic Outlook"

Samuel S. Hutchinson, President of the American Film Company, Talks Cheerfully of His Business and of the War Tax.

I MADE a pleasant call last week on Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, during which I was impressed by Mr. Hutchinson's optimism on the outlook. Even the war tax, which was discussed later on, failed to cast its shadow on the brighter side as Mr. Hutchinson dwelt cheerfully on what has already been accomplished by the American stars at Santa Barbara, and on the productions recently made, or which will be made in the near future.

Conversation centered on Gail Kane, Mary Miles Minter, William Russell and Juliette Day, the four stellar celebrities now working in the Santa Barbara studios. The last named is an important recent addition to the American ranks, strong in dramatic ingenue roles, vivacious and sprightly, and possessing an unaffected naturalness and the charm of innocence and youth. Her stage successes have been numerous, including important roles in "Everywoman," "Chin-Chin," "Twin Beds," "Yellow Jacket," etc.

S. S. Hutchinson.

Gail Kane is considered by Mr. Hutchinson one of the most talented young actresses before the camera. She is now engaged on "The Woman in Black," her fourth picture for the American. It is adapted from Julius G. Furthman's story of that name, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and the photoplay is being directed by Henry King, well known for his talent in bringing out the best in ingenue types. Mr. King was the director of the "Little Mary Sunshine" series, and his able work in these will be long remembered.

"Whose Wife," just released, was Miss Kane's first picture for the American. It will be followed by "The Serpent's Tooth" and "The Upper Crust, or The Indiscretions of Molly," in order. "The Serpent's Tooth" was written by Forest Halsey and directed by Rolin Sturgeon. "The Upper Crust" was written by Charles Sherman, author of the well-known stage success, "He Comes Up Smiling." This was also directed by Mr. Sturgeon.

Two more, one "The Unafraid," and another, the title of which is not yet announced, will follow the features mentioned, with Miss Kane as the lead.

Mary Miles Minter's "Environment" was released four weeks ago, and has been very successful. James Kirkwood directs all the photoplays in which the charming little Mary appears. "Periwinkle," from the book of that name, has just been completed. "Melissa of the Hills," by Miss Maibelle Heikes Justice, will follow. These stories are all strong in heart interest, and are specially suited to Miss Minter's peculiar talent and youthful charm.

The first American picture in which Miss Juliette Day will appear is "Betty and the Buccaneers," an original script written specially for her by J. Edward Hungerford. Three features in all will be produced, with Miss Day as the star, and the titles of the last two will be announced later, the stories to be written by well-known authors.

William Russell will take the lead in at least six features, which will comprise his second series bearing the American brand. The first, released a short time ago, was "My Fighting Gentleman," a romantic story of the South, by Nell Shipman. It was directed by Ed Sloman, who has charge of the production of all the Russell features. "High Play," the second, by Furthman, and the third, "The Frame-Up," by the same author, have also been released and are winning fine success. "The Shackles of Truth," another Furthman story and the fourth of the series, is now under way. Mr. Hutchinson considers this second Russell series even stronger than the first.

Speaking of this year's business, Mr. Hutchinson stated that it shows a material increase over that for the corresponding period of last year. He attributes this to the recognition by the trade of the success made by American features, which are growing in favor by leaps and bounds. Forty-eight features, or about the rate of one a week, are made yearly by the American Film Company.

In approaching the war tax on producers Mr. Hutchinson prefaced his remarks by saying that it was a subject for most serious consideration. "All manufacturers are ready and willing to meet the emergency," he said, "but the demands made on us and on exhibitors must not be confiscatory. It will be wise to control the demands so that the trade will be able to meet them, and still continue business at a reasonable profit on the money invested.

"The amount to be raised should be distributed over an extended period, and not levied at the outset so as to deprive us not only of profits, but to encroach seriously on our capital as well.

"I believe exhibitors are on the eve of a prosperity such as they have not hitherto experienced. The vast volume of money that will be placed in circulation in this country, from now on, will bring every exhibitor a share of that prosperity. The 10 per cent. admission tax is excessive, and I hope it will—as no doubt it will—be reduced, and still yield sufficient revenue for the needs of our Government."

Mr. Hutchinson will prolong his stay in Chicago till the end of June, when he will revisit Santa Barbara.

Grand Jury Gets Outrage Evidence.

State's Attorney Hoyne announced Thursday, May 17, that his inquiry into the activities of the members of rival moving picture operators' unions in the city had been completed, and that the evidence will be ready to be presented to the grand jury on Monday, May 21.

At least twenty labor officials will be charged with extortion, conspiracy and vandalism, which have grown out of the long sustained war between Local 157 and Local 110 of the Moving Picture Operators' Union.

Michael J. Boyle, formerly business agent of a local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and recently convicted of conspiracy, with other labor officials, in the Federal Court, and now under sentence in the House of Correction, is charged with being the directing head of the dynamite outrages committed against moving picture theaters for some time past. Nicholas E. Michels, assistant state's attorney, who makes the charges, states that, to ward off suspicion, Boyle set off a fake bomb in his own apartment building on April 21, the same night on which a bomb was exploded in the Chateau theater on the North Side.

Mr. Michels charges that Boyle, Raymond Cleary, James Gorman, Jack Miller and Fred Mader practically controlled the operations of the sluggers and dynamiters in the war against picture theaters. Evidence against them, as well as against twenty other men, will be presented to the grand jury next week.

Chicago Film Brevities.

D. W. Chamberlain, of Minneapolis, made a short stay in Chicago on his return trip from Washington, where he represented exhibitors of the Northwest on the proposed war tax bill. While here he was entertained at luncheon at the Sherman House by several Chicago exhibitors, and briefly outlined the bill as brought up in Congress. Mr. Chamberlain stopped at Milwaukee on his way home to address a meeting of exhibitors there on the war tax question.

F. M. Brockell, associate managing director of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions' office in Chicago, will become manager of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation's Chicago office on July 1, and Harry Weiss, former associate managing director with Mr. Brockell of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions' Chicago office, will assume sole charge. Both these distributing offices are under the general direction of Aaron J. Jones. Mr. Weiss left the city on May 14 for an extended automobile tour through the states of Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky, and will return in about three weeks.

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, informs this office that Jack Byrne recently took full charge of the scenario department and has become first assistant to N. J. Baumer, vice-president and studio manager. Mr. Byrne has had experience extending over six years, with the Biograph, Reliance, Majestic, Universal, Keystone, Lubin and Fox companies, and came on direct from the Fox company, Los Angeles, to Chicago. Before entering the moving picture field Mr. Byrne had fourteen years' experience on the dramatic stage, during which time he held engagements with Frederic Warde, the famous Shakespearean actor; Donald Robinson, and with numerous stock companies.

The Covent Garden theater, on North Clark street, near Diversey Boulevard, can well claim a proud position for the excellent music furnished as accompaniment to the moving pictures presented. Herman Hend's orchestra of twelve pieces furnishes the regular music under his talented leadership, and when occasion calls for it a magnificent organ is played by an accomplished organist. Lubliner & Trinz are the owners, and by their skillful selection of programs they succeed in filling the large house at every presentation. The seating capacity is 3,000. The prices are 10 cents for matinees and 15 cents evenings.

The buffet lunch and open meeting of the Reel Fellows Club, given in honor of the Universal Company, on Friday evening, May 11, was well attended. All the members of Universal's Chicago staff were present. At the meeting $31 was donated by the club to buy slides, which are being run in moving picture theaters in aid of the Red Cross. The club proposes to have a "Movie Week" at one of the amusement parks in this city, in the near future, during which a percentage of the gate receipts will be given over to the club.

The New American Theatrical Hospital at 850 Irving Park Boulevard, this city, the only institution of its kind in the world, was opened last week. This hospital affords a place where theatrical and moving picture people and others in the various branches of the amusement field will be cared for if they are sick and unable to pay. The hospital association has arranged a grand benefit in aid of the hospital at the Auditorium, Sunday afternoon, May 20. All the leading stars, both dramatic and vaudeville, in the city will take part in the program. This will make the fifth annual star benefit performance given in aid of the hospital. Prominent Chicagoans have always been ardent supporters of this hospital plan. Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago Local, is one of the founders of the hospital and has given both his time and money in its support.

Robert Goldstein's war picture, "The Spirit of '76," was under fire in the courts all last week. Mr. Goldstein sought to obtain an injunction in the Circuit Court, Judge Baldwin presiding, restraining the city from preventing the showing of the picture at Orchestra Hall. The petition was filed Tuesday, May 15, and the proceedings lasted until Thursday afternoons, May 17, when Judge Baldwin refused to grant the injunction on the ground that it was outside his jurisdiction. Mandamus proceedings were held concurrently before Judge David in the Superior Court; but at the time of writing a determination of the case had not been reached. It looks, however, as if Mr. Goldstein will not be permitted to show the picture here. The main objection to the presentation is that it would have a tendency to create a feeling against England, one of America's allies.

Colin Campbell, dean of Selig's directing corps, arrived in Chicago Wednesday, May 16, from Los Angeles. Mr. Campbell is about to begin work on a new Selig feature drama, "The City of Purple Dreams," and some of the scenes called for in the story are laid in Chicago. It is, therefore, planned to film the photodrama partly in Chicago and in part in Los Angeles. Mr. Campbell recently completed "Caleb Conover" in the Selig Zoo studio, in which George Fawcett, the celebrated photoplayer, is the star.

Wiliam H. Selig announces for the benefit of exhibitors that the Selig World Library, the new topical film released every Wednesday through General Film Service, is in nowise connected with any newspaper. Some exhibitors seem to have gained the impression that the new film is along the lines of news films, and that some daily publication is interested in it. The first issue of the World Library has won much popularity, and the second, which gives pictures of the Great Wall of China and its history, etc., promises to be a strong successor.

Theaters Not Affected by the War

So Declares McClure Pictures as a Result of Nation-Wide Canvas of Big Newspapers.

A TEST conducted by McClure Pictures shows that the newspapers of the United States, with very few exceptions, are not permitting the war news to cut into the space used for their motion picture departments. The conclusion to be drawn from the test is that the war certainly is not harming motion picture theaters nor cutting down the volume of their advertising.

Photoplay departments in newspapers, for the most part, are directly connected with the advertising departments and would be disposed of if motion picture exhibitors were so affected by war conditions that they were forced to withdraw their advertising.

McClure Pictures publicity department canvassed 680 of the leading American newspapers, confining the list to those publications that conduct real photoplay departments. A follow-up system was used and replies were received from 578 newspapers. Two of the newspapers had suspended publication. Only seventeen replied that they had discontinued the use of motion picture publicity, a ratio of 2.9 per cent.

Most of the replies were a firm "Yes" to the question whether they still were using motion picture publicity.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. HARLEMAN

Universal and Triangle Changes

McRae in Charge of Universal City—Fine Arts Studios to Reopen at Once.

AS PREVIOUSLY announced in this paper, H. O. Davis, second vice-president of the Universal Company and general manager of Universal City, has resigned, and his resignation was accepted last week. Carl Laemmle arrived in Los Angeles on the afternoon of May 8 for an indefinite stay. Mr. Laemmle told a representative of the Moving Picture World that he had not yet decided upon the successor to H. O. Davis, and that practically every department was running satisfactorily.

Mr. Laemmle plans to devote his undivided attention to the affairs of the company while here, arranging for many improvements and additional equipment.

Henry McRae, former director general of the big plant and producer of the Bison brand of Universal films, has been put in full charge of production and will act as Mr. Laemmle's right-hand man. O. L. Sellers, formerly production manager, has resigned.

Closely following the announncement of H. O. Davis' resignation came the news that Mr. Davis has signed up with Triangle Film Corporation and been appointed general manager of the Triangle Film Corporation.

The Fine Arts studios, now closed, will soon be opened and production started on a large scale.

Paralta to Build Large Studio

Production Will Soon Be Started on Bessie Barriscale and Warren Kerrigan's Features.

PARALTA PLAYS will soon start production in Los Angeles. Robert T. Kane, vice-president, has been in the city for several weeks looking over the situation. The Paralta is going to build a large studio here, and Mr. Kane is at present negotiating for a site in Hollywood. The company has temporarily leased the Clune studios at Bronson and Melrose avenues, where production will be started about June 4.

Raymond B. West, Oscar Apfel and James Young have been engaged as directors for Bessie Barriscale and J. Warren Kerrigan. Robert Brunton, well known art director, has been engaged by Mr. Kane as studio manager and will take immediate charge.

Miss Barriscale's first Paralta picture will be an adaptation of Grace Miller White's novel "Rose O' Paradise," in which she will be directed by James Young.

J. Warren Kerrigan arrives here the first part of June and will be directed by Oscar Apfel.

Several players of prominence and a supporting cast for Miss Barriscale and Mr. Kerrigan are now being signed by Mr. Kane for the Paralta.

Yorke-Metro Players Celebrate.

At the Yorke-Metro studios production was completed last week on "The Haunted Pajamas," Harold Lockwood's latest starring vehicle. Producer Balshofer celebrated the occasion with a jolly studio dinner.

A picture was taken of the party which we herewith reproduce. Seated at the head of the table are Fred J. Balshofer and Harold Lockwood. The others in the picture are Ed Sedgwick, Paul Willis, Harry de Roy, William DuVaull, Gaetano Gaudio, Carmel Myers, Betty Ware, Lester Cuneo, Charles Stallings, Ruth Overton, Richard V. Spencer, Burt Nottleman, John J. Underhill and Jack Christensen.

What's Doing at the Selig Studios.

At the Selig Studios, Director Colin Campbell is making great plans and preparations for his next feature. It will probably be something out of the ordinary both as to story and cast. It will include Bessie Eyton, Tom Santschi and Fritzi Brunette.

After a succession of five-reel productions, Director Al Green has now turned his attention to the making of a two-reel featurette, dealing with life in the Canadian northwest, entitled "The Heart of Beaupere." The story is woven about the picturesque character of a French Canadian trapper, played by George Fawcett, the love interest being carried by Vivian Reed and Will Machin. Others in the cast are Eugenie Besserer and Charles Le Moyne.

Fritzi Brunette will henceforth be identified exclusively with Selig productions, having recently signed a contract to that effect.

Ruth McCord on Her Way.

Accompanied by nearly two thousand motorcyclists, Ruth McCord began, this week, her twenty-five thousand mile trip to the four corners of the United States on her motorcycle. Her first stop was at San Diego, where the city officials will assist the Ince-Triangle girl in placing the first monument marking her start from the southwestern corner of the country. The schedule foretells her return to the Culver City studios in September, 1918, after having visited every Triangle exhibitor in the United States.

Powell to Direct George Walsh.

As stated in these columns last week Paul Powell, the former Fine Arts director, has joined the Fox studios. Mr. Powell will make subjects starring George Walsh. Otis Turner, who has had charge of "Smiling George" for the last eight months, will take Gladys Brockwell under his direction.

Paul Powell began his screen career in 1912. Previous to this time he had been reporter and writer on newspapers in Chicago, Los Angeles and other cities. He jumped from the newspaper game to directing one and two reel subjects with a small company.

Ince and Sennett in New York.

Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett are in New York, but are both very reticent as to their reasons for the trip from the West Coast. It is understood, however, that both are spending much time at the offices of the Triangle Distributing Corporation. Wherever they go Mr. Ince and Mr. Sennett are accompanied by Dame Rumor, and all sorts of stories have been going the rounds, none of which, however, were verified.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Charles Ray and a company of twenty-five players, under the direction of Victor L. Schertzinger, are shooting scenes this week in the big woods near Santa Cruz, California, for "Sudden Jim," an Ince-Triangle feature production in which Charles Ray is being starred.

Al Santell, the Kalem comedy director, is still confined to his bed as the result of a motor accident which broke his rib.

Phil Lang, the Kalem manager of production, went to San Francisco on the 11th to confer with Robert Welles Ritchie, who is writing a new series to follow "The American Girl." Ritchie was the author of Kalem's popular series, "The Girl from Frisco." He is a magazine writer of note, residing in New York, and recently located in Northern California to complete some pressing magazine work.

Activities of the William Fox home guards continue to use up all the spare time around that studio. Abraham Carlos, the general manager, presented the battalion with a large American flag last Friday. On Monday Lieutenant Colonel Bartello of the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry visited the studio grounds and watched the men go through the manual of arms under the command of the official of the day, Maurice Cytron.

Director Marshall Neilan, who has just signed a two years' contract with the Lasky Company, is in New York on a three weeks' vacation.

Ruth Stonehouse allowed her artistic little home in the Hollywood foothills to become bachelor quarters last week. With the arrival of B. P. Schulberg, general manager of the Paramount Exchange, and Al Lichtman, general manager of the Artcraft interests, Joe Roach, scenaroist and husband of Ruth Stonehouse, invited the New York guests to "party" at the Stonehouse-Roach bungalow. Ruth decided that the men, in living over the days of their triple association in the film game of seven years ago, might enjoy it better if the house were all theirs, so had her studio belongings of the week removed to a nearby hotel.

Tom Mix has begun the production of his third Fox film comedy at his Silver Lake ranch. Rena Rogers will once more play the role opposite Mr. Mix, and the other members of his noted cowboy band will remain with him. Archbald, the noted trick burro, is still on the pay roll. Violet Eddy, who is well remembered from "A Bathhouse Tangle," will be included in the cast. Miss Eddy will once more portray one of the long, lanky lingerers for which she is famous.

Charles Parrott has also started a new Fox comedy this week. The cast is headed by Charles Conkling, Alf Goulding, Mae Busch, Sidney de Grey, Paddy McGuire and Frank Currier. Miss Bush and Mr. McGuire are both newcomers on the Fox lot. The little lady is well remembered from the Keystone and Paddy from Vogue comedies.

Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid have returned from Fort Bragg, California, where they were filming lumber camp scenes under the direction of William H. Taylor, and are telling wonderful stories of the difficulties they encountered. For over a week they were only able to work two hours a day. The rest of the time was spent in going to and from location. This was in the heart of the mountains, and in order to reach it they had to use practically every form of locomotion.

At the Bernstein studios the sets for "Loyalty," the second of the Bernstein "Seven Cardinal Virtues" series, are already under construction. This film contains a play within a play and a large number of scenes are taken during the performance of a musical comedy. A most elaborate series of stage settings is being designed for the piece by Lee Lawson, the technical director, and a number of new effects are being worked out. During the course of the picture a couple of musical comedy companies will be brought out to the studio and used for the play itself. Work on "Humility," the first of the series, has been delayed by the bad weather, but it will be ready for the cutting room by the end of the week. This film will be the first appearance of Murdock MacQuarrie with the Bernstein forces.

Director Fred A. Kelsey is filming at Universal City a two-act Western drama, "A Texas Sphinx." It features Harry Carey, the well-known Western actor, with many of the Universal cowboys in his support.

"A Daughter of the Gods" in London

Fox's Big Spectacular Picture Given Its Premiere at the London Opera House.

THE premiere performance in England of William Fox's feature, "A Daughter of the Gods," in which Annette Kellermann is starred, took place at the famous London Opera House in the metropolis on Monday, May 21.

A symphony orchestra of fifty pieces played the unusually elaborate musical score composed by Robert Hood Bowers. Special electrical effects were introduced for the first time in Europe.

The London Opera House was built by Oscar Hammerstein as a home for grand opera, but changed hands, and is now managed by Oswald Stoll, playing a policy of large musical productions and Christmas pantomimes. This is the first time a motion picture has been shown at the London Opera House. Charles B. Cochran is directing the tour of "A Daughter of the Gods" for England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Owing to a shortage of railroad cars, increased fares and reduced train service, a great many theatrical touring companies have abandoned engagements in the English provinces. The English booking offices have scheduled "A Daughter of the Gods" as the regular road attraction.

Wallace Carlson Joins Bray

WALLACE CARLSON, one of the first to enter the animated cartoon field, but still one of the youngest cartoonists in the business, has joined the staff of the Bray Studios, Inc., and his work in the future will be released by them as part of their production, the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, the "magazine-on-the-screen." Mr. Carlson has originated a new character, which he calls "Otto Luck," and unquestionably it will take rank in popular favor with J. R. Bray's famous Col. Heeza Liar and Earl Hurd's "Bobby Bumps," the cutest kid on the screen.

Wallace Carlson.

Mr. Carlson at fifteen years of age was the sporting cartoonist on the Chicago Inter-Ocean—one of America's foremost dailies—and held that position up to the time of his entrance in the animated cartoon field He is the originator of the "Canimated Nooz"—a burlesque on the news weeklies—and attained a wide popularity through this clever idea. His best known "movie" character was "Dreamy Dud"—a kid with an imagination that outdid anything that the late lamented Baron Munchausen ever approached.

The cleverness of Mr. Carlson's work, together with his extreme youth, attracted the attention of many prominent persons, and among his treasured possessions are letters from President Wilson and Judge Landis of Chicago, both commending his work.

NORDLIE TO HANDLE FORUM IN NEW YORK.

C. S. Nordlie, a practical and efficient sales specialist, advertising and service man, has just been appointed general manager of the New York Exchange of Forum Films, Inc., to carry out the unique plan of distribution instituted by W. W. Hodkinson. Forum Films, Inc., under Mr. Nordlie's direction, will soon fire the first gun of its campaign.

As a general manager, Mr. Nordlie brings an experience gained in twenty years of service in the fields of advertising and merchandising. He has put some of the best known of American products on the map .While he has had his training in various business activities, he has had extensive experience in the field of films, having originated some of the most successful and far-reaching plans of the industry to aid the exhibitor.

New Company's Organizers Outline Aims

What the United Theater Corporation Is and What It Intends to Do for Exhibitors.

IN ANNOUNCING the policy of the newly formed United Theater Equipment Corporation, the organizers have not only settled the perplexing problem of how, when and where to secure proper theater equipment and dependable accessories, but they have inaugurated an exhibitors' co-operative service which will set a new era in the machine and supply branch of the industry. There is no denying the fact that up to the present time motion picture supplies and equipment were sold with but one object in view—that was the sale of the merchandise. No thought was generally given to the maintenance of the apparatus, and only in rare instances was advice given to the operator or exhibitor.

The main object of the United Theater Equipment Corporation will be to serve the exhibitor in the fullest sense of the word; not merely selling goods over the counter or through the mail, but suggesting, planning, installing, supervising and maintaining theater equipment; in short, it proposes to furnish absolutely free of charge a service that will relieve the exhibitor of many worries and cares of the past, that will better projection, improve conditions and increase box office receipts.

To insure and facilitate carrying out the policy of co-operative service for the exhibitor, United service stations have been established in the principal cities of the United States. This innovation in the motion picture industry will practically revolutionize the supply business. While new to us the service station idea has been conclusively demonstrated a success in the automobile business, and without a doubt the service will come as a blessing to exhibitors.

In introducing the service station idea to the industry the United officials fully realize that they are assuming a great responsibility. Consequently they have surrounded themselves with an organization founded and managed by pioneer supply men, who know the business from A to Z, and who are fully competent to advise theater owners honestly and fairly as to their installation and apparatus maintenance. Each and every service station is in charge of an experienced man, whose first consideration it is to serve the exhibitor well. He may be consulted at all times and he will truthfully give his opinion as well as suggest ways and means for the most economical and satisfactory purchase and installation of machines and supplies.

Exhibitors Will Profit.

By eliminating equipment worries the United service stations will enable the exhibitor to concentrate his entire time and attention to his program, his advertising and his patrons, thus resulting in larger attendances. An exhibitor's time is too valuable to devote to technical and mechanical problems connected with the conduct of his house, and he will welcome the beneficial service offered by the United.

To decrease upkeep expense is an important problem that the service stations will endeavor to solve. Every exhibitor knowns full well that the cost of keeping his machinery in repairs runs up into a tidy sum each year. It will be the purpose of the United to considerably decrease this upkeep expense by keeping mechanism in the best serviceable condition at all times.

It must not be supposed that the service will be confined strictly to mechanical devices. The United will shortly introduce an exhibitors' help department, through means of which valuable information and advice will be furnished on every angle of the exhibitor's business, excepting the film. Suggestions will be offered for decorations, furnishings, advertising novelties, display signs, publicity matter, and one hundred and one other important items. It is proposed to make this service so broad and beneficial in scope that thousands of dollars will be saved by exhibitors every week and thousands of dollars more will be added to their box office receipts.

Competent Management Assured.

The management of the United Theater Equipment Corporation is in able hands. Herbert T. Edwards, the founder of the Picture Theater Equipment Corporation, is president. Mr. Edwards enjoys a wide acquaintance among exhibitors and he is widely known as a hard worker for bettering the conditions of the theater owner. J. H. Hallberg, known as the inventor of the famous Hallberg generator, is vice-president. He will concentrate his best endeavors to insure better projection and equipment efficiency for every exhibitor. E. E. Fulton, head of the successful Fulton Company of Chicago, is secretary and treasurer. Mr. Fulton enjoys an excellent reputation as a conscientious and fully experienced supply distributor.

Among others who are taking a deep interest in this organization may be mentioned George Kleine, founder of the Kleine Optical Company; Messrs. Clark & Rowland and Ludwig Hommel, of Pittsburgh; C. A. Calehuff, of Philadelphia; E. E. Oliver and H. J. Mandelbaum, of Cleveland; T. A. Nolan, of Cincinnati; Ray Brauch, of Detroit; F. A. Van Huson, of Omaha; H. E. Van Duyne, of Los Angeles, and A. D. Flinton, of Kansas City.

The Novelty Slide Company of New York, the largest manufacturers of lantern slides in the world, have become a part of the organization, and all manufacturing of slides, novelties, specialties and other products will be under the direct supervision of Joseph F. Coufal, who is responsible for the success of Novelty Slides and other products.

The United Theater Equipment Corporation is fortunate in not only possessing well established branches, but having secured the services of experienced men that have made their own supply houses a success. The combination of their experience, ability and knowledge of this branch of the industry is undoubtedly supreme, and as their entire efforts and endeavors will be directed in the future in harmonious working plans to better conditions of the exhibitor and his theater equipment, we do not hesitate in saying that the success of the United Theater Corporation is assured.

Taylor Holmes With Essanay

THE screen has won another star from the stage. Taylor Holmes has signed up with Essanay. Filming of his first picture under that organization's banner will begin immediately. Mr. Holmes is perhaps the best interpreter of comedy on the stage. "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," was his biggest hit. In this vehicle, he enjoyed a sensational run on Broadway and later played at the Cort theater, Chicago, for a record-breaking engagement. Then, after a tour of the country's largest cities, from coast to coast, Mr. Holmes returned to Chicago for another long run, which he has just recently completed.

Prior to entering the "legitimate" Mr. Holmes appeared for many seasons in vaudeville. It was in this work that he laid the foundation for his reputation, becoming one of the most widely known headliners in the country.

Taylor Holmes.

His Essanay engagement is Mr. Holmes' debut in motion pictures. "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" will be his first picture. This feature will be an adaptation from the story of that title which was published in the Saturday Evening Post. It was written by Clarence Buddington Kelland. The picture will be a comedy-drama, depicting a very laughable travesty on the wave of efficiency rule which has swept the country. Though no definite date has been fixed, it is probable this picture will be released in July. Mr. Holmes will be a permanent fixture in Essanay's staff of stars. Several other stories already are being negotiated for, and will be scenariozed for him following the filming of "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship." The Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service will handle the Holmes release.

CUPID GETS "FATTY" ARBUCKLE'S CAMERAMAN.

Cupid and the movies have again proved their skill as matchmakers. Miss Mildred E. Hansen left Los Angeles this week and traveled across the continent to be married to Frank E. Williams, cameraman for Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle. She arrived in New York Saturday morning, May 19. The wedding took place immediately after her arrival, at the Little Church Around the Corner.

During the fall of 1915 Williams became one of the first of the Keystone cameramen. Among the films he photographed were "Hearts and Swords," "The Siege of Calia," and "The Snow Cure."

Richardson Bites off Another Thousand Miles

Looks in on Tucson, Santa Ana, San Diego and Los Angeles—Falls Under Spell of Great Southwest

Tucson, Arizona.

TUCSON, another of the wonder cities of the desert, lies westward across the desert 312 miles from El Paso. It was a night's journey, and, after leaving El Paso behind, carrying with us, however, a whole mind full of pleasant memories, we recked not of time or distance. At the station warm-hearted welcome was extended by a committee of managers and operators, headed by A. F. Schickl, manager of the Opera House. The Tucson Operators Local Union and the Tucson managers co-operated throughout the affair in the most friendly way, which is distinctly to the credit of both.

Within its corporate limits Tucson is a pretty, modern, up-to-the-minute city; beyond its limits all is desolation, sand and cactus. During the day they took me out twelve miles to San Xavier Mission, and then an equal distance in the opposite direction to the Painted Rocks. The mission is the second oldest in the United States (350 years), and is very interesting. The Painted Rocks are—well, not so many. But the cactus growth was marvelous, reaching fully fifty, if not sixty, feet in height.

In the party was A. F. Schickl, manager Broadway Theater; D. Ditmas, manager Prima and Lyric Theaters, and Arthur Narath, operator, who acted as chauffeur of our deep desert-going bubble—a party of thoroughly good fellows. I enjoyed it all hugely, because it is twenty-five years since I have traversed the desert and it was as a breath out of the past.

In the evening I visited the various theaters. Tucson operators are distinctly above the average, and have, with one exception, good operating rooms and equipment; also the screen results are excellent. At the Prima, Dave Ditmas, manager, projection is in charge of Arthur Narath, a man of brains and ability. Brother Narath has a ground, which is a puzzle, in that both himself and competent electricians have, after repeated trials, failed to locate it. It was not practical for me to try it out, as the show was on and the test would, of necessity, be conducted by process of elimination, disconnecting one thing after another. There are two G. E. rectifiers in the room, but they are entirely inclosed by the light-proof material. Power Six B machines are used.

In all Tucson operating rooms wall shutters are hung in a peculiar way, which I would ask Tucson men to describe for the Projection Department at their convenience. At the Tucson Opera House—A. F. Shickl, manager; William Brumberg, operator—I found what I considered to be the most remarkable installation I have viewed up to date. If friend Brumberg has overlooked anything I would like to know what it is. There was a film-chute storage tank on the wall, in which reels were inserted at one end, moved by gravity to the other, where they are taken out. The revolving shutters were ideal in dimensions; there was a magnetic acting automatic dowser, constructed by Operator Brumberg; there were film links in the port-shutter master cord; framing lamps; black walls; roller lever for port shutters; the speed of the motor-driven rewinder is controlled by an Elbert speed controller. The two G. E. rectifiers are entirely inclosed in light-proof material. There were fire extinguishers—three of them; an extra projector mechanism; phone to the manager's office; another to the stage; an inspection bench with hand-driven rewinder, glass and lamp; lamphouses were piped to the vent flue; D. P. D. T. switches on each machine, so that either can be instantly switched to either rectifier; a tooth-brush, for sprocket cleaning, hangs on the wall, and there were other things worthy of mention did space permit.

At the Broadway Theater—E. Brachman, manager; Walter Burrows, operator—screen results are excellent, the light being brilliant and of very clear tone. Burrows has the reputation of being a man who is "on the job" and who delivers the goods, not sometimes, but all the time. His equipment and room are both good. Taken as a whole, both Tucson managers and operators are decidedly above the level in progressiveness.

The lecture met with the approval of the 100 per cent. attendance of operators and managers. There was a midnight banquet, at which were present E. Drachman, B. Goldsmith, Walter Burrows, Ray R. Stewart, O. L. Minze, Arthur V. Narath, David Diamos, David Schumaker, James F. Hughes, J. W. Cardis, G. H. Schneider, H. J. Tamnen, A. F. Schickl, Harry L. Johnson, president L. U. 298, I. A., and W. W. Brumberg.

By and large, Tucson is a live wire, and memories of my visit to that wonderful desert city will be among those which I preserve in lavender and old rose. In the photograph you will observe that two or three of the men wear war paint. Well, it is not to be wondered at, as there is an Indian village just at the edge of the city. The lovely lady is Miss Frye, organist at the Opera House.

The City of the Orange Groves.

Santa Ana, California, is literally the "City of the Orange Groves." In and around it one sees orange laden trees by the thousands. At the station I found Brothers C. L. Russell, president L. U. 538; C. D. Warsham and Fred Robbins, members of 538, and Frank McBride, member Los Angeles 150. As I walked up the platform surrounded by this aggregation, a familiar click sounded and ahead we saw a moving picture camera taking it all in; also I might say, parenthetically, that we were posed in an orange grove, and filmed in the act of picking a sure-enough orange from an honest to gosh orange tree. Santa Ana is a charming little city of only 14,- 000 people, yet at the banquet, which occurred before the lecture, there were mustered something like thirty-five moving picture operators and managers, part of them from Anaheim and other nearby cities.

After autoing around over smooth-as-glass roads, bordered on either side by orange and lemon trees literally loaded with ripe fruit, interspersed with giant date palms—as gorgeous a setting as could well be imagined—we dropped back from the sublime into plain every-day affairs, and inspected a few Santa Ana theaters.

The Lyric has a fine picture, with clear, brilliant light; but the clock is very bad, and the exit lights, right and left of the screen are altogether too bright. J. E. Coe is in charge of projection. The operating room is large; is painted black; has a neat pattern of linoleum on the floor; is equipped with two Simplex machines. Coe, which enables the operator to switch from compensarc to rectifier without disturbing the illumination of the picture. The device will be described in the Projection Department a little later.

Clune's Theater seats 800. It has a good auditorium. The operating room is painted black, and the speed of the two Power 6A machines is controlled by Preddy speed controllers. Frank McBride is in charge of projection. The floor of this room is in three steps, which works an entirely unnecessary and very great hardship on the operator. This could be remedied at very small cost, and it is a shame that it is not done. The ventilation is insufficient; also the machines are entirely too close together. There is running water and a basin.

The Princess Theater has a very small operating room, the walls of which are very light in color. The ports are of fair size. There is one Power 6A machine and one Standard American, of very old type. The picture is brilliant. The clock and exit and piano light are very bad. The operator of this house did not have sufficient enterprise to attend the lecture, although, for his information, I can tell him he has much to learn. His manager was there, however. I am sorry to say I did not make note of his name.

At the West End the picture is entirely too large, as was also the case, if I rightly remember, at the Princess. The exit lights are too bright. The operating room walls are white. Wotton Rexolux supplies current, with a G. E. rectifier for emergency. There are two Simplex machines. There is running water and, wonder of wonders, toilet facilities. Claude Fowler is operator at the Temple theater, a large house in which both the clock and the piano light are bad; also the red lights shining against the wall are unnecessary, as well as bad from the eye strain point of view. The Temple is a large, fine house, with an excellent operating room, having a 40-inch vent flue. There are two Power 6B machines and 80 ampere motor generator set, supplemented by G. E. rectifier. The port shutter master cord has film links, which are properly placed. The walls of the room are dark. C. L. Russell, president L. U. 538, is operator. Taken as a whole, by comparison with other cities, the Santa Ana boys have nothing to be ashamed of, though they, in common with all others, have need for study of the technical end of projection.

Long will the picture of the little city of Santa Ana and its beautiful surroundings remain on the halls of memory's castle, nor will the courtesy extended to us in the various western cities we have thus far visited be soon forgotten.

San Diego, California.

Westward from Tucson, the desert stretches, spanned by two shining bands of steel, 521 miles in length, with Los Angeles at the end. Through Yuma we sped, and onward, with the marvelous Salton Sea, a desert salt lake, with neither inlet or outlet, formed when the Colorado River broke its banks and for years emptied its entire volume into a depression in the desert. At last the train entered the film producing center of the world, Los Angeles, to find waiting upon the station platform, a broad-shoudered chap, G. P. Harleman, the Moving Picture World Los Angeles representative, who was slim and skinny when he departed from Gotham to the land of the golden sunset but two short years ago. His hearty greeting brought to mind the sentence "Gee, but it's great to meet a man from your own home town." And here, thank God, was the Coast at last. I can get no farther away from home, and that is something to be thankful for, though many weary hundreds of miles yet stretch between me and my own fireside. No one but Harleman knew of my arrival, as I was only to remain over night, and depart next morning for San Diego. But Harleman was plenty! Had there been anyone else, I guess I wouldn't have gotten to bed at all.

The run from Los Angeles to San Diego is a surpassingly beautiful one. Through fruitladen orange trees, sometimes so close one can almost touch them, past ocean surf as white as cotton, shimmering in the yellow sun, the train rolled southward. And San Diego! Did I even attempt to describe it the New York office would have to buy a whole box of blue pencils, and would want to know if I thought I was entitled to monopolize the whole blooming paper, for it could not be done short of dozens of pages. I shall therefore not attempt the impossible.

Kent Bush, manager of the Broadway, a large beautiful theater, placed himself and his car at our disposal. He took us, together with Brother S. H. Metcalf, formerly first vice president of the I. A. T. S. E., and O. O. Taylor, operator, out to Coronado Beach, down into Tia Juana, Lower California, Mexico, where we had what will very likely be our last glimpse of that almost forgotten thing—open gambling—and through the exhibition grounds of Tucson, a marvelously beautiful park, not thrown open to the public.

While in the city, I inspected the Superba Cabrilla, Plaza, Pickwick and Broadway theaters; also the Spreckels theater. The first five named are all large beautiful houses; also they have very excellent operating rooms.

The Spreckels theater is said to be, and I guess is, the best theater west of New York City.

In the Cabrillo I found what I would consider to be the ideal operating room. It was probably 10 by 16 feet in dimensions, with a 10-foot ceiling, and was the only room I have ever seen in which the illumination of the room seemed to have no effect whatever on the view the operator has of the picture, even though the walls were light colored and the rooms literally flooded with light from four large incandescent lamps, and nitrogen lamps at that, hanging at the ceiling line near the front wall. The secret lay in the observation port, which is 30 inches square, and is covered with a sheet of thick plate glass, in the center of which is an 8-inch round hole.

This port is situated between the two projectors, and under this condition, athough I had the lights switched on and off several times, I coud see no practical difference in the view of the screen. The floor of this room is covered with linoleum in neat pattern, and the room was in every way a beauty. S. H. Metcalf is chief operator, and H. C. Parks is assistant. The auditorium lighting of all the houses named might be improved, and in some instances very materially improved. The fronts of the Superba, Pickwick and Cabrillo are imposing and beautiful. At night the Cabrillo and Plaza, which adjoin each other, fronting a small but very beautiful plaza in the center of the city, give a thoroughly charming effect with their combined scheme of lighting. The Cabrillo is decorated with white lights and the Plaza has a combination of white and colors. The size of the picture in the Plaza is excessive, the same being true of the Superba and Broadway. As I pointed out to San Diego managers, there is no earthly necessity for anything more than a 16-foot picture in houses of this kind. If all San Diego managers agreed to cut down the size of their pictures to 16, or at the most 17 feet, and do it simultaneously, the result would be altogether good. There would be less eye strain, a better definition of the picture, a greater brilliancy of projection with less expenditure of current, and the front seats of the theaters would automatically become much more valuable. At the Broadway, Kent Bush manager, T. O. Taylor operator, I found two Erneman projectors, of which there are but few in the country. The Broadway is a beautiful house, with as nearly a perfect floor line as anything I have ever looked at.

The Spreckels theater is a marvelously beautiful house, seating 1,915, that being the year in which it was built. It is owned by John D. Spreckels, the multi-millionaire, and is managed by Al Watson. The seats in the Auditorium cost $22 each, and those in the boxes cost $28 each. The lobby is of California onyx, with lights behind, which produces a beautiful effect. This is a very common form of auditorium decoration of high class theaters of the Western Coast. The stage is a huge affair, having a 75-foot gridiron.

And so I could go on for pages describing conditions in San Diego, but space forbids. I really cannot expect to monopolize the whole 200 pages of the paper, and the editor-in-chief is getting so he glares at my manuscript with green fire in his eyes.

The lecture was enthusiastically received by those present, but unfortunately most of the San Diego managers had business of such tremendous importance that they were unable to be present. I believe all San Diego operators were there; also some of the managers were present.

The City of the Angels.

Los Angeles may, I believe, now be fairly dubbed the film-producing center of the world. Carl Laemmele—the redoubtable Carl—having learned of my proposed visit to Los Angeles, taking a more advanced view than some other film manufacturers, wired Universal City and the manager of his Los Angeles Exchange to get busy and get all their directors, cameramen and others who might either directly or indirectly be interested in matters projectional, together with all Los Angeles exhibitors who could be influenced, out to hear my lecture; also Mr. Laemmele instructed that the use of the new Rialto theater be given for the purpose of the lecture. This, taken in conjunction with the fact that Los Angeles Moving Picture Operators' L. U. 150 had been busy for weeks on the proposition, made it look as if the Los Angeles meeting would be something in the nature of a star performance.

In the afternoon of the first day we were invited to visit Universal City, and while out there were for the moment a regular "star." We were filmed hobnobbing right out in the open with a lion, and Laemmle will tell you it wasn't any toothless old hag either, but a sure enough lady lion who was so peeved at being disturbed that she had to be licked into submission before she woud consent to pose. And yours truly, with his face smiling and his heart growing flippety-flap, actually stroked the fur of that infernal beast. After this we were ready for anything and were filmed posing two lion cubs and then in the act of ordering the elephant to get up, and then with the arms of the orang-outang around our lordly person, and then—Heaven knows what, we lost track.

Universal City is a marvelous institution. It would be a waste of space to describe that which has been described so often, but remembering what I had found there four years before, I was astonished at the scene of the present day.

When I was at Universal City four years ago it did not contain even so much as a paved street, and its collections of buildings could only be called buildings by courtesy. Today that is anything else but true, and I had the pleasure of viewing a stage upon which they can place and have placed fifty sets at one and the same time. The buildings are of concrete, of a universally yellow, mellow tone, which is very pleasing to the eye. Employes, ranging from roustabouts to thousand-dollar-a-week stars, filled the streets, the huge stages and the buildings. Universal City of today is indeed a city in fact, with an upon-the-surface cosmopolitan population probably not equaled anywhere else on the face of the earth.

On the second day of my visit to Los Angeles I was taken out to Keystone, where four years ago, when the Keystone consisted principally of a patch of ground, a shack or two and an uncovered wooden stage, your humble servant and Mabel Normand, together with a bundle of Los Angeles operators, were filmed. I still have that film and you couldn't pry it loose from me with anything less powerful than a crowbar. The Keystone is very far from being a patch of ground and shacks now. There are many substantial buildings and an immense open stage, as well as an indoor stage with very elaborate and costly apparatus. Paul Duerin, chief electrician of the Keystone, has evolved a lighting system for which he deserves great credit. It consists of Type C nitrogen lamps, covered with a blue bulb, which gives a marvelously perfect imitation of daylight. The producing director informed me that these lamps were saving the company $100,000 a year. Before leaving the Keystone I had a long and most interesting conversation with Mack Sennett.

On the third day we were invited out to Culver City to look over the Ince plant, said to be one of the most complete in the world. When we arrived, however, the inviting authority didn't happen to be in his office, and friend doorkeeper, fearing we might decamp with the entire plant, and lacking the services of a boy to send out and find the aforesaid authority, invited us to wait and cool our heels in the anteroom for heaven-only-knows how long. Our heels were already cooled, "thank you," so we gasolined onward, out to the Pacific Ocean and viewed the wonders of Venice, Los Angeles' Coney Island.

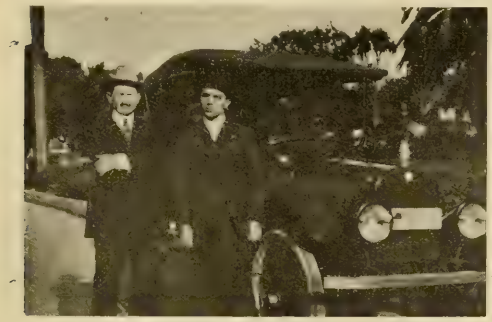
During my stay in Los Angeles Thomas W. Armentrout, business agent, moving picture machine operators' local union



J. B. (Pop) Kenton and Tom Armentrout, Business Agent Local Union 150, Los Angeles.

No. 150, placed both his own services and the services of his gasoline buggy at our disposal. Also J. B. (Pop) Kenton gave practically his entire time to our entertainment. Others were almost equally kind, and of course, the Pacific Coast office of the Moving Picture World did its share nobly.

The lecture was in the Superba theater on the evening of the second day. I didn't count the number present, but although the Superba is a large house, it by no manner of means looked empty. At a guess there were 150 present, including managers, operators, a number of cameramen and several directors. After the lecture, the secretary of the Exhibitors' League came up on the stage and spoke very kindly concerning our efforts. The lecture was followed by a banquet lasting until 3 a. m.

During my visit to Los Angeles I had the pleasure of a consultation with Elizabeth J. Davies, a graduate nurse who has been employed by the State Board of Health of California to make a survey of the conditions under which California moving picture machine operators work. Mrs. Davies' work has, of course, to do with the items of health, and I have reason to believe her report to the State Board of Health is going to be a pretty reasonably warm one. She is an earnest, honest woman, whose heart is in her work, and I am sure what she is doing will, while it may cause some disturbance just at present, eventually operate to the benefit of the moving picture industry of the State; most certainly it will be to the benefit of California operators.

I did not visit any theaters in the City of Los Angeles, because, first, there was no time, second, I could only have visited a very few out of the large number in the city, hence could not have got a fair line on existing conditions. One thing, however, I will say, and that is that there is a tendency in Los Angeles to excess in size of pictures. One theater is projecting, if I rightly remember, a twenty-five foot picture, and that with all due respect to the manager of the theater, is utterly absurd. More than that, it is utterly wrong from any and every point of view. Yes, it is more than that; it is pernicious, in that it sets up an unnecessary element of eyestrain, and that item is very bad indeed as applied to the front rows of seats. I have repeatedly said, and I again say, there is no earthly necessity for anything more than an eighteen-foot picture under any conditions, and a sixteen-foot picture is amply large in the average theater.

Los Angeles itself has improved vastly since my last visit. It deserves much more space than I am able to give it in this article. But space is limited, and I am therefore limited as to what I can say. In closing I desire to tender my sincere thinks to the many friends in Los Angeles who cooperated to make my visit both a pleasure and a success. Local Union No. 150 did its entire duty, and the courtesy of Universal City, as well as the enterprise of the Universal people in taking this matter up, cannot be spoken of too highly. The film they took at Universal City was run previous to the lecture, and made a decided hit. They made me a present of the copy, and I shall certainly treasure it through the years to come as one of my most valued possessions.

Sell Prosperity, Not War Scare

So Advises J. I. Holcomb, Just Returned from a Business Tour of Canada.

THE president of the Holcomb & Hoke Manufacturing Company, popcorn machine makers, J. I. Holcomb, has just returned from a trip to Canada, where he was looking over business conditions. He interviewed the managers of the commercial agencies, government officials and business men. The unanimous opinion was that Canada is enjoying the greatest era of prosperity ever known. Workers are scarce, wages are high, collections are good and business is booming.

"It is only fair to assume that conditions in this country will be identically the same as those in Canada at the present time," declares Mr. Holcomb. "In the first place the countries as a whole are very similar. Our resources, except in size, are identical. And the people of Detroit or Atlanta look, talk and act like their cousins in Canada. So it is certain that trade conditions will be similar.

"It seems to me that the business man who imagines that his business will be seriously curtailed by the war has groundless fears. And if he exercises a little common sense he will recognize that right now is the time to get his share of the money which this country is ready to spend. His problem should not be one of retrenchment, such as cutting down expenses by reducing his clerical forces, stock and advertising.

"In a nutshell, my idea of business during the war is that dealers never before have had such an opportunity for making big money as they have today. And all that is necessary to make big money is that the dealer take the live man's view point. He should refuse to listen to the little fellow and go after business for all he is worth. In other words, sell war prosperity—don't peddle war scare."

NEW MALL THEATER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

The slogan of the new Mall Theater, Cleveland, Ohio, which was recently opened, is "the only duplex theater of its kindin the world." The Mall is a sort of a twin theater proposition, one house on top of the other. In other words, it is two complete theaters under one roof. But there are two entrances. One is from Superior avenue, which street is on a

HERRINGTON'S ITINERARY.

The itinerary of Mr. Harrington for the remainder of May, is as follows: Memphis, Thursday and Friday, May 17 and 18; Louisville, Sunday and Monday, May 20 and 21; Wheeling, Tuesday, May 22; Pittsburgh, Wednesday, May 23; Richmond, Friday, May 25. From Virginia Mr. Harrington will go to conventions in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Herrington in St. Louis

National Organizer is Called the "Billy Sunday of the Movies"—Makes Good Impression on Local Exhibitors.

FRED J. HERRINGTON, National Organizer for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was in St. Louis from May 9th to the 12th explaining the benefits of organization and urging local exhibitors' associations to greater efforts along that line.

Mr. Herrington said that St. Louis had the best organization in the territory extending southwest from Chicago to the western coast. He visited all of the principal theaters in the city and made an address to exhibitors at their headquarters in the Hotel Beers building, on Saturday, the last day of his stay. Herrington impressed everybody with his great energy and sincerity. His speech Saturday was forceful and instructive and made an indelible impression on his audience.

At the close of his remarks Hector Pasmezoglu arose and said that after hearing Mr. Herrington's illuminating and pungent remarks he felt sure that all would concur with him that the sobriquet of "The Billy Sunday of the movies"—a name that he had given Mr. Herrington after hearing some of his talks earlier in the week, was not at all out of place.

In his speech Saturday Mr. Herrington told the exhibitors that with proper organization they could absolutely control the exhibiting end of the situation, and that while cooperation between the exhibitor and the producer was necessary, the exhibitors must stand as a unit and alone.

He said the affiliation between the two branches was necessary for the general upbuilding of the industry; that both producer and exhibitor must work hand in hand in the fight against adverse legislation, but it must be remembered that, while the producer and exhibitor must affiliate on things affecting the industry in general, there is a distinct line of demarcation between the two.

"A landlord and tenant," he said, "will join forces and both fight with all their power for the protection of the house in which the tenant lives if the house's destruction is threatened by an angry mob, but as soon as the danger is over, the landlord will not hesitate to raise the tenant's rent.

"This line of demarcation which exists in all businesses should never forget that they must stand first, last and always for themselves; and if they are properly organized they can absolutely control both branches of the industry."

After Mr. Herrington closed his remarks Joseph Mogler, president of the Exhibitors' League, asked him to explain how to solve the deposit system, which Herrington had mentioned previously.

He again took the floor and replied that the deposit system could be eliminated in two ways. One way was for the exhibitor to refuse to put up deposits. This, he said, was not very practicable unless the exhibitors would act together in the matter. As long as one refused to put up a deposit and his competitor complied with the producers' demands, in this respect, this plan could not be very effective.

The other plan was for the exhibitors to have a bill presented to the State Legislature making it a state law that any corporation that exacted a deposit from its customers, must make a like deposit for a faithful performance of its contract. This, he said, would make the deposit system work both ways, and if the producer was forced to deposit as much money to protect the exhibitor as the exhibitor was forced to deposit to protect the producer, the deposit system would in all probability be dropped.

As soon as Mr. Herrington arrived in St. Louis the officials of the Exhibitor's Association, who are always anxious to show hospitality to distinguished visitors, began arranging for a banquet to be given in his honor. When Mr. Herrington learned of this he firmly but courteously declined to be entertained in this manner.

In refusing this honor Mr. Herrington said that he had not come to St. Louis to be feted and banqueted, but to work in the interests of stronger organization, and he advised the committee to use the money that would be spent on a banquet to fight adverse legislation.

Mr. Herrington left St. Louis late Saturday evening for Kansas City.

Brooklyn League Buys Liberty Bonds

Votes $500 to Uncle Sam's War Chest—President Brandt Appoints Committees.

THE Brooklyn Exhibitors' League held its regular meeting at the Triangle theater, Saturday night, May 19, with an attendance of sixty members. J. C. Rosenthal, business representative of the American Society of Music Authors, Composers and Publishers, was given the privilege of the floor to explain the society's right to collect license from moving picture theaters for privilege to play its copyrighted music. He said "its right was unquestioned, being established by a ruling of the Supreme Court and sustained by subsequent rulings. He made in behalf of the society the compromise of thirty dollars a year to theaters of three hundred seats; forty-five dollars to six-hundred-seat houses; seventy-five dollars to houses of eight to ten hundred seats and three hundred dollars to places of two thousand one hundred and over." This was a special rate to the league members only. He also said that the suit which the society had brought against the Regent theater for playing copyrighted music was undefended even by the New York league, who said they would fight any case brought by the society against an exhibitor, and the charge against the Regent and the rights of the society to collect a license were sustained.

On motion it was voted that the Brooklyn League invest five hundred dollars of its fund in the treasury in Liberty Loan Bonds. This is the first organization in the industry to invest in Liberty Bonds.

The firm of Seeley & Levine was unanimously, elected counsel for the league.

W. H. Hollender, in behalf of the league, made a presentation of a set of full dress buttons, pearl and platinum, to John Manheimer, the outgoing president, and President William Brandt, the former secretary, was presented with a silver fountain pen.

A motion was made to establish the rooms of the Brooklyn League in New York City. After much discussion the motion was tabled, the concensus of opinion being that the meetings would not be so well attended and it would rob the league of its localized distinction and the advantage of home rule.

A motion was carried to request all producers to make photographs for lobby displays of uniform size, to fit a standard lobby easel and not have them of all sorts of sizes.

The question of the ten per cent. war tax was considered and President Brandt took occasion to compliment the Brooklyn League on the effective work it did in defeating the Wheeler state tax bill; for two night and days when the bill was to be taken out of committee he and Mr. Levine were in Albany in close communication with the representatives of the Legislature.

Mr. Levine announced his intention, as counsel for the league, to secure some centralized point of authority on the standee ordinance. At the present time the license, fire and police departments, or a patron of a theater, could make complaint for violation of the ordinance. He would insist upon one authoritative channel of complaint and not have it come from all directions. Mr. Levine declared himself a staunch advocate of concentration and had in mind a joint action of the league in securing better fire insurance rates for moving picture theaters, which are statistically less hazardous than other buildings.

President Brandt appointed the following committees for the ensuing year: Grievance Committee—S. J. Berman, Charles Fisher, Charles Cranides; House Committee—Joseph Foster, F. Habner, Joseph Emlen; Finance Committee—R. Askin, George R. Christian, Gus Koenigswald; Law and Legislation Committee—J. M. Grossman, M. W. Lane, H. Haring; Membership Committee—W. H. Hollander, Otto Loderer, H. Shapiro.

Just as the members were leaving the theater at the close of the meeting, 3 o'clock Sunday morning, we were stopped by the police, who evidently thought we were holding a secret meeting and violating the 1 a. m. closing ordinance. After they took the name of the league and its officers they were allowed to go their several ways in time to greet the milkman and snatch a few winks of sleep before breakfast.

Wide Interest in July Exposition

Exposition Manager Schindler Is Receiving Encouraging News From All Parts of the United States.

NATIONAL Exposition Manager Schindler received a letter last week from Edward J. Fischer, secretary of the Washington Moving Picture Managers' Association of the State of Washington. Mr. Fischer writes that the exhibitors of the west are very enthusiastic over the coming convention and exposition at the Coliseum here, and that his state will be represented by 15 delegates.

Mr. Fischer and Mr. Schindler are old friends. Years ago they met in Chicago when Mr. Schindler was operating the Schindler theater on the west side as a dramatic house, and Mr. Fischer was then the Chicago representative of Alexander Pantage in organizing the Western States Vaudeville Association.

Mr. Schindler states that the representatives of several western states are much pleased to learn that the convention and exposition will be held in the same building, in July, as many of the boys who will come far would have very little time to spend at the exposition if the convention were held at a "loop" hotel, as last year. The exhibitors feel that it is a step in the right direction, and Mr. Schindler expresses the desire that exhibitors throughout the United States should freely submit ideas and suggestions so as to correct errors of previous conventions and expositions. He hints that in the contest in which cash prizes will be offered for the best ideas, these suggestions from far-away managers may possibly win prizes. All such suggestions should be addressed to the publicity department, 1416 Masonic Temple, Chicago.

The Exhibitors' League of America has not overlooked the claims of war on the patriotism of the members, and a Red Cross booth has been offered free of charge on the Coliseum floor. It is expected that the large attendance daily will afford fine opportunity for the Red Cross to increase its membership. The exposition management also intends to have the prominent stars present auction off articles made by themselves, which, doubtless, will largely increase the Red Cross fund. Very few of those present could resist to purchase a handkerchief made by Mary Pickford or by Clara Kimball Young; and, doubtless, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks would prove master auctioneers in handling articles of every kind for such a worthy cause.

Manager Schindler announces that even at this early date the people of Chicago are much interested in the stars who will be seen at the Exposition. The names of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Clara Kimball Young, William S. Hart and other film notables are already sounded by a host of fans, and they may expect ovations that will outshine any receptions ever given them by the public.

Curiosity has always been an important factor in creating interest in the moving picture business. It is said a census of the Illinois exhibitors, taken a few weeks after the last exposition at the Coliseum, showed that the stars who were present and met personally the thousands of picture fans, increased their drawing capacity at theaters in Illinois, at least 20 per cent. The report on Alice Brady showed that her popularity had increased at least 100 per cent. in the state of Illinois since her appearance at last year's national exposition.

H. C. Holah, formerly manager of the Chicago Pathe office and now manager of the moving picture department of the Chicago Herald, is a great booster for the coming Exposition. He has mailed personally special letters to exhibitors and manufacturers throughout the United States calling attention to the big July show.

Manager Schindler is planning another trip to New York at the time of writing, where he expects to spend at least 10 days. He reports excellent progress made by his staff, but states that he will not be satisfied until every foot of space in the great Coliseum Building has been disposed of.

The Chicago Herald, Chicago News, World Film Corporation and the Cahill-Igoe Co., of Chicago, have contracted for space at the Coliseum since last writing.

Exposition Manager Schindler requests the secretaries of the various state organizations to send the number and names of delegates to him as soon as they have been elected, all communications to be addressed to Room 1416, Masonic Temple.

To Michigan Exhibitors

Secretary Moeller Tells of Urgent Need of Organization—Asks All to Meet at Grand Rapids.

IT SEEMS as though the Michigan Exhibitors have at last awakened to the fact that organization is not only a possibility but a necessity, and it is gratifying to note from the various letters being received from all parts of the state, the courtesy met with, on the part of the larger exhibitors with the absolute assurance of being in attendance, as well as taking an active part, and the evident feeling of get together, which has seemingly pervaded the entire state, not only is it gratifying but it begins to put renewed energy and initiative in a fast dying organization, giving an aspect of new life that bodes only good, and that can not but help but result in ultimate success.

In view of existing conditions, and the strenuous period through which we have passed, every exhibitor in the state of Michigan should put energy back of the organization, many things are at stake and in many cases the entire business, and only through concerted action can any definite conclusion be arrived at. Only by getting together and discussing the vital issues can we arrive at a solution. Consider a moment, when business is not up to standard, you necessarily try to find the reason you go into details, fret, worry and finally a solution is found, let us forget petty jealousies, and meet in a common cause, we can be of great service to our country, but of greater service as a unit than as individuals. We have business interests to protect, unjust issues to combat. Let us all make a supreme effort to make the Grand Rapids convention on June 12 and 13 a huge success.

Rembusch Registers Protest Against Tax

Indiana League President Declares Exhibitors of the Country Should Be Heard by Congress.

THE presidents of all state branches of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America have received from Frank J. Rembusch, president of the Indiana branch, the following letter defining what he conceives to be the position of the smaller exhibitor in relation to the proposed war tax:

Indiana exhibitors sent two members to Washington, D. C., to learn the true status of the proposed 10 per cent. tax on gross receipts. They returned and reported the following serious facts:

No one is looking after the interests of exhibitors in Washington.

Mr. Crandell, of the Crandell theaters, gave them every help and courtesy, but explained that Washington exhibitors would have no influence in the matter, and that unless the States interest themselves the largest possible tax will be taxed on exhibitors of this country in a few days.

Our delegation then called on members of Congress and were advised that no exhibitors had expressed themselves on the tax question and were making no efforts either way. Congress is inclined to be fair in the matter, but in the absence of any data they will probably let the proposed 10 per cent. tax become a law.

Congress does not know really what is a fair and equitable tax and will not know unless exhibitors express themselves.

Several film manufacturers are advocating this 10 per cent. tax, for what reason I don't know, and leave that for you to surmise, but no film manufacturer should have any say as to the amount of tax exhibitors should pay and we should protest with all our power against their actions in this matter.

I received word that Mr. Ochs is advocating either a 10 per cent. tax or a tax similar to the Canada tax, and that a hearing is being held before the Senate Finance Committee today, May 12. More time should have been given so that exhibitors from everywhere could appear before the committee.

A 10 per cent. tax on gross receipts will bankrupt this industry, whether we pay it or the public put a stamp on every ticket. A crowd on a rush hour would be impossible to handle in most cases on a stamp act. No other business is taxed 10 per cent on gross receipts and our margin has become so close on account of senseless competition and other abuses of the trade, that most of us are not making 5 per cent. on our yearly investment. Not 5 per cent. of the industry is making a profit today.

Our present capacity tax is probably bringing in one million dollars to the government. Our gross box office receipts are not more than $250,000,000 per year in all the theaters of the United States, therefore a 10 per cent. tax on gross receipts would increase our tax 2,500 per cent. over our present tax. The public and Government have a wrong conception of the motion picture business and will continue to have unless we make at least some effort to enlighten them. Even 1 per cent. tax on gross receipts would be 250 per cent. more than our present capacity tax, so that a two or three per cent. tax is more than our just proportion. The capacity tax is far better than any form of tax on gross receipts.

Another hearing should be held in which exhibitors are present and allowed to express themselves.

My advice is for your State to get busy at once and ask for a hearing and send some one—an exhibitor—to Washington to attend same. Let us all be there at the same time and we will easily overcome any influence contrary to our best interest. We have had our men there and know we can be of great assistance, but one State is not sufficient to do anything. All must help.

I am writing this letter to you because I know the serious aspect of affairs and to enlist your help. Get on the wire to your Congressmen and Senators and then on train to Washington, if you want to save yourself and prevent being legislated out of business, the same as the war tax has put a great portion of the business out of business in other war countries. Let me hear from you.

FRANK REMBUSCH,
President Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of Indiana.

Oregon Exhibitors Meet

Take Action Favoring Canadian Plan of Taxing Picture Theaters—New Members Gained.

THURSDAY, May 10, was the meeting day of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oregon and the meeting at Portland, called to order by C. W. Meighan, president, was one of the most enthusiastic ever held. The war tax question was the big issue before the meeting and President Lee A. Ochs was instructed by telegraph to support a system of taxation similar to the Canadian plan in his plea before the Congressional committee.

Messrs. Langerman, Robinson and Sax were selected to act as a committee to cooperate with the operators' local committee in the entertainment of F. H. Richardson, in whose honor a reception at the Columbia Theater was arranged for May 13.

On the house committee, in addition to those already serving, Messrs. Fleishman, Phillips and Parker were selected.

The meeting was arranged for May 10 in order to receive Fred J. Herrington, national organizer, whose schedule showed him to visit Portland on that day. Mr. Herrington did not appear, however, and the meeting was held without him.

In two weeks twenty-one new members have been added to the League's roster and every big town in the state is now represented.

A. S. Kolstadt, owner of the Electric Theater, Hood River, and A. E. Lafler, manager of the Oregon theater, Salem, Oregon, were among the out-of-town exhibitors at the meeting.

Ohio League Meeting

Elects Officers and Formulates Protest on Motion Picture War Tax.

THE annual state convention of the Ohio State Branch No. 1, Exhibitors' League, was held at Cleveland, Tuesday, May 15, as per schedule. After the preliminary election of temporary officers, a resolution on the one per cent war tax on photoplay theater tickets was adopted. This was sent to United States Senator Harding at Washington. It protested against the tax suggesting that the war tax be confined to the income tax, which affects most exhibitors.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, B. J. Sawyer; vice-president, E. Mandelbaum; secretary, W. H. Horsey; treasurer, George Heimbuch; National vice-president, Sam Bullock.

Delegates to the National convention to be held at Chicago July 14—Messrs. William Slimm, A. Mahrer, Ernest Schwartz, W. H. Horsey, H. H. Lustig. Alternates—C. F. Lockham, Sam Deutsch, A. Goldman, J. H. Simpson, B. J. Sawyer.

All of the officers and delegates are from Cleveland.

MARYLAND FAVORS CANADIAN PLAN.

The Maryland Exhibitors' League, through its first vice-president, L. A. DeHoff, wrote a letter to Lee A. Ochs, president of the National Exhibitor's League, while he was in Washington, D. C., on Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12, bestowing upon him full power to vote for the league and as the voice of all the exhibitors connected with the Maryland body, regarding the National War Tax. Mr. DeHoff also went on to state in his letter that the form of taxation the Maryland League was most in favor of was the form now in force in Canada whereby the tickets are sold direct by the Government to the theater owners.

ANTI TAX MEETING AT RICHMOND, VA.

A call has been issued by the executive officers of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America for a meeting of motion picture exhibitors, to be held in Richmond for the purpose of discussing the revenue bill now pending before Congress.

Fred J. Herrington, organizer of the league, will preside at the meeting, which will be held in the auditorium of Murphy's Annex, and plans will be formulated for fighting against the tax on admissions. About 300 theater owners and managers are expected to be present, representing nearly every city and town in the state.

The meeting will adopt resolutions making representations to Congress that conditions in the business this year are such that an addiional tax burden will have the effect of driving many of the smaller houses out of existence. Protest is directed especially against the proposed ten per cent. tax on admissions.

The theater men assert that they are already paying three separate licenses to the state, city and federal governments, and declare that if additional taxation is laid upon the business approximately one hundred houses in Virginia may have to close.

MAINE LEAGUE TO BE FORMED.

E. H. Horstmann, president of the Massachusetts State League of Exhibitors, has issued a call for a meeting of motion picture exhibitors of the state of Maine to meet at Congress Square Hotel, Portland, on Thursday, May 24, at 1:30 o'clock, for the purpose of forming a state branch of the National League for Maine.

C. R. COOPER, EDITOR FOR WHARTON.

Courtney Ryley Cooper, circus man, author, and creator of Shoestring Charlie, the best loved character introduced in the Red Book during the entire year of 1916, has transferred his affections from the land of the white tops and the marquee to that of the lens and celluloid. For Mr. Cooper has changed his home from Denver, Colo., to Ithaca, N. Y., and has assumed charge of the scenario and publicity departments of Wharton, Inc.

The real beginning of Mr. Cooper's connection with the producers of "Patria" came a long time ago when he wrote one of the first two-reelers ever put on the market, "Tapped Wires." The picture was produced by Theodore Wharton and it led to a friendship between the author and the producer—all of which, in its place, ultimately led to Mr. Cooper's connection with the firm.

General Film to Make Display at Chicago

Big Distributing Company to Have Good Showing at National Exposition on June 4.

ARRANGEMENTS were made during the past week by which General Film will have a creditable display at the National Photoplay Exposition, which opens for a ten-day term at Chicago on June 4. General Film as a distributor will be presented in a form acquainting the public with its usefulness and scope. A collection of artistic and unusual photographs is to be part of its display. Among them is a rare portrait of O. Henry, author of the stories which are being filmed for General Film distribution.

The exposition is something new to the motion picture industry. It is practically a museum of motion picture propaganda. The arrangement of the displays will be somewhat like the government exhibits at the world's fairs, a comprehensive idea of the industry being given by means of costumes and paraphernalia of the studio. W. R. Van Cortland, director of the exposition, expects to have it make a circuit taking in Cleveland, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Rochester, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, New York, Jersey City, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Detroit.

Billy West

BILLY WEST, the volatile and versatile young comedian of King-Bee Comedies, has achieved screen popularity at a bound. He is the life and soul of "Back Stage," the two-reel laughmaker of thespian life and misadventure, about which everybody is talking.

Young West has been on the stage since boyhood. He won fame in Chicago as a cartoonist and singer, and came to be known, as his experience lengthened, as "The Boy Judge." He has played in all the leading vaudeville houses and theaters of the United States, and has acquired a vogue and popularity which focuses attention upon him now that he has entered the broad field of the picture.

Billy West.

In addition to "Back Stage," the first King-Bee offering shortly to be shown, Billy West appears in two other comedies now nearing completion. He has a brisk, alert, spontaneous but natural form of humor and achieves his effects without much apparent effort. His success is the result of hard work and a thorough mastery of stage and screen craft. At this time when innate ability on the screen secures wide plaudits, Billy West's acceptable efforts reflect favorably upon Louis Burstein, president and general manager of the King-Bee Films, and his able director, Arvid E. Gillstrom.

Billy West's fund of originality in screen work will in due time have the widest possible opportunities of revealing itself for the delectation of his large circle of admirers.

"THE BRAND OF SATAN" COMPLETED.

"The Brand of Satan," starring Montagu Love and featuring Gerda Holmes and Evelyn Greeley, is now completed. This World-Picture Brady-Made signalizes Mr. Love's debut as a star of the screen, a position which no actor has more rightly earned.

Hill a Successful Salesman

Wobber's New Assistant Has Done Things in the Three Years He Has Been in Film Business.

ALTHOUGH C. M. Hill, assistant to General Manager Herman Wobber of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, is but a comparative newcomer in the film business, his reputation as a worker and as a business getter has already spread far from the field to which he has confined his operations up to this time. He showed his mettle in the recent ninety-day sales contest held by the Paramount Pictures Corporation by winning first prize for the greatest number of new contracts signed and third prize for the increase in business measured by money. This showing may be regarded as being remarkable when it is realized that there are only about five hundred theaters in the entire territory served from the San Francisco exchange, compared with twice that many served from the exchanges of some of the large Eastern cities.

C. M. Hill.

The first experience Mr. Hill secured in the film exchange business was with the General Film Company at Seattle in 1914, when he took charge of the feature department of that branch. He kept this position until the Eclectic entered the field and did road work for that exchange until it was taken over by Pathe Exchange, Inc. Later he was with the World and came to San Francisco in April, 1916, filling a position with the Mutual Film Corporation for several months. In October, 1916, he secured a position with the local Progressive exchange, later succeeding J. W. Allen as assistant to the general manager.

Mr. Hill has some very decided ideas in regard to the future of the moving picture business and the opportunities it presents for both exhibitors and distributors. He expresses the belief that there should be longer runs and more rebookings and more and better advertising to attract attention to the pictures. "Some exhibitors seem to think," he said, "that they are getting all they can out of a picture when they show it a week in a city like San Francisco or one day in the smaller towns. And some exchange men fall into a similar error when they shelve good pictures merely because they have been sent around the circuit. A week's run at a downtown house in this city means that about one person out of fifteen or twenty have seen the picture and illustrates what a field there is for rebooking."

Marshall Neilan Visits New York

Lasky Director Gets Three Weeks' Leave of Absence and Immediately Starts East.

MARSHALL NEILAN, Lasky director, has arrived in New York upon the first vacation which he has enjoyed since joining that company. Immediately upon the signing of his new two-year contract, he was granted a three weeks' leave of absence, and the director packed his belongings and started eastward on the earliest train. Mr. Neilan will remain in New York as long as his vacation permits.

While in the east Mr. Neilan had the extreme satisfaction of witnessing the enthusiastic reception which was accorded his excellent work in staging the adaptation of Gene Stratton Porter's celebrated novel, "Freckles," in which Jack Pickford and Louise Huff were co-starred.

Immediately upon his return to Hollywood Mr. Neilan will begin work upon a Lasky picture to be released under the newly announced open-booking plan, which will be inaugurated by Paramount on August 5.

Kerrigan Begins Prodution June 5

Long-Time Screen Player Will Produce Subjects from Five to Nine Reels in Length.

J. WARREN KERRIGAN will begin his career as an independent producer at the studio of his own company in Hollywood about June 5. Mr. Kerrigan has long had ambitions to appear in productions in which ample time might be given to artistic detail and in connection with which no set release dates need be considered.

He had been appearing on the screen for eleven years and in that time had accumulated a comfortable competency. Professional friends, producers and exhibitors, believing in his proved dramatic ability, remarkably attractive screen personality and popularity, volunteered to help him finance his company by taking the stock which he might desire to allot to them. With cash in bank, preparations for the work of productions were taken up.

J. Warren Kerrigan.

The organization of his staff and the equipment of his studio at Hollywood was placed in the hands of Robert T. Kane, vice president of the Paralta company, and Mr. Kerrigan departed on a tour of several hundred moving picture theaters throughout the country, which began in in March and ended last week.

Oscar Apfel will be Mr. Kerrigan's surpervising director. Three directors will have charge of Mr. Kerrigan's productions. While one photoplay is being screened under the guidance of one director, the two other directors will be doing all the preliminary work on the two plays they are supervising.

By this system Mr. Kerrigan will be able to produce from eight to ten big photoplays a year. All his plays will range from five to nine reels, in accordance with the importance and merit of the stories.

Robert Brunton will direct the art and technical features of Mr. Kerrigan's photoplays.

STAGE WOMEN TO AID WAR RELIEF.

With Mrs. J. Stuart Blackton as Chairman, and Miss Bess Meredyth as Vice Chairman, the Motion Picture Players' Division of the State Women's War Relief is becoming more and more active every day. The most interesting event scheduled for the near future will be the dinner dance with tableaux vivants posed by prominent motion picture actresses at the new Hotel Des Artistes at 1 West 67th street on Monday evening, May 28th, for the benefit of the Comfort Kit Fund. In between courses there will be exhibition dances and the various tableaux which are being arranged by Mrs. Blackton and Miss Meredyth. Following the dinner and entertainment will come general dancing until the small, wee hours. Tickets at ten dollars each have been limited to six hundred. More than three hundred have already been disposed of, so those wishing to help along the good cause should send their applications now to the Stage Women's War Relief Headquarters in the Maillaird Building on Fifth avenue, or to Mrs. Blackton, at the Hotel Des Artistes, or to Miss Beth Meredyth, at the Hotel Algonquin.

SELZNICK OPENS FIVE BRANCHES.

Under the direction of Ben S. Cohen, one of the Selznick division representatives, the following branches of the Selznick distributing system have been organized on the Pacific Coast: San Francisco, 985 Market street; Los Angeles, 736 South Olive street; Seattle, 1215 Fourth avenue.

In Atlanta, Ga., and Detroit, Mich., similar action has been taken, and from time to time, wherever it is found necessary in order to maintain control, other branches of the head office will be established.

Thanhouser Sticks to Advance Showings

Manufacturer Says Wise Managers Will Not Book a Picture Until Their Favorite Reviewer Has Been Consulted.

EDWIN THANHOUSER has small faith with the plan to abandon the special critics' showings now given on features before release to the theaters. "Yes, I have heard of this agitation," said the head of the Thanhouser-Pathe studio, "but I believe the present policy of advance critics' showings will be adhered to by the majority of picture producers.

"The reason is that the exhibitors DO go by the trade press criticisms. It is true that a few years ago film reviewers were pretty largely synopsis writers. That was because the program situation of the time left the exhibitor no choice as to individual pictures, and a tip one way or the other from his trade paper didn't help much. What is the value of a tip if you can't profit by it? Accordingly there was no call for keen criticism and the trade press didn't waste space on it.

"With the break-up of the old program conditions, the exhibitor's position changed. He could show what he wanted, and when he wanted it. Trade press criticisms rose to the occasion and the present high level was attained. Expert reviewers developed and exhibitor readers came to swear by their opinions. Wise managers would not book a picture until the favorite reviewer had been consulted.

"And isn't it the better system? Who wants back the old days of take-it-or-leave-it booking? And as long as the exhibitor is free to book what he wishes trade press criticism will be a booking factor. I for one will assist no effort to lessen the effectiveness of such criticism by holding back its publication until the release of a picture. I want every exhibitor to know the press opinion of Thanhouser-Pathe pictures long enough before release day to book them, if worthy, or pass them up, if unworthy. I ask this in my own interest because it keeps our own standard high to know that if we make a poor picture, exhibitors shall be told of it far enough ahead to seriously effect its bookings."

Goldwyn Opening Six Canadian Offices

Headquarters in Toronto Now in Operation—Dominion Will Be Well Covered.

SIMULTANEOUS with the releasing of its productions in the United States and elsewhere in September, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation will enter actively into the Canadian field through the medium of Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., a company just organized as the distributing medium for the Dominion. Goldwyn Offices will be in active operation in six important Canadian cities in June, by which time the American offices will also be opened for business.

The head offices of Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., are already in operation at 37 Yonge street, Toronto, and correspondence with Dominion exhibitors is all handled from that city. The five other cities in which Goldwyn offices will be operated are Montreal, St. John, N. B.; Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Publications will be begun at once from Toronto of the Goldwyn Pictures Bulletin, a Canadian news and service sheet for exhibitors to fully acquaint them with the pictures of this rapidly expanding organization, which controls the services of Mae Marsh, Mary Garden, Maxine Elliott, Jane Cowl and Madge Kennedy, and other stars soon to be announced.

STANDARD GETS ART DRAMAS FOR FOUR STATES.

Following a hurried trip west on the part of George Wiley, prominent in the Art Dramas organization, comes the announcement that long-pending negotiations between that company and the Standard Film Corporation, of Kansas City, were closed for the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Upper Wisconsin.

R. C. Cropper, president and general manager of the distributing organization, took advantage of the recent Exhibitors' Convention in Minneapolis and spent several days there, for the purpose of studying conditions in the territory and to make arrangements for the location and opening of new offices.

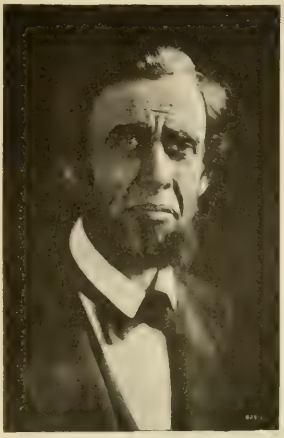
LOUIS BURSTEIN IN NEW YORK.

Louis Burstein, president and general manager of the King Bee Films Corporation, has arrived in New York from Jacksonville. Important conferences are in progress at the King Bee offices in the Longacre Building.

Chapin's "Lincoln" Goes to the Strand

BENJAMIN CHAPIN in "The Lincoln Cycle" will open at the Strand, Forty-seventh street and Broadway, on Sunday, May 27. The entertainment will be presented in four features: "My Mother," "My Father," "Myself" and the "Call to Arms." In these pictures Mr. Chapin plays both Tom Lincoln and Abraham Lincoln.

Benjamin Chapin stands an acknowledged authority on Lincoln, having devoted nineteen years to collecting material touching on the life of this great American. Not only has he availed himself of the wealth of historical material dealing with Lincoln's career, but he has made a careful study of Lincoln's ancestry.



Benjamin Chapin.

Following the tradition that every great man owes his greatness to a great mother, Mr. Chapin devotes the first feature of "The Lincoln Cycle" to a study of Nancy Hanks in relation to her son. Lincoln, "The Spirit Man," is in reality Nancy Hanks, his mother. The sturdy pioneer, Tom Lincoln, the father of Abraham Lincoln, is shown as "The Physical Man." Full grown and molded by both father and mother and the product of his rude environment is "The Lincoln Man."

The stirring days preceding the Civil War, when the White House was virtually the point of attack and Lincoln the object of scorn, political abuse and misrepresentation, editorial censure and the target for every fireeater and petty politician with a personal ax to grind because he would not precipitate a war until he had tried every way possible to prevent it, shows Lincoln as "Humanity's Man" and brings the Lincoln story to the present in the way history has repeated itself at the White House during Wilson's administration.

"The Call to Arms" shows a nation getting ready to fight for humanity.

"NEGLECTED WIFE" JUDGES ANNOUNCED.

J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, and Mabel Herbert Urner and Louis Joseph Vance, two of the foremost authors of the country, will comprise the committe which will determine the winners of the contest which is being carried on in connection with Pathe's latest serial, "The Neglected Wife."

In eighty-two of the greatest newspapers in the country Pathe is publishing the details of this contest in a paid advertising campaign. Prizes aggregating two thousand dollars will be paid for the best solution of the problem of "The Neglected Wife." It has been pointed out that this compaign will be of direct benefit to the exhibitors showing this serial because it will interest their audiences in the story and in the pictures.

DEATH OF HERBERT BRENON'S FATHER.

Edward St. John Brenon, father of Herbert Brenon, of New York, died at his home, Clapham, London, England, Monday morning, May 14, aged 73 years. He was formerly a prominent journalist. Funeral services took place Wednesday, May 16, at Chiswick, London, and memorial services were held the same day at St. Thomas' Church, Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue, New York, attended by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brenon and other relatives.

SIEGEL RETURNS TO SELZNICK IN NEW YORK.

Henry Siegel, formerly one of the salesmen of the Lewis J. Selznick New York Exchange, returned to the Selznick forces in the capacity of assistant to Sol. J. Berman, manager of the New York office.

Mr. Siegel, who is one of the best known film salesmen in the East, recently transferred his activities to take charge of the New Jersey Selznick Exchange, which was under the control of Herman Jans.

"An Amateur Orphan," Five-Reel Thanhouser Photoplay Featuring Gladys Leslie, No. 12 of "Mystery of the Double Cross," and Fourth Episode of "The Neglected Wife."

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"An Amateur Orphan."

A REGULATION Agnes C. Johnstone photoplay is "An Amateur Orphan." A Thanhouser production, this five-reel picture has all the best features of its author's work. It is another case of the poor little rich girl, except that the heroine is a spirited young miss, and when she grows tired of being pampered and hedged in by convention, changes places with another girl. She is sent to an orphanage, adopted by a crusty old farmer and has the time of her young life, until her parents come to claim her. Later when she lets down her skirts and does up her hair, there is a pleasing love story. The success achieved by "The Candy Girl" and its predecessors will be repeated by "An Amateur Orphan."

The novel feature connected with the photoplay is the fact that it marks the initial appearance of Gladys Leslie as a Pathe star. The young lady merits the honor. Her willingness to do her level best causes her to bubble over at times, but she is an engaging young person with an irresistible smile, and will not be long in acquiring the proper method of doing things. Isabel Vernon, Thomas A. Curran, Jean Armour, Chester Morris, Ray Hallor and Justice Barnes give the star an excellent quality of support.

The picture was directed by Van Dyke Brooke. His work shows a sympathetic understanding of "An Amateur Orphan's" requirements.

"The Riddle of the Cross."

Once more Peter Hale thinks that he has the solution of the mystery of the double cross within his grasp, and again he is baffled. He encounters a veiled lady, whom he mistakes for Phillipa, and discovers the double cross on her arm. When she lifts her veil, however, she proves to be an entire stranger. In this episode, No. 12, Philippa consents to marry Bridgey Bentley to save her father from ruin, but Herbert Brewster will not accept the sacrifice. He is forced by Bentley to give his brokers orders that will ruin him, but the newspaper reporter finds a way to prevent it. Molly King, Leon Bary and Ralph Stuart help to keep up the interest by their spirited acting.

"Beyond Recall."

In the fourth episode of "The Neglected Wife," Mary Kennedy discovers evidence that her husband is having an affair with another woman. Horace Kennedy, who is still infatuated with Margaret Warner, receives a telephone message from her after her arrest. He secures her release and, the girl collapsing from the strain she has undergone, he takes her to his home. She will not consent to remain after she is revived; but a comb, dropped from her hair, tells the wife the truth when she returns. There are other incidents of the same nature in the installment.

"The Lad and the Lion"

Edgar Rice Burroughs' Exciting Story of Adventure Is Filmed by Selig, With Vivian Reed and a Strong Cast.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

DIRECTOR Al. Green has succeeded in visualizing Edgar Rice Burroughs' adventure story with fine realism. The story calls for marine views that include shipwreck, fire aboard another vessel at sea, its abandonment by the crew and the escape of the sole survivor and a captive lion from the wreck; an Arab village and the desert surrounding it; wild, picturesque scenes along the shore nearby, and desert brigands dashing across the sands on their Ishmaelite adventures. All these invest the pictured story with an atmosphere that succeeds in carrying the spectator away beyond his or her accustomed ken, forming perfect surroundings for the action of the photoplay.

William Bankinton (Will Machin) is the "Lad" of the story. He is the sole survivor of the wrecked steamer, who finds refuge on an abandoned sailing ship, aboard of which are a stowaway and a captive lion. He has lost his memory through an injury sustained when the steamer owned by his father went down during a storm, and he is badly treated by the stowaway on the sailing vessel which he succeeds in boarding. He makes friends with the lion aboard, and one day, after a hard fight with his enemy the stowaway, he releases the animal, with the result that his persecutor jumps overboard and is drowned. Soon afterward the vessel is wrecked; the lad and the lion reach the shore in safety and find refuge in a cave.

Nearby is an Arab village, where a powerful Arab sheik (Al. W. Filson) and his beautiful daughter Nakhla (Vivian Reed) live. Ben Saada (Charles Le Moyne), a brigand chief, wants her for his wife, but Nakhla refuses. One morning while riding alone on the hills, Nakhla is surprised by a band of desert brigands, who attempt to seize her; but the lad and his lion save her. Clothing himself in the raiment of one of the dead brigands, the lad creates great interest in the mind of Nakhla, who soon learns to love him.

In the course of time Ben Saada determines to force Nakhla to become his wife. He carries her off, but the lad Bankington and his lion rush to her rescue. The lad meets Ben Saada in fight and is knocked senseless; but the lion rushes on the brigand chief and kills him. Nakhla's ministrations restore the lad to consciousness, and he finds that he has recovered his memory and with it the knowledge that he is the only son of the rich American steamship owner, James Bankington.

Vivian Reed looks charming in the dress of Nakhla and bears the role with becoming grace and pride. Will Machin's "Lad" is always equal to the occasion. In his association with the big lion he will cause many to wonder; for this animal is really a fierce brute that resents intimacy from all but his trainer. Charles Le Moyne's Ben Saada is arrogant and cruel, as he should be, and Al. W. Filson's Sheik, Ali-Es Hadji, is dignified and decorous.

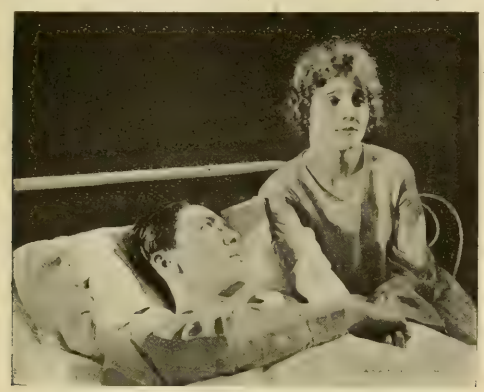
"Freckles," with Louise Huff and Jack Pickford, Bound to Win Big Success—Fannie Ward in "Unconquered." Has Strong Scenes.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE screen version of "Freckles," the Gene Stratton Porter novel which was a celebrated "first-seller" and a huge stage success in the one-night stands, is bound to make just as big a hit in picture form. Marian Fairfax has fashioned an admirable five-reel scenario for the Lasky Company, and, with Jack Pickford in the title role and Louise Huff as Angel, the two leading parts could not be in better hands.



Scene from "Freckles" (Paramount).

There is little necessity to recall the main incidents of "Freckles," so many people having read the book or seen the play. In spite or perhaps because of the fact that the story is a conventional example of plotmaking with an orphan hero who turns out to be a nobleman in disguise, the Porter tale has enjoyed a remarkable vogue, and there is no denying the force of its sympathetic appeal. A one-armed hero is a real novelty, to be sure, and the author has endowed him with a host of likable qualities.

In the Fairfax version, the dramatic situations are brought out with great dexterity. The boy's fight with Black Jack, the attempt to murder him and his rescue of Angel, are full of genuine thrill. At certain intervals a novel, a stage play, or a screen drama is produced that is wholly satisfying. "Freckles" is one of the number.

Everyone concerned has worked in harmony with Marshall Neilan, the director, the biggest individual factor in the play's success being Jack Pickford's embodiment of the Irish lad with no name of his own. Not that the young man's art is superior to that of the entire cast; but he heads the list by virtue of his ability to make the spectator respond to the deeper feelings of the boy's nature. Without this, no trick of the actor or fitness of personality would serve in its stead. The wistful lovableness and the splendid spirit of the lad are indicated by young Mr. Pickford with a quiet force that promises much for his future career.

Louise Huff had no difficulty in giving the character of Angel its just dues. Hobart Bosworth as John McLean and Billy Elmer as Black Jack add materially to their past records for enviable achievement.

"Unconquered."

Fannie Ward is allowed two big scenes in "Unconquered," and they are the best things she does in the play. Beatrice DeMille and Leighton Osmun are the authors of the scenario. Their story is a long time in gathering force, and approaches dangerously near an anti-climax at the end of the third reel. It is not very attractive. Voodooism is used as the instrument for bringing about the most important dramatic moment. A fear-crazed negro, who has been warned by a Voodoo priestess that he must procure a victim or die himself, steals a little white boy for the second time and is about to kill him, when his mother appears on the scene and offers herself in place of the child. Her former husband and a rescuing party arrive in time to prevent the murder.

After the boy's father realizes the sacrifice the mother was about to make, he restores the child to her. She has been tricked into a compromising position, and the boy was given to his father by the judge who grants the man a divorce. The woman has found a man worthy of her and, with her boy once more in her possession, she is content to forget the one who neglected her for another woman and then robbed her of her child.

A lack of repose often deprives Fannie Ward's acting of the recommendation it would otherwise merit. This criticism does not apply, however, to the moment at the end of the trial, after the boy has been taken from her. She is the heart-broken mother, numb with despair. Jack Dean is limited to but one good situation, and makes the most ot it. Hobart Bosworth, Tully Marshall, Mabel Van Buren and Jane Wolfe are as effective as ever in the quality of their support.

"Clover's Rebellion"

Five-Reel Blue Ribbon Feature Strongest on Its Comedy Side—Anita Stewart Pleasing as Daughter of Dixie.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE author of "Clover's Rebellion" is James Oliver Curwood, who has deserted his usual stamping ground in the great Northwest in favor of social life in the over-cultivated East. The heroine of his story is a young girl from the South, who is adopted by her wealthy aunt, an ambitious lady with a determination to marry her niece to a poverty-stricken duke and perhaps become the aunt of a future queen. The girl's uncle also has matrimonial plans for her. A certain gentleman named Raine wants Clover to marry his son and, as the uncle is under financial obligations to him, the boy gets his support. But uncle and aunt have reckoned without Clover. She chooses a third suit herself, a good looking young doctor with no patients, and the owner of a battered but trustworthy Ford that helps him to win the heiress, and is second only to the doctor at furnishing the laughs.

The best thing about "Clover's Rebellion" is that it permits Anita Stewart to give the screen one of those fresh, unaffected American girls she does so well. The dramatic incidents of the picture are not at all remarkable, but, with the help of the doctor and his faithful Ford, the star contributes quite a number of enjoyable moments. The direction by Wilfred North is competent. Rudolph Cameron is breezy and apt as the doctor, and Brinsley Shaw, Eulalie Jensen, Charles Stevenson, Julia Swayne Gordon, H. Weaver and William Dunn leave little room for improvement in the rest of the cast.

"Her Fighting Chance"

Jane Grey Featured in Six-Reel State Rights Offering—James Oliver Curwood's Novel Filmed by Edwin Carewe.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

VIEWED as a state rights proposition, "Her Fighting Chance," a six-reel screen version of James Oliver Curwood's novel, "The Fiddling Man," shapes up as a moderately good offering; viewed purely on its dramatic side the picture is an excellent example of what can be accomplished on the screen with a good story and a competent star and cast in the hands of a thoroughly capable director. Jane Grey is the star and Edwin Carewe the director. The picture was produced by A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc. World rights are controlled by Frank Hall Productions, Inc.

Scene from "Her Fighting Chance" (Jacobs).

The picture gets over on the strength of story and manner of presentation without resorting to the spectacular. There are but six names in the cast, and seldom—except in the dance hall scenes—are there more than that number of persons seen on the screen at the same time. The characters are well selected both as to type and ability. This also holds good of the minor characters, who furnish convincing "atmosphere" to Mr. Curwood's virile story of the North woods. The novel is full of plot-action and permits of many tense situations, all of which have been retained in the film.

Of especial note is the picturesqueness of the many snow scenes. The bulk of the story is laid out of doors—out in the snow-blanketed pine forests whose solemn solitude is broken only by primitive men.

The story is primarily one of a woman's willingness to sacrifice herself to save her husband from the hands of the law. Her's is a great love, and Jane Grey's portrayal of the woman's part leaves nothing to be desired. Thomas Holding is chief in support, and the two leading roles are most sympathetic. Percy G. Standing does well as a corporal of the Northwest Police, as does also Fred Jones with the part of Francois Breault. Edward Porter and William Cohill are both capable.

Mr. Carewe's staging of the picture accounts in a large measure for its worth. He has been responsible for several especially commendable directorial touches. The continuity is unbroken throughout, and there is scarcely a superfluous foot of film in the picture. In fact, more of the picturesque snow stuff might have been left in.

Excellent photography was done by Arthur Martinelli, and several times during the trade showing his double-exposure work was applauded—particularly so in the scenes where the ghost of a murdered man travels, running, alongside the murderer.

"Atonement"

Five-Reel Brady International Service Photoplay Starring Regina Badet a Fairly Interesting French Drama.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE most striking feature connected with "Atonement," the five-reel French screen drama brought to this country by the Brady International Service, is the deliberate manner in which the actors do their work. The entire story could be placed on two reels, the plot not being at all complicated and having practically no side issues.

A famous dancer, who is in love with a musician in her company, attracts the attention of Count Rezzi. The nobleman offers to make the dancer his mistress, using as a bribe some costly pearls. The girl repulses him. Marco, another member of the dancer's company, steals two of the pearls, is caught by the count and forced to sign a written confession. The nobleman then makes Marco put the pearls in the musician's pocket, and the girl's lover is arrested. The dancer discovers that the count has the confession. She goes to his home, pretends to be willing to accept his protection and, as he embraces her, takes the confession from his pocket. In the struggle that follows the count is shot, but lives long enough to exonerate the dancer, and the usual happy ending follows.

The above brief synopsis covers the main points of "Atonement." It is made fairly interesting in the telling, and the scenes, taken in France, are novel and often of much merit. The lighting, however, is not up to the American standard.

Scene from "Atonement" (World).

Regina Badet is a capable actress and an attractive woman. As a dancer she is hardly above mediocrity, and her Greek costume is unnecessarily daring. The supporting company is comprised of well schooled actors. Albert Signer as the Count, Fred Gerard as Marco, and Burt Cummings as Lionel head the list. The picture was directed by Louis Mercanton and Rene Hervil.

"Maternity"

Five-Reel Peerless Photoplay Starring Alice Brady Has Unexpected Sensational Finish—Released by World.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FOR the first four reels "Maternity," a five-reel Peerless photoplay by Shannon Fife, moves along with the deliberation befitting its theme—a study in the laws of heredity in connection with the bearing of children. In the last reel it takes an unexpected leap into quick action, and ends with a fire scene that is full of sensational features. The effect is almost incongruous, but there is no denying the resultant punch.

Ellen Franklin, the part played by Alice Brady, is haunted with the fear that married bliss is not for her. For three generations the women of her family have died in childbirth, and the girl has become morbid on the subject. She refuses an old playmate when he would make her his wife, but later falls deeply in love with a young doctor and they are married. Her fear of motherhood almost results in the loss of her husband's love. They are separated for a time, but, in rescuing a little girl from a burning building, the mother love is awakened in her, and she has the happiness of holding a baby of her own in her arms in due course of time.

The Shannon Fife story is not at all remarkable in a dramatic way, and the author has introduced a couple of false leads that mar the play's construction. He has treated his subject reverently, however, and given it several touches of symbolism. The sensational finish, as already indicated, does excellent service.

Alice Brady proved equal to the requirements of the heroine, her earnestness being one of her strongest assets. David Powell heads the capable supporting company, of which Marie Chambers, John Bowers and Florence Crane are prominent members.

The production is up to the highest World standard.

"The Hand That Rocks the Cradle"

Six-Reel Universal Subject Defending Birth Control Has Forceful Arguments, But Is a Preachment, Not a Play.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE picture with a purpose has become the goal of Lois Weber. In "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" she has taken up her club in defense of birth control, using as the foundation for her subject the experiences of a famous woman advocate of this revolutionary doctrine who has recently been released from jail for trying to spread broadcast the new gospel for woman. In justice to Miss Weber it is only fair to state that she makes out a strong case on the affirmative side of the argument, and does this with such good judgment in her selection of material and such artistic employment of it that there is no necessity of any one to receive the smallest kind of a shock. The question as to whether such a subject should be discussed in public need not be touched upon in this review. That is for a court of law to decide. At the present time the picture is being shown in New York City by power of an injunction served upon the Commissioner of Licenses, who had ruled against its exhibition.

The wisdom of showing "The Hand that Rocks the Cradle" in a theater devoted to photoplays and patronized by men, women and children in search of entertainment is a matter the exhibitor will settle for himself. Persons with serious ethical questions to propound have as much right to utilize the screen as they have to hire a hall and set forth their opinions in more or less eloquent speech; but the family photoplay theater, in the opinion of the writer, is not the proper place for them. The home of the spoken drama is, primarily, a place for amusement and recreation, and this rule applies with equal force to the home of the silent drama. The day is not far distant, it is to be hoped, when each moving picture will be placed in its clearly defined class, and not be labeled a photoplay when in reality it is only one-third drama, the other two-thirds being either propaganda or narrative.

"The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" comes under this head. Drama it has in the broad sense of the word; also occasional moments of real entertainment, by virtue of its truthful touches of character. But it moves with laggard steps and, as with all preachments, presents only one side of the argument.

Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley are excellent in the leading parts. The best drawn character has been given to Evelyn Selbie. She merits the trust imposed in her.

Triangle Program

"The Millionaire Vagrant," Five-Reel Ince-Kay Bee and "A Royal Rogue," Two-Reel Keystone.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IN "The Millionaire Vagrant" we have very attractively presented the sociological problem of innate character versus compelling environment, and although the presentation is not new in structure it is decidedly so and very effectively in treatment. The story of the wealthy young man who attempts the life of a poor one on a wager has been told before, but it can be told again and again without loss of interest by the employment of new, bright and forceful means, such as have been used in "The Millionaire Vagrant."

Interest centers on developments after the pampered young man of high society is placed in close contact with the struggles of the desperately poor. It has even been done in real life. The purpose and general drift of this particular story is humanizing in the extreme, stirring natural sympathy and stimulating the strong charitable instincts which lie dormant in our breasts because out attitude toward suffering becomes complacently, rather than actively, kind from lack of actual contact.

In the title role Charles Ray gives a satisfactory performance, and he is admirably supported by Sylvia Bremmer, Barney Sherry, Elvira Weil, Jack Gilbert and the others of this exceptional company. There is a delightful harmony of author, director, interpreters, scenic artists, camera men and all who contribute to the composite production. There is no purely technical fault to be found with the skillful story structure of Mr. Hawks, nor with the artistic handling of Mr. Schertzinger, but between them there is a failure to dig deep enough into the thoughts and feelings of their principal characters. They have struck a vein of ore, but they have not gone down to the mother lode of psychology. The story is very interesting, however, nicely finished and sure to please.

"A Royal Rogue."

"A Royal Rogue" contains much of the Sennett ingenuity and rapidity of action and a fairly good story besides, something new in farce. There is also an added interest in a distinct characterization by William A. Armstrong, who brings some sense of humor to Sennett's burlesqu of melodrama. The Keystone product is in process of evolution from mere mechanical ingenuity, bound to have a limit, to the exhaustless charm of real comedy, that of human nature. "A Royal Rogue" is a step in that evolution, and Sennett is capable of taking all the others when the time comes, as evidenced in his Biograph work in days gone by. "A Royal Rogue" contains plenty of laugh material, almost too swiftly presented in the second reel, but it will get over with zip wherever shown.

Five Christie Comedies

"A Lucky Slip," "His Last Pill," "The Milky Way," "With the Mummies' Help" and "Father's Bright Idea" Are All Clean and Wholesome Pictures.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE is no unwholesomeness or vulgarity in any of these five pictures by the Christie Film Company. The players in all are young and in themselves pleasing, and there is a rollicking playfulness about all that goes far toward making up for a thinness in situation noticeable in most of them. The usual Christie cast appears in all of them and includes Betty Compson, Ethel Lynn, Eddie Barry, Neal Burns and George French.

Of the five the best is "A Lucky Slip." It was the cause of more laughter among the reviewers than any of the others, and is livelier and has more of the unexpected. The widow's daughter and the widower's son fall in love. The lovers have trouble with the parents till the parents chance to meet, when they, too, begin flirting. The end need not be told, but that doesn't account for the picture; for there is much to provoke laughter, especially after the two children get sent by their respective parents to the same co-ed boarding school.

"His Last Pill" is the story of a valetudinarian whom wifey conspires to make so jealous that he is cured. She chooses his successor and lets sick Hubby see what a good time she will have when he is gone. It makes Hubby feel sick, but get well. There's laughter in some of it and it will go.

In "The Milky Way," Betty Compson wears a lace apron as pretty maid to an author whose works she "loves." The author is such that she falls in love with the milkman. The second maid gets plenty of attention after the story gets about that the author's housemaid is an heiress.

"With the Mummies' Help" has little real comedy and there are not many laughs in it. It hardly gets over as fun.

"Father's Bright Idea" has little that is novel or unexpected. Betty wears a pretty evening gown as Father's daughter whom Neal wants to marry. Father doesn't believe that Neal has all the good habits he claims in lieu of a bank account. Father tries to test him for good habits, but hires the wrong manicure girls.

Two Kalems

"The Door in the Mountain," Episode of "The American Girl," and "The Man With the Limp," a "Grant" Episode.

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm.

THRILLS abound in "The Door in the Mountain," latest two-reel episode of Kalem's "The American Girl" series. This release takes its place as one of the best of the series. There is more riding and shooting and other wild western melodramatic touches in this episode than many that have preceded. Martin Sais does an exciting and dangerous fall, and lesser members of the cast also get some rough handling.

The story tells of a bandit band that have their lair in a cave in a mountainside. They hold up a wagon coming from King's mine, and their lair is found by Madge King. She is made captive, and her father and his two companions wage battle with the bandits. In the end the Kings triumph and bring to justice an old loan shark who was the brains of the bandit band. In the cast with Miss Sais are Frank Jonasson, Hart Hoxie, Edward Clisbee, Ronald Bradbury and Knute Rahm. James W. Horne directed. The story was written by Frederick R. Bechdolt.

"The Man With the Limp."

George Larkin performs some more thrilling stunts in this one-reel number of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series. He furnishes a thrill when he jumps from a second-story window to the ground, and later when he climbs to the roof of a pier, lassoes the mast of a steamer just leaving the pier, and swings from the roof into the rigging of the ship. In this manner he captures the "man with the limp" who, it develops, is none other than the man who posed as a count and stole jewels from a wealthy girl. A fair number of the series.

Little Madge Evans, the clever child actress of World-Pictures Brady-Made, has just been re-engaged for a long term under an increased salary. Just now Madge is playing nights in "Peter Ibbetson" on the speaking stage and devoting her daytimes to book studies.

"Southern Justice"

Five-Reel Bluebird Photoplay Is Rich in Character Drawing and Reflects Truthfully the Placid Life of a Small Town Down South.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE dramatic motive of "Southern Justice," a five-reel Bluebird photoplay, is not of very much importance. The author of the story has a decided gift for character drawing, and has indulged in elaborating a number of quaint Southern types, at the expense of the movement of his play. No effort is made to hurry the placid life of the small town in which the scenes are laid, until near the finish of the picture, and then the incident is only mildly dramatic. A scheming young chap from the North arrives and tries to swindle the populace by selling them bogus oil land. He also attempts to elope with the belle of the town, but fails in both cases. He is caught without any difficulty and is only too ready to refund his entire collection of cash, when he learns that a snug-fitting suit of tar and feathers is awaiting him down the street.

However, if there is nothing in "Southern Justice" to stir the blood there is plenty to interest and please. The doings of the colonel, the editor, the shoemaker and other lesser lights of the community are humorously true to life. But the most interesting character of all is the orphan lad who limps into town with an old shotgun in one hand and a copy of "Pilgrim's Progress" in the other and makes every one his friend. He is very real and very likable and is finely acted by the small thespian cast for the part. The entire production is in the hands of competent people.

"The Mystic Hour"

Alma Hanlon Featured in Five-Part Apollo-Art Drama Production of Entertaining Quality.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

AS a sample of a moving picture melodrama "The Mystic Hour" can hold its own. It has a good story, well produced, and contains sufficient of the mystic and spectacular to satisfy any audience.

Alma Hanlon in the role of the young woman whose heart was won by the flattery of a libertine, has done unusually good work. She is sweet and natural and quite the unsophisticated sort of girl that falls for the attentions of the rich bachelor of this type. There has also been provided an excellent supporting cast, including Florence Short and Charles Hutchinson. And special mention should be made of the manner in which the role of Holbrook Clavering, the bad man of the story, has been handled. The character is a despicable one, and there is nothing left to be desired in its interpretation.

As the story runs, a rich libertine becomes enamored of a beautiful young girl whom he soon wins for his wife. Before his marriage he becomes acquainted with an artist and his model who is physically very beautiful. His animal tendencies cause him to form an attachment for the model in spite of the fact that he marries the woman of moral excellence. The outcome of the story is that the libertine is robbed and killed one night by his butler, and later the artist who has become acquainted with the wife through being engaged to paint her portrait marries her.

The spectacular part of the production occurs when the artist in fancy murders the girl's husband, and later finds what he has dreamed to be a fact.

We must admit that there is a weakness in the latter part of the story, although the average audience will be fully satisfied with the production as it is. For instance, no disposal has been made of the woman who is retained in prison for the murder of Holbrook Clavering.

"A Zeppelin Attack on New York"

Mutual Film Corporation Presents Remarkable Trick Photography in Subject Visionized by Vincent Colby.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ONE of the most remarkable pictures of its kind that has ever been made is attributed to the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago. It is entitled "A Zeppelin Attack on New York," and is splendidly patriotic, and mingles trick photography with legitimate photography so cleverly that the illusion is almost perfect.

The picture opens with scenes in New York's harbor, which are followed by views of battleships and the various signs of America's preparedness, all of which is intensely inspiring. Now it is that trick photography is brought into play with unusual skill. Zeppelins are seen gliding majestically over the harbor and the city's skyscrapers; they even pass over Brooklyn to meditate on what havoc could be wrought there by the dropping of bombs. The statue of Liberty holds out no greeting for the strangers, and as night approaches she purposely forgets to light her lamp.

The Zeppelins are sighted by aviators, and upon being warned of the presence of the enemy overhead the military authorities, with the aid of great searchlights, manage at uncertain intervals to sight the Zeppelins as they emerge from behind friendly clouds. In the darkness of the night the murderers drop a bomb or two on the city, which is followed by the red glare of fire among the skyscrapers. The fire, however, is quickly overcome by New York's splendid fire fighters, and the big defense guns commence to flash defiance at the Zeppelins, which, after a short siege, are brought blazing to the ground. Views of battleships as they pass under Brooklyn Bridge and photographed from the bridge are unusually attractive.

Fourth Forum Program

Excellent Material Contained in Fourth Forum Program, Including an Adaptation of a Richard Harding Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IN THE fourth program of "Conquest" pictures will be found subjects instructive and entertaining. The feature of this program is an adaptation of the Richard Harding story, "The Boy Who Cried Wolf." The plot centers around a boy scout whose ambition was to be of some real service to his country, and who succeeds after much persistence in capturing a spy. The incidents of the story are amusingly told in the picture and boys will doubtless be much interested in the fortunes of the scout who cried "Wolf."

The other story of the program is entitled "The Story of Plymouth Rock," and is based on "The Courtship of Myles Standish." This is also an interesting and well-produced number. A one-reel animated cartoon by Paul Terry entitled "Father Alfalfa's Wayward Pup" is the comedy number and is very pleasing, showing what Father Alfalfa had to contend with because of a naughty pup. Puppy steals his pipe while he sleeps, takes a few puffs which make him deathly sick, and in a revengeful mood buries it. But the very naughtiest thing that the pup does is to cause Father Alfalfa to murder a game rooster by mistake. The rooster was bought for the purpose of keeping the pup in his place. This number is very amusing and will please not only children, but adults.

The educational numbers of the program are "Crystals and Their Beauties," "The Making of Hundred Ton Guns" and "Skylarking on Skis."

"Redemption"

Evelyn Nesbit Displays Unexpected Emotional Power in Six-Reel Photoplay Directed by Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden.

THE foundation of fact upon which the story of "Redemption" is built is taken from Evelyn Nesbit's early career. Most of the material of the photoplay is fictitious, however, and none of the characters, although thinly disguised, appear under their real names. Regarded solely as a succession of incidents suitable for a screen drama, "Redemption" is without offense on its moral side, but one of the principal situations is contrary to the laws of good taste, to say the least, although of considerable dramatic value.

The story opens where Alice Loring, the wife of a hard-working young draughtsman, is reminded of a dark page in her past, when she was made the victim of a wealthy man of high social position at an age that absolved her from all blame. Stephen Brooks, the man in question, discovers where she is living and tries to force her to resume the old relation. Mrs. Loring's indignant refusal leads to the loss of her husband's position. A battle with want and sickness follows and Alice is left a widow with a young son to support. For some unknown reason she does not return to the stage where, before her marriage, she was celebrated as a dancer; but, after undergoing further hardships, becomes the owner of a successful dressmaking establishment.

At this point the story takes a leap forward of fifteen years. Harry Loring, the son, is now a college student and one of his classmates is the son of Stephen Brooks. Harry is introduced to young Brooks' sister, and immediately falls in love with her. Both Harry's mother and the girl's father oppose the match, at first, but Harry wins his mother over, and Stephen Brooks finally gives his consent, after young Loring has risked his life in dragging Robert Brooks from a burning laboratory. It is hardly necessary to point out that this is the situation where good taste is sacrificed to the demands of the dramatic punch. Many worthy folk will approve of it, however, and enjoy the chance it gives for emotional acting.

A number of elements serve to lift the plot of "Redemption" above its artistic worth. It dwells too long on one mood, and unwinds in slow moving narrative form, but the feeling it gives that everything really happened adds materially to the interest. The picture's greatest asset, however, is the unexpected force of Evelyn Nesbit's acting. She has the personality, grace and intelligence required, and also a surprising degree of the rudiments of screen art. In her denotement of deep feeling she is at her best. Mental anguish is conveyed by her with a power that will strike a responsive chord in every heart. Manifestly nervous during the making of the first reel, the actress gained rapidly in confidence as the story progressed. The requisite amount of experience is the one thing needed to put the name of Evelyn Nesbit in the front rank of screen favorites.

Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden directed the production. They have given it every advantage in the way of a competent cast and a proper grasp of how best to transfer the story to the screen. Charles Wellesley as Stephen Brooks, Mary Hall as Mrs. Brooks, William Clarke as Robert Brooks, Joyce Fair as Grace Brooks, Edward Lynch as Thomas Loring, and George Clarke as Harry Loring, insure a uniformly smooth performance. Evelyn Nesbit's little son plays Harry Loring at five years of age, and acquits himself with much honor.

part is handled in good comedy style. Neva Gerber is also pleasing as Nina Potter, the heroine of the piece.

There is a lot of enjoyable humor of a quiet sort in this production, though occasional audible chuckles are heard also. The number is one that will perhaps make its greatest appeal to high-class audiences, as certain subtleties might escape observers trained to broader forms of humor. The story gets a definite hold upon the interest, and has something of the flavor of plays like "The Fortune Hunter," though entirely original in plot. It weakens slightly in the fourth reel in a dramatic way, but comes up to a pleasing close.

Most of the scenes are in a small Pennsylvania town, where Tommie Buckman has been sent to open up a store in opposition to the one conducted by Nina. The store scenes are typical and contain good comedy touches. The subtitles also fit into the story nicely.

Others in the cast are L. M. Wells, Johnnie Cook, Howard Crampton, Burton Law and Willard Wayne.

Three King-Bees

Billy West in "Back Stage," "The Hero," and "Doughnuts," Three Lively Knock-About Farces Supervised by Louis Burstein.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE three King-Bee two-reel farces, "Back Stage," "The Hero" and "Doughnuts," with Billy West as the principal laugh getter, all have the merit of keeping everything and everybody on the jump and of supplying, in profusion, the brand of humor expected from this grade of moving picture. "Back Stage" is a lively burlesque on the doings back of the curtain during a performance at a vaudeville theater. Billy West appears as a busy but uncommonly bungling property man, the rest of the cast representing the different turns on the program. "The Hero" discloses West as an ambitious waiter in a tough drinking place who manages to break into society after he has risked his life in assisting a charming young lady. "Doughnuts" is, perhaps, the best of the three farces. It shows the salesroom and workshop of a fancy bakery. West, in his familiar Chaplin imitation, is employed as a baker, and turns the establishment upside down so often that the spectator becomes dizzy from watching him.

Scene from "The Hero" (King Bee).

The trio of King-Bees are produced with all necessary details, and go with biff and bang throughout the two reels. Babe Hardy, Leo White, Budd Ross, Ethel Burton, Florence McLaughlin and Joe Cohan are members of the dependable support. Arvid E. Gillstrom was the director.

MISS TALIAFERRO RETURNS TO SCREEN.

Mabel Taliaferro, screen and stage star, has returned from Boston, where she starred in Hall Caine's play, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," and has resumed work at the Metro Rolfe studio. The first of a series of new plays purchased for this popular star is "The Will O' the Wisp," a delightful story of Ireland today. It was written by Katherine Kavanagh and will be directed by Tod Browning, who recently came east from the Fine Arts studio to become a Metro director.

Miss Taliaferro will play the role of Sheila Desmond, an Irish lassie, the daughter of Magistrate Anthony Desmond, landlord of an impoverished estate. Her beauty attracts rich and poor from all parts of the Emerald Isle, who fight for her hand in marriage. The part is a very difficult one and affords Miss Taliaferro an excellent opportunity to display her acting ability.

In support of Miss Taliaferro appears a cast of well-known artists. The role of Neil Dacey falls to Thomas J. Carrigan, who finds in it a part well suited to his art. The scenes, laid in the Ireland of today, are extremely beautiful.

BLOW UP VILLAGE FOR BARRYMORE PICTURE.

An entire village was recently blown up "somewhere on Long Island." It was not a gunpowder explosion, nor was it a German bomb that destroyed the thirty houses that went up in smoke. The village was erected in one week by Edward J. Shulter, technical director of the Metro-Rolfe studio. The scene will be one of the greatest ever screened and will be shown in the next Metro feature in which Ethel Barrymore will star.

"The Greatest Power" is a story that calls for exceptional work on the part of the technical director, and Mr. Shulter spent many days finding a suitable location for the village that was destroyed by a mighty explosion.

The buildings, thirty in number, among which is a church, required one week to construct. Mr. Shulter mobilized his forces for the task, rushed the work to completion, and then stood quietly by and watched the fruits of his labors blown to atoms.

BRITISH MISSION FEATURE OF MUTUAL WEEKLY.

Naturally the visit of Mr. Balfour and the British Mission to New York becomes the leading feature of the current issue of Gaumont's Mutual Weekly. However, the distinguished members of the French Mission were still being entertained, and their pictures also appear to advantage in this issue. Mr. Balfour and his party were caught by Gaumont cameramen to great advantage, the pictures showing exactly the hearty welcome extended our allies by America's greatest city.

The various ceremonies at which Marshal Joffre and Minister Viviani were the central figures form an important section of this reel. The pictures range from the presentation of a miniature Statue of Liberty to the Marshal of France before 60,000 people in Central Park and his unveiling of a statue of Lafayette in Brooklyn to the conferring of degrees upon the distinguished visitors at Columbia.

THREE "PUNCHES" FOR BRENON SUBJECT.

While most melodramas, both stage and screen varieties, depend for their success upon one big "punch" scene, Herbert Brenon's production of "The Lone Wolf" for Selznick-Pictures contains three big incidents, any one of which would be sufficient to establish the piece as a supreme thriller.

The first of these is the burning of Troyon's, a Paris hotel. This, in the story, is done by a gang of criminals to conceal a murder which they have committed.

The next sensational episode is the automobile chase through the streets of Paris. The hero and his sweetheart, in a light roadster, are pursued by Apaches in a powerful touring car, and they speed through the city without regard for the police. The concluding incident is a fight in the air, in which three aeroplanes take part. Great difficulty was experienced in geting this part of the picture made, owing to the stringent government regulations governing aeroplane flights.

MISS TALMADGE FINISHES "POPPY."

Norma Talmadge in "Poppy," an adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's charming novel of South African life, is the next Selznick-Pictures release. Director Edward Jose has finished cutting and assembling the picture and it will be shown for review this week.

Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, Mr. Selznick and all his executive staff attended a private showing of "Poppy" last week and all enthusiastically pronounced it by far the finest production in which Miss Talmadge has yet appeared. The central role affords the talented young star an extraordinary chance to display the versatility that has made her famous, a gift that enables her to make the transition from childhood to maturity with remarkable ease.
